By the act of 1893, c. 85 (this section), the crime of murder has been divided into two degrees, first and second. The common-law definition and description are still applicable to the crime in the second degree; but it takes more than this to constitute murder in the first degree — the killing must be willful, deliberate and premeditated, and this must be shown by the State beyond a reasonable doubt before it is justified in asking a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. State v. Rhyne, 124 N.C. 847, 33 S.E. 128 (1899).

The statutes where murder is divided into two degrees have not, as a general rule, added to or taken away any ingredient of murder at common law, and every murder at common law is murder under the statutes. See State v. Rhyne, 124 N.C. 847, 33 S.E. 128 (1899); State v. Dalton, 178 N.C. 779, 101 S.E. 548 (1919); State v. Streeton, 231 N.C. 301, 56 S.E.2d 649 (1949).

Prior to 1893 there were no degrees of murder in North Carolina. Any unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought, express or implied, was murder and punishable by death. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970); State v. Talbert, 282 N.C. 718, 194 S.E.2d 822 (1973); State v. Watkins, 283 N.C. 17, 194 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1000, 94 S. Ct. 353, 38 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973).

History. — For a brief history of this section in connection with sufficiency of indictment for murder in the first degree, see State v. Kirksey, 227 N.C. 445, 42 S.E.2d 613 (1947).

Same — Former § 15-162.1. — The repeal of § 15-162.1 leaving this section intact, showed the 1969 legislature's intent for this section to stand alone. State v. Atkinson, 275 N.C. 288, 167 S.E.2d 241 (1969), death sentence reversed, Atkinson v. North Carolina, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2283, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971).

The repeal of § 15-162.1 did not modify, change, add to, or take from this section. State v. Hill, 276 N.C. 1, 170 S.E.2d 885 (1969), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2287, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); State v. Roseboro, 276 N.C. 185, 171 S.E.2d 886 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2289, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); Garner v. State, 8 N.C. App. 109, 174 S.E.2d 92 (1970).

Former § 15-162.1 did not alter this section which is capable of standing alone. State v. Roseboro, 276 N.C. 185, 171 S.E.2d 886 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2289, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); Garner v. State, 8 N.C. App. 109, 174 S.E.2d 92 (1970).

What Constitutes Murder Generally. — This section does not give any new definition of murder, but permits that to remain as it was at common law. The section simply selects out of all murders denounced by common law those deemed more heinous on account of the mode of their perpetration, classifies them as murder in the first degree, and provides a greater punishment for them than that prescribed for "all other kinds of murder," which it denominates murder in the second degree. State v. Streeton, 231 N.C. 301, 56 S.E.2d 649 (1949).

A killing done with malice and not in self-defense is murder, even though the person killed may have been seeking to effect an unlawful arrest upon the defendant. State v. Sanders, 295 N.C. 361, 245 S.E.2d 674 (1978).

The corpus delicti in criminal homicide involves two elements: (1) the fact of the death, and (2) the existence of the criminal agency of another as the cause of death. State v. Jensen, 28 N.C. App. 436, 221 S.E.2d 717 (1976).

Same — Attempt to Kill. — An attempt only, to kill, with the most diabolical intent, may be moral, but cannot be legal, murder. State v. Scates, 50 N.C. 420 (1858).

Principals and Accessories. — The North Carolina law of homicide still maintains a careful distinction between principals and accessories. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

Same — Accessory Before the Fact. — In this State, one who procures another to commit murder is an accessory before the fact to murder. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

Same — There May Be Accessories to Murder in Both Degrees. — Since malice, express or implied, is a constituent element of murder in any degree, there may be accessories before the fact to the crime of murder in both degrees. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

Admittedly the concept of accessory before the fact presupposes some arrangement between the assessory and the principal with respect to the commission of the crime. It does not follow, however, that there can be no accessory before the fact to second-degree murder, which imports a specific intent to do an unlawful act. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

Same — Where one incites or employs a mental defective to kill another the question whether the employer is guilty as a principal depends upon whether the defective was criminally responsible for his act under the McNaughten rule. If the agent is legally responsible for his own acts, the instigator is only an accessory before the fact if he is absent when the crime is committed. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

II. MOTIVE AND INTENT TO KILL GENERALLY.

Motive — Not Essential Element. — It is not necessary to a conviction of murder that the State prove motive. State v. Adams, 136 N.C. 617, 48 S.E. 589 (1904); State v. McDowell, 145 N.C. 563, 59 S.E. 690 (1907); State v. Van Landingham, 283 N.C. 589, 197 S.E.2d 539 (1973).

Motive is not an essential element of murder; however, while not necessary to be proven, motive or the absence of motive is a circumstance to be considered. State v. Barnwell, 17 N.C. App. 299, 194 S.E.2d 63, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 106, 194 S.E.2d 634 (1973).

It is not required that the state show motive for a killing, but evidence of motive, if otherwise admissible, is not only competent, but often very important, in strengthening the evidence for the prosecution. State v. Richards, 294 N.C. 474, 242 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

Same — Use to Strengthen State's Case. — But the case of the State may be strengthened by the showing of a motive when the evidence is circumstantial. State v. Turner, 143 N.C. 641, 57 S.E. 158 (1907); State v.

Stratford, 149 N.C. 483, 62 S.E. 882 (1908); State v. Van Landingham, 283 N.C. 589, 197 S.E.2d 539 (1973).

Same — To Identify Prisoner or Establish Malice. — And it may be shown to identify the prisoner as the perpetrator of the crime, and to establish malice, deliberation, and premeditation. State v. Adams, 138 N.C. 688, 50 S.E. 765 (1905); State v. Wilkins, 158 N.C. 603, 73 S.E. 992 (1912).

Intentional Killing Must Be Shown. — Before a conviction for murder can be had, an unlawful and intentional taking of another's life must be shown. Sometimes the intent may be imputed by reason of the killing with a deadly weapon, or by circumstances which indicate a reckless indifference to human life, but it must always exist before a charge of murder can be sustained. State v. Stitt, 146 N.C. 643, 61 S.E. 566 (1908).

If the accused previously procured a weapon for the purpose of using it, and does use it, the offense is ordinarily murder. State v. Johnson, 172 N.C. 920, 90 S.E. 426 (1916).

To convict a defendant of murder in the second degree, the State must prove that the defendant intentionally inflicted the wound which caused the death of the deceased. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

Intent Must Coexist with Killing. — The act of killing, and the guilty intent, must concur to constitute the offense. State v. Scates, 50 N.C. 420 (1858).

Specific Intent Required in First Degree Murder. — A specific intent to kill is a necessary constitutent of the elements of premeditation and deliberation in first degree murder. State v. Propst, 274 N.C. 62, 161 S.E.2d 560 (1968); State v. Robbins, 275 N.C. 537, 169 S.E.2d 858 (1969); State v. Sparks, 285 N.C. 631, 207 S.E.2d 712 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 905, 96 S. Ct. 3213, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976); State v. McLaughlin, 286 N.C. 597, 213 S.E.2d 238 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976).

A specific intent to kill is an essential element of first degree murder. State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972).

A specific intent to kill is a necessary ingredient of premeditation and deliberation. State v. Cooper, 286 N.C. 549, 213 S.E.2d 305 (1975); State v. Shepherd, 288 N.C. 346, 218 S.E.2d 176 (1975); State v. Hammonds, 290 N.C. 1, 224 S.E.2d 595 (1976).

But Not in Second Degree Murder. — A specific intent to kill, while a necessary constituent of the elements of premeditation and deliberation in first degree murder, is not an element of second degree murder or manslaughter. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965); State v. Meadows, 272 N.C. 327, 158 S.E.2d 638 (1968); State v. Mercer, 275 N.C. 108, 165 S.E.2d 328 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Caddell, 287 N.C. 266, 215 S.E.2d 348 (1975); State v. Bunn, 283 N.C. 444, 196 S.E.2d 777 (1973); State v. Williams, 288 N.C. 680, 220 S.E.2d 558 (1975).

Trial judge did not err in instructing the jury that second-degree murder differs from first-degree murder in that a specific intent to kill is not an element of second-degree murder. State v. Lester, 289 N.C. 239, 221 S.E.2d 268 (1976).

Definitions of second-degree murder and voluntary manslaughter in the instructions to the jury in a prosecution for second-degree murder were not prejudicially deficient in that they did not require that the killings be intentional since specific intent to kill, while a necessary constituent of the elements of premeditation and deliberation in first-degree murder, is not an element of second-degree murder or manslaughter. State v. Alston, 295 N.C. 629, 247 S.E.2d 898 (1978).

Intent May Be Proved by Circumstantial Evidence. — Intent, a necessary element of murder in the second degree, is a mental attitude which can rarely be proved by direct evidence. It must ordinarily be proved by circumstances from which it can be inferred. State v. Hugenberg, 34 N.C. App. 91, 237 S.E.2d 327, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 591, 238 S.E.2d 151 (1977).

And Is Question for Jury. — The jury alone may determine whether an intentional killing has been established where no judicial admission of the fact is made by the defendant. State v. Todd, 264 N.C. 524, 142 S.E.2d 154 (1965).

III. MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE.

A. Defined.

Murder in the first degree is the unlawful killing of a human being with malice and with premeditation and deliberation. State v. Payne, 213 N.C. 719, 197 S.E. 573 (1938); State v. Hawkins, 214 N.C. 326, 199 S.E. 284 (1938); State v. Starnes, 220 N.C. 384, 17 S.E.2d 346 (1941); State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56 S.E.2d 678 (1949); State v. Lamm, 232 N.C. 402, 61 S.E.2d 188 (1950); State v. Brown, 249 N.C. 271, 106 S.E.2d 232 (1958); State v. Downey, 253 N.C. 348, 117 S.E.2d 39 (1960); State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961); State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969); State v. Robbins, 275 N.C. 537, 169 S.E.2d 858 (1969); State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971); State v. Duboise, 279 N.C. 73, 181 S.E.2d 393 (1971); State v. Fountain, 282 N.C. 58, 191 S.E.2d 674 (1972); State v. Hamilton, 19 N.C. App. 436, 199 S.E.2d 159, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 256, 200 S.E.2d 656 (1973); State v. Sparks, 285 N.C. 631, 207 S.E.2d 712 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 905, 96 S. Ct. 3213, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976); State v. McLaughlin, 286 N.C. 597, 213 S.E.2d 238 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L.Ed.2d 1208 (1976); State v. Patterson, 288 N.C. 553, 220 S.E.2d 600 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976); State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296 (1976), death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L.Ed.2d 69 (1976); State v. McCall, 289 N.C. 512, 223 S.E.2d 303 (1976), death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 301, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L.Ed.2d 278 (1976); State v. Smith, 290 N.C. 148, 226 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976); State v. Biggs, 292 N.C. 328, 233 S.E.2d 512 (1977); State v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977); State v. Thomas, 294 N.C. 105, 240 S.E.2d 426 (1978); State v. Hill, 294 N.C. 320, 240 S.E.2d 794 (1978); State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Fleming, 296 N.C. 559, 251 S.E.2d 430 (1979).

For discussion of malice and presumptions of malice from intentional killing with a deadly weapon, see analysis lines IV(B) and (C).

Murder in the first degree is sometimes defined briefly as murder in the second degree plus premeditation. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

It is not necessary that the words "fixed design" always be included in defining murder in the first degree. State v. Sparks, 285 N.C. 631, 207 S.E.2d 712 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 905, 96 S. Ct. 3213, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976).

Same—Deliberation Defined. — Deliberation means that the act is done in cool state of blood. It does not mean brooding over it or reflecting upon it for a week, a day or an hour, or any other appreciable length of time, but it means an intention to kill, executed by the defendant in a cool state of blood, in furtherance of a fixed design to gratify a feeling of revenge, or to accomplish some unlawful purpose, and not under the influence of a violent passion, suddenly aroused by some lawful or just cause or legal provocation. State v. Benson, 183 N.C. 795, 111 S.E. 869 (1922), overruled on other grounds, State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965); State v. Bowser, 214 N.C. 249, 199 S.E. 31 (1938); State v. Hawkins, 214 N.C. 326, 199 S.E. 284 (1938); State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56 S.E.2d 678 (1949); State v. Lamm, 232 N.C. 402, 61 S.E.2d 188 (1950); State v. Brown, 249 N.C. 271, 106 S.E.2d 232 (1958); State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961); State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971); State v. Fountain, 282 N.C. 58, 191 S.E.2d 674 (1972); State v. Hamilton, 19 N.C. App. 436, 199 S.E.2d 159, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 256, 200 S.E.2d 656 (1973); State v. Barbour, 295 N.C. 66, 243 S.E.2d 380 (1978); State v. Poole, 298 N.C. 254, 258 S.E.2d 339 (1979).

Deliberation means revolving over in the mind. A deliberate act is one done in a cool state of blood in furtherance of some fixed design. State v. Robbins, 275 N.C. 537, 169 S.E.2d 858 (1969).

Deliberation means an intention to kill, executed by the defendant in a cool state of blood, in furtherance of a fixed design or to accomplish some unlawful purpose, and not under the influence of a violent passion, suddenly aroused by some lawful or just cause or legal provocation. State v. Sanders, 276 N.C. 598, 174 S.E.2d 487 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); State v. Biggs, 292 N.C. 328, 233 S.E.2d 512 (1977).

The requirement of a cool state of blood does not mean that the defendant must be calm or tranquil. Premeditation and deliberation may be present even though the defendant is angry at the time of the killing, if he acts in the furtherance of a fixed design to kill. State v. Hamilton, 19 N.C. App. 436, 199 S.E.2d 159, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 256, 200 S.E.2d 656 (1973).

Deliberation does not require brooding or reflection for any appreciable length of time, but imports the execution of an intent to kill in a cool state of blood without legal provocation, and in furtherance of a fixed design. State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974); State v. Myers, 299 N.C. 671, 263 S.E.2d 768 (1980).

"Cool state of blood" does not mean the absence of passion and emotion, but an unlawful killing is deliberate and premeditated if done pursuant to a fixed design to kill, notwithstanding that defendant was angry or in an emotional state at the time, unless such anger or emotion was such as to disturb the faculties and reason. State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974).

Deliberation means that the action was done in a cool state of blood and does not require reflection or brooding for an apparent length of time, but rather an intention to kill executed by defendant in furtherance of a fixed design to gratify a feeling of revenge or to accomplish some unlawful purpose and not under the influence of a violent passion, suddenly aroused by just cause or legal provocation. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Deliberation means an intention to kill, executed by defendant in a cool state of blood, in furtherance of a fixed design or to accomplish some unlawful purpose. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Smith, 290 N.C. 148, 226 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976); States v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977); State v. Thomas, 294 N.C. 105, 240 S.E.2d 426 (1978); State v. Hill, 294 N.C. 320, 240 S.E.2d 794 (1978).

B. Premeditation and Deliberation.

1. In General.

Same — Premeditation Defined. — Premeditation means thought of beforehand, for some length of time, however short. State v. Benson, 183 N.C. 795, 111 S.E. 869 (1922), overruled on other grounds, State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965); State v. Hawkins, 214 N.C. 326, 199 S.E. 284 (1938); State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56 S.E.2d 678 (1949); State v. Lamm, 232 N.C. 402, 61 S.E.2d 188 (1950); State v. Brown, 249 N.C. 271, 106 S.E.2d 232 (1958); State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961); State v. Sanders, 276 N.C. 598, 174 S.E.2d 487 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971); State v. Fountain, 282 N.C. 58, 191 S.E.2d 674 (1972); State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974); State v. Biggs, 292 N.C. 328, 233 S.E.2d 512 (1977); State v. Barbour, 295 N.C. 66, 243 S.E.2d 380 (1978). It is a prior determination to do the act. State v. Cameron, 166 N.C. 379, 81 S.E. 748 (1914); State v. Bowser, 214 N.C. 249, 199 S.E. 31 (1938); State v. Hamilton, 19 N.C. App. 436, 199 S.E.2d 159, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 256, 200 S.E.2d 656 (1973); State v. Baggett, 293 N.C. 307, 237 S.E.2d 827 (1977); State v. Poole, 298 N.C. 254, 258 S.E.2d 339 (1979). Premeditation means thought over beforehand for some length of time, however short, but no particular time is required for the mental process of premeditation. State v. Robbins, 275 N.C. 537, 169 S.E.2d 858 (1969); State v. Myers, 299 N.C. 671, 263 S.E.2d 768 (1980).

Premeditation means thought beforehand for some length of time. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Smith, 290 N.C. 148, 226 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 30 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976); State v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977); State v. Thomas, 294 N.C. 105, 240 S.E.2d 426 (1978); State v. Hill, 294 N.C. 320, 240 S.E.2d 794 (1978).

"Malice aforethought" was a term used in defining murder prior to the time of the adoption of this section dividing murder into degrees. As then used it did not mean an actual, express or preconceived disposition; but imported an intent, at the moment, to do without lawful authority, and without the pressure of necessity, that which the law forbade. As used in this section, the term premeditation and deliberation is more comprehensive and embraces all that is meant by aforethought, and more. State v. Hightower, 226 N.C. 62, 36 S.E.2d 649 (1946); State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

Premeditation and Deliberation Are Essential Elements of First Degree Murder. — For a conviction of murder in the first degree the killing must be done with willful premeditation and determination. State v. McKay, 150 N.C. 813, 63 S.E. 1059 (1909); State v. Baldwin, 152 N.C. 822, 68 S.E. 148 (1910).

And before a conviction for murder in the first degree can be had, the State must show that the prisoner had formed, prior to the killing, with deliberation and premeditation, a purpose to kill deceased. State v. Terry, 173 N.C. 761, 92 S.E. 154 (1917); State v. Benson, 183 N.C. 795, 111 S.E. 869 (1922), overruled on other grounds, State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965). See 5 N.C.L. Rev. 364.

If the circumstances of the killing show a formed design to take life of deceased, the crime is murder in the first degree. State v. Walker, 173 N.C. 780, 92 S.E. 327 (1917); State v. Cain, 178 N.C. 724, 100 S.E. 884 (1919).

If defendant resolved in his mind a fixed purpose to kill his wife and thereafter, because of that previously formed intention, and not because of any legal provocation on her part, he deliberately and intentionally shot her, the three essential elements of murder in the first degree — premeditation, deliberation, and malice — concurred. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

To sustain a verdict of murder in the first degree, the evidence must be sufficient to support a finding beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant with malice, after premeditation and deliberation, intentionally shot and killed the victim. State v. Sanders, 276 N.C. 598, 174 S.E.2d 487 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971).

In order to convict a defendant of first-degree murder the State is required to produce evidence which satisfies the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that he unlawfully killed a person with malice and in the execution of an actual specific intent to kill, formed after premeditation and deliberation. State v. Hamby, 276 N.C. 674, 174 S.E.2d 385 (1970), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 937, 92 S. Ct. 2862, 33 L. Ed. 2d 754 (1972).

To convict a defendant of murder in the first degree, when the killing was not perpetrated by one of the means specified by this section and was not committed in the perpetration of or attempt to perpetrate a felony, the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the killing was with premeditation and deliberation. State v. Cooper, 286 N.C. 549, 213 S.E.2d 305 (1975).

In order to convict the defendant of first-degree murder, the State must satisfy the jury beyond a reasonable doubt of all the elements thereof, to-wit, an unlawful killing of a human being with malice and with a specific intent to kill and committed after premeditation and deliberation. State v. Mitchell, 288 N.C. 360, 218 S.E.2d 332 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

For discussion of malice, see analysis lines IV (B) and (C).

Except in Felony-Murder. — See analysis line III(E).

Must Be Shown in Addition to Presumption of Malice. — The presumptions from the use of a deadly weapon in committing a homicide are that the killing was unlawful and that it was done with malice, which constitutes murder in the second degree, and in order for such homicide to constitute murder in the first degree the State must show beyond a reasonable doubt that it was done with premeditation and deliberation. State v. Miller, 197 N.C. 445, 149 S.E. 590 (1929); State v. Floyd, 226 N.C. 571, 39 S.E.2d 598 (1946).

A killing with a deadly weapon raises the presumption that the homicide was murder in the second degree, and if the State seeks a conviction of murder in the first degree, it has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the homicide was committed with deliberation and premeditation. State v. Perry, 209 N.C. 604, 184 S.E. 545 (1936).

The presumptions arising from a killing proximately caused by the intentional use of a deadly weapon does not relieve the State of the burden to establish beyond a reasonable doubt the additional elements of premeditation and deliberation which are necessary to constitute murder in the first degree. State v. Propst, 274 N.C. 62, 161 S.E.2d 560 (1968).

For discussion of presumptions arising from intentional killing with deadly weapon, see analysis line IV (C).

Length of Time Immaterial. — Weighing the purpose to kill long enough to form a fixed design, and the putting of such design into execution at a future period, no matter how long deferred, constitutes premeditation and deliberation sufficient to sustain a conviction of murder in the first degree. State v. Dowden, 118 N.C. 1145, 24 S.E. 722 (1896).

The killing of a human being after the fixed purpose to do so has been formed, for however short a time, is sufficient for the conviction of murder in the first degree. State v. Walker, 173 N.C. 780, 92 S.E. 327 (1917). No particular period of time is necessary to constitute premeditation and deliberation for a conviction of murder in the first degree under this section. If the purpose to kill at all events has been deliberately formed, the interval which elapses before its execution is immaterial. State v. Coffey, 174 N.C. 814, 94 S.E. 416 (1917); State v. Holdsclaw, 180 N.C. 731, 105 S.E. 181 (1920). And deliberation and premeditation need not be of any perceptible length of time. State v. Bynum, 175 N.C. 777, 95 S.E. 101 (1918); State v. Burney, 215 N.C. 598, 3 S.E.2d 24 (1939); State v. Hammonds, 216 N.C. 67, 4 S.E.2d 439 (1939).

No fixed length of time is required for the mental processes of premeditation and deliberation constituting an element of the offense of murder in the first degree, and it is sufficient if these processes occur prior to, and not simultaneously with, the killing. State v. Walters, 275 N.C. 615, 170 S.E.2d 484 (1969); State v. Perry, 276 N.C. 339, 172 S.E.2d 541 (1970).

The true test for premeditation is not the duration of time as much as it is the extent of the reflection and the time for premeditation would naturally vary with different individuals and under differing circumstances. State v. Buchanan, 287 N.C. 408, 215 S.E.2d 80 (1975).

Where one forms a purpose to take the life of another and weighs this purpose in his mind long enough to form a fixed design or determination to kill at a subsequent time, no matter how soon or how late, and pursuant thereto kills, this would be a killing with premeditation and deliberation and would be murder in the first degree. State v. Bock, 288 N.C. 145, 217 S.E.2d 513 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3208, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

Intent Formed Simultaneous with Act of Killing. — Where the intent to kill is formed simultaneously with the act of killing, the homicide is not murder in the first degree. State v. Dowden, 118 N.C. 1145, 24 S.E. 722 (1896); State v. Barrett, 142 N.C. 565, 54 S.E. 856 (1906).

A defendant who does not have the mental capacity to form an intent to kill, or to premeditate and deliberate upon the killing, cannot be lawfully convicted of murder in the first degree, whether such mental deficiency be due to a disease of the mind, intoxication or some other cause. State v. Cooper, 286 N.C. 549, 213 S.E.2d 305 (1975).

Defendant who does not have mental capacity to form intent to kill, or to premeditate and deliberate upon the killing, cannot be convicted of murder in the first degree. State v. Shepherd, 288 N.C. 346, 218 S.E.2d 176 (1975).

If a defendant does not have the mental capacity to form an intent to kill or to premeditate and deliberate upon the killing, he cannot be lawfully convicted of murder in the first degree, whether such mental deficiency be due to disease of the mind or some other cause. State v. Hammonds, 290 N.C. 1, 224 S.E.2d 595 (1976).

Same—Theory of Diminished Responsibility Not Adopted. — The Supreme Court has not adopted with respect to the specific intent to commit a crime such as first-degree murder what has been called the theory of diminished responsibility, under which some of the states hold that a defendant may offer evidence of an unusual or abnormal mental condition which is not sufficient to establish legal insanity, but tends to show that he did not have the capacity to premeditate or deliberate at the time of the murder. State v. Shepherd, 288 N.C. 346, 218 S.E.2d 176 (1975).

2. Proof.

Proof by Circumstantial Evidence. — It is said in State v. Watson, 222 N.C. 672, 24 S.E.2d 540 (1943), that "premeditation and deliberation are not usually susceptible of direct proof, and are, therefore, susceptible of proof by circumstances from which the facts sought to be proven may be inferred. That these essential elements of murder in the first degree may be proven by circumstantial evidence has been repeatedly held by this court." State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961).

Premeditation and deliberation are not usually susceptible of direct proof, and are therefore susceptible of proof by circumstances from which the facts sought to be proved may be inferred. State v. Walters, 275 N.C. 615, 170 S.E.2d 484 (1969); State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972); State v. McLaughlin, 286 N.C. 597, 213 S.E.2d 238 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976); State v. Smith, 290 N.C. 148, 226 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976).

Premeditation and deliberation are not usually susceptible of direct proof, and are therefore susceptible of proof by circumstances. State v. Perry, 276 N.C. 339, 172 S.E.2d 541 (1970); State v. DeGregory, 285 N.C. 122, 203 S.E.2d 794 (1974).

The elements of premeditation and deliberation are not usually susceptible to direct proof, but must be established from the circumstances surrounding the homicide. State v. Sanders, 276 N.C. 598, 174 S.E.2d 487 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); State v. Sparks, 285 N.C. 631, 207 S.E.2d 712 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 905, 96 S. Ct. 3213, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976); State v. Patterson, 288 N.C. 553, 220 S.E.2d 600 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976); State v. Strickland, 290 N.C. 169, 225 S.E.2d 531 (1976).

Ordinarily, it is not possible to prove premeditation and deliberation by direct evidence. These facts must be established by proof of circumstances from which they may be inferred. State v. Van Landingham, 283 N.C. 589, 197 S.E.2d 539 (1973); State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974); State v. Bock, 288 N.C. 145, 217 S.E.2d 513 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3208, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976); State v. Shepherd, 288 N.C. 346, 218 S.E.2d 176 (1975); State v. Mitchell, 288 N.C. 360, 218 S.E.2d 332 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976); State v. Griffin, 288 N.C. 437, 219 S.E.2d 48 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

It is not necessary, and usually is not possible, for the State to prove premeditation and deliberation directly; they must be inferred from the circumstances. State v. Hamilton, 19 N.C. App. 436, 199 S.E.2d 159, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 256, 200 S.E.2d 656 (1973).

Premeditation and deliberation are not ordinarily susceptible of proof by direct evidence and therefore must usually be proved by circumstantial evidence. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977); State v. Thomas, 294 N.C. 105, 240 S.E.2d 426 (1978); State v. Hill, 294 N.C. 320, 240 S.E.2d 794 (1978).

Premeditation and deliberation usually must be established by circumstantial evidence, since there is seldom direct evidence of these elements. State v. Barbour, 295 N.C. 66, 243 S.E.2d 380 (1978).

Since premeditation and deliberation refer to processes of the mind, they must almost always be proved, if at all, by circumstantial evidence. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

Circumstances Which May Be Considered. — In determining the question of premeditation and deliberation it is proper for the jury to take into consideration the conduct of the defendant, before and after, as well as at the time of, the homicide, and all attending circumstances. State v. Hawkins, 214 N.C. 326, 199 S.E. 284 (1938); State v. Brown, 249 N.C. 271, 106 S.E.2d 232 (1958); State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961).

In determining the question of premeditation and deliberation, the conduct of defendants, before and after, as well as at the time of, the homicide, and all attendant circumstances, are competent. State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56

S.E.2d 678 (1949); State v. Lamm, 232 N.C. 402, 61 S.E.2d 188 (1950).

Among the circumstances to be considered in determining whether a killing was with premeditation and deliberation are: (1) want of provocation on the part of deceased; (2) the conduct of defendant before and after the killing; (3) threats and declarations of defendant before and during the course of the occurrence giving rise to the death of deceased; (4) the dealing of lethal blows after deceased has been felled and rendered helpless. State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961); State v. Walters, 275 N.C. 615, 170 S.E.2d 484 (1969); State v. Hamby, 276 N.C. 674, 174 S.E.2d 385 (1970), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 937, 92 S. Ct. 2862, 33 L. Ed. 2d 754 (1972); State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972); State v. Van Landingham, 283 N.C. 589, 197 S.E.2d 539 (1973).

Want of provocation, absence of excuse, lack of justification, and defendant's statement that he shot a person "to prove a point" — all permitted, if not compelled, a legitimate inference of premeditation and deliberation. State v. Rich, 277 N.C. 333, 177 S.E.2d 422 (1970).

Premeditation and deliberation may be inferred from a vicious and brutal slaying of a human being. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971).

Any unseemly conduct toward the corpse of the person slain, or any indignity offered it by the slayer, and also concealment of the body, are evidence of express malice, and of premeditation and deliberation in the slaying, depending, of course, upon the particular circumstances of the case. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

The additional ingredient of premeditation and deliberation necessary in first degree murder may be inferred from the vicious and brutal circumstances of the homicide, e.g., lack of provocation, threats before and during the occurrence, infliction of lethal blows after the victim had been felled and rendered helpless, and conduct of the defendant before and after the killing. State v. Duboise, 279 N.C. 73, 181 S.E.2d 393 (1971).

The elements of premeditation and deliberation are not ordinarily susceptible to direct proof, but are inferred from various circumstances, such as ill will, previous difficulty between the parties, or evidence that the killing was done in a vicious and brutal manner. State v. Fountain, 282 N.C. 58, 191 S.E.2d 674 (1972).

Among the circumstances to be considered in determining whether a killing was with premeditation and deliberation are: want of provocation on the part of the deceased; the conduct of defendant before and after the killing; the use of grossly excessive force, or the dealing of lethal blows after the deceased has been felled. State v. DeGregory, 285 N.C. 122, 203 S.E.2d 794 (1974); State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974); State v. Bock, 288 N.C. 145, 217 S.E.2d 513 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3208, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976); State v. Shepherd, 288 N.C. 346, 218 S.E.2d 176 (1975); State v. Mitchell, 288 N.C. 360, 218 S.E.2d 332 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976); State v. Griffin, 288 N.C. 437, 219 S.E.2d 48 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976); State v. Barbour, 295 N.C. 66, 243 S.E.2d 380 (1978).

The ingredients of premeditation and deliberation necessary in first-degree murder may be inferred from the vicious and brutal circumstances of the homicide indicating a complete lack of provocation and a viciousness which demonstrates that death was the actor's objective. State v. DeGregory, 285 N.C. 122, 203 S.E.2d 794 (1974).

The use of grossly excessive force or the delivering of lethal blows after a deceased has been felled are among the circumstances to be considered in determining whether a killing is done with premeditation and deliberation. State v. Spaulding, 288 N.C. 397, 219 S.E.2d 178 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Previously existing hostile feelings between defendant and deceased, a prior assault upon the deceased by defendant, the use of grossly excessive force and killing in an unusually brutal way have all been held to be circumstances tending to show premeditation and deliberation. State v. Patterson, 288 N.C. 553, 220 S.E.2d 600 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

Premeditation and deliberation must usually be inferred from various circumstances including (1) want of provocation on the part of the deceased, (2) the conduct of an accused before and after the killing and (3) that the killing was done in a vicious and brutal manner. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Among the circumstances to be considered in determining whether a killing is done with premeditation and deliberation are: (1) want of provocation on the part of the deceased, (2) the conduct of defendant before and after the killing, (3) the dealing of lethal blows after deceased has been felled and rendered helpless, (4) the vicious or brutal manner of the killing, (5) the number of shots fired. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Among the circumstances to be considered in determining whether a murder was committed with premeditation and deliberation are: (1) want of provocation, (2) the conduct of the accused before and after the killing, (3) threats and declarations of the accused, (4) the use of grossly excessive force or the dealing of lethal blows after the deceased has been felled. State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977).

Among the circumstances to be considered in determining whether a killing is done with premeditation and deliberation are: (1) the want of provocation on the part of deceased; (2) the conduct of defendant before and after the killing; (3) the vicious and brutal manner of the killing; and (4) the number of blows inflicted or shots fired. State v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977); State v. Thomas, 294 N.C. 105, 240 S.E.2d 426 (1978); State v. Hill, 294 N.C. 320, 240 S.E.2d 794 (1978).

Among circumstances which may tend to prove premeditation and deliberation are: (1) want of provocation on the part of the deceased; (2) conduct and statements of the defendant both before and after the killing; and (3) threats made against the deceased by the defendant. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978); State v. Myers, 299 N.C. 671, 263 S.E.2d 768 (1980).

Presumption from Method of Murder. — When a homicide is perpetrated by means of poison, lying in wait, imprisonment, starving or torture, the means and method used involves planning and purpose. Hence, the law presumes premeditation and deliberation. The act speaks for itself. State v. Dunheen, 224 N.C. 738, 32 S.E.2d 322 (1944).

When a homicide is perpetrated by means of torture, premeditation and deliberation are presumed and defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree. State v. Duboise, 279 N.C. 73, 181 S.E.2d 393 (1971).

No Presumption from Use of Deadly Weapon. — Premeditation and deliberation necessary to constitute murder in the first degree are not presumed from a killing with a deadly weapon. They must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, and found by the jury, before a verdict of murder in the first degree can be rendered against the prisoner. State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56 S.E.2d 678 (1949). See State v. Hawkins, 214 N.C. 326, 199 S.E. 284 (1938); State v. Lamm, 232 N.C. 402, 61 S.E.2d 188 (1950); State v. Brown, 249 N.C. 271, 106 S.E.2d 232 (1958).

No presumption as to premeditation and deliberation arises from a killing proximately caused by the intentional use of a deadly weapon. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971).

C. Murder by Poison.

Generally. — A murder perpetrated by means of poison is murder in the first degree. State v. Hendrick, 232 N.C. 447, 61 S.E.2d 349 (1950).

D. Murder by Lying in Wait.

Ambush. — Defendants who lay in wait and killed deceased from ambush are guilty of murder in first degree. State v. Wiggins, 171 N.C. 813, 89 S.E. 58 (1916). See State v. Satterfield, 207 N.C. 118, 176 S.E. 466 (1934); State v. Mozingo, 207 N.C. 247, 176 S.E. 582 (1934).

When this section speaks of murder perpetrated by lying in wait, it refers to a killing where the assassin has stationed himself or is lying in ambush for a private attack upon his victim. An assailant who watches and waits in ambush for his victim is most certainly lying in wait. State v. Allison, 298 N.C. 135, 257 S.E.2d 417 (1979).

Assailant Need Not Be Concealed. — It is not necessary that an assailant be actually concealed in order to lie in wait. If one places himself in a position to make a private attack upon his victim and assails him at a time when the victim does not know of the assassin's presence or, if he does know, is not aware of his purpose to kill him, the killing would constitute a murder perpetrated by lying in wait. State v. Allison, 298 N.C. 135, 257 S.E.2d 417 (1979).

E. Murder Committed in Perpetration of a Felony.

Term "Felony Murder" Disapproved. — Since "felony murder" is not a statutory term, its use in an issue submitted to the jury is ill-advised and its usage is expressly disapproved. State v. Foster, 293 N.C. 674, 239 S.E.2d 449 (1977).

Death Need Not Be Intended. — It is evident under this section a homicide is murder in the first degree if it results from the commission or attempted commission of one of the four specified felonies or of any other felony inherently dangerous to life, without regard to whether the death be intended or not. State v. Streeton, 231 N.C. 301, 56 S.E.2d 649 (1949); State v. Maynard, 247 N.C. 462, 101 S.E.2d 340 (1958); State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972).

The killing of another human being, whether intentional or otherwise, while the person who kills is engaged in the perpetration of a felony, which felony is inherently or forseeably dangerous to human life, is murder at common law. State v. Shrader, 290 N.C. 253, 225 S.E.2d 522 (1976).

A homicide is murder in the first degree if it results from the commission or attempted commission of one of the four specified felonies or of any other felony inherently dangerous to life, without regard to whether death was intended or not. State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

And Premeditation and Deliberation Need Not Be Proved. — A murder committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a robbery or any felony is murder in the first degree, and in such instance the State is not put to proof of premeditation and deliberation. State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56 S.E.2d 678 (1949).

When a murder is committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate any robbery, burglary or other felony, this section declares it murder in the first degree. In those instances the law presumes premeditation and deliberation, and the State is not put to further proof of either. State v. Fox, 277 N.C. 1, 175 S.E.2d 561 (1970); State v. Jenerett, 281 N.C. 81, 187 S.E.2d 735 (1972); State v. Peplinski, 290 N.C. 236, 225 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976).

Where a murder is committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a felony the State is not put to the proof of premeditation and deliberation; the law presumes them. State v. Doss, 279 N.C. 413, 183 S.E.2d 671 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2875, 33 L. Ed. 2d 762 (1972).

A murder committed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of any felony within the purview of this section is murder in the first degree, irrespective of premeditation or deliberation or malice aforethought. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972); State v. Hairston, 280 N.C. 220, 185 S.E.2d 633, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 888, 93 S. Ct. 194, 34 L. Ed. 2d 145 (1972).

A murder committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate any felony within the purview of this section is murder in the first degree without proof of an intentional killing with malice after premeditation and deliberation. State v. Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973); State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Application of the felony-murder rule supplants the necessity for proof of an intentional killing with malice after premeditation and deliberation. State v. Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973); State v. Jones, 290 N.C. 292, 225 S.E.2d 549 (1976).

Under this section, premeditation and deliberation are not elements of the crime of felony-murder. State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

Evidence of premeditation and deliberation is not required as an essential element of proof of a felony-murder charge. Chance v. Garrison, 537 F.2d 1212 (4th Cir. 1976).

It is a well-established rule that when the law and evidence justify the use of the felony-murder rule, then the State is not required to prove premeditation and deliberation. State v. Warren, 292 N.C. 235, 232 S.E.2d 419 (1977).

Same — Burden of Proof. — The felony-murder rule does not place any burden of proof upon a criminal defendant. The State is required to prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that a murder was committed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a robbery, and that defendant participated in that crime. Upon a finding by the jury that these elements are proved beyond a reasonable doubt, defendant is, by this section, guilty of first-degree murder. There is no requirement in the statutory definition of the crime that the State prove malice, premeditation or deliberation. Thus, the felony-murder rule does not unconstitutionally relieve the State of the burden of proving malice, since malice is not an element of the crime. Further, no burden is placed upon a defendant to prove or disprove any of the elements of the crime contained in this section. State v. Womble, 292 N.C. 455, 233 S.E.2d 454 (1977).

Same — Arson. — A murder committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate arson is murder in the first degree irrespective of premeditation, deliberation, or malice aforethought. State v. McLaughlin, 286 N.C. 597, 213 S.E.2d 238 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976).

Same — Rape. — Proof that a homicide was committed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of rape makes the crime murder in the first degree and dispenses with the necessity of proof of premeditation and deliberation. State v. Mays, 225 N.C. 486, 35 S.E.2d 494 (1945); State v. King, 226 N.C. 241, 37 S.E.2d 684 (1946).

A homicide committed in the perpetration of the capital offense of rape is murder in the first degree, irrespective of premeditation and deliberation. State v. Crawford, 260 N.C. 548, 133 S.E.2d 232 (1963).

Same — Robbery. — Where murder is committed in the perpetration of a robbery from the person, it is murder in the first degree, irrespective of premeditation or deliberation or malice aforethought. State v. Alston, 215 N.C. 713, 3 S.E.2d 11 (1939); State v. Maynard, 247 N.C. 462, 101 S.E.2d 340 (1958).

A homicide committed in the perpetration or an attempt to perpetrate a robbery is murder in the first degree, notwithstanding the absence of any fixed intent to kill or any previous purpose, design or plan. State v. Kelly, 216 N.C. 627, 6 S.E.2d 533 (1940).

A homicide committed in the perpetration of a robbery is declared by this section to be murder in the first degree. When a homicide is thus committed, the State is not put to the proof of premeditation and deliberation. In such event the law presumes premeditation and deliberation. State v. Bunton, 247 N.C. 510, 101 S.E.2d 454 (1958).

When a murder is committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a robbery from the person, this section pronounces it murder in the first degree, irrespective of premeditation or deliberation or malice aforethought. State v. Bailey, 254 N.C. 380, 119 S.E.2d 165 (1961).

When a murder is committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate the felony or robbery, it is murder in the first degree, irrespective of premeditation, deliberation or malice aforethought. State v. Haynes, 276 N.C. 150, 171 S.E.2d 435 (1970); State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

The felony-murder rule provides in pertinent part that a murder which shall be committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate robbery shall be deemed to be murder in the first degree. In such cases the law presumes premeditation and deliberation, and the State is not put to further proof of either. State v. Wright, 282 N.C. 364, 192 S.E.2d 818 (1972).

Where a homicide is committed in the commission of, or in the attempt to commit, an armed robbery, the State is not required to prove premeditation and deliberation; this section pronounces it murder in the first degree. State v. McZorn, 288 N.C. 417, 219 S.E.2d 201 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Unbroken Chain of Events Required. — A killing is committed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a felony within the purview of a felony-murder statute when there is no break in the chain of events leading from the initial felony to the act causing death, so that the homicide is linked to or part of the series of incidents, forming one continuous transaction. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972); State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333 (1976); State v. Covington, 290 N.C. 313, 226 S.E.2d 629 (1976); State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 638, 54 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1977).

An interrelationship between the felony and the homicide is prerequisite to application of felony-murder doctrine. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563 (1977).

A killing is committed in the perpetration of a felony when an unbroken chain of events leads from such felony to the act causing death, so that the homicide is part of a series of events forming one continuous transaction. State v. Shrader, 290 N.C. 253, 225 S.E.2d 522 (1976).

A killing is committed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of another felony when there is no break in the chain of events between the felony and the act causing death, so that the felony and homicide are part of the same series of events, forming one continuous transaction. State v. Wooten, 295 N.C. 378, 245 S.E.2d 699 (1978).

But completion of the robbery or other felony is not required to sustain a conviction under the felony-murder rule. State v. Hopper, 292 N.C. 580, 234 S.E.2d 580 (1977).

All Conspirators in Felony Are Equally Guilty. — Each party to a conspiracy to burglarize or rob a home is guilty of murder in the first degree if any one of the conspirators commits murder in an attempt to perpetrate the burglary or robbery. State v. Bell, 205 N.C. 225, 171 S.E. 50 (1933).

Where defendants conspire to rob a certain place, and a murder is committed by one or more of them in the attempt to perpetrate the robbery, each of them is guilty of murder in the first degree. State v. Stefanoff, 206 N.C. 443, 174 S.E. 411 (1934); State v. Miller, 219 N.C. 514, 14 S.E.2d 522 (1941); State v. Bennett, 226 N.C. 82, 36 S.E.2d 708 (1946); State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56 S.E.2d 678 (1949).

Where a conspiracy is formed to rob a bank, and murder is committed by one of the conspirators in the attempt to perpetrate the crime, each conspirator is guilty of murder in the first degree, under this section, and it is immaterial which one of them fired the fatal shot. State v. Green, 207 N.C. 369, 177 S.E. 120 (1934); State v. Kelly, 216 N.C. 627, 6 S.E.2d 533 (1940).

When a conspiracy is formed to commit a robbery or burglary, and a murder is committed by any one of the conspirators in the attempted perpetration of the crime, each and all of the conspirators are guilty of murder in the first degree. State v. Fox, 277 N.C. 1, 175 S.E.2d 561 (1970); State v. Carey, 288 N.C. 254, 218 S.E.2d 387 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976); State v. Peplinski, 290 N.C. 236, 225 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976); State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 638, 54 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1977).

Where all defendants had formed a conspiracy to rob the deceased, and in attempting to perpetrate this crime one defendant shot and killed the deceased, then each and all of the conspirators are guilty of murder in the first degree, and the court correctly refused to charge that the conspiracy had been abandoned, and that the other defendants were not accountable for the act of the defendant who shot and killed the deceased. State v. Hairston, 280 N.C. 220, 185 S.E.2d 633, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 888, 93 S. Ct. 194, 34 L. Ed. 2d 145 (1972).

Where the evidence was sufficient to support a finding by the jury that defendants had formed a conspiracy to rob the deceased, and that in attempting to perpetrate this crime one of the defendants shot and killed the deceased, each of the defendants was guilty of murder in the first degree. State v. Wright, 282 N.C. 364, 192 S.E.2d 818 (1972).

The felony-murder rule applies whenever a conspirator kills another person in the course of committing a felony, as against the contention that the killing was not part of the conspiracy. If the unlawful act agreed to be done is dangerous or homicidal in its character, or if its accomplishment necessarily or probably required the use of force and violence which may result in the taking of life unlawfully, every party in such agreement will be held criminally liable for whatever any of his co-conspirators may do in furtherance of the common design. State v. Carey, 288 N.C. 254, 218 S.E.2d 387 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

Where all of the defendants not only conspire to perpetrate a robbery, but all actually participate actively in its perpetration, and in the course thereof a killing occurs, all participants are guilty of murder in the first degree. State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 638, 54 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1977).

Killing in Perpetration of Robbery Generally. — A homicide committed in the perpetration of, or in attempt to perpetrate, a robbery will be deemed murder in the first degree. State v. Lane, 166 N.C. 333, 81 S.E. 620 (1914). See State v. Glover, 208 N.C. 68, 179 S.E. 6 (1935); State v. Exum, 213 N.C. 16, 195 S.E. 7 (1938); State v. Biggs, 224 N.C. 722, 32 S.E.2d 352 (1944).

A murder perpetrated in an attempt to commit robbery is murder in the first degree. State v. Carey, 285 N.C. 509, 206 S.E.2d 222 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

A finding that a homicide was committed in the perpetration of an attempted robbery sufficies to support the conviction of murder in the first degree. State v. Simmons, 286 N.C. 681, 213 S.E.2d 280 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3207, 429 L. Ed. 2d 903 (1976).

This section expressly provides that a murder perpetrated in an attempt to commit robbery is murder in the first degree. State v. Carey, 288 N.C. 254, 218 S.E.2d 387 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

A murder committed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of robbery is murder in the first degree. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

A murder committed in the perpetration of, or attempt to perpetrate, a robbery is murder in the first degree and punishable by death. State v. Jones, 290 N.C. 292, 225 S.E.2d 549 (1976).

A murder committed in the perpetration of any robbery, whether armed robbery or common-law robbery, is murder in the first degree. State v. Dollar, 292 N.C. 344, 233 S.E.2d 521 (1977).

Killing in Perpetration of Burglary. — A finding that a homicide was committed in the perpetration of a burglary suffices to support the conviction of murder in the first degree. State v. Simmons, 286 N.C. 681, 213 S.E.2d 280 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3207, 429 L. Ed. 2d 903 (1976).

What Unspecified Felonies Are within Purview of Section. — A felony which is inherently dangerous to life is within the purview of this section although not specified therein. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972); State v. Woods, 286 N.C. 612, 213 S.E.2d 214 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3207, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976).

Any unspecified felony is within the purview of this section if the commission or attempted commission thereof creates any substantial foreseeable human risk and actually results in the loss of life. This includes, but is not limited to, felonies which are inherently dangerous to life. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972); State v. Foster, 293 N.C. 674, 239 S.E.2d 449 (1977).

Same — Discharging Firearm into Occupied Property. — The criminal offense created by § 14-34.1 is a felony within the purview of this section. State v. Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973).

A homicide committed in the perpetration of the felony under § 14-34.1 can result in conviction for murder in the first degree under the felony-murder rule of § 14-17. State v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 525, 204 S.E.2d 864 (1974).

Section 14-34.1, relating to the intentional discharge of a firearm into an occupied dwelling, is an unspecified felony under this section because of the reasonable correlation between committing a crime under § 14-34.1 and the possibility of death occurring. State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

Same — Killing during Escape or Flight. — A murder committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a felonious escape is murder in the first degree. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 205, 176 S.E.2d 765 (1970).

Escape is ordinarily within the res gestae of the felony and a killing committed during escape or flight is ordinarily within the felony-murder rule. State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 638, 54 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1977).

Same — Killing in Perpetration of Felonious Breaking and Entering and Larceny. — Where the evidence tends to show that defendant, armed with pistol, feloniously broke into and entered an apartment; that he committed the crime of felonious larceny therein; and that while in said apartment he came upon and shot and killed the deceased, these crimes created substantial foreseeable human risks and therefore were unspecified felonies within the purview of this section. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972).

Same — Killing in Perpetration of Act of Sodomy. — Without deciding whether every felony not specified in the statute must be inherently dangerous to life, the crime committed where a 15-year-old boy, under threat of gunfire and knife, was compelled to submit to an act of sodomy by the defendant was a crime as atrocious and as inherently dangerous as the specified felonies in this section. State v. Doss, 279 N.C. 413, 183 S.E.2d 671 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2875, 33 L. Ed. 2d 762 (1972).

Charges Merge. — Where it appears conclusively that armed robbery charges were proved as essential elements in the capital offense of murder in the first degree upon which the defendants were convicted, the robberies became a part of and were merged into the murder charges. Having been so used, the defendants cannot again be charged, convicted and sentenced for these elements although the robberies constituted crimes within themselves. State v. Carroll, 282 N.C. 326, 193 S.E.2d 85 (1972).

And No Additional Punishment for Felony May Be Imposed. — When a felony within the purview of § 14-34.1 is relied upon as an essential element of and the basis for the conviction of a defendant for murder in the first degree under the felony-murder rule, no additional punishment can be imposed for such felony as an independent criminal offense. State v Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973).

Proof of the arson charge was an essential and indispensable element in the State's proof of felony-murder and as such affords no basis for additional punishment. State v. White, 291 N.C. 118, 229 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

When the State, in the trial of a charge of murder, uses evidence that the murder occurred in the perpetration of an armed robbery so as to establish that the murder was a murder in the first degree, the underlying felony becomes a part of the murder charge to the extent of preventing a further prosecution of the defendant for, or a further sentence of the defendant for, commission of the armed robbery. State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 638, 54 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1977).

F. Death Penalty.

Death Penalty Expressly Authorized. — The imposition of the death penalty upon a conviction of murder is expressly authorized by N.C. Const., Art. XI, § 2. State v. Atkinson, 275 N.C. 288, 167 S.E.2d 241 (1969), death sentence rev'd, Atkinson v. North Carolina, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2283, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971).

Effect of Furman v. Georgia. — Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972), holds that the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments of the U. S. Constitution will no longer tolerate the infliction of a death sentence where either the jury or the judge is permitted to impose that sentence as a matter of discretion. State v. Rankin, 282 N.C. 572, 193 S.E.2d 740 (1973); State v. Watkins, 283 N.C. 17, 194 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1000, 94 S. Ct. 353, 38 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973).

The jury may not constitutionally be permitted to exercise its discretion and choose between life and death, a procedure held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States in Furman v. Georgia. State v. Blackmon, 284 N.C. 1, 199 S.E.2d 431 (1973).

Same — Capital punishment has not been declared unconstitutional per se. Rather, the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments will no longer tolerate the infliction of the death sentence if either judge or jury is permitted to impose that sentence as a matter of discretion. State v. Waddell, 282 N.C. 431, 194 S.E.2d 19 (1973).

Imposition of the death penalty upon conviction of first-degree murder is not cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. State v. Spaulding, 288 N.C. 397, 219 S.E.2d 178 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Judgment and sentence of death upon conviction of first-degree murder is not unconstitutional. State v. Griffin, 288 N.C. 437, 219 S.E.2d 48 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Defendant's contention in a trial for first-degree murder that the imposition of the death penalty results in cruel and unusual punishment and is therefore constitutionally impermissible has been rejected in many decisions. State v. Carter, 289 N.C. 35, 220 S.E.2d 313 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

Defendants' contention that capital punishment under this section would violate the federal and State Constitutions has been rejected several times. State v. Bush, 289 N.C.

159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Same — No Effect on Convictions. — Where the Supreme Court of the United States in Furman v. Georgia held that the imposition of the death penalty, under certain state statutes and in the application thereof, was unconstitutional, that decision did not affect the conviction but only the death sentence. State v. Wright, 282 N.C. 364, 192 S.E.2d 818 (1972); State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972).

Former Mandatory Death Penalty Provision of This Section Held Unconstitutional. — North Carolina's mandatory death penalty statute for first-degree murder contained in this section as amended in 1973 and before its amendment in 1977, departed markedly from contemporary standards respecting the imposition of the punishment of death and could not be applied consistently with the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments' requirement that the State's power to punish be exercised within the limits of civilized standards since it provided no objective standards for jury and failed to allow for consideration of the particular character and record of each defendant with a view toward mitigation of the offense. Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S. Ct. 2978, 49 L. Ed. 2d 944 (1976).

Same — The Effect of Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S. Ct. 2978, 49 L. Ed. 2d 944 (1976), was to return the construction of this statute to its post-Furman (Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972)), pre-Waddell (State v. Waddell, 282 N.C. 431, 194 S.E.2d 19 (1973)) status. Carey v. Garrison, 452 F. Supp. 485 (W.D.N.C. 1978). (In State v. Waddell, the court held that provisions giving the jury discretion to impose sentences of life imprisonment in capital cases were unconstitutional, but were severable, with the result that the death penalty would become mandatory in such cases. — Ed. Note.)

Retention, etc., of Death Penalty Is Legislation Question. — The matter of retention, modification or abolition of the death penalty is a question for the lawmaking authorities rather than the courts. State v. Waddell, 282 N.C. 431, 194 S.E.2d 19 (1973).

Standing to Challenge Constitutionality. — Furman v. Georgia is without significance when the jury in a murder trial returns a verdict recommending life imprisonment. In that situation the defendant has no standing to raise the constitutionality of the death penalty or of a statute because it provides for that punishment. State v. Wright, 282 N.C. 364, 192 S.E.2d 818 (1972); State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972); State v. Rankin, 282 N.C. 572, 193 S.E.2d 740 (1973).

Cases in Which Defendants Received Death Sentence Remanded Pursuant to Mandate of United States Supreme Court. — Pursuant to mandates of the Supreme Court of the United States in Hill v. North Carolina, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2287, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); Atkinson v. North Carolina, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2283, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971); Williams v. North Carolina, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); Sanders v. North Carolina, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); and Roseboro v. North Carolina, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2289, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971), first-degree murder cases in which the defendants received the death sentence were remanded to the superior court with direction that the defendants be sentenced to life imprisonment in the State's prison. State v. Hill, 279 N.C. 371, 183 S.E.2d 97 (1971); State v. Atkinson, 279 N.C. 386, 183 S.E.2d 106 (1971); State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 388, 183 S.E.2d 106 (1971); State v. Sanders, 279 N.C. 389, 183 S.E.2d 107 (1971); State v. Roseboro, 279 N.C. 391, 183 S.E.2d 108 (1971).

Resentencing of Convicted Murderer. — Where an individual was convicted of murder and sentenced to death, which sentence was later invalidated, resentencing the convicted murderer to life imprisonment did not violate the due process clause as an ex post facto application of the law, especially since before the time of the convicted murderer's June 19, 1973, offense, North Carolina had given notice in the 1969 version of this section, that it intended to exact the maximum possible penalty for first-degree murder. Carey v. Garrison, 452 F. Supp. 485 (W.D.N.C. 1978).

When Murder Considered Committed for Purposes of Ex Post Facto Punishment Prohibition. — For purposes of the prohibition against ex post facto legislation, a murder was committed when the murderous acts were performed and not when death resulted. Therefore, where defendant administered poison to her husband on three occasions, all before June 1, 1977, at a time when the maximum punishment for first-degree murder was life imprisonment, imposition of the death sentence under § 15A-2002 would violate the prohibition against imposition of an ex post facto punishment. State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979).

Prosecutor's Argument. — Where the prosecuting attorney, while making a vigorous plea for the imposition of the death penalty, did not depart from or distort the record, and there was nothing in his argument which would tend to mislead the jury or deprive the defendant of a fair trial, the argument was proper. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

But where the prosecuting attorney, in his argument, traveled outside the record, used language offensive in its nature, and, in support of his plea for the death penalty, injected into his argument his own account of his record as a solicitor in other cases, for the purpose of persuading the jury that he did not ask the death penalty where it was not deserved, the argument was improper. State v. Smith, 279 N.C. 163, 181 S.E.2d 458 (1971).

IV. MURDER IN THE SECOND DEGREE.

A. In General.

What Constitutes Second-Degree Murder. — Murder in the second degree is the unlawful killing of a human being with malice, but without elements of premeditation and deliberation. State v. Benson, 183 N.C. 795, 111 S.E. 869 (1922), overruled on other grounds, State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965); State v. Starnes, 220 N.C. 384, 17 S.E.2d 346 (1941); State v. Downey, 253 N.C. 348, 117 S.E.2d 39 (1960); State v. Kea, 256 N.C. 492, 124 S.E.2d 174 (1962); State v. Foust, 258 N.C. 453, 128 S.E.2d 889 (1963); State v. McCain, 6 N.C. App. 558, 170 S.E.2d 531 (1969); State v. Jennings, 276 N.C. 157, 171 S.E.2d 447 (1970); State v. Duboise, 279 N.C. 73, 181 S.E.2d 393 (1971); State v. Cannady, 16 N.C. App. 569, 192 S.E.2d 677 (1972); State v. Fox, 18 N.C. App. 523, 197 S.E.2d 265, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 755, 198 S.E.2d 725 (1973); State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. McCall, 289 N.C. 512, 223 S.E.2d 303, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 912, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1976); State v. Cousins, 289 N.C. 540, 223 S.E.2d 338 (1976); State v. Christopher, 29 N.C. App. 231, 223 S.E.2d 835 (1976); State v. Periman, 32 N.C. App. 33, 230 S.E.2d 802 (1977); State v. Jones, 291 N.C. 681, 231 S.E.2d 252 (1977); State v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977); State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Hodges, 296 N.C. 66, 249 S.E.2d 371 (1978); State v. Fleming, 296 N.C. 559, 251 S.E.2d 430 (1979); State v. Rogers, 299 N.C. 597, 264 S.E.2d 89 (1980); State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 731, 268 S.E.2d 201 (1980); State v. Jenkins, 300 N.C. 578, 268 S.E.2d 458 (1980); State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

By this section the crime of murder in the second degree is as at common law. State v. Smith, 221 N.C. 278, 20 S.E.2d 313 (1942).

An unlawful killing with malice is murder in the second degree. State v. Mercer, 275 N.C. 108, 165 S.E.2d 328 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Caddell, 287 N.C. 266, 215 S.E.2d 348 (1975); State v. Winford, 279 N.C. 58, 181 S.E.2d 423 (1971); State v. Williams, 288 N.C. 680, 220 S.E.2d 558 (1975).

Under statutes of this description, murder in the second degree is common-law murder but the killing is not accompanied by the distinguishing features of murder in the first degree. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

Included in Murder in First Degree. — If a person is guilty of murder in the first degree, a fortiori, his guilt encompasses murder in the second degree. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

Manslaughter is a lesser included offense of murder in the second degree. State v. Holcomb, 295 N.C. 608, 247 S.E.2d 888 (1978).

Elements of the offense. — An intent to inflict a wound which produces a homicide is an essential element of murder in the second degree. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965); State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

The essential elements of the offense of murder in the second degree are that the killing was unlawful and with malice. For these elements to be presumed present, the burden is upon the State to satisfy the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally used a deadly weapon, as a weapon, and inflicted wounds proximately resulting in death. State v. Drake, 8 N.C. App. 214, 174 S.E.2d 132 (1970).

The universal applicability of the statements that an intent to inflict a wound which produces a homicide is an essential element of murder in the second degree, and that second-degree murder imports a specific intent to do an unlawful act is questionable. It is more fundamentally sound to say that any act evidencing wickedness of disposition, hardness of heart, cruelty, recklessness of consequences, and a mind regardless of social duty and deliberately bent on mischief, though there may be no intention to injure a particular person is sufficient to supply the malice necessary for second-degree murder. Such an act will always be accompanied by a general intent to do the act itself but it need not be accompanied by a specific intent to accomplish any particular purpose or to do any particular thing. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

The law of North Carolina continues to be that the elements of malice and unlawfulness are essential to a second-degree murder conviction. Gardner v. Forister, 468 F. Supp. 761 (W.D.N.C. 1979).

Same — Proximate Cause. — To warrant a conviction for homicide the State must establish that the act of the accused was a proximate cause of the death. State v. Jones, 290 N.C. 292, 225 S.E.2d 549 (1976).

Proximate cause is an element of second-degree murder and manslaughter. State v. Sherrill, 28 N.C. App. 311, 220 S.E.2d 822 (1976).

Same — Same — Forseeability is not an element of proximate cause in a homicide case where an intentionally inflicted wound caused the victim's death. State v. Wrenn, 279 N.C. 676, 185 S.E.2d 129 (1971).

Culpable Negligence May Support Conviction. — Culpable negligence from which death proximately ensues makes the actor guilty of manslaughter, and under some circumstances guilty of murder. State v. Colson, 262 N.C. 506, 138 S.E.2d 121 (1964).

Both involuntary manslaughter and second-degree murder can involve an act of "culpable negligence" that proximately causes death. Culpable negligence, standing alone, will support at most involuntary manslaughter. When, however, an act of culpable negligence also imports danger to another and is done so recklessly or wantonly as to manifest depravity of mind and disregard of human life, it will support a conviction for second-degree murder. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

If Malice Is Shown. — Since the distinction between manslaughter and murder in the second degree is malice, culpable negligence will not support a murder charge unless there are sufficient facts to support a finding of malice. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

There need not be two definitions of culpable negligence, one for involuntary manslaughter and one for murder in the second degree. The distinguishing element of the two offenses is the requirement of malice in murder in the second degree. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 338 (1980).

B. Malice in General.

Definition. — Malice is that condition of mind which prompts a person to take the life of another intentionally without just cause, excuse or justification. State v. Benson, 183 N.C. 795, 111 S.E. 869 (1922), overruled on other grounds, State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965); State v. Tilley, 18 N.C. App. 300, 196 S.E.2d 816 (1973); State v. Fleming, 296 N.C. 559, 251 S.E.2d 430 (1979).

Malice is not only hatred, ill will, or spite, as it is ordinarily understood — to be sure that is malice — but it also means that condition of mind which prompts a person to take the life of another intentionally without just cause, excuse or justification. State v. Foust, 258 N.C. 453, 128 S.E.2d 889 (1963); State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969); State v. Drake, 8 N.C. App. 214, 174 S.E.2d 132 (1970); State v. Patterson, 288 N.C. 553, 220 S.E.2d 600 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976); State v. Cousins, 289 N.C. 540, 223 S.E.2d 338 (1976); State v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977); State v. Fleming, 296 N.C. 559, 251 S.E.2d 430 (1979); State v. Myers, 299 N.C. 671, 263 S.E.2d 768 (1980).

Malice exists as a matter of law whenever there has been unlawful and intentional homicide without excuse or mitigating circumstance. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969); State v. Patterson, 288 N.C. 553, 220 S.E.2d 600 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976); State v. Fleming, 296 N.C. 559, 251 S.E.2d 430 (1979).

Malice not only means ill will, hatred or spite, sometimes called "express malice," but also exists as a matter of law whenever there has been an unlawful and intentional homicide without excuse or mitigating circumstance. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

In a legal sense, malice is not restricted to spite or enmity toward a particular person. It also denotes a wrongful act intentionally done without just cause or excuse. State v. Jenkins, 300 N.C. 578, 268 S.E.2d 458 (1980).

Malice is always a necessary ingredient of murder. State v. Baldwin, 152 N.C. 822, 68 S.E. 148 (1910).

Same — Second-Degree Murder. — Malice as an essential characteristic of the crime of murder in the second degree may be either express or implied. State v. Foust, 258 N.C. 453, 128 S.E.2d 889 (1963).

The difference between second-degree murder and manslaughter is that malice, express or implied, is present in the former and not in the latter. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

The offense of murder in the second degree requires malice as an element, but not malice aforethought. State v. McGee, 47 N.C. App. 280, 267 S.E.2d 67 (1980).

Express Malice Not Required. — But it is not necessary to a conviction for murder that the State prove express malice. State v. McDowell, 145 N.C. 563, 59 S.E. 690 (1907).

Proof. — The manner of the killing by defendant, his acts and conduct attending its commission, and his declaration immediately connected therewith, were evidence of express malice. State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961).

Malice may be shown by evidence of hatred, ill will, or dislike. State v. Foust, 258 N.C. 453, 128 S.E.2d 889 (1963).

Any unseemly conduct toward the corpse of the person slain or any indignity offered it by the slayer should go to the jury on the question of malice. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Malice may be implied from circumstances other than the use of a deadly weapon. State v. Periman, 32 N.C. App. 33, 230 S.E.2d 802 (1977).

Malice may be implied from the acts of defendant. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

Same — Death Ensuing from Attack Made with Hands and Feet Only. — Ordinarily if death ensues from an attack made with hands and feet only, on a person of mature years and full health and strength, the law would not imply malice required to make the homicide second-degree murder, because ordinarily death would not be caused by use of such means. The inference would be quite different, however, if the same assault were committed upon an infant of tender years or upon a person enfeebled by old age, sickness, or other apparent physical disability. State v. Sallie, 13 N.C. App. 499, 186 S.E.2d 667, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 316, 188 S.E.2d 900 (1972).

C. Intentional Killing with a Deadly Weapon.

Intentional Killing with Deadly Weapon Creates Presumptions of Malice and Unlawfulness. — At common law, the intentional killing of a human being with a deadly weapon, nothing more appearing, was murder, malice being presumed from the facts. State v. Rhyne, 124 N.C. 847, 33 S.E. 128 (1899). The common-law rule has been followed and it is now also presumed that a killing with a deadly weapon is unlawful and malicious. State v. Benson, 183 N.C. 795, 111 S.E. 869 (1922), overruled on other grounds, State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965); State v. Walker, 193 N.C. 489, 137 S.E. 429 (1927).

Intentional killing of a human being with a deadly weapon implies malice. State v. McDowell, 145 N.C. 563, 59 S.E. 690 (1907); State v. Brinkley, 183 N.C. 720, 110 S.E. 783 (1922); State v. Pasour, 183 N.C. 793, 111 S.E. 779 (1922).

When the State satisfies the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally shot the deceased and thereby proximately caused his death, there arise the presumptions that the killing was (1) unlawful and (2) with malice. State v. Adams, 241 N.C. 559, 85 S.E.2d 918 (1955); State v. Revis, 253 N.C. 50, 116 S.E.2d 171 (1960).

Malice is implied in law from the killing with a deadly weapon. State v. Foust, 258 N.C. 453, 128 S.E.2d 889 (1963).

Malice is implied in law from the intentional killing with a deadly weapon. State v. McCain, 6 N.C. App. 558, 170 S.E.2d 531 (1969).

The intentional use of a deadly weapon, as a weapon, when death proximately results from such use, gives rise to two presumptions: (1) that the killing was unlawful, and (2) that it was done with malice. State v. Drake, 8 N.C. App. 214, 174 S.E.2d 132 (1970); State v. Myers, 299 N.C. 671, 263 S.E.2d 768 (1980).

Where there is plenary evidence that deceased died from a wound intentionally inflicted by defendant with a rifle, the presumptions that the killing was unlawful and that it was done with malice are created. State v. Jennings, 276 N.C. 157, 171 S.E.2d 447 (1970).

Malice may be presumed from evidence which satisfies the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the death of the victim proximately resulted from pistol shots intentionally fired at him by the defendant. State v. Sanders, 276 N.C. 598, 174 S.E.2d 487 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971).

A presumption of malice arises when one intentionally assaults another with a deadly weapon and thereby proximately causes his death. State v. Goins, 24 N.C. App. 468, 211 S.E.2d 481, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 262, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975).

The killing of a person with a deadly weapon, when established beyond a reasonable doubt, raises two presumptions: first, that the killing was unlawful, and second, that it was done with malice. State v. McCall, 289 N.C. 512, 223 S.E.2d 303, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 912, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1976).

When a killing resulting from the intentional use of a deadly weapon is established, two presumptions arise: (1) that the killing was unlawful, and (2) that it was done with malice. State v. Lee, 292 N.C. 617, 234 S.E.2d 574 (1977).

Which Will Support Conviction of Second-Degree Murder. — Since the act of 1893, the killing being proved, and nothing else appearing, the law presumes malice, but not premeditation and deliberation, and the killing is murder in the second degree. State v. Hicks, 125 N.C. 636, 34 S.E. 247 (1899).

The intentional killing of a human being with a deadly weapon implies malice and, if nothing else appears, constitutes murder in the second degree. State v. Payne, 213 N.C. 719, 197 S.E. 573 (1938); State v. Hawkins, 214 N.C. 326, 199 S.E. 284 (1938); State v. Bright, 215 N.C. 537, 2 S.E.2d 541 (1939); State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56 S.E.2d 678 (1949); State v. Lamm, 232 N.C. 402, 61 S.E.2d 188 (1950); State v. Brown, 249 N.C. 271, 106 S.E.2d 232 (1958); State v. Downey, 253 N.C. 348, 117 S.E.2d 39 (1960); State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961).

When an intentional killing of a person with a deadly weapon is admitted judicially in court by a defendant, or is proven by the State's evidence, the law raises two presumptions against the killer: (1) that the killing was unlawful; and (2) that it was done with malice; and an unlawful killing with malice is murder in the second degree. State v. Todd, 264 N.C. 524, 142 S.E.2d 154 (1965).

When the State satisfies the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally shot the deceased with a pistol and thereby proximately caused his death, there arise the presumptions that the killing was (1) unlawful and (2) with malice, constituting the offense of murder in the second degree. State v. Propst, 274 N.C. 62, 161 S.E.2d 560 (1968).

If the State has satisfied the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally shot the deceased and thereby proximately caused her death, two presumptions arise: (1) that the killing was unlawful, and (2) that it was done with malice; and nothing else appearing, the defendant would be guilty of murder in the second degree. The intentional use of a deadly weapon as a weapon, when death proximately results from such use, gives rise to the presumptions. State v. Mercer, 275 N.C. 108, 165 S.E.2d 328 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Caddell, 287 N.C. 266, 215 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

When the defendant admits or the State satisfies the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally used a deadly weapon and thereby proximately caused the death of a human being, the law raises presumptions that the killing was unlawful and that it was done with malice. Such unlawful killing of a human being with malice is murder in the second degree. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971).

If the State satisfies the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that a defendant intentionally used a deadly weapon and thereby caused the death, then two presumptions arise: (1) that the killing was unlawful, and (2) that it was done with malice; and nothing else appearing, the defendant would be guilty of murder in the second degree. State v. Winford, 279 N.C. 58, 181 S.E.2d 423 (1971).

The intentional use of a deadly weapon as a weapon, when death proximately results from such use, gives rise to the presumptions that (1) the killing was unlawful and (2) done with malice, and an unlawful killing with malice is murder in the second degree, where all the evidence tends to show that defendant stubbornly continued over a period of hours to curse the deceased and to assault his helpless victim time after time with various deadly weapons while a witness was begging him to cease and desist. By these persistent assaults without the slightest provocation he inflicted mortal wounds proximately causing the death of his victim. This evidence affords no basis upon which defendant could be found guilty of manslaughter. State v. Duboise, 279 N.C. 73, 181 S.E.2d 393 (1971).

If the State satisfied the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant stabbed the victim intentionally with a knife which constituted a deadly weapon and the stab wound so inflicted proximately caused her death, these facts would give rise to the presumptions that the killing was unlawful and with malice, the essentials of murder in the second degree. State v. Parker, 279 N.C. 168, 181 S.E.2d 432 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 987, 93 S. Ct. 342, 34 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1972).

When a jury finds from the State's evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that a defendant intentionally shot the deceased and that the wound so inflicted proximately caused his death, the presumptions arise that the killing was unlawful and that it was done with malice; nothing else appearing, the defendant is guilty of murder in the second degree. State v. Crump, 277 N.C. 573, 178 S.E.2d 366 (1971); State v. Boyd, 278 N.C. 682, 180 S.E.2d 794 (1971); State v. Oxendine, 24 N.C. App. 444, 210 S.E.2d 908, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 667, 216 S.E.2d 910 (1975).

The evidence was ample to show that the proximate cause of death was a wound in the head from a pistol bullet intentionally fired at the deceased by the defendant. Upon this evidence the law raises a presumption of an unlawful killing and a presumption of malice sufficient to support a conviction of murder in the second degree. State v. McIlwain, 279 N.C. 469, 183 S.E.2d 538 (1971).

If the State has satisfied the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant intentionally shot his wife with a shotgun and thereby proximately caused her death, two presumptions arise: (1) that the killing was unlawful, and (2) that it was done with malice; and, nothing else appearing, the defendant would be guilty of murder in the second degree. State v. Wrenn, 279 N.C. 676, 185 S.E.2d 129 (1971).

When the killing with a deadly weapon is admitted or established, two presumptions arise: (1) that the killing was unlawful; (2) that it was done with malice; and an unlawful killing with malice is murder in the second degree. State v. Cannady, 17 N.C. App. 569, 192 S.E.2d 677 (1972); State v. Chavis, 30 N.C. App. 75, 226 S.E.2d 389, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 778, 229 S.E.2d 33 (1976).

The intentional use of a deadly weapon as a weapon, when death proximately results from such use, gives rise to the presumptions that (1) the killing was unlawful and (2) done with malice, and an unlawful killing with malice is murder in the second degree. State v. Lea, 17 N.C. App. 71, 193 S.E.2d 383 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 674, 194 S.E.2d 154 (1973);

State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1976).

An unlawful killing with malice is murder in the second degree, and when it is shown that a defendant intentionally shot the deceased with a deadly weapon and thereby caused his death, presumptions arise that the killing was unlawful and that it was done with malice. State v. Barnwell, 17 N.C. App. 299, 194 S.E.2d 63, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 106, 194 S.E.2d 634 (1973).

Where all the evidence tends to show that defendant intentionally inflicted a wound with a deadly weapon which caused deceased's death, such evidence raises inferences of an unlawful killing with malice which are sufficient to permit, but not require, the jury to return a verdict of murder in the second degree. State v. Hodges, 296 N.C. 66, 249 S.E.2d 371 (1978).

In a homicide case, in the absence of evidence of a killing in the heat of passion and the absence of evidence of self-defense, proof of the intentional infliction of a wound raises not mere permissible inferences but mandatory presumptions of the existence of malice and unlawfulness entitling the State at least to a conviction of murder in the second degree. State v. Patterson, 297 N.C. 247, 254 S.E.2d 604 (1979).

Intent Must Be Shown. — The presumptions that a homicide was unlawful and done with malice do not arise against the slayer in a prosecution for homicide, unless he admits, or the State proves, that he intentionally killed the deceased with a deadly weapon. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

The expression "intentional killing" is not used in the sense that a specific intent to kill must be admitted or established. The sense of the expression is that the presumptions arise when the defendant intentionally assaults another with a deadly weapon and thereby proximately causes the death of the person assaulted. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

The intentional use of a deadly weapon as a weapon is necessary to give rise to presumptions of unlawfulness and of malice. State v. Propst, 274 N.C. 62, 161 S.E.2d 560 (1968).

Malice, as one of the essential elements of murder in the second degree, is not presumed merely by the pointing of a gun or pistol at another person in fun in violation of § 14-34. In order for this presumption of malice to arise from an assault with a deadly weapon, there must be an intent to inflict a wound with such weapon which produces death. State v. Currie, 7 N.C. App. 439, 173 S.E.2d 49 (1970).

It is error for the trial court to instruct the jury that once a killing is proven to have been done with a deadly weapon the law presumes malice, since in order for a presumption of malice to arise, it has to be established or admitted that the defendant intentionally used a deadly weapon, as a weapon, and inflict wounds proximately resulting in death. State v. Drake, 8 N.C. App. 214, 174 S.E.2d 132 (1970).

The expression, intentional killing, is not used in the sense that a specific intent to kill must be admitted or established. The sense of the expression is that the presumptions arise when the defendant intentionally assaults another with a deadly weapon and thereby proximately causes the death of the person assaulted. A specific intent to kill, while a necessary constituent of the elements of premeditation and deliberation in first-degree murder, is not an element of second-degree murder or manslaughter. The intentional use of a deadly weapon as a weapon, when death proximately results from such use, gives rise to the presumptions. The presumptions do not arise if an instrument, which is per se or may be a deadly weapon, is not intentionally used as a weapon, e.g., from an accidental discharge of a shotgun. State v. Winford, 279 N.C. 58, 181 S.E.2d 423 (1971); State v. Dubois, 279 N.C. 73, 181 S.E.2d 393 (1971).

For the presumptions of malice and unlawfulness to arise from a killing with a deadly weapon, the defendant must admit or the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the killing was intentional. State v. Barnwell, 17 N.C. App. 299, 194 S.E.2d 63, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 106, 194 S.E.2d 634 (1973).

Constitutionality of Presumptions as to Malice and Unlawfulness. — Under the decision of Mullaney v. Wilbur, 421 U.S. 684, 95 S. Ct. 1881, 44 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1975), the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits the use of our long-standing rules in homicide cases that, in order to rebut the presumption of malice, defendant must prove to the satisfaction of the jury that he killed in the heat of a sudden passion, and in order to rebut the presumption of unlawfulness, defendant must prove to the satisfaction of the jury that he killed in self-defense. State v. Hankerson, 288 N.C. 632, 220 S.E.2d 575 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 432 U.S. 233, 97 S. Ct. 2339, 53 L. Ed. 306 (1977).

The Mullaney v. Wilbur, 421 U.S. 684, 95 S. Ct. 1881, 44 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1975) decision does not preclude use of the presumptions of malice and unlawfulness upon proof beyond a reasonable doubt of a killing by the intentional use of a deadly weapon; nor does it prohibit making the presumptions mandatory in the absence of contrary evidence or permitting the logical inferences from facts proved to remain and be weighed against contrary evidence if it is produced. State v. Hankerson, 288 N.C. 632, 220

The presumptions of unlawfulness and malice arising from an intentional assault with a deadly weapon proximately resulting in death are constitutional. State v. Lester, 289 N.C. 239, 221 S.E.2d 268 (1976).

Mullaney v. Wilbur, 421 U.S. 634, 95 S. Ct. 1881, 44 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1975) does not apply to the presumption of malice created when the State proves beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused intentionally inflicted a wound with a deadly weapon proximately causing death. State v. Johnson, 28 N.C. App. 265, 220 S.E.2d 834, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 454, 223 S.E.2d 162 (1976).

The ruling of Mullaney v. Wilbur, 421 U.S. 684, 95 S. Ct. 1881, 44 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1975) does not preclude all use of traditional presumptions of malice and unlawfulness. It precludes only utilizing them in such a way as to relieve the State of the burden of proof on these elements when the issue of their existence is raised by the evidence. The presumptions themselves, standing alone, are valid and constitutional. State v. Biggs, 292 N.C. 328, 233 S.E.2d 512 (1977).

The presumptions of malice and unlawfulness arising from an intentional assault with a deadly weapon proximately causing death are constitutionally sound. State v. Biggs, 292 N.C. 328, 233 S.E.2d 512 (1977).

Rebuttal of Presumption. — Where a defendant produced evidence from which a jury could have found that he killed in the heat of passion suddenly aroused or that he killed in self-defense, the State was not entitled to the benefit of mandatory presumptions of malice and unlawfulness. It was entitled at most to the benefit of permissible inferences that these elements existed if the jury should find it had proved beyond a reasonable doubt defendant's intentional infliction of a wound with a deadly weapon resulting in death. These permissible inferences place no burden upon defendant to rebut them by raising a reasonable doubt as to the existence of the inferred elements. It was error to so instruct the jury. State v. Patterson, 297 N.C. 247, 254 S.E.2d 604 (1979).

Same — If there is evidence of provocation or self-defense, the mandatory presumptions of malice and unlawfulness disappear, but the logical inferences from the facts proved may be weighed against the evidence. State v. Hankerson, 288 N.C 632, 220 S.E.2d 575 (1975), reversed on other grounds, 432 U.S. 233, 97 S. Ct. 2339, 53 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1977).

Evidence of self-defense or of killing in a heat of passion upon sudden provocation are matters of excuse and mitigation which should be weighed against the raised inferences of unlawfulness and malice. State v. Hodges, 296 N.C. 66, 249 S.E.2d 371 (1978).

When evidence of self-defense is presented in a murder in the second-degree case, the mandatory presumption of unlawfulness disappears but the logical inferences from the facts proved may be weighed against this evidence. State v. McLaurin, 46 N.C. App. 746, 266 S.E.2d 406 (1980).

For discussion of burden of proof with respect to presumptions, see analysis line VI (D).

Presumption Not Rebutted. — In prosecution for second-degree murder, where there was no evidence of just cause or reasonable provocation for the homicide, nor was there evidence of self-defense, unavoidable accident or misadventure, defendant's self-serving declarations alone were not sufficient to rebut the presumption of malice arising in the case. State v. Mull, 24 N.C. App. 502, 211 S.E.2d 515 (1975).

V. DEFENSES AND DENIALS.

A. In General.

Defendant may rely on more than one defense. State v. Todd, 264 N.C. 524, 142 S.E.2d 154 (1965).

B. Accident.

Misadventure or accident is not an affirmative defense but merely a denial that defendant intentionally shot the deceased. State v. Mercer, 275 N.C. 108, 165 S.E.2d 328 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Caddell, 287 N.C. 266, 215 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

A defendant's assertion of accidental killing is not an affirmative defense. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

The contention of a defendant charged with homicide that a killing was accidental is not an affirmative defense, but rather a denial of guilt by denying the element of intent. State v. Jackson, 36 N.C. App. 126, 242 S.E.2d 891, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 470, 246 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

Upon a defendant's assertion that a killing was an accident, the denial of guilt applies to all the charges against the defendant regarding the transaction in question. State v. Jackson, 36 N.C. App. 126, 242 S.E.2d 891, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 470, 246 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

And Does Not Shift the Burden of Proof. — The plea of accidental homicide, if indeed it can be properly called a plea, is certainly not an affirmative defense, and therefore does not impose the burden of proof upon the defendant, because the State cannot ask for a conviction unless it proves that the killing was done with criminal intent. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

Defendant's assertion that the killing of deceased with a deadly weapon was accidental is not an affirmative defense which shifts the burden of proof to him to exculpate himself from a charge of murder; it is merely a denial that the defendant was committed the crime, and the burden remains on the State to prove a homicide resulting from the intentional use of a deadly weapon before any presumption arises against the defendant. State v. Wrenn, 279 N.C. 676, 185 S.E.2d 129 (1971).

Assertion by an accused that a killing with a deadly weapon was accidental is a denial that he committed the crime charged and is in no sense an affirmative defense shifting the burden to him to satisfy the jury that death of the victim was in fact an accident. State v. Harris, 289 N.C. 275, 221 S.E.2d 343 (1976).

For cases discussing burden of proof in general and other cases discussing the burden in cases involving claims of accidental killing, see analysis line VI (D).

Accident will be no defense to a homicide committed in the perpetration of or in the attempt to perpetrate a felony. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

C. Insanity.

Legal insanity requires that the accused be laboring under such defect of reason from disease of the mind as to be incapable of knowing the nature and quality of his act, or if he does know this, not to know right from wrong. State v. Pope, 24 N.C. App. 217, 210 S.E.2d 267 (1974), cert. denied, 286 N.C. 419, 211 S.E.2d 799 (1975).

Testimony relating to insanity or mental debilities is not competent for jury consideration as bearing upon whether the State has satisfied the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonabe doubt that a defendant has unlawfully killed the victim in the execution of an actual, specific intent to kill formed after premeditation and deliberation or that the defendant has intentionally killed the victim. State v. Hammonds, 290 N.C. 1, 224 S.E.2d 595 (1976).

D. Intoxication.

Drunkeness May Negate Specific Intent to Kill. — Voluntary drunkenness is not a legal excuse for crime; but where a specific intent, or premeditation and deliberation, is essential to constitute a crime or a degree of a crime, the fact of intoxicating may negative its existence. State v. Propst, 274 N.C. 62, 161 S.E.2d 560 (1968).

The general rule that voluntary drunkenness is no legal excuse for crime does not obtain with respect to crimes where, in addition to the overt act, it is required that a definite, specific intent be established as an essential feature. Murder in the first degree is a specific intent crime in that a specific intent to kill is a necessary ingredient of premeditation and deliberation. Intoxication which renders an offender utterly unable to form the required intent may be shown as a defense. State v. Baldwin, 276 N.C. 690, 174 S.E.2d 526 (1970).

While voluntary drunkenness is not, per se, an excuse for a criminal act, it may be sufficient in degree to prevent and, therefore, disprove the existence of a specific intent such as the intent to kill. State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972).

Defendant's intoxicated condition went only to negate the specific intent necessary to find him guilty of first-degree murder. State v. Cummings, 22 N.C. App. 452, 206 S.E.2d 781, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 760, 209 S.E.2d 284 (1974).

And Is Defense to First-Degree Murder But Not to Second-Degree Murder. — Voluntary drunkenness is a defense to the charge of first-degree murder to the extent that it precludes the mental processes of premeditation and deliberation but voluntary drunkenness is no defense to murder in the second degree. State v. Couch, 35 N.C. App. 202, 241 S.E.2d 105 (1978).

Intoxication may negate the specific intents of premeditation and deliberation necessary to prove first-degree murder, but it is not a defense to second-degree murder. State v. King, 49 N.C. App. 499, 272 S.E.2d 26 (1980).

Voluntary Intoxication Not a Defense to Felony-Murder Charge. — Since voluntary intoxication is not a defense to a charge of arson, it is not a defense to a charge of felony-murder having as its underlying felony the crime of arson. State v. White, 291 N.C. 118, 229 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

Degree of Intoxication Which Must Be Shown. — To make the defense of intoxication available the evidence must show that at the time of the killing the prisoner's mind and reason were so completely intoxicated and overthrown as to render him utterly incapable of forming a deliberate and premeditated purpose to kill. And where the evidence shows that the purpose to kill was deliberately and premeditatedly formed when sober, the imbibing of intoxicants to whatever extent in order to carry out the design will not avail as a defense. State v. Baldwin, 276 N.C. 690, 174 S.E.2d 526 (1970).

If at the time of a killing, a defendant was so drunk as to be utterly incapable of forming a deliberate and premeditated intent to kill a person, he could not be guilty of murder in the first degree, for an essential element of that crime would be lacking. State v. Hamby, 276 N.C. 674, 174 S.E.2d 385 (1970), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 937, 92 S. Ct. 2862, 33 L. Ed. 2d 754 (1972).

For intoxication to constitute a defense it must appear that the defendant was not able, by reason of drunkenness, to think out beforehand what he intended to do and weigh it and understand the nature and consequence of his act. State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972); State v. Bunn, 283 N.C. 444, 196 S.E.2d 777 (1973).

If it is shown that a person on trial for murder in the first degree was so drunk at the time he committed the homicide charged in the indictment that he was utterly incapable of forming a deliberate and premeditated purpose to kill, an essential element of murder in the first degree is absent. State v. Bunn, 283 N.C. 444, 196 S.E.2d 777 (1973).

If a person on trial for murder in the first degree was so drunk at the time he committed the homicide charged in the indictment that he was utterly incapable of forming a deliberate and premeditated intent to kill, essential elements of murder in the first degree are absent. State v. Bock, 288 N.C. 145, 217 S.E.2d 513 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3208, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

The influence of intoxication upon the question of existence of premeditation depends upon its degree and its effect upon the mind and passion. For it to constitute a defense it must appear that defendant was not able, by reason of drunkenness, to think out beforehand what he intended to do and to weigh it and understand the nature and consequences of his act. State v. Medley, 295 N.C. 75, 243 S.E.2d 374 (1978).

In order for intoxication to negate the existence of the requisite intent to kill in a prosecution for first-degree murder the evidence must show that at the time of the killing the defendant's mind and reason were so completely intoxicated and overthrown as to render him utterly incapable of forming a deliberate and premeditated purpose to kill. In the absence of some evidence of intoxication to such degree, the court is not required to charge the jury thereon. State v. Medley, 295 N.C. 75, 243 S.E.2d 374 (1978).

No Inference As Matter of Law. — Whether intoxication and premeditation can coexist depends upon the degree of inebriety and its effect upon the mind and passions. No inference of the absence of deliberation and premeditation arises from intoxication, as a matter of law. State v. Hamby, 276 N.C. 674, 174 S.E.2d 385 (1970), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 937, 92 S. Ct. 2862, 33 L. Ed. 2d 754 (1972); State v. Bunn, 283 N.C. 444, 196 S.E.2d 777 (1973).

A person may be excited, intoxicated and emotionally upset, and still have the capability to formulate the necessary plan, design, or intention to commit murder in the first degree. State v. Hamby, 276 N.C. 674, 174 S.E.2d 385 (1970), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 937, 92 S. Ct. 2862, 33 L. Ed. 2d 754 (1972); State v. Bunn, 283 N.C. 444, 196 S.E.2d 777 (1973).

No inference of the absence of deliberation and premeditation arises as a matter of law from intoxication; and mere intoxication cannot serve as an excuse for the offender. State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972).

Reduction of Charge. — Where legal intoxication is shown, grade of offense is reduced to second-degree murder. State v. Bunn, 283 N.C. 444, 196 S.E.2d 777 (1973); State v. Bock, 288 N.C. 145, 217 S.E.2d 513 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3208, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

A showing of legal intoxication to the jury's satisfaction will mitigate a charge of first-degree murder to murder in the second degree. State v. McLaughlin, 286 N.C. 597, 213 S.E.2d 238 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976).

Intent to Kill Formed When Sober and Executed When Drunk. — Where the facts show that the intent to kill was deliberately formed when sober and executed when drunk, intoxication is no defense to the capital charge of murder in the first degree. State v. Baldwin, 276 N.C. 690, 174 S.E.2d 526 (1970).

The fact that, after his intent to kill was deliberately and premeditatedly formed when sober, defendant voluntarily drank enough intoxicants to produce pathological intoxication and then executed his murderous intent, is held not to constitute a valid defense to murder in the first degree in this State. State v. Baldwin, 276 N.C. 690, 174 S.E.2d 526 (1970).

Violation of Motor Vehicle Law Not Sufficient to Establish Defense. — A person may be "under the influence" of intoxicants in violation of the motor vehicle laws, § 20-138, and yet be quite capable of forming and carrying out a specific intent to kill. State v. Medley, 295 N.C. 75, 243 S.E.2d 374 (1978).

Breathalyzer Not Applicable in Homicides. — The chemical analysis (Breathalyzer) test authorized by § 20-139.1 is, by its express terms, applicable only to criminal actions arising out of the operation of a motor vehicle and has no application to criminal responsibility for homicide. State v. Medley, 295 N.C. 75, 243 S.E.2d 374 (1978).

Effect of Intoxication as Question for Jury. — When a defendant has committed an overt lethal act, the decision has been that whether his intoxication was so gross as to preclude a capacity intentionally to kill is normally a fact issue for the jury to resolve. State v. Hamby, 276 N.C. 674, 174 S.E.2d 385 (1970), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 937, 92 S. Ct. 2862, 33 L. Ed. 2d 754 (1972).

It is for the jury to determine whether the mental condition of accused was so far affected by intoxication that he was unable to form a guilty intent to commit murder, unless the evidence is not sufficient to warrant the submission of the question to the jury. State v. Hamby, 276 N.C. 674, 174 S.E.2d 385 (1970), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 937, 92 S. Ct. 2862, 33 L. Ed. 2d 754 (1972).

E. Provocation.

Provocation is Affirmative Defense. — The legal provocation that will rob the crime of malice and thus reduce it to manslaughter, and self-defense, are affirmative pleas. State v. Todd, 264 N.C. 524, 142 S.E.2d 154 (1965).

Provocation never disproves malice, it only removes the presumption of malice, which the law raises without proof. A malicious killing is murder, however gross the provocation. State v. Johnson, 23 N.C. 354 (1840).

Abusive language will not serve as a legally sufficient provocation for a homicide in this State. State v. Watson, 287 N.C. 147, 214 S.E.2d 85 (1975).

Nor Mitigate Homicide to Lesser Degree. — Mere words, however abusive, are never sufficient legal provocation to mitigate a homicide to a lesser degree. State v. Watson, 287 N.C. 147, 214 S.E.2d 85 (1975).

Heat of Passion. — In order to reduce second-degree murder to voluntary manslaughter, there must be some evidence that the defendant killed his victim in the heat of passion engendered by provocation which the law deems adequate to depose reason. State v. Burden, 36 N.C. App. 332, 244 S.E.2d 204, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 468, 246 S.E.2d 216 (1978).

Evidence that the defendant found his estranged wife riding in a car with another man is not sufficient to show adequate cause for passion which would negate the malice of murder and reduce it to manslaughter. State v. Burden, 36 N.C. App. 332, 244 S.E.2d 204, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 468, 246 S.E.2d 216 (1978).

Same — Defined. — See State v. Pope, 24 N.C. App. 217, 210 S.E.2d 267 (1974), cert. denied, 286 N.C. 419, 211 S.E.2d 799 (1975).

F. Self-Defense.

Right Is Based on Real or Apparent Necessity. — The right to kill in self-defense, or in defense of one's family or habitation, rests upon necessity, real or apparent. State v. Todd, 264 N.C. 524, 142 S.E.2d 154 (1965); State v. Jackson, 284 N.C. 383, 200 S.E.2d 596 (1973).

One may kill in defense of himself, or his family, when necessary to prevent death or great bodily harm or when it is not actually necessary to prevent death or great bodily harm, if he believes it to be necessary and has a reasonable ground for the belief. State v. Todd, 264 N.C. 524, 142 S.E.2d 154 (1965).

The right to act in self-defense is based upon necessity, real or apparent, and a person may use such force as is necessary or apparently necessary to save himself from death or great bodily harm in the lawful exercise of his right of self-defense. State v. Deck, 285 N.C. 209, 203 S.E.2d 830 (1974).

A person may kill even though it be not necessary to kill to avoid death or great bodily harm if he believes it to be necessary and he has reasonable grounds for such belief. State v. Deck, 285 N.C. 209, 203 S.E.2d 830 (1974).

And Accused Must Not Have Initiated Dispute. — Self-defense requires, among other things, that the one invoking the defense be without fault in initiating the affray. It must also be shown that the killing was necessary or appeared to be necessary to prevent death or great bodily harm to defendant. State v. Mays, 14 N.C. App. 90, 187 S.E.2d 479, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 157, 188 S.E.2d 366 (1972).

A person is justified in defending himself if he is without fault in provoking, or engaging in, or continuing a difficulty with another. State v. Lewis, 27 N.C. App. 426, 219 S.E.2d 554 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 799 (1976).

A person may kill in self-defense if he be free from fault in bringing on the difficulty and if it is necessary, or appears to him to be necessary, to kill so as to save himself from death or great bodily harm. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Or He Will Not Be Excused on Grounds of Self-Defense. — Where a prisoner makes an assault upon A. and is reassaulted so fiercely that the prisoner cannot retreat without danger of his life, and the prisoner kills A.: Held, that the killing cannot be justified upon the ground of self-defense. The first assailant does the first wrong and brings upon himself the necessity of slaying, and is therefore not entitled to a favorable interpretation of the law. State v. Winford, 279 N.C. 58, 181 S.E.2d 423 (1971).

If one takes life, though in defense of his own life, in a quarrel which he himself has commenced with intent to take life or inflict serious bodily harm, the jeopardy in which he has been placed by the act of his adversary constitutes no defense whatever, but he is guilty of murder. But, if he commenced the quarrel with no intent to take life or inflict grievous bodily harm, then he is not acquitted of all responsibility for the affray which arose from his own act, but his offense is reduced from murder to manslaughter. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

One who kills under a reasonable belief that it is necessary to do so to save himself from death or great bodily harm will not be entirely excused on the ground of self-defense if he is the aggressor, that is, if he aggressively and willingly enters into a fight without legal excuse or provocation. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

An accused who, though otherwise acting in self-defense, is the aggressor in bringing on the affray is guilty at least of voluntary manslaughter. The defendant, under such circumstances, "loses the benefit of perfect self-defense." State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

Although a party is privileged to use deadly force to defend against an attack by unarmed assailants of vastly superior size, strength or number, if the defendant precipitated the altercation intending to provoke a deadly assault by the victim in order that he might kill him, his subsequent killing of the victim in response to the attack is murder. State v. Sanders, 295 N.C. 361, 245 S.E.2d 674 (1978).

Unless He Quits the Combat. — In order that the right of self-defense may be restored to a person who has provoked or commenced a combat, he must attempt in good faith to withdraw from the combat. He must also in some manner make known his intention to his adversary; and if the circumstances are such that he cannot notify his adversary, as where the injuries inflicted by him are such as to deprive his adversary of his capacity to receive impressions concerning his assailant's design and endeavor to cease further combat, it is the assailant's fault and he must bear the consequences. As long as a person keeps his gun in his hand prepared to shoot, the person opposing him is not expected or required to accept any act or statement as indicative of an intent to discontinue the assault. State v. Winford, 279 N.C. 58, 181 S.E.2d 423 (1971).

The term "quitting the combat," within the meaning of these decisions, does not always and necessarily require that a defendant should physically withdraw therefrom. If the counterattack is of such a character that he cannot do this consistently with safety of life or limb, such a course is not required; but before the right of perfect self-defense can be restored to one who has wrongfully brought on a difficulty, and particularly where he has done so by committing a battery, he is required to abandon the combat in good faith and signify this in some way to his adversary. There is every reason for saying that the conduct of the accused relied upon to sustain such a defense must have been so marked in the matter of time, place, and circumstance as not only to clearly evince the withdrawal of the accused in good faith from the combat, but also as fairly to advise his adversary that his danger has passed and to make his conduct thereafter the pursuit of vengeance rather than measures taken to repel the original assault. And when, as heretofore shown, the counterassault is so fierce that the original assailant cannot comply with this requirement, then, in the language of Lord Hale, "He that first assaulted hath done the first wrong and brought upon himself this necessity, and shall not have the advantage of his own wrong to gain the favorable interpretation of the law, that that necessity which he brought on himself should, by way of interpretation, be accounted a flight to save himself from murder or manslaughter." State v. Winford, 279 N.C. 58, 181 S.E.2d 423 (1971).

A defendant, prosecuted for a homicide in a situation that he has provoked by the use of language "calculated and intended" to bring on the encounter, cannot maintain the position of perfect self-defense unless, at a time prior to the killing, he withdrew from the encounter within the meaning of the law. State v. Watson, 287 N.C. 147, 214 S.E.2d 85 (1975).

A defendant, prosecuted for homicide in a difficulty which he has himself wrongfully provoked, may not maintain the position of perfect self-defense unless, at a time prior to the killing, he had quitted the combat. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

Amount of Force Used. — If the defendant in killing the deceased was acting in self-defense but used more force than was necessary or reasonably appeared necessary under the circumstances, he is guilty of voluntary manslaughter. State v. Burden, 36 N.C. App. 332, 244 S.E.2d 204, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 468, 246 S.E.2d 216 (1978).

Questions for Jury. — The reasonableness of defendant's belief that self-defense is necessary is to be determined by the jury from the facts and circumstances as they appeared to the accused at the time of the killing. State v. Deck, 285 N.C. 209, 203 S.E.2d 830 (1974).

Where the jury finds that the defendant intended to kill and inflicted injuries, to be completely absolved, the jury must find that he acted in self-defense against actual or apparent danger of death or greater bodily harm. State v. Lewis, 27 N.C. App. 426, 219 S.E.2d 554 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 799 (1976).

Where the jury finds that the defendant did not intend to kill, the defendant is privileged by the law of self-defense to use such force against the other as is actually or reasonably necessary under the circumstances to protect himself from bodily injury or offensive physical contact at the hands of the other, even though he is not thereby put in actual or apparent danger of death or great bodily harm. State v. Lewis, 27 N.C. App. 426, 219 S.E.2d 554 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 799 (1976).

Where a defendant in a prosecution for first-degree murder raises a defense of self-defense, the reasonableness of his belief that it was necessary to kill so as to save himself from death or great bodily harm, and the amount of force required, must be judged by the jury upon the facts and circumstances as they appeared to the defendant at the time of the killing. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223

S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

The jury is permitted to consider all facts and circumstances, including evidence of self-defense, in determining whether a killing was unlawful. State v. McLaurin, 46 N.C. App. 746, 266 S.E.2d 406 (1980).

Self-Defense Held Not Applicable in Trial for Second-Degree Murder. — See State v. Peterson, 24 N.C. App. 404, 210 S.E.2d 883 (1975).

Defense of Habitation. — For a case reviewing the law of the defense of habitation, and the distinction between the defense of habitation and ordinary self-defense, see State v. McCombs, 297 N.C. 151, 253 S.E.2d 906 (1979).

The defense of habitation or domicile is limited to those cases where a defendant is attempting to prevent a forcible entry into his home. State v. McLaurin, 46 N.C. App. 746, 266 S.E.2d 406 (1980).

VI. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

A. Charge.

A charge of murder in the first degree includes murder in the second degree and manslaughter. State v. Roseboro, 276 N.C. 185, 171 S.E.2d 886 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2289, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971).

Charges of child abuse and child neglect were not merged into a charge of second-degree murder as the elements of child abuse and neglect are distinct and independent of the elements constituting second-degree murder. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

Election by State. — By specifically alleging the offense is committed in the perpetration of rape the State confines itself to that allegation in order to show murder in the first degree. Without a specific allegation, the State may show murder by any of the means embraced in the statute. State v. Davis, 253 N.C. 86, 116 S.E.2d 365 (1960), cert. denied, 365 U.S. 855, 81 S. Ct. 816, 5 L. Ed. 2d 819 (1961).

The district attorney during the trial of defendant on a capital offense, and when defendant was voluntarily absent, could properly elect to waive the charge of first-degree murder and proceed with the prosecution of a noncapital offense, second-degree murder. State v. Mulwee, 27 N.C. App. 366, 219 S.E.2d 304, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 732, 220 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

The State is not required to elect prior to the introduction of evidence as to whether it will proceed under the felony-murder rule or on the basis of premeditation and deliberation. State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

Same — Effect of Solicitor's Announcement That State will Not Prosecute for First Degree Murder. — A solicitor's announcement that the State would not prosecute for the capital felony of first degree murder, but for a lesser included offense, did not render incompetent any pertinent evidence bearing on the defendant's guilt. State v. Ferguson, 280 N.C. 95, 185 S.E.2d 119 (1971).

B. Indictment.

Form. — Nothing contained in the act of 1893 required any alteration or modification of the existing form of indictment for murder. Therefore, it was not necessary that an indictment for murder committed in the attempt to perpetrate larceny should contain a specific allegation of the attempted larceny, such allegation not having been necessary in indictments prior to the said act of 1893. State v. Covington, 117 N.C. 834, 23 S.E. 337 (1895).

This section does not require an allegation or count to be contained in the bill of indictment as to the means used in committing the murder. The statute only classifies the crime as to degree and punishment in the manner therein set forth. State v. Smith, 223 N.C. 457, 27 S.E.2d 114 (1943).

Same — Felony Murder. — A felony murder may be proven by the State although the bill of indictment charges murder in the statutory language of § 15-144. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 205, 176 S.E.2d 765 (1970).

An indictment must be sufficient in form to allege murder and support a conviction of murder in the first degree under § 15-144. It is not required that the indictment allege that the murder was committed in the perpetration of a robbery or other felony in order that it be sufficient to support a verdict of murder in the first degree. State v. Frazier, 280 N.C. 181, 185 S.E.2d 652 (1972), death sentence vacated, 409 U.S. 1004, 93 S. Ct. 453, 34 L. Ed. 2d 295 (1973).

An indictment under § 15-144 will support a verdict of murder in the first degree if the jury finds beyond a reasonable doubt that an accused killed with malice and after premeditation and deliberation or in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of any arson, rape, robbery, burglary or other felony the commission of which creates any substantial foreseeable human risk and actually results in loss of life. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Same — Same — Recommended Procedure. — The better practice where the State prosecutes a defendant for first-degree murder on the theory that the homicide was committed in the perpetration of or attempt to perpetrate a felony under the provisions of this section would be that the district attorney should not secure a separate indictment for the felony. If he does, and there is a conviction of both, the defendant will be sentenced for the murder and the judgment will be arrested for the felony under the merger rule. If the separate felony indictment is treated as surplusage only and the murder charge submitted to the jury under the felony-murder rule, then obviously the defendant cannot thereafter be tried for the felony. State v. Carey, 288 N.C. 254, 218 S.E.2d 387 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

Remedy for Alternative Indictment Held to Be by Motion for Bill of Particulars. — After the return of a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, defendant moved in arrest of judgment because the indictment was alternative, indefinite, and uncertain. It was held that although the indictment was alternative, either charge constituted murder in the first degree under this section, informing defendant of the crime charged, and defendant's remedy, if he desired greater certainty, was by motion for a bill of particulars under § 15-143 (now § 15A-925). State v. Puckett, 211 N.C. 66, 189 S.E. 183 (1937).

Quashing Bill. — A defendant who was tried on a bill of indictment returned by the grand jury charging him with murder in the first degree, could not quash the bill on the ground that, following a preliminary hearing, he was bound over for trial on the lesser charge of second degree murder. State v. Mack, 282 N.C. 334, 193 S.E.2d 71 (1972).

Indictment Sufficient to Charge Conspiracy to Murder. — See State v. Graham, 24 N.C. App. 591, 211 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 262, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975).

C. Pleas.

Plea of Not Guilty. — The defendant's plea of not guilty entitled him to present evidence that he acted in self-defense, that the shooting was accidental, or both; election is not required. State v. Todd, 264 N.C. 524, 142 S.E.2d 154 (1965).

Defendant's plea of not guilty puts in issue every essential element of the crime of first degree murder, and the State must satisfy the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant unlawfully killed the deceased with malice and in execution of an actual, specific intent to kill formed after premeditation and deliberation. State v. Propst, 274 N.C. 62, 161 S.E.2d 560 (1968).

Defendant's plea of not guilty puts into issue all of the elements of the charges against him and the burden remains on the State to satisfy the jury beyond a reasonable doubt of all of the elements of the offense charged, including the lesser offense of second-degree murder. State v. Griffin, 288 N.C. 437, 219 S.E.2d 48 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

The fact that the law imposed the threat of the gas chamber did not render petitioner's plea of guilty to second-degree murder involuntary. Petitioner entered his plea to a lesser offense of murder and was not exposed to the defect which prompted the holding in United States v. Jackson, 390 U.S. 570, 88 S. Ct. 1209, 20 L. Ed. 2d 138 (1968). Pickett v. Henry, 315 F. Supp. 1138 (E.D.N.C. 1970).

There is no rule which precludes a plea of guilty to a crime for which the maximum punishment is life imprisonment. State v. Watkins, 283 N.C. 17, 194 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1000, 94 S. Ct. 353, 38 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973).

Effect of Principal's Guilty Plea to Voluntary Manslaughter. — Principal's guilty plea to voluntary manslaughter did not determine that the crime of second-degree murder had not been committed, thus barring trial of one who aided and abetted. State v. Cassell, 24 N.C. App. 717, 212 S.E.2d 208, appeal dismissed, 287 N.C. 261, 214 S.E.2d 433 (1975).

What State Must Prove. — In any prosecution for a homicide the State must prove two things: (1) that the deceased died by virtue of a criminal act; and (2) that the act was committed by the defendant. State v. Jones, 280 N.C. 60, 184 S.E.2d 862 (1971); State v. McCall, 286 N.C. 472, 212 S.E.2d 132 (1975), death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 912, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1976); State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

As in all criminal cases, in a prosecution for homicide during the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a robbery, there are two items which the State must prove: (a) that a crime has been committed, i.e., the corpus delicti; and (b) that defendant committed the crime. State v. Perry, 293 N.C. 97, 235 S.E.2d 52 (1977).

Same — Intent to Kill. — It is the duty of the State to allege and prove that the killing, though done with a deadly weapon, was intentional or willful. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

If the State is unable to prove an intentional shooting, no presumption of malice arises, and, in order to convict this defendant of unlawful homicide, the State must satisfy the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant's culpable negligence proximately caused the death of his wife. Otherwise, defendant would be entitled to an accquittal. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

Same — Proof of Unlawful Homicide. — In a prosecution for unlawful homicide, the burden is always upon the State to prove an unlawful slaying. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

Same — Jurisdiction. — In a prosecution for murder, the defendant's challenge to jurisdiction alleging the insufficiency of the evidence to show the murder was committed in this State is not an affirmative defense. Rather the State has the burden to show beyond a reasonable doubt that the courts of this State had jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases to the contrary are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

Proof Must Be Beyond Reasonable Doubt. — It makes no difference whether the State is relying on circumstantial or direct evidence, or both, the evidence must produce in the mind of the jurors a moral certainty of the defendant's guilt, otherwise the State has not proven his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

D. Burden of Proof.

The State must bear the burden throughout the trial of proving each element of the crime charged including, where applicable, malice and unlawfulness beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Hankerson, 288 N.C. 632, 220 S.E.2d 575 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 432 U.S. 233, 97 S. Ct. 2339, 53 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1977).

Same — In a prosecution for murder by means of poison, the burden is on the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the deceased died from poison and that defendant administered the poison with criminal intent. State v. Hendrick, 232 N.C. 447, 61 S.E.2d 349 (1950).

Same — Murder in the second degree is the unlawful killing of a human being with malice, and the burden is on the State to satisfy the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt of the presence of each essential element of the offense. State v. Adams, 241 N.C. 559, 85 S.E.2d 918 (1955).

If upon a consideration of all the testimony, including the testimony of the defendant, the jury is not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally killed the deceased, it should return a verdict of not guilty of murder in the second degree. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

Burden May Not Be Shifted to Defendant. — On review of a conviction for second-degree murder the Supreme Court of North Carolina erred in declining to hold retroactive the rule in Mullaney v. Wilbur, 421 U.S. 684, 95 S. Ct. 1881, 44 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1975), which requires the State to establish all elements of a criminal offense beyond a reasonable doubt, and which invalidates presumptions that shift the burden of proving such elements, including self-defense, to the defendant. Hankerson v. North Carolina, 432 U.S. 233, 97 S. Ct. 2339, 53 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1977).

In a murder prosecution, defendant has no burden to produce evidence sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt as to the existence of malice or unlawfulness. His burden is simply to produce some evidence from which a jury could find the nonexistence of these elements, i.e., to produce some evidence of a killing in the heat of passion or some evidence of self-defense from which a jury could find the existence of these things. Upon production of such evidence the burden is upon the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of malice and the absence of self-defense. State v. Patterson, 297 N.C. 247, 254 S.E.2d 604 (1979).

Inversion of Order of Proof Does Not Shift Burden. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder, the trial court did not err in requiring defendant to present his evidence before the State put on its evidence during a hearing on defendant's motion to suppress, and there was no merit to defendant's contention that the inversion of the order of proof resulted in a shift of the burden of proof, since the order of proof is merely a matter of practice without legal effect; there was nothing in the trial court's order denying defendant's motion to suppress to indicate that the trial judge believed otherwise; and defendant was not prejudice by the order of proof because it resulted in his having to call one of the State's principal witnesses as his own. State v. Temple, 302 N.C. 1, 273 S.E.2d 273 (1981).

Burden Where Evidence of Self-Defense Is Shown. — The burden was on the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant did not act in self-defense, there being evidence in the case that he did. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

When the issue of self-defense is raised, the state continues to have the burden of proving each element of the crime of murder in the second degree beyond a reasonable doubt. Simultaneously, the additional burden is added of proving malice based on inferences rather than presumptions. State v. McLaurin, 46 N.C. App. 746, 266 S.E.2d 406 (1980).

Same — Instruction Placing Burden of Proving Self-defense on Defendant Unconstitutional. — In a prosecution for second-degree murder, an instruction placing the burden of proving self-defense upon the defendant was constitutionally infirm, since North Carolina considers unlawfulness, or the absence of self-defense, to be an element of murder. Wynn v. Mahoney, 600 F.2d 448 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 950, 100 S. Ct. 423, 62 L. Ed. 2d 320 (1979).

Where Accidental Killing is Claimed. — The claim that the killing was accidental goes to the very gist of the charge, and denies all criminal intent, and throws on the prosecution the burden of proving such intent beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

Burden of proof where defendant asserts killing was accidental. See State v. Fowler, 268 N.C. 430, 150 S.E.2d 731 (1966).

For other cases discussing shifting of burden of proof in accident cases, see analysis line V (B).

E. Admissibility of Evidence.

1. Testimony.

Evidence of Accidental Discharge of Weapon Admissible. — When it is made to appear that death was caused by a gunshot wound, testimony tending to show that the weapon was fired in a scuffle or by some other accidental means is competent to rebut an intentional shooting. State v. Phillips, 264 N.C. 508, 142 S.E.2d 337 (1965).

Evidence of Abnormal Mental Condition Not Amounting to Legal Insanity Admissible. — A defendant may offer evidence of an abnormal mental condition, although not sufficient to establish legal insanity, for the purpose of showing that he did not have the capacity to deliberate or premeditate at the time the homicide was committed — elements necessary for a conviction of murder in the first degree. State v. Baldwin, 276 N.C. 690, 174 S.E.2d 526 (1970).

Circumstantial Evidence Admissible. — Circumstantial evidence may be used in homicide cases to establish the cause of death and the criminal agency. State v. Lawson, 6 N.C. App. 1, 169 S.E.2d 265 (1969).

Circumstances immediately connected with the killing by the defendant, the viciousness and depravity of his acts and conduct attending the killing, are evidence of malice and properly considered. State v. Fleming, 296 N.C. 559, 251 S.E.2d 430 (1979).

In a prosecution for murder in the first degree, malice on the part of defendant could be established by inference from the use of a deadly weapon and by surrounding circumstances which included two earlier assaults and the accusations concerning deceased's romantic relationship with defendant's wife. State v. Alston, 44 N.C. App. 72, 259 S.E.2d 767 (1979).

Same — Circumstantial evidence must exclude every reasonable hypothesis of innocence. See State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Same — Proof Beyond Reasonable Doubt. — The convincing effect of circumstantial evidence on the mind of the jury is measured by the same standard of intensity required of any other evidence — the jury must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt as to every element of the crime before they find the defendant guilty of it, whether the evidence is wholly circumstantial, only partly so, or entirely direct. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Same — Admissions By Defendant. — A defendant cannot deprive the State of the right to place before the jury all the circumstances of a homicide by admitting the bare facts as to identity, the location where the body was found, its general condition and the cause of death. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Evidence of Deceased's Violent Character Is Admissible. — Where the defendant in a homicide prosecution has offered evidence tending to show self-defense, testimony by him of specific acts of violence committed by the deceased in his presence or of which the defendant had knowledge prior to the homicide is admissible to show the deceased's character as a violent and dangerous fighting man in order to permit the jury to determine whether the defendant acted under a reasonable apprehension of danger to his person or his life. State v. Barbour, 295 N.C. 66, 243 S.E.2d 380 (1978).

Evidence of the deceased's violent character, whether known to the defendant or not, is admissible in a homicide case where self-defense is in issue and the State's evidence is wholly circumstantial or the nature of the transaction is in doubt in order to shed light on the question of which party was the first aggressor. State v. Barbour, 295 N.C. 66, 243 S.E.2d 380 (1978); State v. Price, 301 N.C. 437, 272 S.E.2d 103 (1980).

But May Not Be Based on Personal Opinion. — The trial court's actions in excluding a witness's testimony regarding specific acts of violence by the deceased which were not shown to be within defendant's knowledge prior to the homicide and striking her statements as to the deceased's violent character based solely on her personal experience were correct, since specific acts and a witness's personal opinion are not admissible to show another person's character as evidence of his conduct on a particular occasion. State v. Barbour, 295 N.C. 66, 243 S.E.2d 380 (1978).

And evidence as to the general moral character of the deceased is not admissible in a prosecution for homicide. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 874, 94 S. Ct. 157, 38 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1973).

Defendant's Statements Admissible. — In the prosecution of a 16 year old boy for second-degree murder, statements given by defendant to investigating officers prior to his arrest were admissible, since no fact brought out on voir dire examination indicated that defendant was not clearly informed of his rights or that he did not understand his rights and did not waive his right to remain silent, to have the advice and presence of a lawyer, or to have a parent present, and defendant gave his statement freely and voluntarily without fear and without promise of favor. State v. Wagner, 50 N.C. App. 286, 273 S.E.2d 33 (1981).

Expert Medical Testimony. — Testimony of a physician in a prosecution for the murder of a two-year-old child that the bruises on the child's chest did not form the typical bruising pattern normally sustained by children in day-to-day activities, and the opinion of another physician that the child was a "battered" child, and his explanation of that term, were well within the bounds of permissible expert medical testimony. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

In a prosecution of defendant for the murder of his 18-month-old step-daughter, the trial court did not err in admitting the testimony of three doctors who opined that decedent's injury was probably not caused by a fall down a flight of stairs, since all three medical experts were in a better position to have an opinion on the cause of the deceased's injuries than the jury because of their medical training and their experience in observing and treating skull fractures; the witnesses stated only their opinions as to the possibilities, not the certainties, of the cause of deceased's injuries; and none of the three experts made any statement as to their opinion of defendant's guilt or innocence. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 731, 268 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, the trial court did not err in allowing an expert witness to testify that bite marks appearing on the victim's body were made by defendant's teeth, since the expert witness did not rely on untested methods or unproved hypotheses but applied scientifically established techniques of dentistry and photography to determine whether the bite marks were caused by defendant's teeth. State v. Temple, 302 N.C. 1, 273 S.E.2d 273 (1981).

Evidence of Killing in Perpetration of Rape. — In a prosecution for murder in the first degree, testimony that in his voluntary confession defendant stated he entered deceased's house to rape her was competent to show that killing was done in perpetration or attempt to perpetrate rape, which constitutes murder in first degree without proof of premeditation and deliberation. State v. King, 226 N.C. 241, 37 S.E.2d 684 (1946).

Evidence of Killing in Perpetration of Robbery. — Evidence tending to show that the prisoner killed the deceased in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a robbery is expressly made competent by this section and may be considered by the jury in determining the degree of crime, and whether the accused committed the highest felony or one of lower degree. State v. Westmoreland, 181 N.C. 590, 107 S.E. 438 (1921).

Evidence of the defendant's participation in a prior armed robbery is admissible for the purpose of showing intent in a prosecution for murder committed during the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a robbery. State v. May, 292 N.C. 644, 235 S.E.2d 178, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 928, 98 S. Ct. 414, 54 L. Ed. 2d 288 (1977).

Evidence of Prior Abuse of Victim. — Evidence that, on various occasions during approximately three and one-half years prior to her death, defendant had intentionally inflicted personal injuries upon his wife was admissible as bearing on intent, malice, motive, premeditation and deliberation on the part of the prisoner. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

Ordinarily, the eye of suspicion cannot turn upon the husband as the murder of his wife; and when charged upon him, in the absence of positive proof, strong and convincing evidence — evidence that leaves no doubt on the mind that he had towards her that mala mens which alone could lead him to perpetrate the crime — is always material. How else could this be done than by showing his acts toward her, the manner in which he treated her, and the declarations of his malignity? In the domestic relation, the malice of one of the parties is rarely to be proved but from a series of acts; and the longer they have existed and the greater the number of them, the more powerful are they to show the state of his feelings. A single expression and a single act of violence are most frequently the result of temporary passion, as evanescent as the cause producing them. But a long continued course of brutal conduct shows a settled state of feeling inimical to the object. Malice may be proved as well by previous acts as by previous threats, and often much more satisfactorily. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

In a prosecution for second-degree murder, the acts of the defendant which tended to show child abuse also tended to show intent and design of the defendant with respect to the death of the child and were competent in evidence. State v. Vega, 40 N.C. App. 326, 253 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 457, 256 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 968, 100 S. Ct. 459, 62 L. Ed. 2d 382 (1979).

In a prosecution for second-degree murder, the victim was a five-year-old child who died as a result of injuries to her head which could have been caused by a beating administered on one or several occasions by the defendant, previous acts of physical abuse were competent to show defendant's predisposition to commit the violent act complained of in the indictment. Moreover, the evidence of child abuse was competent to show the state of mind necessary to establish malice, an essential element of second-degree murder. State v. Vega, 40 N.C. App. 326, 253 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 457, 256 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 968, 100 S. Ct. 459, 62 L. Ed. 2d 382 (1979).

Evidence of Private Prosecution. — In first-degree murder prosecution, the court erred in excluding the evidence that wife of deceased had employed private prosecution in the case. State v. White, 286 N.C. 395, 211 S.E.2d 445 (1975).

Evidence of threats is admissible and may be offered as tending to show premeditation and deliberation, and previous express malice, which are necessary to convict of murder in the first degree. State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961).

Evidence of threats against the victim are admissible in evidence to show premeditation and deliberation. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971).

In homicide cases, threats by the accused have always been freely admitted either to identify him as the killer or to disprove accident or justification, or to show premeditation and deliberation. Remoteness in time of the threat does not render the evidence incompetent but goes only to its weight. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

Evidence of threats by the defendant in a homicide prosecution is freely admissible to show premeditation and deliberation. Moreover, mere remoteness in time between the utterance of a threat and the commission of the crime ordinarily goes only to its weight and effect as evidence, rather than to its competence. State v. Sanders, 295 N.C. 361, 245 S.E.2d 674 (1978).

Same — General threats to kill not shown to have any reference to deceased are not admissible in evidence, but a threat to kill or injure someone not definitely designated is admissible in evidence where other facts adduced give individuation to it. State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961).

And Uncommunicated Threats May Be Admissible. — Generally speaking, uncommunicated threats are not admissible in homicide cases. But there are exceptions to the rule which must be considered in the light of the facts of the particular case. Such exceptions occur where the evidence has an explanatory bearing on the plea of self-defense. State v. Hurdle, 5 N.C. App. 610, 169 S.E.2d 17 (1969).

It is now generally recognized that in trials for homicide uncommunicated threats are admissible where they tend to throw light on the occurrence and aid the jury to a correct interpretation of the same, and there is testimony ultra sufficient to carry the case to the jury tending to show that the killing may have been done from a principle of self-preservation. State v. Hurdle, 5 N.C. App. 610, 169 S.E.2d 17 (1969).

Evidence bearing upon the atrocity of the offense and the callous disregard exhibited by the defendant toward the victim is especially relevant and material when the punishment to be imposed is to be fixed by the jury in its discretion. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Use of Hypnosis to Assist Recollection of Witness. — The circumstance that a witness was hypnotized prior to a murder trial in order to assist her recollection would bear upon the credibility of her testimony concerning the occurrences observed and heard by her at the time of the murders, but would not render her testimony incompetent where nothing in the record indicates that the witness was under hypnosis at the time of her testimony in court. State v. McQueen, 295 N.C. 96, 244 S.E.2d 414 (1978).

2. Physical Evidence.

Real Evidence Must Be Properly Identified. — Any evidence which is relevant to the trial of a criminal action is admissible but when real evidence (i.e., the object itself) is offered into evidence, it must be properly identified and offered. State v. Winford, 279 N.C. 58, 181 S.E.2d 423 (1971).

Clothing Admissible. — The admission in evidence of the articles of clothing found upon a murder victim's body was not error, where the location of the bullet holes in her dress and the presence thereon of stains, identified by an expert witness as powder burns, were material and tended to show that when the shots were fired the pistol was held close to the victim's body. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

In cases of homicide or other crimes against the person, clothing worn by the defendant or by the victim is admissible if its appearance throws any light on the circumstances of the crime. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder the clothing of deceased is admissible if its appearance throws any light on the circumstances of the crime. State v. Williams, 289 N.C. 439, 222 S.E.2d 242, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 45, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

The clothing of the deceased worn at the time of a homicide is another circumstance showing the manner of the killing. State v. Williams, 289 N.C. 439, 222 S.E.2d 242, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 45, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Evidence of Fingerprints of Codefendant Admissible. — In the prosecution of two defendants for armed robbery and murder, there was no merit to one defendant's contention that the trial court erred in admitting evidence of fingerprints of a codefendant found on the murder weapon as well as cards containing his fingerprints which were never linked to the murder weapon since the evidence of the fingerprints was relevant because the state proceeded upon a theory of acting in concert, and, in criminal cases, every circumstance that is calculated to throw any light upon the supposed crime is admissible. State v. Smith, 301 N.C. 695, — S.E.2d — (1981).

"Fruit" of Plain View Search Admissible. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder, where a State trooper had stopped defendants' car for reckless driving and had subsequently observed the butt of a revolver protruding from under the center armrest, the revolver was properly admissible in evidence as the fruit of a lawful warrantless "plain view" seizure under circumstances requiring no search. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976).

Nontestimonial Identification Admissible. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder the trial court's denial of defendant's motion to suppress nontestimonial identification evidence was without error where, pursuant to an order of the trial court, fingernail scrapings, samples of defendant's head and pubic hair, saliva samples, blood samples, and photographs of any wounds on defendant's body were taken; the order stated defendant's right to counsel; the State stipulated that nothing defendant said during the procedure would be offered into evidence; defendant was fully advised of his constitutional right to the presence of counsel; and the State was not in violation of any provision under Ch. 15A, Art. 14, by not procuring an express waiver from defendant, as the statute does not require an express waiver of the right to have counsel present at a nontestimonial identification procedure. State v. Temple, 302 N.C. 1, 273 S.E.2d 273 (1981).

Photographs Are Admissible. — In a prosecution under this section, where photographs are identified as accurate representations of the scene of the crime by the witness, the photographs are competent in evidence for the purpose of enabling the witness to explain his testimony, and a general objection to the admission of the photographs in evidence cannot be sustained. State v. Casper, 256 N.C. 99, 122 S.E.2d 805 (1961), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 927, 84 S. Ct. 691, 11 L. Ed. 2d 622 (1964).

There was no error in the admission of the two photographs of the body of a murder victim, the court instructing the jury that they were to be considered solely for the purpose of illustrating the testimony of the witness. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder a photograph is admissible for the purpose of illustrating the testimony of the doctor who examined the deceased. State v. Williams, 289 N.C. 439, 222 S.E.2d 242, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 45, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Despite Defendant's Admissions. — Photographs of the victim's body and articles of clothing found upon it were competent notwithstanding the admission by the defendant, through his counsel, in open court, that the body was that of the victim, that it was discovered in a wooded area, partially hidden under boards and an old quilt and in a state of decomposition, and that the cause of death was five gunshot wounds in the abdomen. Notwithstanding these admissions, the circumstances with reference to the shooting of the deceased and the disposition of her body were material upon the question of the degree of the homicide and the decision as to the punishment to be inflicted, if the jury should find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, photographs of deceased and the clothing of deceased are admissible despite defendant's contention that since he did not controvert the killing, the photographs and clothing were prejudicial and inflammatory, since the burden was still on the State to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt so as to convince the jury that there had been an unlawful killing with malice and that the circumstances of the killing justified a finding of premeditation, deliberation and a specific intent to kill. State v. Williams, 289 N.C. 439, 222 S.E.2d 242, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 45, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

And Regardless of Their Gruesome Character. — If a photograph is relevant and material, the fact that it is gory or gruesome, and thus may tend to arouse prejudice, will not alone render it inadmissible. State v. Mercer, 275 N.C. 108, 165, S.E.2d 328 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Caddell, 287 N.C. 266, 215 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

In a prosecution for homicide, photographs showing the condition of the body when found, the location where found, and the surrounding conditions at the time the body was found are not rendered incompetent by their portrayal of the gruesome spectacle and horrifying events which the witness testifies they accurately portray. State v. Atkinson, 275 N.C. 288, 167 S.E.2d 241 (1969), death sentence rev'd, Atkinson v. North Carolina, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2283, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971); State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

The fact that a photograph depicts a horrible, gruesome and revolting scene, indicating a vicious, calculated act of cruelty, malice or lust, does not render the photograph incompetent in evidence, when properly authenticated. State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972).

In a prosecution for second-degree murder or involuntary manslaughter photographs depicting the way deceased looked at the hospital the night he died are not inadmissible because they were not made at the time of the event, or because they are gory or gruesome. State v. Cox, 289 N.C. 414, 222 S.E.2d 246 (1976).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder the fact that a photograph depicts a gruesome scene does not render it incompetent. State v. Williams, 289 N.C. 439, 222 S.E.2d 242, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 45, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

But Photographs Should Not Be Repetitive. — Where a prejudicial photograph is relevant, competent and therefore admissible, the admission of an excessive number of photographs depicting substantially the same scene may be sufficient ground for a new trial when the additional photographs add nothing in the way of probative value but tend solely to inflame the jurors. State v. Mercer, 275 N.C. 108, 165 S.E.2d 328 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Caddell, 287 N.C. 266, 215 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

And Photographs of Body in Casket Are Not Admissible. — The trial court erred in a first-degree murder case in allowing the jury to be shown certain photographs of the victim's body lying in a casket but such error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt in view of the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt. State v. Temple, 302 N.C. 1, 273 S.E.2d 273 (1981).

F. Sufficiency of Evidence.

1. First-Degree Murder.

In General — Preliminary Question to Be Determined by Court. — In a first-degree murder prosecution, the trial court must determine the preliminary question whether the evidence, in its light most favorable to the State, is sufficient to permit the jury to make a legitimate inference and finding that the defendant, after premeditation and deliberation, formed a fixed purpose to kill and thereafter accomplished the purpose. State v. Walters, 275 N.C. 615, 170 S.E.2d 484 (1969).

Same — Evidence Held Sufficient. — Testimony of facts and circumstances which occurred after the commission of a homicide which tended to show a preconceived plan formed and carried out by the prisoner in detail, resulting in his actual killing of the deceased by two pistol shots, without excuse, with evidence that he had thereafter stated he had done as he had intended, was competent upon the question of deliberation and premeditation, under the evidence in the case, to sustain a verdict of murder in the first degree. State v. Westmoreland, 181 N.C. 590, 107 S.E. 438 (1921).

State's evidence was sufficient to justify overruling motion for judgment of nonsuit and to submit to the jury the question as to whether or not defendant killed the deceased with malice and premeditation and deliberation. See State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961).

Evidence held sufficient to permit the jury to make a legitimate inference of premeditation and deliberation. State v. Sanders, 276 N.C. 598, 174 S.E.2d 487 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971).

Where there is no evidence that the deceased had any weapon or at any time offered any threat to defendant, the want of provocation, absence of any excuse or justification, coupled with the other evidence, permitted a legitimate inference of premeditation and deliberation and was sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the issue of murder in the first degree. State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972).

The want of provocation, the absence of any excuse or justification for the shooting, the number of shots fired or attempted to be fired, the fact that defendant ran immediately after the shooting, coupled with the other evidence, permitted a legitimate inference of premeditation and deliberation, and was sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the issue of murder in the first degree. State v. Sparks, 285 N.C. 631, 207 S.E.2d 712 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 905, 96 S. Ct. 3213, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976).

Where defendant was not harmed by the victim in any way and did not believe he would have had any difficulty in defending himself against her, and the victim's death was an unnecessary and senseless killing; where the 55 stab wounds constituted grossly excessive force; and where force which would have been lethal had the victim not already been dead was applied when an automobile was driven over her felled body, the evidence was sufficient to take the issue of defendant's guilt of first-degree murder to the jury. State v. Bock, 288 N.C. 145, 217 S.E.2d 513 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3208, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, the evidence was sufficient to withstand a motion for nonsuit where it tended to show that deceased died as a result of a gunshot wound inflicted by a shot fired from a trailer, defendant, a short time before the shooting, had test fired a 12 gauge shotgun, 12 gauge shotgun wadding was found in a straight line between the trailer and the bodies after the shooting, a freshly-fired 12 gauge shotgun was later found in defendant's house hidden between the quilts and mattress of the bed and defendant was the only person in the trailer when the fatal shots were fired. State v. McCall, 289 N.C. 512, 223 S.E.2d 303, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 912, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1976).

A motion for nonsuit of a first-degree murder charge must be denied if there is evidence tending to show an unlawful killing of a human being with malice and with premeditation and deliberation. State v. Barbour, 295 N.C. 66, 243 S.E.2d 380 (1978).

Conspiracy to Murder. — State's evidence was sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the issue of defendant's guilt of conspiracy to commit murder where there was evidence that defendant had discussed the murder with another and the means by which it might be accomplished, that defendant sent the coconspirator a picture of the victim for identification purposes, that defendant sent sums of money to the coconspirator, and that after an unsuccessful attempt was made upon the victim's life, defendant had stated to a friend, who had introduced her to the coconspirator, that the coconspirator knew somebody who would "finish the job." State v. Graham, 24 N.C. App. 591, 211 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 262, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975).

A murder perpetrated by means of poison. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder by poison, the evidence was sufficient to withstand motions for directed verdict and for judgment of nonsuit, where defendant purchased rat poison with intent to kill deceased and, pursuant to a preconceived plan to do so, defendant poured it into tea prepared specially for deceased's consumption, deceased drank the tea and almost immediately became ill and died. State v. Hunt, 289 N.C. 403, 222 S.E.2d 234, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Evidence sufficient to take first-degree murder by poison case to jury. See State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979).

Felony-Murder — Killing in Perpetration of Arson. — Evidence tending to show that defendant perpetrated or attempted to perpetrate the crime of arson upon a dwelling house, and thereby proximately caused the deaths of the occupants, was sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the charge of murder in the first degree. State v. Anderson, 228 N.C. 720, 47 S.E.2d 1 (1948).

Same — Killing in Perpetration of Rape. — The confession of defendant that while he was having sexual intercourse with an eight-year-old child, she started to scream and that he put his hand over her mouth; that when he took his hand off her mouth she spoke once and said nothing more; that he believed her to be dead and carried away and hid her body; with corroborating evidence that deceased was last seen with defendant, and that her body was found at the place where defendant said he placed it; with expert medical testimony of the use of force and violence in the penetration of deceased's vagina; and that death resulted from suffocation from the bursting of air sacs in deceased's lungs, was held sufficient to be submitted to the jury and sustain a conviction of murder in the first degree. State v. Crawford, 260 N.C. 548, 133 S.E.2d 232 (1963).

Same — Killing in Perpetration of Robbery. — Evidence tending to show that the prisoner with another entered a store with intent to rob its cash drawer, and shot and killed the deceased is of an attempt to commit a felony and sufficient to sustain a verdict of murder in the first degree, as defined by this section, under proper instructions from the court thereon upon conflicting evidence. State v. Sterling, 200 N.C. 18, 156 S.E. 96 (1930).

Where upon a trial for murder all the evidence and inferences therefrom unquestionably tended to show that the deceased was killed by one lying in wait and for the purpose of robbery, with evidence tending to establish that the defendant had perpetrated the crime, and there was no evidence in mitigation of the offense, the evidence established the crime of murder in the first degree under this section, and an instruction to the jury either to convict the defendant of murder in the first degree, or to acquit him was not error. State v. Myers, 202 N.C. 351, 162 S.E. 764 (1932).

Where all the evidence for the State tends to show that the defendants killed the deceased while attempting to rob him, the crime is murder in the first degree, under this section, and the failure of the trial court to submit the issue of guilty of murder in the second degree is not error. State v. Donnell, 202 N.C. 782, 164 S.E. 352 (1932). See State v. Brown, 231 N.C. 152, 56 S.E.2d 441 (1949).

Evidence tending to show that defendant killed the deceased with a deadly weapon while attempting to perpetrate a robbery is sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the issue of first degree murder, the credibility and probative force of the evidence being for the jury. State v. Langley, 204 N.C. 687, 169 S.E. 705 (1933).

Evidence tending to show that the defendant on trial for a homicide drove to a filling station at night with two others for the purpose of robbery, that defendant waited outside in the car while his companions went into the filling station and that deceased was killed by a shot from a gun fired from the outside, was sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the question of defendant's guilt of murder in the first degree as stated in this section. State v. Ferrell, 205 N.C. 640, 172 S.E. 186 (1934).

Evidence that defendant, while in the custody of officers of the law who had arrested him when they apprehended him in the commission of a robbery, drew his pistol in an attempt to escape, and with premeditation and deliberation shot one of the officers in his attempt to escape, is sufficient to support an instruction to the jury on the question of murder in the first degree. State v. Brooks, 206 N.C. 113, 172 S.E. 879 (1934).

Evidence tending to show that defendants conspired to rob deceased and that they killed him with deadly weapons in the perpetration of the robbery was sufficient to take the issue of their guilt of murder in the first degree to the jury. State v. Chavis, 231 N.C. 307, 56 S.E.2d 678 (1949).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, where defendant admitted to State's witness that he and his brother had a blunt instrument and a knife when they decided to rob decedent, and evidence showed that decedent died of injuries inflicted by both blunt and sharp objects, the evidence was sufficient to withstand a motion for nonsuit even though defendant's admissions did not include the actual use of the weapons against decedent. State v. Warren, 289 N.C. 551, 223 S.E.2d 317 (1976).

In a prosecution for murder committed during perpetration of an armed robbery and for conspiracy to commit armed robbery, the proof of murder in the first degree is complete when the State proves beyond a reasonable doubt that the trigger man shot and killed the victim in the trigger man's attempt to rob him. State v. Carey, 288 N.C. 254, 218 S.E.2d 387 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

Where the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to the State, permits a legitimate inference that defendant was engaged in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a robbery at the time the deceased was killed, the jury is entitled to draw this inference, notwithstanding the State's introduction of defendant's extrajudicial declarations in which he states he killed in self-defense rather than in the course of a robbery. State v. Wooten, 295 N.C. 378, 245 S.E.2d 699 (1978).

If there is evidence tending to show that defendant took property belonging to the deceased immediately after killing him, such evidence would support a jury determination that the killing occurred during the perpetration of a robbery. State v. Wooten, 295 N.C. 378, 245 S.E.2d 699 (1978).

2. Second-Degree Murder.

Evidence Sufficient. — See State v. Casper, 256 N.C. 99, 122 S.E.2d 805 (1961), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 927, 84 S. Ct. 691, 11 L. Ed. 2d 622 (1964).

A general motion to nonsuit is properly refused where the evidence is sufficient to support conviction of any one of the degrees of homicide. State v. Lawson, 6 N.C. App. 1, 169 S.E.2d 265 (1969).

As to evidence of second-degree murder sufficient for jury, see State v. McCain, 6 N.C. App. 558, 170 S.E.2d 531 (1969).

The evidence was sufficient to be submitted to the jury in a second-degree murder prosecution where it tended to show that the defendant and the deceased were imprisoned in the same prison unit, that a prison guard saw them arguing and broke them up, that later the guard saw defendant approach deceased who was lying on his bunk and make a striking movement toward the deceased's body, that although the guard saw no knife or other weapon in defendant's hand, a small knife was later discovered in a heater and deceased had died from a stab wound in the chest. State v. Mull, 24 N.C. App. 502, 211 S.E.2d 515 (1975).

The state's evidence is sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the issue of defendant's guilt of murder in the second degree where as here it tends to show that the defendant intentionally inflicted a wound with a deadly weapon which caused deceased's death. State v. Moore, 46 N.C. App. 563, 265 S.E.2d 421 (1980).

The State's evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction of second-degree murder where it tended to show that the victim entered a car occupied by defendant and defendant's companion in order to sell defendant a stolen M-16 rifle; the victim was seated in the front seat and defendant was seated in the back seat; defendant told the victim he had to pick up the money for the rifle at a friend's house; as the car was being driven by defendant's companion, defendant shot the victim in the head with a pistol which belonged to the girlfriend of the defendant's companion; defendant threatened to shoot his companion unless he followed defendant's orders, whereupon the companion assisted defendant in burying the body; and a search of the residence of defendant and his companion uncovered the M-16 rifle. State v. Fletcher, 301 N.C. 709, 272 S.E.2d 859 (1981).

The State's evidence was sufficient to support convictions of defendants for second-degree murder where it tended to show that the victim, a State's witness, and another person were standing in the front yard of the witness's house at 4:00 A.M.; the witness heard a vehicle approaching the house, and heard one defendant screaming at him; the witness saw such defendant driving a pickup truck on the road in front of the house and saw the second defendant firing a gun from the back of the pickup; after passing the house, the pickup turned around and drove by the house again, at which time the second defendant fired several more shots; and the victim sustained a gunshot wound in the neck and died as a result thereof. State v. Spicer, 50 N.C. App. 214, 273 S.E.2d 521 (1981).

Evidence Insufficient to Support Murder Charge. — Where the State's evidence established a brutal murder, showed that defendant had the opportunity to commit it and raised suspicion in imaginative minds, it did not suffice to sustain a conviction. State v. Jones, 280 N.C. 60, 184 S.E.2d 862 (1971).

Where the evidence showed that defendant wanted his wife dead, that he actively sought her death, and that he harbored great hostility toward her; this, without more, was not enough to permit a jury to find that he killed her. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

Where the evidence might support a reasonable inference that defendant was responsible for his wife's death and that he procured someone to murder her, these facts alone would not make defendant guilty of murder. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

Evidence of motive, standing alone, is insufficient to support a conviction for murder. State v. Lee, 34 N.C. App. 106, 237 S.E.2d 315 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 299, 240 S.E.2d 449 (1978).

Evidence was insufficient to be submitted to the jury on charges of second-degree murder and voluntary manslaughter but was sufficient to be submitted on the charge of involuntary manslaugher where the evidence tended to show that defendant, a 16 year old boy, shot his 10 year old sister, but in showing the events leading up to and preceding the death of the sister, the State relied entirely on voluntary statements of defendant to the effect that he and his sister were fussing; defendant was "messing around with a shotgun"; and the gun accidentally went off. State v. Wagner, 50 N.C. App. 286, 273 S.E.2d 33 (1981).

Causal Connection between Assault and Death. — Nonexpert testimony, even without an opinion as to the cause of death, can establish a causal connection between an assault and death sufficient to take the State's case to the jury. State v. Luther, 21 N.C. App. 13, 203 S.E.2d 343, aff'd, 285 N.C. 570, 206 S.E.2d 238 (1974).

3. Defenses.

Evidence Insufficient to Support Defense of Accidental Death. — Evidence in a prosecution for second-degree murder that defendant did not intend for the bullet to strike the victim but that he intended to fire to the right of his head for the purpose of scaring him did not present the defense of death by accident. State v. Walker, 34 N.C. App. 485, 238 S.E.2d 666 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

Evidence Insufficient to Support Defense of Intoxication. — Where the evidence tends to show that defendant was drinking heavily but there is no evidence tending to show that defendant did not know what he was doing, both in the planning and the execution of the crime which he consummated, then the evidence is not sufficient to make available to him the defense of intoxication. State v. Doss, 279 N.C. 413, 183 S.E.2d 671 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2875, 33 L. Ed. 2d 762 (1972).

G. Instructions to Jury.

1. Instructions Concerning Degree of Offense Charged.

Where Jury May Be Instructed to Return Verdict of First-Degree Murder or Not Guilty. — Where all the evidence is to the effect that a murder was committed in the perpetration of a robbery, it is not error for the court to limit the jury to a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree or not guilty under this section. State v. Gosnell, 208 N.C. 401, 181 S.E. 323 (1935).

It is only in cases where all of the evidence tends to show that the homicide was committed by means of poison, lying in wait, imprisonment, starving, torture, or in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a felony, that the trial judge can instruct the jury that they must return a verdict of murder in the first degree or not guilty. State v. Perry, 209 N.C. 604, 184 S.E. 545 (1936).

Where there was abundant evidence tending to establish that homicide was committed in the perpetration of capital felony rape, and that defendant was the one who committed the offense, and no element of murder in the second degree or manslaughter was made to appear, court properly limited the possible verdicts to guilty of murder in first degree or not guilty. State v. Mays, 225 N.C. 486, 35 S.E.2d 494 (1945); State v. Scales, 242 N.C. 400, 87 S.E.2d 916 (1955).

Where evidence tends to show murder committed in the perpetration of robbery pursuant to a conspiracy and that both defendants were present and participated in the crime, the court properly limited the jury to verdicts of guilty of murder in the first degree or not guilty. State v. Matthews, 226 N.C. 639, 39 S.E.2d 819 (1946).

A murder committed in the perpetration or attempted commission of the felony of kidnapping or holding a human being for ransom constitutes murder in the first degree and an instruction to this effect upon supporting evidence cannot be held for error. State v. Streeton, 231 N.C. 301, 56 S.E.2d 649 (1949).

In those cases in which the State proves a murder committed by one of the means stated in this section, or in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a felony, an instruction to the jury to return a verdict of murder in the first degree or not guilty is proper; provided, that there is no evidence, or any inference deducible therefrom, tending to show a lesser offense. State v. Harris, 290 N.C. 718, 228 S.E.2d 424 (1976).

Where no inference can fairly be deduced from the evidence of or tending to prove a murder in the second degree or manslaughter, the trial judge should instruct the jury that it is their duty to render a verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree," if they are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt, or of "not guilty." State v. Smith, 294 N.C. 365, 241 S.E.2d 674 (1978).

When Jury Must Be Instructed on Lesser Included Offense. — Where any view of the evidence would justify a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, it is error if the court does not submit to the jury an instruction on this lesser degree of the crime. State v. Manning, 251 N.C. 1, 110 S.E.2d 474 (1959).

In a prosecution charging a defendant with the slaying of a person, the issue of defendant's guilt of second-degree murder or of manslaughter is properly submitted to the jury. State v. Crump, 277 N.C. 573, 178 S.E.2d 366 (1971).

The judge is required to declare and explain the law arising on the evidence. It is not an expression of opinion, but rather the duty of the trial judge, where the evidence so warrants, to inform the jury that manslaughter does not arise on the evidence in the case. It is the duty of the judge to determine, in the first instance, if there is any evidence or any inference fairly deducible therefrom tending to prove one of the lower grades of murder. Having done so, and having concluded that there is no basis for submission of manslaughter to the jury, it was the duty of the judge to instruct it accordingly. State v. Duboise, 279 N.C. 73, 181 S.E.2d 393 (1971).

The trial judge is required to instruct the jury on the lesser included offense of manslaughter only where there is evidence which would sustain such a verdict. It is not error to omit a charge on manslaughter where there is no evidence of manslaughter. State v. Mays, 14 N.C. App. 90, 187 S.E.2d 479, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 157, 188 S.E.2d 366 (1972).

The trial judge must instruct the jury as to involuntary manslaughter when the crime charged is second-degree murder if there is evidence from which the jury could find that the defendant committed the lesser offense. State v. Redfern, 291 N.C. 319, 230 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

The necessity for instructing the jury as to an included crime of lesser degree, such as manslaughter, than that charged arises when and only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. State v. Jones, 291 N.C. 681, 231 S.E.2d 252 (1977).

In all cases in which the State relies upon premeditation and deliberation to support a first-degree murder conviction, the court must submit the issue of second-degree murder. State v. Hammond, 34 N.C. App. 390, 238 S.E.2d 198 (1977).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, instructions on a lesser included offense of manslaughter are required only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed. State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977).

In all cases in which the State relies upon premeditation and deliberation to support a conviction of murder in the first degree, the trial court must submit to the jury an issue of murder in the second degree. This requirement is present because premeditation and deliberation are operations of the mind which must always be proved, if at all, by circumstantial evidence. If the jury chooses not to infer the presence of premeditation and deliberation, it should be given the alternative of finding the defendant guilty of second-degree murder. State v. Poole, 298 N.C. 254, 258 S.E.2d 339 (1979).

Defendant is entitled to have a lesser included offense submitted to the jury under the proper instruction but only when there is evidence to support that lesser included offense. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 731, 268 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

Same — Instruction Required. — Where the evidence offered by defendant, if believed by the jury, was sufficient to support a verdict of involuntary manslaughter, which is a lesser degree of the crime charged in the bill of indictment, the court erred in excluding it from the list of permissible verdicts. State v. Wrenn, 279 N.C. 676, 185 S.E.2d 129 (1971).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder in which the defendant was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter, the trial judge erred in failing to instruct the jury on involuntary manslaughter where the defendant's testimony was, in its entirety, an account of an unintentional killing. State v. Graham, 38 N.C. App. 86, 247 S.E.2d 300 (1978).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, where there is some evidence from which the jury could infer that the defendant killed the victim without premeditation and deliberation, it was error for the trial court not to instruct on second-degree murder since the jury should be instructed on a lesser included offense when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such lesser included offense was committed. Error in failing to submit the question of defendant's guilt of a lesser degree of the same crime is not cured by a verdict of guilty of the offense charged because it cannot be known whether the jury would have convicted of a lesser degree if the different permissible degrees arising on the evidence had been correctly submitted to the jury. State v. Poole, 298 N.C. 254, 258 S.E.2d 339 (1979).

Same — Instruction Not Required. — There being no evidence in the record to sustain a verdict of manslaughter, it was not error for the court to omit manslaughter from the possible verdicts which the jury might return. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 874, 94 S. Ct. 157, 38 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1973).

Court's failure to instruct the jury that involuntary manslaughter was one of their possible verdicts was not error where all of the evidence showed that defendant took a pistol from his back pocket and shot his victim twice after the defendant, a customer, had gotten into a dispute with the victim, a storekeeper, during the course of which the victim ordered defendant out of his store, advanced upon defendant, and hit him with a "billy club," and where none of the evidence suggests that the two shots fired by defendant were fired involuntarily or by reason of culpable negligence. State v. Credle, 18 N.C. App. 142, 196 S.E.2d 289 (1973).

In prosecution for second-degree murder, where there was no evidence of just cause or reasonable provocation for the homicide, nor was there evidence of self-defense, unavoidable accident or misadventure, defendant's self-serving declarations alone were not sufficient to rebut the presumption of malice arising in the case, and the trial court did not err in failing to instruct on manslaughter as a lesser included offense. State v. Mull, 24 N.C. App. 502, 211 S.E.2d 515 (1975).

When all the evidence tends to show that the accused committed second-degree murder and there is no evidence of guilt of involuntary manslaughter, the court correctly refuses to charge on the unsupported lesser offense. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. State v. Redfern, 291 N.C. 319, 230 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

Where, in a prosecution for second-degree murder, there is no evidence that defendant killed under the heat of passion raised by sudden provocation and nothing that raises the issue of self-defense, a possible verdict of voluntary manslaughter should not be submitted. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

In a prosecution for second-degree murder involving the death of a child from the so-called "battered child" syndrome, where there was a great disparity in age and size between the victim and her slayer, and particularly where the slayer stood in loco parentis with the child, as a matter of law adequate provocation could not be found to exist so as to justify submission of voluntary manslaughter where the evidence showed that the defendant beat and abused a child unto its death. State v. Vega, 40 N.C. App. 326, 253 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 457, 256 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 968, 100 S. Ct. 459, 62 L. Ed. 2d 382 (1979).

The trial court in a second-degree murder case did not err in failing to charge the jury that it might find defendant, who offered no evidence in his own behalf, guilty of voluntary manslaughter, since evidence presented by the State tended to show that defendant was guilty of murder if he was guilty of anything, and evidence presented by a codefendant tended to show that defendant was not guilty of anything. State v. Gadsden, 300 N.C. 345, 266 S.E.2d 665 (1980).

Where the evidence tends to show that the defendant committed the crime charged and there is no evidence of a lesser included offense, the trial court is correct in not charging on the lesser included offense. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 731, 268 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

Same — Felony Murder. — Although it is rarely the case where the felony-murder statute applies that the jury should be permitted to consider a lesser degree of homicide than murder in the first degree, if, however, there is any evidence or if any inference can be fairly deduced therefrom, tending to show one of the lower grades of murder, it is then the duty of the trial court, under appropriate instructions, to submit that view to the jury. State v. Knight, 248 N.C. 384, 103 S.E.2d 452 (1958).

While the evidence was sufficient to support the theory of murder committed in the attempted perpetration of the felony of rape and also supported the inference that defendant did not intend to commit rape but sought to have intercourse with his victim on a voluntary basis and that his assault upon her was precipitated when she struck at him while she was trying to drive him from the house, it was the duty of the court upon such evidence to submit the question of defendant's guilt of murder in the second degree, in addition to the question of defendant's guilt of murder in the first degree, or not guilty. State v. Knight, 248 N.C. 384, 103 S.E.2d 452 (1958).

When all of the evidence tended to show that defendant killed deceased in the perpetration of rape, without evidence of guilt of a less degree of the crime, the court correctly refrained from submitting the question of defendant's guilt of murder in the second degree. State v. Crawford, 260 N.C. 548, 133 S.E.2d 232 (1963).

It is a well-established rule that when the law and evidence justify the use of the felony-murder rule, the court is not required to submit to the jury second-degree murder or manslaughter unless there is evidence to support it. State v. Warren, 292 N.C. 235, 232 S.E.2d 419 (1977).

Same — Submission Prejudicial Error. — If there is evidence of self-defense and no evidence of involuntary manslaughter, it is prejudicial error to submit a charge of involuntary manslaughter in a trial for second-degree murder. State v. Brooks, 46 N.C. App. 833, 266 S.E.2d 3 (1980).

Submission of Question of Greater Offense. — Where the jury convicts the defendant of murder in the second degree, asserted error in submitting the question of defendant's guilt of murder in the first degree is rendered harmless. State v. Casper, 256 N.C. 99, 122 S.E.2d 805 (1961), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 927, 84 S. Ct. 691, 11 L. Ed. 2d 622 (1964).

The submission of a question regarding the guilt of a defendant of murder in the second degree becomes harmless when the jury returns a verdict of manslaughter. State v. Bryant, 282 N.C. 92, 191 S.E.2d 745 (1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 958, 93 S. Ct. 1432, 35 L. Ed. 2d 691 (1973); State v. Chavis, 30 N.C. 75, 226 S.E.2d 389, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 778, 229 S.E.2d 33 (1976).

Where defendant contends that the State introduced no evidence of first-degree murder but defendant was found guilty of the lesser offense of murder in the second degree, any error which might have occurred by the submission of the issue for the greater offense was thereby cured. State v. Hamilton, 19 N.C. App. 436, 199 S.E.2d 159, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 256, 200 S.E.2d 656 (1973).

Defendant's conviction of voluntary manslaughter would render harmless an error, had error been committed, in submitting to the jury the question of defendant's guilt of the more serious offense, at least absent any showing that the verdict of guilty of the lesser offense was affected thereby. State v. McLamb, 20 N.C. App. 164, 200 S.E.2d 838 (1973).

2. Other Instructions.

Accident. — In a prosecution for murder and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill where the trial judge instructs the jury on the defense of accident it is not error if the court does not define the word "accident." State v. Reives, 29 N.C. App. 11, 222 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 675 (1976).

Instruction Concerning Accomplice. — In a prosecution for murder where an accomplice testified for the State, the trial court did not error in failing to instruct the jury that the accomplice was guilty, as an accomplice, of the crime charged against defendant. State v. Keller, 50 N.C. App. 364, 273 S.E.2d 741 (1981).

Alibi Instruction Not Required. — In prosecution for first-degree murder, where the record shows that the crime was committed on a certain corner at a specified time, and defendant testified that he was on that corner at that time, there was insufficient evidence to require instruction on alibi even had there been a special request for it. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Instruction on Burden of Proof of Unlawful Killing. — Where the prisoner is on trial for murder in the first degree, burglary and rape, and there is evidence to support a verdict for each of these offenses, an instruction is proper, and in keeping with the language of this section, when construed as a whole, that the burden of proof was on the State to show beyond a reasonable doubt an unlawful killing with malice and with premeditation and deliberation or murder committed in the perpetration, or attempt to perpetrate, other felonies named. State v. Walker, 193 N.C. 489, 137 S.E. 429 (1927).

Instructions placing the burden on defendant (1) to show circumstances that would reduce the offense from second-degree murder to manslaughter and (2) to justify the killing on ground of self-defense were erroneous in view of Mullaney v. Wilbur, 421 U.S. 684, 95 S. Ct. 1881, 44 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1975), and State v. Hankerson, 288 N.C. 632, 220 S.E.2d 575 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 432 U.S. 233, 97 S. Ct. 2339, 53 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1977); State v. McLaurin, 33 N.C. App. 589, 235 S.E.2d 871 (1977).

An instruction placing the burden on petitioner to satisfy the jury of the absence of malice, or that the killing was committed in self-defense, is constitutional error unless the court should find that there was no evidence to support verdicts of either manslaughter or not guilty, or the instruction was otherwise harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt. Gardner v. Forister, 468 F. Supp. 761 (W.D.N.C. 1979).

The question whether evidence is sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt is always for the jury under proper instructions from the court. The instructions should, however, be put in terms of the State's burden to prove every element beyond a reasonable doubt, not defendant's burden to raise a reasonable doubt since defendant has no such burden. State v. Patterson, 297 N.C. 247, 254 S.E.2d 604 (1979).

Trial judge's charge to jury in prosecution for first-degree murder placing burden on defendant to rebut presumption of malice so as to reduce the charge from second-degree murder to manslaughter was not error where all the evidence revealed a cold-blooded killing done with malice and with premeditation and deliberation, and the jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree never reaching the questions raised as to instructions relating to second-degree murder and manslaughter. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

Circumstantial Evidence. — While circumstantial evidence is sufficient to justify a conviction when, and only when, the circumstances proved are consistent with the hypothesis of guilt and inconsistent with every other reasonable hypothesis, no set form of words is required to be used in conveying to the jury this rule relating to the degree of proof required for conviction upon circumstantial evidence. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

No set of words is required by the law in regard to the force of circumstantial evidence. All that the law requires is that the jury shall be clearly instructed, that unless after due consideration of the evidence they are "fully satisfied" or "entirely convinced" or "satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt" of the guilt of the defendant, it is their duty to acquit, and every attempt on the part of the courts to lay down a "formula" for the instruction of the jury, by which to "guage" the degrees of conviction, has resulted in no good. State v. Westborok, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

In the absence of a request to do so, the failure of the court to instruct the jury regarding circumstantial evidence, or as to what such evidence should show, will not be held for reversible error, if the charge is correct in all other respects as to the burden and measure of proof. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Defense of Habitation. — Under the evidence, the trial court in a second-degree murder case erred in failing to charge the jury on defense of habitation. State v. Hedgepeth, 46 N.C. App. 569, 265 S.E.2d 413 (1980).

Felony-Murder. — Where the evidence is sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the theory of defendant's guilt of murdering his victim in an attempt to commit the crime of rape under this section, but is insufficient to show defendant's guilt of the crime of kidnapping, an instruction that defendant would be guilty of murder in the first degree if the jury should find that the murder was perpetrated in the attempt to commit the crime of rape or in the commission of the felony of kidnapping, must be held prejudicial as permitting the jury to rest its verdict on a theory not supported by the evidence. State v. Knight, 248 N.C. 384, 103 S.E.2d 452 (1958).

In a case of murder in the first degree committed in the perpetration of, or attempt to perpetrate, a robbery, instruction that the jury should return a verdict of guilty as charged, guilty as charged with a recommendation for life imprisonment, or not guilty is a proper instruction. When the indictment and evidence disclose a killing in the perpetration of a robbery, only one of such verdicts may be returned. State v. Hill, 276 N.C. 1, 170 S.E.2d 885 (1969), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2287, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971).

Where the evidence permits a legitimate inference that a murder was committed in perpetration of a robbery, and murder so committed is "deemed to be murder in the first degree" it is not then prejudicial error to defendant for the court to give the State's contentions and to charge the jury that a murder committed in the perpetration of a robbery will be deemed murder in the first degree. State v. Rich, 277 N.C. 333, 177 S.E.2d 422 (1970).

Where the court has consolidated first-degree murder and armed robbery charges in the same trial against defendant under § 15-152 (now § 15A-926(a)), the court may instruct the jury on murder in the first degree as a separate crime requiring deliberation, premeditation, and malice, rather than permit the jury to rely on the felony-murder rule as a basis for finding defendant guilty of first-degree murder. State v. Thompson, 285 N.C. 181, 203 S.E.2d 781, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 867, 95 S. Ct. 123, 42 L. Ed. 104 (1974).

Instruction on Insanity Properly Refused. — In the absence of any evidence of insanity, it is not error for the trial judge to refuse the defendant's request that he instruct the jury upon the law relating to insanity as a defense to the charge of murder. State v. Jones, 293 N.C. 413, 238 S.E.2d 482 (1977).

Intent to Kill. — With respect to jury instructions, the phrase "that he intended to kill" is self-explanatory, and, absent a special request for instructions from the defendant, the presiding judge was not required to supply its definition. State v. Sparks, 285 N.C. 631, 207 S.E.2d 712 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 905, 96 S. Ct. 3213, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976).

Same — Mistake. — Where defendant, intending to kill a certain person, by mistake inflicts fatal injuries on another, he is guilty in the same degree as though he had killed the person intended, and therefore an instruction that if the jury should be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant intended to kill a certain person with malice and with premeditation and deliberation and that by mistake he shot and killed deceased, defendant would be guilty of murder in the first degree, is without error. State v. Burney, 215 N.C. 598, 3 S.E.2d 24 (1939).

Same — Inability to Form Specific Intent. — The trial court did not err in instructing the jury that in order to find that defendant could not form a specific intent to commit a felony or that the defendant was mentally incapable of premeditation and deliberation they must find that the defendant was "utterly incapable" (or "utterly unable") of forming a specific intent. State v. Griffin, 288 N.C. 437, 219 S.E.2d 48 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Intoxication. — Trial court did not err in charging that defendant's intoxication could have no bearing upon his guilt or innocence of the lesser included offenses in the charge of first-degree murder. State v. Cummings, 22 N.C. App. 452, 206 S.E.2d 781, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 760, 209 S.E.2d 284 (1974).

In the absence of evidence of intoxication to a degree precluding the ability to form a specific intent to kill, the court is not required to charge the jury thereupon. State v. McLaughlin, 286 N.C. 597, 213 S.E.2d 238 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976).

Instruction on Manslaughter. — Where a jury was properly instructed as to both degrees of murder and yet found defendant guilty of murder in the first degree rather than the second degree, error in the charge on manslaughter was harmless. State v. Freeman, 275 N.C. 662, 170 S.E.2d 461 (1969); State v. Fowler, 285 N.C. 90, 203 S.E.2d 803 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976).

But when the jury is instructed that it may find defendant guilty of murder in the first degree, murder in the second degree, manslaughter, or not guilty, and the verdict is guilty of murder in the second degree, an error in the charge on manslaughter will require a new trial. State v. Freeman, 275 N.C. 662, 170 S.E.2d 461 (1969).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, a new trial was required where the trial judge twice and at crucial times in the charge to the jury gave an incorrect instruction as to the definition of voluntary manslaughter and related it to the evidence in a manner which would not disclose patent error to the average juror, despite the fact that the trial judge properly defined voluntary manslaughter in another portion of the charge. State v. Cousins, 289 N.C. 540, 223 S.E.2d 338 (1976).

Instruction as to Right to Consider Eligibility to Parole. — When, in a prosecution for murder in the first degree, the question of eligibility for parole arises spontaneously during the deliberations of the jury and is brought to the attention of the court by independent inquiry of the jury and request for information, the court should instruct the jury that the question of eligibility for parole is not a proper matter for the jury to consider and should be eliminated entirely from their deliberations, and the action of the court is merely telling the jury that it cannot answer the inquiry must be held for prejudicial error upon appeal from conviction of the capital felony without recommendation of life imprisonment. State v. Conner, 241 N.C. 468, 85 S.E.2d 584 (1955).

Instruction on Premeditation and Deliberation. — The trial judge gave the following instruction: "Premeditation means to think beforehand, and when we say that the killing must be accompanied by deliberation and premeditation, it is meant that there must be a fixed purpose to kill which preceded the act of killing for some length of time, however short, although the manner and length of time in which the purpose is formed, is not material. If, however, the purpose to kill is formed simultaneously with the killing, then there is no premeditation and deliberation, and in that event the homicide would not be murder in the first degree." This is a correct statement of the law. State v. Faust, 254 N.C. 101, 118 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 851, 82 S. Ct. 85, 7 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1961).

Judge's instruction to the jury in a first-degree murder case that the jury, in determining premeditation and deliberation, may consider the "absence of provocation" did not express a court opinion that there was no evidence of provocation in the case. State v. Fowler, 285 N.C. 90, 203 S.E.2d 803 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976).

Where the issues of premeditation and deliberation constituted the primary focus of the jury's inquiry, the trial court's charge that the jury could infer these elements from matters not supported by the evidence constituted prejudicial error entitling defendant to a new trial. State v. Buchanan, 287 N.C. 408, 215 S.E.2d 80 (1975).

An instruction on deliberation that so long as the killing was the product of premeditation and deliberation it is murder in the first degree notwithstanding that the execution thereof might have been done while the defendant was in a state of anger, passion, or emotional excitement was a correct statement of law. State v. Potter, 295 N.C. 126, 244 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

Same — Charge of First-Degree Murder Must Be Supported By Evidence of Premeditation and Deliberation. — The law is fixed by the statute, that the killing must be willful, upon premeditation and with deliberation, and where there is no evidence tending to prove this, the jury should be so instructed, and the question of guilt on the charge of murder in a first degree ought not to be submitted to them. State v. Rhyne, 124 N.C. 847, 33 S.E. 128 (1899).

In order for the trial court to submit a charge of first-degree murder to the jury, there must be evidence tending to show that the defendant, with malice, after premeditation and deliberation, intentionally shot and killed the victim. State v. Baggett, 293 N.C. 307, 237 S.E.2d 827 (1977).

Instruction on Presumption of Malice. — The trial court in a homicide prosecution erred in instructing the jury to presume the existence of malice if they found that the victim's death was intentionally caused where there was no evidence of the use of a deadly weapon, since malice is presumed only where death resulted from the intentional use of a deadly weapon. State v. Tilley, 18 N.C. App. 300, 196 S.E.2d 816 (1973).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, trial judge did not err in charging the jury that if the State proved beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant killed deceased with a deadly weapon, the law raised presumptions that the killing was unlawful and that it was done with malice. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

No Instruction on Transformation of Presumptions to Inferences. — Whether there is evidence in the case from which a jury could find a killing in the heat of passion or self-defense so that the mandatory presumptions are transformed into permissible inferences depends largely on the quantum of the evidence rather than its quality or credibility. This is a question for the court, not the jury. No instructions on this principle should be given the jury. State v. Patterson, 297 N.C. 247, 254 S.E.2d 604 (1979).

Reasonable Doubt. — The defining of "reasonable doubt" as a possibility of innocence not only was not reversible error but constituted an instruction more favorable to the defendant than the usual definitions such as "fully satisfied," "entirely convinced," or "satisfied to a moral certainty." State v. Wright, 282 N.C. 364, 192 S.E.2d 818 (1972).

A trial judge is not required to define "reasonable doubt" without a request to do so, but if he does undertake to define it, the definition should be in substantial accord with the definitions of this court. State v. Shepherd, 288 N.C. 346, 218 S.E.2d 176 (1975).

No set formula is required to convey to the jury the fixed principle relating to the degree of proof required for conviction. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Self-Defense — Instruction Must be Given Where Supported by Evidence. — Where there is evidence that defendant acted in self-defense, the court must charge on this aspect even though there is contradictory evidence by the State or discrepancies in defendant's evidence. State v. Dooley, 285 N.C. 158, 203 S.E.2d 815 (1974).

In cases where the defendant has met his burden of production for self-defense, the failure of the trial judge to include not guilty by reason of self-defense as a possible verdict in his final mandate to the jury is prejudicial error and entitles the defendant to a new trial. State v. Dooley, 285 N.C. 158, 203 S.E.2d 815 (1974).

Failure to include not guilty by reason of self-defense in the court's final mandate to the jury, where required, is not cured by the discussion of the law of self-defense in the body of the charge to the jury. State v. Dooley, 285 N.C. 158, 203 S.E.2d 815 (1974).

Where the State's evidence presents testimony which would permit, but not require, the jury to find that: (1) Defendant was without fault in bringing on the difficulty, (2) deceased was armed with and first assaulted defendant with a deadly weapon, (3) the fatal blow was struck during a struggle for the weapon first used by deceased and (4) the defendant used such force as was necessary or as appeared to him to be necessary to save himself from death or great bodily harm, the evidence was sufficient to require the trial judge to state and apply the law of self-defense to the facts of the case and the court's failure to so do constituted prejudicial error. State v. Deck, 285 N.C. 209, 203 S.E.2d 830 (1974).

When the State or defendant produces evidence that defendant acted in self-defense in a prosecution for first-degree murder, the question of self-defense becomes a substantial feature of the case requiring the trial judge to state and apply the law of self-defense to the facts of the case. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Instruction Permitting Verdict of Guilty as Accessory to Second-Degree Murder. — In a prosecution of a defendant as an accessory before the fact to the murder of her husband, defendant was not prejudiced by an instruction which would permit the jury to return a verdict of guilty as an accessory to murder in the second degree. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

Sufficiency. — The court charged fully as to what was reasonable doubt, circumstantial evidence, presumption of innocence, etc. In absence of a request to do so, it was not error for the court to fail to define robbery in detail. State v. Godwin, 216 N.C. 49, 3 S.E.2d 347 (1939).

Harmless Error. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder, the trial judge's characterization of deceased as a common-law husband of the defendant in his charge to the jury was harmless error. State v. Hunt, 289 N.C. 403, 222 S.E.2d 234, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Same — Defense of Another. — North Carolina law recognizes that a person may not only take life in his own defense, but he may also do so in defense of another who stands in a family relation to him. The failure to instruct the jury on this fundamental issue constitutes prejudicial error. State v. Spencer, 21 N.C. App. 445, 204 S.E.2d 552 (1974).

Same — Request Is Unnecessary. — As the defense of self-defense was a substantial and essential feature of the case arising on defendant's evidence, no special prayers for instructions were required, and the judge's failure to charge with respect thereto was prejudicial error, and entitled defendant to a new trial. State v. Todd, 264 N.C. 524, 142 S.E.2d 154 (1965).

The trial court is required to charge on self-defense, even without a special request, when, but only when, there is some construction of the evidence from which could be drawn a reasonable inference that the defendant assaulted the victim in self-defense. State v. Lewis, 27 N.C. App. 426, 219 S.E.2d 554 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 799 (1976).

Same — Instruction Not Required Where Evidence Insufficient. — If the evidence is insufficient to evoke the doctrine of self-defense in a prosecution for first-degree murder, the trial judge is not required to give instructions on that defense even when specifically requested. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

In a prosecution for first-degree murder, evidence of powder burns on defendant's hands, which at most permitted an inference that defendant struggled for possession of the murder weapon before the fatal shots were fired, was insufficient to require an instruction to the jury on self-defense. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Same — Form of Instruction. — The proper charge to the jury on the verdict of not guilty by reason of self-defense is: If, however, although you are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did intentionally kill deceased and thereby proximately caused his death, if you are further satisfied, not beyond a reasonable doubt, but are satisfied that at the time of the shooting the defendant did have reasonable grounds to believe and did believe that he was about to suffer death or serious bodily harm at the hands of deceased, and under those circumstances he used only such force as reasonably appeared necessary, you the jury being the judge of such reasonableness, and you also are satisfied that the defendant was not the aggressor, then he would be justified by reason of self-defense, and it would be your duty to return a verdict of not guilty. State v. Dooley, 285 N.C. 158, 203 S.E.2d 815 (1974).

Same — Incorrect Instruction. — Where, after briefly and correctly charging as to first-degree murder and second-degree murder, the court stated that "in order to reduce the crime to manslaughter, the defendant must prove, not beyond a reasonable doubt, but simply to your satisfaction that he acted in self-defense," there is obvious and prejudicial error since proof of self-defense would acquit the defendant not reduce the charge. State v. Carver, 286 N.C. 179, 209 S.E.2d 785 (1974).

Where the jury could have logically deduced from the charge of self-defense that defendant was under a duty to retreat in his own home if the assault upon him was not murderous, defendant deserved a new trial due to error in the charge. State v. Boswell, 24 N.C. App. 94, 210 S.E.2d 129 (1974).

The court correctly refused to give an instruction on self-defense which omitted the requirement that before one may kill in self-defense he must have reasonable grounds to believe that it is necessary to kill to protect himself from death or great bodily harm. State v. Bock, 288 N.C. 145, 217 S.E.2d 513 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3208, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

H. Verdict.

Determination of Degree of Murder. — Under this section, distinguishing murder into two degrees, the jury, on conviction, must determine in their verdict whether the crime is murder in the first or second degree. State v. Gadberry, 117 N.C. 811, 23 S.E. 477 (1895); State v. Truesdale, 125 N.C. 696, 34 S.E. 646 (1899).

First-Degree Murder Generally. — For a conviction of murder in the first degree under this section and § 15-172, the jury must find specifically under the evidence that this degree of crime has been committed by the defendant, and the verdict must be received in open court in the presence of the presiding judge under constitutional mandate, N.C. Const., Art. I, §§ 13, 17, which right may not be waived. State v. Bazemore, 193 N.C. 336, 137 S.E. 172 (1927).

Verdict of Second-Degree Murder in Prosecution for First-Degree Murder. — In a case of first-degree murder, committed after premeditation and deliberation, a verdict of second-degree murder is permissible if the jury should fail to find premeditation and deliberation. State v. Hill, 276 N.C. 1, 170 S.E.2d 885 (1969), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 2287, 91 S. Ct. 2287, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971).

Verdict of Armed Robbery in Prosecution for First-Degree Murder. — Where the jury returned a verdict of guilty as to the charge of armed robbery, the trial judge did not enter judgment as to that charge and properly so since it conclusively appears that the armed robbery charge was proved as an essential element in the capital offense of murder in the first degree. The armed robbery charge, therefore, became a part of and was merged into the murder charge. State v. Williams, 290 N.C. 770, 228 S.E.2d 241 (1976).

I. Appeal.

Failure to Assign Error Precludes Review. — Where the defendant in a murder prosecution did not assign as error on direct appeal the failure of the trial judge in his instructions to place the burden of proving the absence of heat of passion or the absence of self-defense on the State, he waived his right to complain about such errors in post-conviction review. State v. Watson, 37 N.C. App. 399, 246 S.E.2d 25, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 652, 257 S.E.2d 434 (1978).

Where the defendant in a prosecution for second-degree murder failed to raise at trial, on direct appeal or in a subsequent petition for post-conviction relief, the question of the trial judge's alleged error in instructing the jury that the burden was on the defendant to disprove malice to reduce the killing to voluntary manslaughter and to prove that he killed in self-defense, the defendant could not seek collateral review of the alleged error. State v. Locklear, 39 N.C. App. 671, 251 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 739, 254 S.E.2d 180 (1979) (decided under former Rule 28, Rules of Practice in the Court of Appeals of North Carolina).

Same — Error in Allowing New Trial. — In a prosecution for murder the trial court erred in allowing the defendant a new trial on the basis that the retroactivity of the Mullaney rule, see Hankerson v. North Carolina, 432 U.S. 233, 97 S. Ct. 2339, 53 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1977), was applicable in this case in which the defendant appellant did not object or assign as error on appeal the instructions of the trial court to the jury requiring the defendant to prove the absence of malice or that he acted in self-defense in order to reduce the alleged crime of murder in the second degree to voluntary manslaughter. State v. Watson, 37 N.C. App. 399, 246 S.E.2d 25, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 652, 257 S.E.2d 434 (1978).

Finding as to Mental Capacity Conclusive on Appeal. — Where the jury, by its verdict, has established that the defendant, at the time of the alleged offenses, had the mental capacity to know right from wrong with reference to these acts, that finding, supported as it is by ample evidence, is conclusive on appeal. State v. Shepherd, 288 N.C. 346, 218 S.E.2d 176 (1975).

J. Miscellaneous.

Consolidation for Trial. — In a prosecution of defendant for armed robbery and murder, the trial court did not err in consolidating defendant's case for trial with that of a codefendant since defendants were charged in separate indictments for the same crimes; they were tried upon the theory that the murder with which they were charged was committed in connection with a robbery committed by them jointly; their defenses were not antagonistic; and neither attempted to incriminate the other in the presentation of an alibi. State v. Smith, 301 N.C. 695, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Motion for Mistrial Properly Denied. — In a prosecution of defendant for armed robbery and murder, trial court did not commit prejudicial error in denying defendant's motion for a mistrial after striking the testimony of several witnesses concerning the absence of fingerprints of defendant at the murder scene and the absence of gunpowder on the hands of bystanders after the robbery-murder, since the trial court, after the motions to strike were allowed, instructed the jury not to consider the striken evidence and specifically referred to the evidence and the witness who provided it, since there was no way in which defendant would have been prejudiced by the evidence had it not been withdrawn from the jury's consideration, and since defendant's motion for mistrial was a matter addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and no abuse of that discretion appeared. State v. Smith, 301 N.C. 695, — S.E.2d — (1981).

The common-law crime of suicide is hereby abolished as an offense. (1973, c. 1205.)

§ 14-18. Punishment for manslaughter.

Voluntary manslaughter shall be punishable as a Class F felony, and involuntary manslaughter shall be punishable as a Class H felony. (4 Hen. VII, s. 13; 1816, c. 918, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 24; 1879, c. 255; Code, s. 1055; Rev., s. 3632; C. S., s. 4201; 1933, c. 249; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote this section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Burden of Proof. — When the State undertakes a prosecution for unlawful homicide, it assumes the burden of producing evidence sufficient to prove that the deceased died as the result of a criminal act committed by the defendant. State v. Jones, 15 N.C. App. 537, 190 S.E.2d 278 (1972).

In a prosecution for manslaughter, the state must produce evidence sufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that the death proximately resulted from defendants' unlawful acts. State v. Cummings, 46 N.C. App. 680, 265 S.E.2d 923 (1980).

The act complained of does not have to be the sole proximate cause of the death, nor the last act in sequence of time. There may be more than one proximate cause of the death in question. It is enough if defendants' unlawful acts join and concur with other causes in producing the result. State v. Cummings, 46 N.C. App. 680, 265 S.E.2d 923 (1980).

The act of the accused need not be the immediate cause of death; he is legally accountable if the direct cause is the natural result of the criminal act. State v. Cummings, 301 N.C. 374, 271 S.E.2d 277 (1980).

Applied in State v. Phillips, 262 N.C. 723, 138 S.E.2d 626 (1964); State v. Matthews, 263 N.C. 95, 138 S.E.2d 819 (1964); State v. Shaw, 263 N.C. 99, 138 S.E.2d 772 (1964); State v. Howard, 272 N.C. 144, 157 S.E.2d 665 (1967); State v. Meadows, 272 N.C. 327, 158 S.E.2d 638 (1968); State v. Brown, 282 N.C. 117, 191 S.E.2d 659 (1972); State v. Wallace, 16 N.C. II. MANSLAUGHTER.

A. In General.

Definitions. — Manslaughter is the unlawful killing of a human being without malice and without premeditation and deliberation. State v. Kea, 256 N.C. 492, 124 S.E.2d 174 (1962); State v. Benge, 272 N.C. 261, 158 S.E.2d 70 (1967); State v. Bunn, 283 N.C. 444, 196 S.E.2d 777 (1973); State v. Spencer, 27 N.C. App. 301, 219 S.E.2d 231 (1975); State v. Cousins, 289 N.C. 540, 223 S.E.2d 338 (1976); State v. Jones, 291 N.C. 681, 231 S.E.2d 252 (1977); State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977); State v. Alston, 295 N.C. 629, 247 S.E.2d 898 (1978).

Manslaughter is defined as the unlawful killing of a human being without malice, express or implied, without premeditation and deliberation, and without the intention to kill or to inflict serious bodily injury. State v. Roseboro, 276 N.C. 185, 171 S.E.2d 886 (1970), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2289, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1971); State v. Richardson, 14 N.C. App. 86, 187 S.E.2d 435 (1972), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 258, 200 S.E.2d 658 (1973).

Involuntary homicide is also "manslaughter." United Servs. Auto. Ass'n v. Wharton, 237 F. Supp. 255 (W.D.N.C. 1965).

Voluntary manslaughter is the intentional killing of a person without malice, while involuntary manslaughter is the unintentional killing of a person without malice. Stout v. Grain Dealers Mut. Ins. Co., 307 F.2d 521 (4th Cir. 1962); State v. Fox, 18 N.C. App. 523, 197 S.E.2d 265, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 755, 198 S.E.2d 725 (1973).

Manslaughter is a lesser included offense of murder in the second degree. State v. Holcomb, 295 N.C. 608, 247 S.E.2d 888 (1978).

Malice is not a necessary element of voluntary manslaughter. Reeves v. Reed, 452 F. Supp. 783 (W.D.N.C. 1978), rev'd on other grounds, 596 F.2d 628 (4th Cir. 1979).

The difference between second-degree murder and manslaughter is that malice, express or implied, is present in the former and not in the latter. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

Proximate cause is an element of second-degree murder and manslaughter. State v. Sherrill, 28 N.C. App. 311, 220 S.E.2d 822 (1976).

B. Voluntary.

Definitions. — Voluntary manslaughter is the unlawful killing of a human being without malice, premeditation or deliberation. State v. Rummage, 280 N.C. 51, 185 S.E.2d 221 (1971); State v. Davis, 15 N.C. App. 395, 190 S.E.2d 434 (1972); State v. Cannady, 16 N.C. App. 569, 192 S.E.2d 677 (1972); State v. Fox, 18 N.C. App. 523, 197 S.E.2d 265, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 755, 198 S.E.2d 725 (1973); State v. Christopher, 29 N.C. App. 231, 223 S.E.2d 835 (1976); State v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977); State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Holcomb, 295 N.C. 608, 247 S.E.2d 888 (1978).

Voluntary manslaughter is the unlawful killing of a person without malice and without premeditation. State v. Foust, 32 N.C. App. 301, 232 S.E.2d 276 (1977); State v. King, 49 N.C. App. 499, 272 S.E.2d 26 (1980).

Generally voluntary manslaughter occurs when one kills intentionally but does so in the heat of passion suddenly aroused by adequate provocation or in the exercise of self-defense where excessive force under the circumstances is employed or where the defendant is the aggressor bringing on the affray. Although a killing under these circumstances is both unlawful and intentional, the circumstances themselves are said to displace malice and to reduce the offense from murder to manslaughter. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Ferrell, 300 N.C. 157, 265 S.E.2d 210 (1980); State v. Lindsay, 45 N.C. App. 514, 263 S.E.2d 364 (1980).

Voluntary manslaughter is the intentional unlawful killing of a human being without malice, either express or implied, and without deliberation or premeditation. Gardner v. Forister, 468 F. Supp. 761 (W.D.N.C. 1979); State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 731, 268 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

C. Involuntary.

Definitions. — Involuntary manslaughter is the unlawful killing of a human being, unintentionally and without malice, proximately resulting from the commission of an unlawful act not amounting to a felony, or resulting from some act done in an unlawful or culpably negligent manner, when fatal consequences were not improbable under all the facts existent at the time, or resulting from the culpably negligent omission to perform a legal duty. State v. Lawson, 6 N.C. App. 1, 169 S.E.2d 265 (1969); State v. Holshouser, 15 N.C. App. 469, 190 S.E.2d 420 (1972); State v. Robinson, 15 N.C. App. 542, 190 S.E.2d 427 (1972).

Involuntary manslaughter has been defined to be, "Where death results unintentionally, so far as the defendant is concerned, from an unlawful act on his part not amounting to a felony, or from a lawful act negligently done." State v. Stimpson, 279 N.C. 716, 185 S.E.2d 168 (1971).

Involuntary manslaughter is the unintentional killing of a human being without malice, premeditation or deliberation, which results from the performance of an unlawful act not amounting to a felony, or not naturally dangerous to human life; or from the performance of a lawful act in a culpably negligent way; or from the culpable omission to perform some legal duty. State v. Rummage, 280 N.C. 51, 185 S.E.2d 221 (1971); State v. Cates, 293 N.C. 462, 238 S.E.2d 465 (1977).

Involuntary manslaughter is the unlawful killing of a human being without malice, without premeditation and deliberation, and without intention to kill or inflict serious bodily injury. State v. Davis, 15 N.C. App. 395, 190 S.E.2d 434 (1972); State v. Cannady, 16 N.C. App. 569, 192 S.E.2d 677 (1972); State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977); State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Haith, 48 N.C. App. 319,

Involuntary manslaughter is the unintentional killing of a human being without either express or implied malice by some unlawful act not amounting to a felony or naturally dangerous to human life, or by an act or omission constituting culpable negligence. State v. Ward, 286 N.C. 304, 210 S.E.2d 407 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1207 (1976); State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Oxendine, 300 N.C. 720, 268 S.E.2d 212 (1980); State v. Lindsay, 45 N.C. App. 514, 263 S.E.2d 364 (1980).

Involuntary manslaughter is the unlawful killing of a human being unintentionally and without malice but proximately resulting from the commission of an unlawful act not amounting to a felony, or some act done in an unlawful or culpably negligent manner. Culpable negligence under the criminal law is such recklessness or carelessness, resulting in injury or death, as imports a thoughtless disregard of consequences or a heedless indifference to the safety and rights of others. State v. Newcomb, 26 N.C. App. 595, 216 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 249, 217 S.E.2d 680 (1975).

Involuntary manslaughter is the unintentional killing of a human being without malice, proximately caused by (1) an unlawful act not amounting to a felony or naturally dangerous to human life, or (2) culpably negligent act or omission. State v. Redfern, 291 N.C. 319, 230 S.E.2d 152 (1976); State v. Waite, 32 N.C. App. 279, 232 S.E.2d 278 (1977).

Involuntary manslaughter is the unlawful and unintentional killing of another human being without malice and which proximately results from the commission of an unlawful act not amounting to a felony or not naturally dangerous to human life, or from the commission of some act done in an unlawful or culpably negligent manner, or from the culpable omission to perform some legal duty. State v. Everhart, 291 N.C. 700, 231 S.E.2d 604 (1977).

Homicide Must Have Been Unintentional and Without Malice. — To constitute involuntary manslaughter, the homicide must have been without intention to kill or inflict serious bodily injury, and without either express or implied malice. State v. Foust, 258 N.C. 453, 128 S.E.2d 889 (1963).

To warrant a conviction of involuntary manslaughter, the State must establish that the acts of the defendants were a proximate cause of the death. State v. Cummings, 301 N.C. 374, 271 S.E.2d 277 (1980).

Unintentional Killing by Intentional Act. — While involuntary manslaughter imports an unintentional killing, i.e., the absence of a specific intent to kill, it is accomplished by means of some intentional act. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

An intentional violation of some statute designed for the protection of people which proximately though unintentionally causes death can support a conviction of involuntary manslaughter. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

A mere assault which proximately results in death, but which does not indicate a total disregard for human life and is committed with no intent to kill or to inflict serious bodily injury, will support, at most, a verdict of involuntary manslaughter. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

The jury is required to find that defendant committed either an unlawful or a culpably negligent act before it can convict him of involuntary manslaughter. State v. Walker, 31 N.C. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 772 (1976).

Punishment for involuntary manslaughter may be by fine or imprisonment or both in the discretion of the court. The imprisonment, however, may not exceed ten years. State v. Swinney, 271 N.C. 130, 155 S.E.2d 545 (1967).

Defendant's contention that involuntary manslaughter was a misdemeanor for which punishment could not exceed two years was not sustained in State v. Swinney, 271 N.C. 130, 155 S.E.2d 545 (1967); State v. Efird, 271 N.C. 730, 157 S.E.2d 538 (1967).

III. HEAT OF PASSION.

Heat of Passion Defined. — See State v. Pope, 24 N.C. App. 217, 210 S.E.2d 267 (1974), cert. denied, 286 N.C. 419, 211 S.E.2d 799 (1975).

Heat of passion is defined as rage, anger, hatred or furious resentment rendering the mind incapable of cool reflection. State v. Spicer, 50 N.C. App. 214, 273 S.E.2d 521 (1981).

A killing is without malice if the one who kills acted while under the influence of passion or in the heat of blood produced by adequate provocation. State v. Spicer, 50 N.C. App. 214, 273 S.E.2d 521 (1981).

When one spouse kills the other in a heat of passion engendered by the discovery of the deceased and a paramour in the very act of intercourse, or under circumstances clearly indicating that the act had just been completed, or was "severely proximate," and the killing follows immediately, it is manslaughter. State v. Ward, 286 N.C. 304, 210 S.E.2d 407 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1207 (1976).

IV. RECKLESS USE OF FIREARMS.

Deaths Caused by Wanton or Reckless Use of Firearms. — With few exceptions, it may be said that every unintentional killing of a human being proximately caused by a wanton or reckless use of firearms, in the absence of intent to discharge the weapon or in the belief that it is not loaded, and under circumstances not evidencing a heart devoid of a sense of social duty is involuntary manslaughter. State v. Foust, 258 N.C. 453, 128 S.E.2d 889 (1963); State v. Davis, 15 N.C. App. 395, 190 S.E.2d 434 (1972); State v. Adcock, 24 N.C. App. 102, 210 S.E.2d 127 (1974), cert. denied, 286 N.C. 416, 211 S.E.2d 796 (1975); State v. Redfern, 291 N.C. 319, 230 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

One who handles a firearm in a reckless or wanton manner and thereby unintentionally causes the death of another is guilty of involuntary manslaughter. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 198, 166 S.E.2d 652 (1969); State v. Putnam, 24 N.C. App. 570, 211 S.E.2d 493 (1975).

Ordinarily an unintentional homicide resulting from the reckless use of firearms "in the absence of intent to discharge the weapon, or in the belief that it is not loaded, and under the circumstances not evidencing a heart devoid of a sense of social duty, is involuntary manslaughter." When the circumstances do show a heart devoid of a sense of social duty, the homicide cannot be involuntary manslaughter. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Oxendine, 300 N.C. 720, 268 S.E.2d 212 (1980).

At common law and under this section one who points a loaded gun at another, though without intention of discharging it, if the gun goes off accidentally and kills, commits manslaughter. State v. Stimpson, 279 N.C. 716, 185 S.E.2d 168 (1971).

Facts Supporting Charge Concerning Negligent Handling of Gun. — The showing that defendant was seated at a table, deceased was standing near him, defendant pulled the gun from his pocket after which it fired with the bullet striking deceased in the forehead, would certainly be some evidence that defendant intentionally pointed the gun at the deceased even though it may have fired accidentally. There were sufficient facts presented to support the charge concerning whether defendant handled the gun in a criminally negligent manner. State v. Jones, 15 N.C. App. 537, 190 S.E.2d 278 (1972).

V. CULPABLE NEGLIGENCE.

Culpable Negligence Defined. — Culpable negligence in the law of involuntary manslaughter is something more than actionable negligence in the law of torts, and is such recklessness or carelessness, proximately resulting in injury or death, as is incompatible with a proper regard for the safety or rights of others. State v. Gainey, 29 N.C. App. 653, 225 S.E.2d 843 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 627, 234 S.E.2d 610 (1977).

In a prosecution for involuntary manslaughter, the violation of a safety statute regulating the use of highways does not constitute culpable negligence unless such violation is intentional, willful or wanton, or unless the violation, though unintentional, is accompanied by recklessness or is under circumstances from which death or injury to others might have been reasonably anticipated. State v. Gainey, 29 N.C. App. 653, 225 S.E.2d 843 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 627, 234 S.E.2d 610 (1977).

Culpable negligence in the criminal law requires more than the negligence necessary to sustain a recovery in tort. Rather, for negligence to constitute the basis for the imposition of criminal sanctions, it must be such reckless or careless behaviour that the act imports a thoughtless disregard of the consequences of the act or the act shows a heedless indifference to the rights and safety of others. There must be negligence of a gross and flagrant character, evincing reckless disregard of human life. State v. Everhart, 291 N.C. 700, 231 S.E.2d 604 (1977); State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

An intentional, willful or wanton violation of a statute or ordinance, designed for the protection of human life or limb, which proximately results in injury or death, is culpable negligence. State v. Stewardson, 32 N.C. App. 344, 232 S.E.2d 308, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 643, 235 S.E.2d 64 (1977); State v. Jones, 32 N.C. App. 408, 232 S.E.2d 475, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 643, 235 S.E.2d 63 (1977); State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 599, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

Deaths Resulting from Culpable Negligence. — Culpable negligence, from which death proximately ensues, makes the actor guilty of manslaughter, and under some circumstances, guilty of murder. State v. Colson, 262 N.C. 506, 138 S.E.2d 121 (1964).

Both involuntary manslaughter and second-degree murder can involve an act of "culpable negligence" that proximately causes death. Culpable negligence, standing alone, will support at most involuntary manslaughter. When, however, an act of culpable negligence also imports danger to another and is done so recklessly or wantonly as to manifest depravity of mind and disregard of human life, it will support a conviction for second-degree murder. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

Since the distinction between manslaughter and murder in the second degree is malice, culpable negligence will not support a murder charge unless there are sufficient facts to support a finding of malice. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

Evidence tending to show that the deceased said, "Don't shoot me," standing alone, was not sufficent to raise an inference that the defendant intentionally pointed the weapon at her, or that he handled it in such a careless and reckless manner as to amount to culpable negligence. State v. Holshouser, 15 N.C. App. 469, 190 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

VI. SELF-DEFENSE.

Killing in Self-Defense May Be Voluntary Manslaughter. — Under given circumstances a person may be justified in intentionally killing when he acts in self-defense, yet such person may be guilty of voluntary manslaughter when an intentional killing results from excessive use of force while he is acting in self-defense. State v. Rummage, 280 N.C. 51, 185 S.E.2d 221 (1971).

When excessive force or unnecessary violence is used in self-defense, the killing of the adversary is manslaughter at least. State v. Locklear, 25 N.C. App. 74, 212 S.E.2d 404 (1975).

If the defendant in killing the deceased was acting in self-defense but used more force than was necessary or reasonably appeared necessary under the circumstances, he is guilty of voluntary manslaughter. State v. Burden, 36 N.C. App. 332, 244 S.E.2d 204, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 468, 246 S.E.2d 216 (1978).

Charge of Self-Defense Not Erroneous. — See State v. Pearson, 24 N.C. App. 410, 210 S.E.2d 887, aff'd, 288 N.C. 34, 215 S.E.2d 598 (1975).

Trial court's charge that a person may not ordinarily claim self-defense when he has used deadly force to quell an assault, standing alone, unduly restricted defendant's plea of self-defense. However, any error committed was completely removed by the subsequent instruction detailing what defendant had to show to excuse his act on the ground of self-defense. State v. Pearson, 24 N.C. App. 410, 210 S.E.2d 887, aff'd, 288 N.C. 34, 215 S.E.2d 598 (1975).

Instruction sufficient to apprise jury that defendant did not have the burden of proving self-defense. State v. Sprinkle, 30 N.C. App. 383, 226 S.E.2d 827 (1976).

Punishment Following Plea of Nolo Contendere. — Notwithstanding evidence that defendant shot in self-defense, a plea of nolo contendere permitted the court to impose a sentence of not more than ten years for involuntary manslaughter. State v. Swinney, 271 N.C. 130, 155 S.E.2d 545 (1967).

VII. INSTRUCTIONS TO JURY.

Charge as to Lesser Degrees of Same Crime. — While under the provisions of § 15-170 the trial judge was required to charge upon evidence on the lesser degrees of the same crime for which the prisoner was being tried, it was not required that he charge upon the principles of an assault with a deadly weapon, where the prisoner was charged with murder, and the killing of the deceased by him had been admitted, and the judge had correctly charged upon the crime of manslaughter, the lowest degree of an unlawful killing of a human being. State v. Lutterloh, 188 N.C. 412, 124 S.E. 752 (1924).

Failure to Instruct as to Causal Connection Between Defendant's Act and Death. — Trial judge's failure to instruct jury that a verdict of guilty of manslaughter required proof beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant's act proximately caused the death charged was error, despite plenary evidence upon which the jury could find death was the proximate result of defendant's act. State v. Fowler, 285 N.C. 90, 203 S.E.2d 803 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976).

Failure to Instruct on Involuntary Manslaughter. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder in which the defendant was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter, the trial judge erred in failing to instruct the jury on involuntary manslaughter where the defendant's testimony was, in its entirety, an account of an unintentional killing. State v. Graham, 38 N.C. App. 86, 247 S.E.2d 300 (1978).

Evidence Requiring Instruction on Proximate Cause. — In a prosecution of a motorist for manslaughter in the deaths of two small boys who were struck by defendant's car as defendant was attempting to pass another vehicle traveling in the same direction, evidence that the children were walking on the hard surface when they were struck and that the preceding car speeded up as defendant attempted to pass it, required the court to instruct the jury upon the conduct of the children in walking on the hard surface and the conduct of the other driver in increasing his speed, as bearing upon the question of whether defendant's negligence was a proximate cause of the deaths. State v. Harrington, 260 N.C. 663, 133 S.E.2d 452 (1963).

Issue of Manslaughter Properly Submitted to Jury. — There was no error in submitting to the jury an issue as to defendant's guilt of manslaughter where the evidence would support a finding that defendant unlawfully killed, but without express or implied malice, or that he acted in self-defense but used excessive force, because either finding would warrant a verdict of manslaughter. State v. Goins, 24 N.C. App. 468, 211 S.E.2d 481, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 262, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975).

Evidence Sufficient to Go to Jury. — Where there was no real evidence of malice, but the jury could reasonably find from the evidence that deceased's death had to be ascribed to the defendant's unlawful and culpably negligent conduct, which it could reasonably have been foreseen was likely to result in serious injury, the evidence was sufficient to go to the jury on a charge of involuntary manslaughter. State v. Trueblood, 39 N.C. App. 459, 250 S.E.2d 666 (1979).

Instruction on Manslaughter Held Proper. — Where the trial court instructed that defendant would be guilty of manslaughter if "he intentionally and unlawfully stabbed and killed" the victim, any possibility of prejudice in the defective charge was removed where prior to giving the above instruction, the court properly defined manslaughter as "the unlawful killing of a human being without malice, express or implied, and without deliberation or premeditation," and when the jury later requested repeated instructions on the offenses charged, the court again gave a proper definition of manslaughter. State v. Edwards, 24 N.C. App. 303, 210 S.E.2d 273 (1974).

Definitions of second-degree murder and voluntary manslaughter in the instructions to the jury in a prosecution for second-degree murder were not prejudicially deficient in that they did not require that the killings be intentional since specific intent to kill, while a necessary constituent of the elements of premeditation and deliberation in first-degree murder, is not an element of second-degree murder or manslaughter. State v. Alston, 295 N.C. 629, 247 S.E.2d 898 (1978).

A proper charge on the issue of voluntary manslaughter is required when the evidence would support a finding either (a) that the defendant acted properly in self-defense except for the use of excessive force in repelling the assailant, or (b) that the defendant killed while in the heat of passion brought on by adequate provocation, amounting to an assault or threatened assault, not originating with the defendant. Gardner v. Forister, 468 F. Supp. 761 (W.D.N.C. 1979).

Instruction on Voluntary Manslaughter Held Improper. — Voluntary manslaughter is the intentional unlawful killing of a human being, and therefore an instruction incorporating culpable negligence as an alternative finding is improper, since it does not require intent as a necessary element. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Lack, 476 F.2d 583 (4th Cir. 1973).

In a prosecution for second-degree murder involving the death of a child from the so-called "battered child" syndrome, where there was a great disparity in age and size between the victim and her slayer, and particularly where the slayer stood in loco parentis with the child, as a matter of law adequate provocation could not be found to exist so as to justify submission of voluntary manslaughter where the evidence showed that the defendant beat and abused a child unto its death. State v. Vega, 40 N.C. App. 326, 253 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 457, 256 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 968, 100 S. Ct. 459, 62 L.Ed.2d 382 (1979).

Instruction on Involuntary Manslaughter Held Proper. — The trial judge, in a prosecution for second-degree murder, properly instructed the jury as to involuntary manslaughter where, in stating that if defendant while caring for his child "intentionally inflicted injury upon that child ... under the age of sixteen years, and if his death directly resulted ... defendant ... would be guilty of involuntary manslaughter," he was referring to an intentional violation of § 14-318.2. State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978).

Evidence was insufficient to be submitted to the jury on charges of second-degree murder and voluntary manslaughter but was sufficient to be submitted on the charge of involuntary manslaughter, where the evidence tended to show that defendant, a 16 year old boy, shot his 10 year old sister, but in showing the events leading up to and preceding the death of the sister, the State relied entirely on voluntary statements of defendant to the effect that he and his sister were fussing; defendant was "messing aroung with a shotgun"; and the gun accidentally went off. State v. Wagner, 50 N.C. App. 286, 273 S.E.2d 33 (1981).

Charge of Involuntary Manslaughter Held Error. — If there is evidence of self-defense and no evidence of involuntary manslaughter, it is prejudicial error to submit a charge of involuntary manslaughter in a trial for second-degree murder. State v. Brooks, 46 N.C. App. 833, 266 S.E.2d 3 (1980).

Evidence did not justify a charge on involuntary manslaughter where defendant intentionally discharged the gun under circumstances naturally dangerous to human life. State v. Ward, 286 N.C. 304, 210 S.E.2d 407 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1207 (1976).

VIII. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

A plea of guilty or nolo contendere to automobile manslaughter does not establish intentional homicide. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n v. Wharton, 237 F. Supp. 255 (W.D.N.C. 1965).

Evidence Sufficient to Sustain Conviction. — Evidence that defendant was handling gun in a culpably negligent manner at the time it fired and killed another was sufficient to support a conviction of involuntary manslaughter. State v. Brooks, 260 N.C. 186, 132 S.E.2d 354 (1963).

Evidence that a nephew badly beat his uncle with a stove-lid lifter and, at the instance of a third person, desisted and left, that the uncle stated that if the nephew came back he was going to shoot him, and that when the nephew returned the uncle shot the unarmed nephew as the nephew stepped in the door, inflicting fatal injury, was sufficient to sustain conviction of manslaughter. State v. Dunlap, 268 N.C. 301, 150 S.E.2d 436 (1966).

Although there was a conflicting version of the shooting from defense witnesses, the State's evidence was clearly sufficient to sustain a verdict of voluntary manslaughter. State v. Carver, 22 N.C. App. 674, 207 S.E.2d 299, rev'd on other grounds, 286 N.C. 179, 209 S.E.2d 785 (1974).

In a prosecution for manslaughter, evidence was sufficient to show that the assault by defendants was a proximate cause of the victim's death where the victim was knocked to the sidewalk on his back and, because of his intoxicated condition, was unable to expel vomitus from his mouth and died as a result of aspiration of vomitus. State v. Cummings, 46 N.C. App. 680, 265 S.E.2d 923 (1980).

Insufficient Evidence to Sustain Verdict of Manslaughter. — See State v. Harrington, 22 N.C. App. 473, 206 S.E.2d 768, aff'd, 286 N.C. 327, 210 S.E.2d 424 (1974).

Evidence would not support a verdict of voluntary manslaughter where the killing did not result from the use of excessive force in the exercise of the right of self-defense, nor was it the result of anger suddenly aroused by provocation which the law deems adequate to dethrone reason temporarily and to displace malice. State v. Ward, 286 N.C. 304, 210 S.E.2d 407 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1207 (1976).

Insufficient Evidence of Sudden Provocation. — In a prosecution for murder while there was evidence that defendants' mother may have been assaulted, there was no evidence whatsoever as to who may have assaulted her and, furthermore, the evidence was clear that the events giving rise to defendants' mother's wounds were considerably removed in time from the events surrounding the death of the victim; therefore, accepting, arguendo, that an assault or threatened assault on a close relative may provide adequate or legal provocation to arouse heat of passion, the evidence did not show anger suddenly aroused by provocation which the law deems adequate to dethrone reason temporarily and to displace malice. State v. Spicer, 50 N.C. App. 214, 273 S.E.2d 521 (1981).

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

If any person fight a duel in consequence of a challenge sent or received, and either of the parties shall be killed, then the survivor, on conviction thereof, shall be punished as a Class C felon. All their aiders and abettors shall be considered accessories before the fact.

Any person charged with killing an adversary in a duel may enter a plea of guilty to said charge in the same way and manner and under the conditions and restrictions set forth in G.S. 15-162.1 relating to pleas of guilty for first degree murder, first degree burglary, arson and rape. (1802, c. 608, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 3; Code, s. 1013; Rev., s. 3629; C. S., s. 4203; 1955, c. 1198; 1965, c. 649; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "as a Class C felon" for "by imprisonment for life in the State's prison" at the end of the first sentence of the first paragraph. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Section 15-162.1, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 1225. See now §§ 15A-1021 to 15A-1027.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 682, ss. 13 and 14, provide: "Sec. 13. All laws and clauses of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed, provided however, nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal any portion of Article 26 of Chapter 14 which relates to offenses against public morality and decency.

"Sec. 14. This act shall become effective January 1, 1980, and shall apply to offenses occurring on and after that date. Nothing herein shall be construed to render lawful acts committed prior to the effective date of this act [January 1, 1980] and unlawful at the time the said acts occurred; and nothing contained herein shall be construed to affect any prosecution instituted under any section repealed by this act pending on the effective date hereof."

Article 7A.

Rape and Other Sex Offenses.

§ 14-27.1. Definitions.

As used in this Article, unless the context requires otherwise:

(1) "Mentally defective" means (i) a victim who suffers from mental retardation, or (ii) a victim who suffers from a mental disorder, either of which temporarily or permanently renders the victim substantially incapable of appraising the nature of his or her conduct, or of resisting the act of vaginal intercourse or a sexual act, or of communicating unwillingness to submit to the act of vaginal intercourse or a sexual act.

(2) "Mentally incapacitated" means a victim who due to any act committed upon the victim is rendered substantially incapable of either appraising the nature of his or her conduct, or resisting the act of vaginal intercourse or a sexual act.

(3) "Physically helpless" means (i) a victim who is unconscious; or (ii) a victim who is physically unable to resist an act of vaginal intercourse or a sexual act or communicate unwillingness to submit to an act of vaginal intercourse or a sexual act.

(4) "Sexual act" means cunnilingus, fellatio, analingus, or anal intercourse, but does not include vaginal intercourse. Sexual act also means the penetration, however slight, by any object into the genital or anal opening of another person's body: provided, that it shall be an affirmative defense that the penetration was for accepted medical purposes. (1979, c. 682, s. 1.)

§ 14-27.2. First-degree rape.

(a) A person is guilty of rape in the first degree if the person engages in vaginal intercourse:

(1) With a victim who is a child of the age of 12 years or less and the defendant is of the age of 12 years or more and is four or more years older than the victim; or

(2) With another person by force and against the will of the other person, and:

a. Employs or displays a dangerous or deadly weapon or an article which the other person reasonably believes to be a dangerous or deadly weapon; or

b. Inflicts serious personal injury upon the victim or another person; or

c. The person commits the offense aided and abetted by one or more other persons.

As to office of coordinator of services for victims of sexual assault, see §§ 143B-394.1 through 143B-394.3.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class B felony" for "felony and upon conviction shall be imprisoned in the State's prison for life" in subsection (b). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

The 1981 amendment designated former subdivision (2) of subsection (a) as subdivision (1) and former subdivision (1) of subsection (a) as subdivision (2), and in present subdivision (1) of subsection (a) inserted "is of the age of 12 years or more and." In subsection (b), the amendment substituted "an offense" for "the offense."

Editor's Note. — Many of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 14-21.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality of Former § 14-21. — See State v. Wilson, 296 N.C. 298, 250 S.E.2d 621 (1979).

History of Offense. — See State v. Dick, 6 N.C. 388 (1818); State v. Jesse, 20 N.C. 95 (1838); State v. Johnston, 76 N.C. 209 (1877).

Generally, rape is not a continuous offense, but each act of intercourse constitutes a distinct and separate offense. State v. Small, 31 N.C. App. 556, 230 S.E.2d 425 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 715, 232 S.E.2d 207 (1977).

Applied in State v. Thacker, 301 N.C. 348, 271 S.E.2d 252 (1980).

Cited in State v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 164, 270 S.E.2d 409 (1980).

II. WHO MAY BE GUILTY OF RAPE.

Aiders and Abettors Are Guilty of Rape. — Two or more persons may be guilty of the single crime of rape by being present, aiding and abetting in its commission. State v. Jordan, 110 N.C. 491, 14 S.E. 752 (1892).

One who is present, aiding and abetting, in a rape actually perpetrated by another, is equally guilty with the actual perpetrator of the crime. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967); State v. Martin, 17 N.C. App. 317, 194 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 259, 195 S.E.2d 691 (1973).

One holding the husband of prosecutrix while another is perpetrating the crime of rape is guilty as principal in the offense. State v. Jordan, 110 N.C. 491, 14 S.E. 752 (1892).

Thus, even a woman may be convicted of rape. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967); State v. Martin, 17 N.C. App. 317, 194 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 259, 195 S.E.2d 691 (1973).

A woman, who is physically incapable of committing rape upon another woman, may be convicted of rape where she aids and abets a male assailant in the rape of another woman. State v. Martin, 17 N.C. App. 317, 194 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 259, 195 S.E.2d 691 (1973).

A man and a woman are both guilty of raping a female child where both caused the child to become drunk and the man had intercourse with the child while being held by the woman. State v. Hairston, 121 N.C. 579, 28 S.E. 492 (1897).

And a husband may be guilty of the rape of his wife. (But see § 14-27.8). State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967); State v. Martin, 17 N.C. App. 317, 194 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 259, 195 S.E.2d 691 (1973).

III. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

Elements Where Victim Aged Twelve or Less. — The use of deadly force or infliction of serious bodily injury is not an essential element of the crime of rape of a female under the age of 12 (now 12 years or less). State v. Cobb, 295 N.C. 1, 243 S.E.2d 759 (1978).

Force is conclusively presumed in the case of carnal knowledge of a female under the age of ten (now twelve or less). State v. Dancy, 83 N.C. 608 (1880).

Neither force nor intent is an element of rape of a female child under the age of twelve years (now twelve years or less). State v. Jones, 249 N.C. 134, 105 S.E.2d 513 (1958); State v. Strickland, 254 N.C. 658, 119 S.E.2d 781 (1961); State v. Murry, 277 N.C. 197, 176 S.E.2d 738 (1970).

"By Force". — The force necessary to constitute rape need not be actual physical force. State v. Primes, 275 N.C. 61, 165 S.E.2d 225 (1969).

By "force" does not necessarily mean by actual physical force. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967).

The force necessary to meet the requirement need not be physical force but may take the form of fear, fright or coercion. State v. Roberts, 293 N.C. 1, 235 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

The mere threat of serious bodily harm which reasonably induces fear thereof constitutes the requisite force. State v. Roberts, 293 N.C. 1, 235 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

Fear, fright, or duress, may take the place of force. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967).

Fear, fright, or coercion may take the place of force. State v. Primes, 275 N.C. 61, 165 S.E.2d 225 (1969); State v. Hall, 293 N.C. 559, 238 S.E.2d 473 (1977).

"Serious Personal Injury." — Some guidance to the meaning of the phrase "serious bodily injury" (now "serious personal injury") can be found by reference to cases construing § 14-32 (assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury) and by viewing similar cases from other jurisdictions. State v. Roberts, 293 N.C. 1, 235 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

"Serious bodily injury" (now "serious personal injury") is not the equivalent of "by force and against her will." State v. Roberts, 293 N.C. 1, 235 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

Penetration without Emission of Seed Sufficient. — In rape the least penetration of the person is sufficient, and the emission of seed is unnecessary. State v. Monds, 130 N.C. 697, 41 S.E. 789 (1902).

The slightest penetration of the sexual organ of the female by the sexual organ of the male amounts to carnal knowledge in a legal sense. State v. Sneeden, 274 N.C. 498, 164 S.E.2d 190 (1968).

It shall not be necessary upon the trial of any indictment for the offense of rape to prove the actual emission of seed in order to constitute the offense, but the offense shall be completed upon proof of penetration only. State v. Monds, 130 N.C. 697, 41 S.E. 789 (1902).

IV. DEFENSE OF CONSENT.

Victims Twelve Years Old or Less Incapable of Consent. — Force and will of the victim when the victim is a child under the age of 12 (now 12 or less) have nothing to do with the crime. A child of such age is presumed incapable of consent. State v. Summitt, 45 N.C. App. 481, 263 S.E.2d 612 (1980), aff'd, 301 N.C. 591, 273 S.E.2d 425, cert. denied, — U.S. —, 101 S. Ct. 2048, 68 L. Ed. 2d 349 (1981).

Carnal knowledge of any female child under the age of twelve years (now 12 years or less), regardless of consent, is rape. State v. Crawford, 260 N.C. 548, 133 S.E.2d 232 (1963).

Consent of prosecutrix is no defense in a prosecution for carnal knowledge of a female child under the age of twelve years (now 12 years or less). State v. Temple, 269 N.C. 57, 152 S.E.2d 206 (1967).

Consent is not a defense where one is accused of raping a female child under the age of twelve years (now 12 years or less). State v. Cox, 280 N.C. 689, 187 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

Consent Induced by Fear and Violence Is Void. — Consent of prosecutrix which is induced by fear and violence is void and is no legal consent. State v. Carter, 265 N.C. 626, 144 S.E.2d 826 (1965).

While consent by the female is a complete defense, consent which is induced by fear of violence is void and is no legal consent. State v. Primes, 275 N.C. 61, 165 S.E.2d 225 (1969); State v. Hall, 293 N.C. 559, 238 S.E.2d 473 (1977).

Consent of the woman from fear of personal violence is void. Even though a man lays no hands on a woman, yet if by an array of physical force he so overpowers her mind that she dares not resist, or she ceases resistance through fear of great harm, the consummation of unlawful intercourse by the man is rape. State v. Primes, 275 N.C. 61, 165 S.E.2d 225 (1969); State v. Hall, 293 N.C. 559, 238 S.E.2d 473 (1977).

Although consent is a perfect defense to a charge of rape, there is no legal consent when it is induced by violence or threat of violence. State v. Henderson, 285 N.C. 1, 203 S.E.2d 10 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3202, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976).

Proof of Lack of Consent. — Evidence of physical resistance is not necessary to prove lack of consent in a rape case. State v. Hall, 293 N.C. 559, 238 S.E.2d 473 (1977).

V. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

A. In General.

A verdict of guilty of rape in the first degree necessarily includes the jury's determination that the defendant is guilty of each element of rape in the second degree. State v. Perry, 291 N.C. 586, 231 S.E.2d 262 (1977).

Separate Crimes Arising Out of Same Events. — Defendant's conviction of felonious larceny, armed robbery, burglary, and rape, all of which arose out of the same series of events, did not place defendant in double jeopardy, since the four offenses were legally separate and distinct crimes, no one of which was a lesser included offense of the other; each clearly required the proof of at least one essential element not embodied in any of the other three offenses at issue; and the four felonies where factually distinct and independent crimes in this case. State v. Revelle, 301 N.C. 153, 270 S.E.2d 476 (1980).

Where a burglar, after breaking and entering, proceeds to rape someone inside the dwelling, he can be convicted of both burglary and rape. State v. Brady, 299 N.C. 547, 264 S.E.2d 66 (1980).

B. Indictment.

Allegation of Intent. — Intent is not an element of the offense of raping a female child under the age of twelve years (now 12 years or less), and a motion to quash an indictment therefor on the ground that it failed to allege "intent" is properly denied. State v. Gibson, 221 N.C. 252, 20 S.E.2d 51 (1942).

Allegation of "By Force and Against The Will". — An indictment for rape must use the words "by force" or their equivalent in describing the manner in which the assault was accomplished. State v. Benton, 226 N.C. 745, 40 S.E.2d 617 (1946).

The absence of both "forcibly" and "against her will" in the indictment is fatal, but "forcibly" can be supplied by any equivalent word. It is not supplied by the use of the word "ravish," but is sufficiently charged by the words "feloniously and against her will." State v. Johnson, 226 N.C. 266, 37 S.E.2d 678 (1946).

Separate Indictment Required As to Earlier Incidents. — When a defendant charged with rape admits that he had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix, neither the State nor the defendant is entitled to have the jury consider a lesser included offense on the basis of incidents which might have preceded the sexual intercourse because the bill of indictment charging only rape does not encompass such earlier incidents but is directed only to the sexual intercourse itself; thus, if the State contends defendant committed some other crime, such as assault, prior to the rape itself, it should file a separate indictment or add a count to the rape indictment charging this other crime. State v. Edmondson, 302 N.C. 169, 273 S.E.2d 659 (1981).

Effect of Verdict Where Indictment Insufficient. — Where an indictment is insufficient to charge first-degree rape, but is sufficient to charge second-degree rape, and the evidence is clearly sufficient to support a guilty verdict for that offense, the verdict must be regarded as a verdict of guilty of second-degree rape, and the defendant may not be sentenced for first-degree rape. The case must be remanded for entry of a verdict of guilty of second-degree rape and for a proper judgment on that verdict. State v. Goss, 293 N.C. 147, 235 S.E.2d 844 (1977).

C. Evidence.

1. Admissibility of Evidence Generally.

The unsupported testimony of the prosecutrix in a prosecution for rape is sufficient to require submission of the case to the jury. State v. Bailey, 36 N.C. App. 728, 245 S.E.2d 97 (1978).

Consent Not Shown Where Woman Visits Disreputable Places Unescorted. — Contributory negligence by the victim is no bar to prosecution by the State for the crime of rape. Hence, the fact that a woman goes, without proper escort, to a place where men of low morals might reasonably be expected to congregate does not establish her consent to have sexual relations with them, although it is competent evidence to be considered by the jury on that question. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967).

Opinion Testimony as to Age of Defendant. — Lay witnesses with an adequate opportunity to observe and who have in fact observed may state their opinion regarding the age of a defendant in a criminal case when the fact that he was at the time in question over a certain age is one of the essential elements to be proved by the State. State v. Gray, 292 N.C. 270, 233 S.E.2d 905 (1977).

Evidence of Penetration. — Testimony by the prosecutrix in a rape case that defendant had "sex" and "intercourse" with her was sufficient to support a finding by the jury that there was penetration. State v. Ashford, 301 N.C. 512, 272 S.E.2d 126 (1980).

Sufficiency of Evidence to Show Serious Bodily Injury. — The evidence in a first-degree rape prosecution was sufficient to support a finding that the victim suffered a serious bodily injury where the victim suffered a hard blow to her upper jaw that left her stunned and dazed and knocked five teeth out of alignment, breaking the root of one tooth, where the teeth had to be deadened, forced back into line and secured with a metal brace, and where expert medical testimony predicted that the teeth would die and that root canals or actual extraction would be necessary. State v. Roberts, 293 N.C. 1, 235 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

Testimony of Witnesses to Victim's Physical Condition. — Evidence of independent witnesses as to the physical condition of the prosecutrix on the night the intercourse occurred corroborates her testimony. State v. Tuttle, 28 N.C. App. 198, 220 S.E.2d 630 (1975), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 716, 232 S.E.2d 207 (1977).

Use of Term "Rape" in Testimony. — Victim's use of the term "rape" in her testimony was clearly a convenient shorthand term, amply defined by the balance of her testimony, and did not constitute an opinion on a question of law. State v. Goss, 293 N.C. 147, 235 S.E.2d 844 (1977).

Testimony by the prosecutrix that defendant raped her did not invade the province of the jury since (1) the court sustained an objection to the testimony and (2) the testimony was competent as a shorthand statement of fact. State v. See, 301 N.C. 388, 271 S.E.2d 282 (1980).

Testimony as to Odors and Voices of Assailants. — There was no merit to defendant's contention in a rape case that the trial court erroneously allowed the prosecutrix to identify the defendant by body odor and voice since prosecutrix never identified defendant but simply testified that she knew four men were involved because her assailants had four different body odors and she heard four different voices, and defendant admitted he was present with three other men. State v.

Improper Advances Made Four Years Before. — In a prosecution for rape of a female child under the age of twelve years, testimony of the prosecuting witness that the defendant had made improper advances to her approximately four years prior to the offense charged is competent evidence in corroboration of the offense charged. Gasque v. State, 271 N.C. 323, 156 S.E.2d 740 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1030, 88 S. Ct. 1423, 20 L. Ed. 2d 288 (1968).

Evidence of Discussion of Sexual Matters in Child's Presence. — In a prosecution for the rape of a six-year-old child, evidence that the victim's father had discussed sexual matters in her presence was not competent as bearing upon consent, since consent is no defense, or to impugn the credibility of the victim's testimony, or for any other purpose. State v. Cox, 280 N.C. 689, 187 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

Testimony as to Assault on Others at Time of Rape. — Testimony as to the events that occurred in a home from the time of defendant's violent entry until the consummation of rape was competent and relevant as part of the res gestae, including testimony that persons other than the rape victim had been assaulted by the defendant. State v. Burleson, 280 N.C. 112, 184 S.E.2d 869 (1971).

Garments worn by the victim of a rape and murder showing the location of a wound upon the person of the deceased, or which otherwise corroborate the State's theory of the case, are competent. State v. Atkinson, 278 N.C. 168, 179 S.E.2d 410, death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 292, 29 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1971).

When relevant, articles of clothing identified as worn by the victim at the time the crime was committed are always competent evidence. State v. Atkinson, 278 N.C. 168, 179 S.E.2d 410, death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 292, 29 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1971).

Photographs. — Color photographs depicting the condition of the rape victim's body when examined by the doctor were competent for the purpose of illustrating the doctor's testimony. State v. Atkinson, 278 N.C. 168, 179 S.E.2d 410, death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 292, 29 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1971).

Use of Map Drawn by Defendant. — Where officers testified that defendant drew a map and that they followed it to the scene where defendant had buried the victim's body, that map was admissible to illustrate their testimony. State v. Atkinson, 278 N.C. 168, 179 S.E.2d 410, death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 292, 29 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1971).

Pregnancy as Tending to Show Penetration. — Testimony of the prosecutrix concerning her pregnancy tended to show penetration, one of the elements of rape. Defendant's plea of not guilty placed upon the State the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt all the essential elements of the offense charged. Hence, evidence tending to prove penetration, an essential element of the offense, was properly admitted. State v. Cross, 284 N.C. 174, 200 S.E.2d 27 (1973).

2. Character of Victim.

Character Bears on Question of Consent. — The general character of the prosecutrix in a rape case may be shown as bearing upon the question of consent. State v. Tuttle, 28 N.C. App. 198, 220 S.E.2d 630 (1975), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 716, 232 S.E.2d 207 (1977).

And May Be Shown by Evidence of Reputation. — The most generally permissible method of proving character in a prosecution for rape is by evidence of the witness' reputation. State v. Cole, 20 N.C. App. 137, 201 S.E.2d 100 (1973).

The character of the alleged victim in a rape prosecution may be shown by evidence of her reputation as bearing upon the question of consent. State v. Cole, 20 N.C. App. 137, 201 S.E.2d 100 (1973).

Testimony of Stranger Investigating Reputation. — A stranger who has investigated a person's reputation in the appropriate community may testify to the result of his investigation. State v. Cole, 20 N.C. App. 137, 201 S.E.2d 100 (1973).

Unchastity Bears on Credibility and Consent. — In the case of a prosecuting witness over the age of twelve years the general character of the prosecuting witness for unchastity may be shown for the purpose of attacking the credibility of her testimony, and has bearing upon the likelihood of her consent. State v. Cox, 280 N.C. 689, 187 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

When a defendant has been charged with rape or with assault with intent to commit rape, evidence of the prosecutrix's reputation for unchastity is admissible both to attack her credibility as a witness and to show the likelihood of consent. State v. Banks, 295 N.C. 399, 245 S.E.2d 743 (1978).

In a prosecution for rape, the general character of the prosecutrix for unchastity may be shown both to attack the credibility of her testimony and as bearing upon the likelihood of consent. State v. Grundler, 251 N.C. 177, 111 S.E.2d 1 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 917, 80 S. Ct. 670, 4 L. Ed. 2d 738 (1960).

Testimony of Specific Acts of Unchastity with Person Other Than Defendant. — A witness called by the defendant cannot be asked about specific acts of misconduct by prosecutrix. This witness must confine himself to testimony concerning general reputation for chastity. State v. Tuttle, 28 N.C. App. 199, 220 S.E.2d 630 (1975), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 716, 232 S.E.2d 207 (1977).

The testimony of specific acts of unchastity with someone other than defendant is incompetent evidence in a prosecution for rape or assault with intent to commit rape. State v. Banks, 295 N.C. 399, 245 S.E.2d 743 (1978).

Testimony of specific acts of unchastity with person other than defendant is properly excluded. State v. Grundler, 251 N.C. 177, 111 S.E.2d 1 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 917, 80 S. Ct. 670, 4 L. Ed. 2d 738 (1960).

Specific acts of unchastity with persons other than defendant are inadmissible in rape cases. State v. Tuttle, 28 N.C. App. 198, 220 S.E.2d 630 (1975), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 716, 232 S.E.2d 207 (1977).

The prosecutrix may be cross-examined concerning specific acts of unchastity for the sole purpose of impeaching credibility, but the defendant is bound by her answer. State v. Tuttle, 28 N.C. App. 198, 220 S.E.2d 630 (1975), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 716, 232 S.E.2d 207 (1977).

Evidence of Victim's Character Improperly Excluded. — Where the evidence of the victim's character was offered in a rape case according to the standard permissible method of proving character, since the witness's testimony was directed to the "general reputation and character" of the victim and not to his personal opinion, it was error for the court not to allow the jury to consider the witness's testimony on the issue of consent. State v. Goss, 293 N.C. 147, 235 S.E.2d 844 (1977).

3. Witnesses.

Competence of Child. — Whether a five-year-old child is competent to testify in a rape prosecution is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the trial judge, and where the evidence upon the voir dire as well as the child's testimony upon the trial negates abuse of discretion the ruling of the trial court that the child was a competent witness will not be disturbed on appeal. State v. Merritt, 236 N.C. 363, 72 S.E.2d 754 (1952).

In a prosecution for rape of a female under 12 years of age, her testimony to the effect that defendant had repeatedly had intercourse with her during the prior several years is competent in corroboration of the offense charged, and the first such occasions will not be held too remote when the evidence discloses that such acts were repeated with regularity up to the date specified in the indictment. State v. Browder, 252 N.C. 35, 112 S.E.2d 728 (1960).

Taking Testimony of Child in Absence of Jury. — In a prosecution for rape of an eight-year-old child, it was error to have the court reporter take the testimony of the child in the absence of the jury and then read to the jury the examination which had been conducted in its absence. State v. Payton, 255 N.C. 420, 121 S.E.2d 608 (1961).

An accused in a prosecution for rape has a right to impeach the State's witness by competent evidence of bad reputation of the witness. State v. Cole, 20 N.C. App. 137, 201 S.E.2d 100 (1973).

D. Instructions.

Failure to Instruct as to Force. — An instruction which fails to charge that the carnal knowledge of the prosecutrix must have been accomplished by force and against her will to constitute the crime of rape must be held reversible error. State v. Simmons, 228 N.C. 258, 45 S.E.2d 121 (1947).

Charge Limiting Consideration of Character. — There was no prejudice to the defendant in the technically erroneous charge in a rape case limiting consideration of the victim's character to the issue of credibility and not allowing the jury to consider character on the issue of consent where the credibility of the victim's testimony that she did not consent was the key to the State's case, and there was no real distinction between the issue of the victim's credibility and the issue of her consent. State v. Goss, 293 N.C. 147, 235 S.E.2d 844 (1977).

Failure to Charge on Lesser Offense. — Where all the evidence in a prosecution for rape revealed a completed act of sexual intercourse and the only dispute between the State and the defendant was whether the act was accomplished by consent or by force, there was no necessity to submit the lesser included offenses of assault with intent to commit rape and assault on a female. State v. Hall, 293 N.C. 559, 238 S.E.2d 473 (1977).

Where all the evidence reveals a completed act of sexual intercourse and the only dispute is whether the act was accomplished by consent or by force, the lesser included offenses of assault with intent to commit rape and assault upon a female need not be submitted to the jury because lesser included offenses must be submitted only where there is evidence to support them. State v. Edmondson, 302 N.C. 169, 273 S.E.2d 659 (1981).

The court's failure to charge the jury on a lesser crime than rape as principals and to submit guilt of a lesser offense as a permissible verdict was not error since there was no evidence from which the jury could find that any defendant committed an included crime of lesser degree. State v. Dawson, 281 N.C. 645, 190 S.E.2d 196 (1972).

Where there was no evidence of any included lesser offenses embraced within the indictments for rape and kidnapping, the court was under no duty to charge on lesser included offenses. State v. Bynum, 282 N.C. 552, 193 S.E.2d 725, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 836, 94 S. Ct. 182, 38 L. Ed. 2d 72 (1973).

The trial court did not err in failing to submit the lesser included offenses of assault with intent to commit rape and assault on a female where all the State's evidence tended to show commission of rape and the defendant's evidence was that he had never had intercourse with the prosecutrix nor did he touch her in a manner constituting an assault. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

In prosecutions for rape, when all the evidence tended to show a completed act of intercourse and the only issue was whether the act was with the prosecuting witness's consent or by force and against her will, it was not proper to submit to the jury lesser offenses included within a charge of rape. State v. Davis, 291 N.C. 1, 229 S.E.2d 285 (1976).

Instruction on Defendant's Admission as to Presence. — In a prosecution for first-degree rape where the trial court instructed that the defendant's admission that he was in the car with the rape victim could be considered by the jury as an admission of a fact relating to the crime charged, there was no merit to defendant's contention that such instruction could have led the jury to believe that his mere presence was sufficient for conviction and that he had therefore committed the crime, since the trial court's instructions made clear what the jury must find in order to convict defendant. State v. Hammonds, 301 N.C. 713, 271 S.E.2d 856 (1981).

Prejudicial Expression of Opinion by Judge. — The trial judge committed prejudicial error by expressing his opinion on the evidence when he instructed the jury that there was "considerable evidence" that defendant had committed the crime charged, and when he further went on to say "not satisfied with that, the evidence tends to show that he, the defendant, again had intercourse with her" intimating to the jury that it was his opinion that the defendant was guilty. State v. Head, 24 N.C. App. 564, 211 S.E.2d 534 (1975).

§ 14-27.3. Second-degree rape.

(a) A person is guilty of rape in the second degree if the person engages in vaginal intercourse with another person:

(1) By force and against the will of the other person; or

(2) Who is mentally defective, mentally incapacitated, or physically helpless, and the person performing the act knows or should reasonably know the other person is mentally defective, mentally incapacitated, or physically helpless.

(b) Any person who commits the offense defined in this section is guilty of a Class D felony. (1979, c. 682, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class D felony" for "felony and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for a term of not more than 40 years" in subsection (b). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 14-21.

Elements of the Offense. Force is an essential element of the offense of rape. State v. Smith, 45 N.C. App. 501, 263 S.E.2d 371 (1980).

The element of "by force and against her will" has long been present in North Carolina rape statutes, and is still sufficient to support a conviction of second-degree rape under this section. State v. Roberts, 293 N.C. 1, 235 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

"By Force". — The force necessary to constitute rape need not be actual physical force. State v. Primes, 275 N.C. 61, 165 S.E.2d 225 (1969); State v. Henderson, 285 N.C. 1, 203 S.E.2d 10 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3202, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976); State v. Yancey, 291 N.C. 656, 231 S.E.2d 637 (1977).

Fear, fright, or coercion may take the place of force. State v. Primes, 275 N.C. 61, 165 S.E.2d 225 (1969); State v. Henderson, 285 N.C. 1, 203 S.E.2d 10 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3202, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976); State v. Hines, 286 N.C. 377, 211 S.E.2d 201 (1975); State v. Yancey, 291 N.C. 656, 231 S.E.2d 637 (1977).

The force necessary to constitute rape need not be physical force. State v. Hines, 286 N.C. 377, 211 S.E.2d 201 (1975).

The "force" necessary to constitute an offense need not be actual physical force. Constructive force is sufficient, and the female's submission under fear or duress takes the place of actual physical force. State v. Dull, 289 N.C. 55, 220 S.E.2d 344 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 404, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

Withdrawal of Consent. — Consent can be withdrawn. This concept ordinarily applies, however, to those situations in which there is evidence of more than one act of intercourse between the prosecutrix and the accused. State v. Way, 297 N.C. 293, 254 S.E.2d 760 (1979).

In a prosecution for second-degree rape where, under the court's instruction, the jury could have found the defendant guilty of rape if they believed the victim had consented to have intercourse with the defendant and in the middle of that act, she changed her mind, the court committed error requiring a new trial. If the actual penetration is accomplished with the woman's consent, the accused is not guilty of rape, although he may be guilty of another crime because of his subsequent actions. State v. Way, 297 N.C. 293, 254 S.E.2d 760 (1979).

Discretion as to the punishment for rape in the second degree is vested in the trial court, not the Supreme Court. State v. Goss, 293 N.C. 147, 235 S.E.2d 844 (1977).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment which charges that the defendant "did, unlawfully, willfully and feloniously ravish and carnally know, by force and against her will," the prosecuting witness, a female, charges all of the elements of second-degree rape. State v. Perry, 291 N.C. 586, 231 S.E.2d 262 (1977).

The indictment upon which defendant was tried charged common-law rape, and its language was clearly sufficient to embrace second-degree rape as defined by this section. State v. Davis, 291 N.C. 1, 229 S.E.2d 285 (1976).

Use of Term "Rape" in Testimony. — Testimony by the prosecutrix that defendant raped her did not invade the province of the jury since (1) the court sustained an objection to the testimony and (2) the testimony was competent as a shorthand statement of fact. State v. See, 301 N.C. 388, 271 S.E.2d 282 (1980).

§ 14-27.4. First-degree sexual offense.

(a) A person is guilty of a sexual offense in the first degree if the person engages in a sexual act:

(1) With a victim who is a child of the age of 12 years or less and the defendant is of the age of 12 years or more and is four or more years older than the victim; or

(2) With another person by force and against the will of the other person, and:

a. Employs or displays a dangerous or deadly weapon or an article which the other person reasonably believes to be a dangerous or deadly weapon; or

b. Inflicts serious personal injury upon the victim or another person; or

c. The person commits the offense aided and abetted by one or more other persons.

(b) Any person who commits an offense defined in this section is guilty of a Class B felony. (1979, c. 682, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 6; 1981, c. 106, ss. 3, 4.)

Cross References. — As to restrictions on evidence in rape or sex offense cases, see § 8-58.6. As to essentials of bill of indictment for sexual offense, see § 15-144.2. As to venue of trial of sex offenses where victim was transported, see § 15A-136. As to office of coordinator of services for victims of sexual assault, see §§ 143B-394.1 through 143B-294.3.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class B felony" for "felony and upon conviction shall be imprisoned in the State's prison for life" in subsection (b). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

The 1981 amendment designated former subdivision (2) of subsection (a) as subdivision (1) and former subdivision (1) of subsection (a) as subdivision (2), and in present subdivision (1) of subsection (a) substituted "with a victim who" for "The victim" and inserted "is of the age of 12 years or more and." The amendment also substituted "an offense" for "the offense" in subsection (b).

§ 14-27.5. Second-degree sexual offense.

(a) A person is guilty of a sexual offense in the second degree if the person engages in a sexual act with another person:

(1) By force and against the will of the other person; or

(2) Who is mentally defective, mentally incapacitated, or physically helpless, and the person performing the act knows or should reasonably know that the other person is mentally defective, mentally incapacitated, or physically helpless.

(b) Any person who commits the offense defined in this section is guilty of a Class D felony. (1979, c. 682, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 7.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class D felony" for "felony and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for a term of not more than 40 years" in subsection (b). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-27.6. Penalty for attempt.

An attempt to commit first-degree rape as defined by G.S. 14-27.2, or an attempt to commit a first-degree sexual offense as defined by G.S. 14-27.4 is a Class F felony. An attempt to commit second-degree rape as defined by G.S. 14-27.3, or an attempt to commit a second-degree sexual offense as defined by G.S. 14-27.5 is a Class H felony. (1979, c. 682, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 8.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class F felony" for "felony, and upon conviction, the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for not more than 20 years" in the first sentence and "Class H felony" for "felony, and upon conviction the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for not more than 10 years" in the second sentence. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

If a defendant who has assumed the position of a parent in the home of a minor victim engages in vaginal intercourse or a sexual act with a victim who is a minor residing in the home, or if a person having custody of a victim of any age or a person who is an agent or employee of any person, or institution, whether such institution is private, charitable, or governmental, having custody of a victim of any age engages in vaginal intercourse or a sexual act with such victim, the defendant is guilty of a Class G felony. Consent is not a defense to a charge under this section. (1979, c. 682, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 9.)

Cross References. — As to office of coordinator of services for victims of sexual assault, see §§ 143B-394.1 through 143B-394.3.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class G felony" for "felony and shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than two nor more than 15 years" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-27.8. Defense that victim is spouse of person committing act.

A person may not be prosecuted under this Article if the victim is the person's legal spouse at the time of the commission of the alleged rape or sexual offense unless the parties are living separate and apart pursuant to a written agreement or a judicial decree. (1979, c. 682, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 criminal law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1350 (1980).

§ 14-27.9. No presumption as to incapacity.

In prosecutions under this Article, there shall be no presumption that any person under the age of 14 years is physically incapable of committing a sex offense of any degree or physically incapable of committing rape, or that a male child under the age of 14 years is incapable of engaging in sexual intercourse. (1979, c. 682, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Infants of fourteen and over are not entitled to any presumption of incapacity to commit rape. State v. Rogers, 275 N.C. 411, 168 S.E.2d 345 (1969), cert. denied, 39 U.S. 1024, 90 S. Ct. 599, 24 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1970), decided under former § 14-21.

§ 14-27.10. Evidence required in prosecutions under this Article.

It shall not be necessary upon the trial of any indictment for an offense under this Article where the sex act alleged is vaginal intercourse or anal intercourse to prove the actual emission of semen in order to constitute the offense; but the offense shall be completed upon proof of penetration only. Penetration, however slight, is vaginal intercourse or anal intercourse. (1979, c. 682, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to restrictions on evidence in rape or sex offense cases, see § 8-58.6.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 criminal law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1350 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Penetration is an essential element of both rape and sodomy. State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

Penetration without Emission of Semen Sufficient. — There is "carnal knowledge" or "sexual intercourse" in a legal sense if there is the slightest penetration of the sexual organ of the female by the sexual organ of the male. It is not necessary that the vagina be entered or that the hymen be ruptured; the entering of the vulva or labia is sufficient. State v. Murry, 277 N.C. 197, 176 S.E.2d 738 (1970); State v. Jackson, 18 N.C. App. 234, 196 S.E.2d 568 (1973), decided under former § 14-21.

The terms carnal knowledge and sexual intercourse are synonymous. There is carnal knowledge or sexual intercourse in a legal sense if there is any slightest penetration of the sexual organ of the female by the sexual organ of the male. State v. Jones, 249 N.C. 134, 105 S.E.2d 513 (1958); State v. Burell, 252 N.C. 115, 113 S.E.2d 16 (1960); State v. Temple, 269 N.C. 57, 152 S.E.2d 206 (1967).

Evidence Sufficient to Support Finding of Penetration. — Testimony by the prosecutrix in a rape case that defendant had "sex" and "intercourse" with her was sufficient to support a finding by the jury that there was penetration. State v. Ashford, 301 N.C. 512, 272 S.E.2d 126 (1980).

ARTICLE 8.

Assaults.

§ 14-28. Malicious castration.

If any person, of malice aforethought, shall unlawfully castrate any other person, or cut off, maim or disfigure any of the privy members of any person, with intent to murder, maim, disfigure, disable or render impotent such person, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class D felon. (1831, c. 40, s. 1; R. C., c. 34, s. 4; 1868-9, c. 167, s. 6; Code, s. 999; Rev., s. 3627; C. S., s. 4210; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "be punished as a Class D felon" for "suffer imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than five nor more than sixty years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 criminal law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1350 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Elements of the offense of maliciously maiming a privy member as condemned by this section are: (1) The accused must act with malice aforethought, (2) the act must be done on purpose and unlawfully, (3) the act must be done with intent to maim or disfigure a privy member of the person assaulted, and (4) there must be permanent injury to the privy member of the person assaulted. State v. Beasley, 3 N.C. App. 323, 164 S.E.2d 742 (1968).

Intent. — An intent to maim or disfigure a privy member is prima facie to be inferred from an act which does in fact disfigure, unless the presumption be repelled by evidence to the contrary. State v. Beasley, 3 N.C. App. 323, 164 S.E.2d 742 (1968).

The offense of maiming a privy member condemned by § 14-29 is a lesser included offense of this section, proof of malice aforethought, or of a preconceived intention to commit the maiming of the privy member, not being necessary to conviction under § 14-29. State v. Beasley, 3 N.C. App. 323, 164 S.E.2d 742 (1968).

Nonsuit Denied Where Evidence Sufficient to Show Maiming without Malice. — In a prosecution upon an indictment charging a malicious maiming of a privy member in violation of this section, defendant's motion for nonsuit of the "felony charge" was properly denied where there was sufficient evidence to support conviction under § 14-29 of maiming a privy member without malice aforethought, both offenses being felonies, and the offense condemned by § 14-29 being a lesser included offense of this section. State v. Beasley, 3 N.C. App. 323, 164 S.E.2d 742 (1968).

Appeal from Sentence for Punishment. — Upon conviction of the criminal offense inhibited by this section, sentence of the court for a period within that allowed by statute will not be considered on appeal as a cruel or unusual punishment against the provision of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 14 (now see N.C. Const., Art. I, § 27), or discriminatory against the principal actor in committing the crime, when the others participating therein to a lesser extent have been sentenced for shorter terms, the sentences imposed being left largely in the discretion of the trial court, and in the absence of an abuse of this discretion not reviewable on appeal. State v. Griffin, 190 N.C. 133, 129 S.E. 410 (1925).

Cited in State v. Bass, 255 N.C. 42, 120 S.E.2d 580 (1961).

§ 14-29. Castration or other maiming without malice aforethought.

If any person shall, on purpose and unlawfully, but without malice aforethought, cut, or slit the nose, bite or cut off the nose, or a lip or an ear, or disable any limb or member of any other person, or castrate any other person, or cut off, maim or disfigure any of the privy members of any other person, with intent to kill, maim, disfigure, disable or render impotent such person, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1754, c. 56, P. R.; 1791, c. 339, ss. 2, 3, P. R.; 1831, c. 40, s. 2; R. C., c. 34, s. 47; Code, s. 1000; Rev., s. 3626; C. S., s. 4211; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "imprisoned in the county jail or State's prison not less than six months nor more than ten years, and fined, in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — See State v. Bass, 255 N.C. 42, 120 S.E.2d 580 (1961).

The words "without malice aforethought" were included in this section to differentiate it from § 14-30, and make it clear and definite that allegation and proof of premeditation (prepense) are not a requirement in the prosecution of offenses under this section. State v. Bass, 255 N.C. 42, 120 S.E.2d 580 (1961).

Proof of Malice Aforethought Not Necessary. — Proof of malice aforethought, or of a preconceived intention to commit the maiming, is not necessary. State v. Girkin, 23 N.C. 121 (1840).

Intent is an essential element of the offense under this section. State v. Haulk, 38 N.C. App. 357, 247 S.E.2d 798 (1978).

This section does not purport to define an offense based on negligence or carelessness; it condemns an intentional offense. State v. Haulk, 38 N.C. App. 357, 247 S.E.2d 798 (1978).

Where the import of instructions to the jury in a prosecution under this section was that something less than intentional conduct, gross carelessness or criminal negligence, for example, would suffice for conviction, a new trial was necessary. State v. Haulk, 38 N.C. App. 357, 247 S.E.2d 798 (1978).

Lesser Included Offense of § 14-28. — The offense of maiming a privy member condemned by this section is a lesser included offense of § 14-28, proof of malice aforethought, or of a preconceived intention to commit the maiming of the privy member not being necessary to conviction under this section. State v. Beasley, 3 N.C. App. 323, 164 S.E.2d 742 (1968).

Nonsuit Denied Where Evidence Sufficient to Show Maiming without Malice. — In a prosecution upon an indictment charging a malicious maiming of a privy member in violation of § 14-28, defendant's motion for nonsuit of the "felony charge" was properly denied where there was sufficient evidence to support conviction under this section of maiming a privy member without malice aforethought, both offenses being felonies, and the offense condemned by this section being a lesser included offense of § 14-28. State v. Beasley, 3 N.C. App. 323, 164 S.E.2d 742 (1968).

Consent of Victim No Defense. — Under this section the elements of the offense of mayhem are the same as under the common law, and the consent of the victim does not constitute a defense in a prosecution under this statute. State v. Bass, 255 N.C. 42, 120 S.E.2d 580 (1961).

§ 14-30. Malicious maiming.

If any person shall, of malice aforethought, unlawfully cut out or disable the tongue or put out an eye of any other person, with intent to murder, maim or disfigure, the person so offending, his counselors, abettors and aiders, knowing of and privy to the offense, shall be punished as a Class H felon. (22 and 23 Car. II, c. 1 (Coventry Act); 1754, c. 56, P. R.; 1791, c. 339, s. 1, P. R.; 1831, c. 12; R. C., c. 34, s. 14; Code, s. 1080; Rev., s. 3636; C. S., s. 4212; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class H felon" for provisions specifying the punishment for first and subsequent offenses. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — See State v. Bass, 255 N.C. 42, 120 S.E.2d 580 (1961).

When Corpus Delicti Complete. — Under this section the corpus delicti is complete, if the maim be committed on purpose, and with intent to disfigure, although without malice prepense. State v. Crawford, 13 N.C. 425 (1830).

Indictment — Necessary Allegations. — An indictment, for biting off ear, must state the offense to be done on purpose, as well as unlawfully. State v. Ormond, 18 N.C. 119 (1834).

Same — Unnecessary Allegations. — But it need not be alleged whether it was the right or left ear. State v. Green, 29 N.C. 39 (1846).

Same — Sufficient Allegations. — An indictment charging the defendant with unlawfully, willfully, feloniously and with malice aforethought putting out the right eye of named person with her thumbs with intent to maim and disfigure named person charged a violation of this section. State v. Atkins, 242 N.C. 294, 87 S.E.2d 507 (1955).

"Malice Aforethought" Construed. — The words "malice aforethought" do not mean an actual, express or preconceived disposition; but import an intent, at the moment, to do, without lawful authority, and without the pressure of necessity, that which the law forbids. State v. Crawford, 13 N.C. 425 (1830).

Malicious Intent Express or Implied. — The malicious intent to maim or disfigure may either be expressed or implied from circumstances. State v. Irwin, 2 N.C. 112 (1794).

Proof of Grudges or Threatenings Not Necessary. — Proof of antecedent grudges, threatenings or an express design is not necessary. State v. Irwin, 2 N.C. 112 (1794).

What Constitutes Maiming. — To constitute maiming under this statute, by biting off an ear, it is not necessary that the whole ear shall be bitten off — it is sufficient if a part only is taken off, provided enough is taken off to alter and impair the natural personal appearance, and, to ordinary observation, to render the person less comely. State v. Girgin, 23 N.C. 121 (1840).

Presumptions. — An intent to disfigure is prima facie to be inferred from an act which does in fact disfigure, unless that presumption be repelled by evidence on the part of the accused of a different intent, or at least of the absence of the intent mentioned in the statute. State v. Girgin, 23 N.C. 121 (1840).

"To wound" is distinguished from "to maim" in that the latter implies a permanent injury to a member of the body or renders a person lame or defective in bodily vigor. State v. Malpass, 226 N.C. 403, 38 S.E.2d 156 (1946).

Where there was no evidence of permanent injury to the privy parts of the prosecuting witness, it was error for the court to submit to jury the question of the guilt of defendant under this section. State v. Malpass, 226 N.C. 403, 38 S.E.2d 156 (1946).

First Blow or Sudden Affray. — The first blow, or a sudden affray, does not palliate the offense of maiming under the act of 1791; for if it did, the statute would be of little avail. State v. Crawford, 13 N.C. 425 (1830).

Same — Accident or Self-Defense. — When the act is proved, the law presumes that it was done on purpose. The burden is therefore upon defendant to show that it was done accidentally or in self-defense. State v. Evans, 2 N.C. 281 (1796); State v. Skidmore, 87 N.C. 509 (1882).

§ 14-30.1. Malicious throwing of corrosive acid or alkali.

If any person shall, of malice aforethought, knowingly and willfully throw or cause to be thrown upon another person any corrosive acid or alkali with intent to murder, maim or disfigure and inflicts serious injury not resulting in death, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1963, c. 354; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment in the State prison for a term of not less than four months nor more than ten years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Unnecessary for Jury to Find Defendant's Motive Was Intent to Murder. — In a prosecution for maliciously throwing a corrosive acid or alkali, it is not necessary for the jury to find that the intent to murder, maim, or disfigure was the sole or even the dominant motivation for defendant's actions. State v. Wingard, 10 N.C. App. 101, 177 S.E.2d 765 (1970), appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 727, 178 S.E.2d 494 (1971).

Defendant May Not Complain if Jury Finds Intent to Murder. — One who, without provocation, deliberately throws corrosive acid or alkali into the face and eyes of another, thereby causing serious injuries, is in no position to complain if a jury finds that he intended his act to produce the very result which it did produce, to murder, maim, or disfigure. State v. Wingard, 10 N.C. App. 101, 177 S.E.2d 765 (1970), appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 727, 178 S.E.2d 494 (1971).

Error in Charging on Lesser Included Offense Not Prejudicial. — In a prosecution for the malicious throwing of corrosive acid or alkali with the intent to murder, maim, or disfigure, any error by the trial court in charging on the lesser included offense of assault could not have been prejudicial to the defendant. State v. Wingard, 10 N.C. App. 101, 177 S.E.2d 765 (1970), appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 727, 178 S.E.2d 494 (1971).

If any person shall in a secret manner maliciously commit an assault and battery with any deadly weapon upon another by waylaying or otherwise, with intent to kill such other person, notwithstanding the person so assaulted may have been conscious of the presence of his adversary, he shall be punished as a Class F felon. (1887, c. 32; Rev., s. 3621; 1919, c. 25; C. S., s. 4213; 1969, c. 602, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to an assault in this State injuring person in another State, see § 15-132.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class F felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable by fine or imprisonment for not less than one nor more than twenty years, or both such fine and imprisonment" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

The felony described in this section is often referred to as malicious secret assault and battery with a deadly weapon. State v. Lewis, 274 N.C. 438, 164 S.E.2d 177 (1968).

Elements of Offense — Burden of Proof. — On a trial under a criminal indictment the burden is on the State to show beyond a reasonable doubt the ingredients or elements necessary to constitute the statutory offense, or the lower degree of the same crime for which a verdict is permissible and where assault and battery, prohibited by this section, are charged, the State must accordingly show that it was maliciously done with a deadly weapon, secretly by waylaying or otherwise, etc., with intent to kill, and when the evidence was conflicting, it was an expression of opinion inhibited by § 1-180 (now see § 1-180.1), for the judge to charge the jury that if they believed the evidence, a cold-blooded and cruel assault had been committed. State v. Kline, 190 N.C. 177, 129 S.E. 417 (1925).

The following elements must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt in order to establish the crime of secret assault: (1) secret manner; (2) malice; (3) assault and battery; (4) deadly weapon; and (5) intent to kill. State v. Hill, 287 N.C. 207, 214 S.E.2d 67 (1975).

Intent is a prescribed element of secret assault under this section. State v. Currie, 19 N.C. App. 17, 198 S.E.2d 28 (1973).

Infliction of serious injury need not be shown at all in a prosecution under this section. State v. Hill, 287 N.C. 207, 214 S.E.2d 67 (1975).

Effect of Words "or Otherwise." — The legislature, after denouncing as criminal secret assaults with intent to kill, and after giving one explicit illustration, added the words "or otherwise," in order to prevent the application of the maxim expressio unius exclusio alterrius, thus including every other manner of making secret attempts, regardless of the attendant circumstances. State v. Shade, 115 N.C. 757, 20 S.E. 537 (1894).

Indictment — Necessary Allegation. — Indictment omitting the words "by waylaying or otherwise," was held sufficient. State v. Shade, 115 N.C. 757, 20 S.E. 537 (1894).

Assault with Intent to Commit Murder. — Attempts to commit any of the four capital offenses were formerly felonies, but during the prosecution for "Ku Klux" troubles the offense of assault with intent to commit murder was reduced to a simple misdemeanor. The act of 1887, ch. 32, restored the grade of the offense to a felony, except in those cases in which it is committed openly, giving the assailed an opportunity to know his assailant. State v. Telfair, 109 N.C. 878, 13 S.E. 726 (1891); State v. Harris, 120 N.C. 577, 26 S.E. 774 (1897).

What Constitutes Secret Assault. — While it is not required for the conviction of a secret assault, under the provisions of this section, that the assailed should not have been aware of the presence of his assailant, it is necessary that the purpose of the assailant be not previously made known to him; and where the evidence did not tend to show that it was a secret assault, within the intent and meaning of the statute, an instruction to the contrary was reversible error. State v. Oxendine, 187 N.C. 658, 122 S.E. 568 (1924).

Same — Assault from Behind. — An assault made from behind and in such a manner as to prevent the person assaulted from knowing who his assailant is, or that the blow is about to be struck, is a secret assault. State v. Harris, 120 N.C. 577, 26 S.E. 774 (1897).

Same — Assault by Means of Poison. — An assault by means of poison comes within the intent of our statutes making an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill punishable as a felony. State v. Alderman, 182 N.C. 917, 110 S.E. 59 (1921).

Same — Assault Facing Victim. — Where one, facing another or walking up in front of him, draws a pistol from a hip-pocket and shoots him without warning, it is not a secret assault, within the meaning of this section. State v. Patton, 115 N.C. 753, 20 S.E. 538 (1894).

Same — Sufficiency. — For sufficiency of evidence to prove a secret assault, see State v. Bridges, 178 N.C. 733, 101 S.E. 29 (1919).

Evidence Permissible to Show Malice. — As bearing on the question of malice and felonious intent, the State was allowed to show that, a week or two before the happening of the offenses charged in the bill of indictment, the defendant had been seen about the home of the prosecuting witness; that he had shot at his house and threatened to shoot him. State v. Miller, 189 N.C. 695, 128 S.E. 1 (1925).

Instruction. — For charge not sufficiently explaining the offense, see State v. Vanderburg, 200 N.C. 713, 158 S.E. 248 (1931).

Verdict for Simple Assault. — Upon the trial of an indictment charging a secret felonious assault, verdict may be rendered for simple assault. State v. Jennings, 104 N.C. 774, 10 S.E. 249 (1889).

An indictment charging a felonious assault with intent to kill as defined in this section, embraces as a lesser degree of the crime charged the offense of assault with a deadly weapon, and where the evidence is sufficient to sustain a verdict of the offense charged, defendant may not complain of a verdict of guilty of the lesser offense. State v. High, 215 N.C. 244, 1 S.E.2d 563 (1939).

Secret assault is not a higher degree of felonious assault with a deadly weapon with the intent to kill or inflict serious bodily injury. State v. Hill, 287 N.C. 207, 214 S.E.2d 67 (1975).

Submission of Lesser Included Offense. — Where there was positive evidence that the defendant committed every element of the offense under this section charged in the bill of indictment, and there was no conflicting evidence as to any element of the offense, the defendant's contention that the jury might have convicted the defendant of the lesser included offense of assault with a deadly weapon if they had been given the opportunity did not support the submission of the lesser included offense to the jury. State v. McWhorter, 34 N.C. App. 462, 238 S.E.2d 639 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 443, 241 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

When Defendant Entitled to Judgment of Nonsuit. — If the State sought a conviction under this section and only proved that the assault was made in a secret manner, defendant would be entitled to a judgment of nonsuit. State v. Hill, 287 N.C. 207, 214 S.E.2d 67 (1975).

Applied in State v. Brock, 234 N.C. 390, 67 S.E.2d 282 (1951); State v. Stevens, 264 N.C. 737, 142 S.E.2d 588 (1965); State v. Lewis, 1 N.C. App. 296, 161 S.E.2d 497 (1968).

Cited in State v. Strickland, 192 N.C. 253, 134 S.E. 850 (1926); State v. Potter, 221 N.C. 153, 19 S.E.2d 257 (1942); State v. Perry, 225 N.C. 174, 33 S.E.2d 869 (1945); State v. Williams, 229 N.C. 348, 49 S.E.2d 617 (1948); State v. Jarrell, 233 N.C. 741, 65 S.E.2d 304 (1951).

§ 14-32. Felonious assault with deadly weapon with intent to kill or inflicting serious injury; punishments.

(a) Any person who assaults another person with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and inflicts serious injury shall be punished as a Class F felon.

(b) Any person who assaults another person with a deadly weapon and inflicts serious injury shall be punished as a Class H felon.

(c) Any person who assaults another person with a deadly weapon with intent to kill shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1919, c. 101; C. S., s. 4214; 1931, c. 145, s. 30; 1969, c. 602, s. 2; 1971, c. 765, s. 1; c. 1093, s. 12; 1973, c. 229, ss. 1-3; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to an assault in this State resulting in injury in another state, see § 15-132.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class F felon" for "is guilty of a felony punishable by a fine, imprisonment for not more than 20 years, or both such fine and imprisonment" at the end of subsection (a), substituted "shall be punished as a Class H felon" for "is guilty of a felony punishable by a fine, imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both such fine and imprisonment" at the end of subsection (b) and substituted "shall be punished as a Class H felon" for "is guilty of a felony punishable by a fine, imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both such fine and imprisonment" at the end of subsection (c). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Section Creates New Offense. — By the enactment of this section the legislature intended to create a new offense of higher degree than the common-law crime of assault with intent to kill. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962).

The felony described in this section is often referred to as felonious assault. State v. Lewis, 274 N.C. 438, 164 S.E.2d 177 (1968).

Lesser Included Offenses. — Assault with a deadly weapon under § 14-33 is an essential element of the felony created and defined by this section, being an included "less degree of the same crime." State v. Weaver, 264 N.C. 681, 142 S.E.2d 633 (1965).

An indictment which sufficiently charged defendant with assault with a deadly weapon, to wit, a pistol, with intent to kill and inflicting serious injury not resulting in death, included the offense of assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Caldwell, 269 N.C. 521, 153 S.E.2d 34 (1967).

An indictment charging an assault with a deadly weapon, with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury, not resulting in death, includes the lesser offense of assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Lane, 1 N.C. App. 539, 162 S.E.2d 149 (1968).

The offense of an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill under § 14-33, a general misdemeanor, is a lesser included offense of the felony charged in a bill of indictment drawn under this section. State v. Burris, 3 N.C. App. 35, 164 S.E.2d 52 (1968).

The offense defined in subsection (b) is a lesser included offense of the offense defined in subsection (a). State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970); State v. Cox, 11 N.C. App. 377, 181 S.E.2d 205 (1971); State v. Thacker, 281 N.C. 447, 189 S.E.2d 145 (1972); State v. Jennings, 16 N.C. App. 205, 192 S.E.2d 46, appeal dismissed, 282 N.C. 428, 192 S.E.2d 838 (1972); State v. Turner, 21 N.C. App. 608, 205 S.E.2d 628, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 668, 207 S.E.2d 751 (1974).

Subsection (c) of this section creates another lesser offense of subsection (a), that of assault with a firearm with intent to kill. State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970).

Guilt of Lesser Degree of Offense. — Where the defendants were tried for violating this section in making an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, etc., the action would not be dismissed when the undisputed evidence tended to show the assault was made with a deadly weapon. State v. Hefner, 199 N.C. 778, 155 S.E. 879 (1930).

Secret assault is not a higher degree of felonious assault with a deadly weapon with the intent to kill or inflict serious bodily injury. State v. Hill, 287 N.C. 207, 214 S.E.2d 67 (1975).

Convictions of Armed Robbery and Felonious Assault Based on Separate Features of One Continuous Course of Conduct. — When separate indictments for armed robbery and felonious assault based on separate features of one continuous course of conduct are tried together, and verdicts of guilty as charged are returned, these verdicts provide support for separate judgments. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

Offense under this Section Is Not Included in Offense of Armed Robbery. — The crime of armed robbery defined in § 14-87 includes an assault on the person with a deadly weapon. The crime of felonious assault defined in subsection (a) of this section is an assault with a deadly weapon which is made with intent to kill and which inflicts serious injury. These additional elements of the crime of felonious assault are not elements of the crime of armed robbery defined in § 14-87. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

A conviction of armed robbery does not establish a defendant's guilt of felonious assault. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971); State v. Alexander, 284 N.C. 87, 199 S.E.2d 450 (1973), cert. denied, 415 U.S. 927, 94 S. Ct. 1434, 39 L. Ed. 2d 484 (1974).

An assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury, defined by subsection (b) of this section is not a lesser offense included in the offense of armed robbery, because the infliction of serious injury is not an essential ingredient of armed robbery. State v. Stepney, 280 N.C. 306, 185 S.E.2d 844 (1972); State v. Teel, 24 N.C. App. 385, 210 S.E.2d 517 (1975).

Assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury is not a lesser included offense of attempted armed robbery. State v. Wilson, 26 N.C. App. 188, 215 S.E.2d 167 (1975).

Assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury under this section cannot be considered a lesser included offense of armed robbery. The two offenses are separate and complete and an acquittal on the assault charge would not bar a conviction on the armed robbery charge. State v. Wheeler, 34 N.C. App. 243, 237 S.E.2d 874 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 187, 241 S.E.2d 522 (1978).

Although Felonious Assault May Be Committed during Perpetration of Armed Robbery. — The fact that a felonious assault is committed during the perpetration of armed robbery does not deprive the felonious assault of its character as a complete and separate felony. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

Discharging Firearm into Occupied Building Distinguished. — Discharging a firearm into an occupied building and assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury are entirely separate and distinct offenses. To prove the one, the State must show that defendant fired into an occupied building, an element which need not be shown to support the second charge. Likewise to prove the second charge, it must show the infliction of serious injury, which is not an element of the first charge. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

Since assault with a deadly weapon and assault by pointing a gun each involve the element of assault on a person, these two criminal offenses contain an element not essential to discharging a firearm into an occupied building and are not, therefore, lesser included offenses of that offense. State v. Bland, 34 N.C. App. 384, 238 S.E.2d 199 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 183, 241 S.E.2d 518 (1978).

Facts Not Showing Two Offenses. — In a felonious assault case, the mere fact that some of the shots entered from the front and some entered from the back did not make two offenses. State v. Dilldine, 22 N.C. App. 229, 206 S.E.2d 364 (1974).

Conviction on Two Separate Counts Not Double Jeopardy. — Conviction and sentence of defendant for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, and assault with intent to commit rape, did not subject him to double jeopardy, since the elements for the two crimes are not the same. State v. Herring, 50 N.C. App. 298, 273 S.E.2d 29 (1981).

Prosecution under § 14-34.2 and This Section Not Double Jeopardy. — Prosecution of defendants under § 14-34.2 for assault on a law-enforcement officer with a firearm and under this section for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill did not violate the prohibition against double jeopardy, nor did it require the State to elect prosecution under a single statute, though the facts underlying defendants' indictment under each statute were the same, since each offense required proof of an element which did not exist in the other charge. State v. Partin, 48 N.C. App. 274, 269 S.E.2d 250, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 404, 273 S.E.2d 449 (1980).

Election Between Charges. — The trial court did not err in denying defendant's pretrial motion to require the State to elect between the charges of felonious assault with a deadly weapon upon a law enforcement officer in the performance of his duties and felonious assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, since a defendant may be charged with more than one offense based on a given course of conduct, and even when an election ultimately will be necessary, the State is not required to elect prior to the introduction of evidence. State v. Ward, 301 N.C. 469, 272 S.E.2d 84 (1980).

Admissibility of Evidence. — See State v. Oxendine, 224 N.C. 825, 32 S.E.2d 648 (1945).

Evidence of communicated threats was received with apparent approval in State v. Scott, 26 N.C. 409 (1844), and with explicit approval in State v. Turpin, 77 N.C. 473, 24 Am. R. 455 (1877). It was denied in State v. Byrd, 121 N.C. 684, 28 S.E. 353 (1897) and in State v. Skidmore, 87 N.C. 509 (1882), in an opinion which overlooked the two cases first cited. See 11 N.C.L. Rev. 20.

Evidence that defendant said nothing to prosecutrix at the time he shot her, but that two weeks before he shot her he told her he was going to kill her, was competent and properly admitted in evidence in a prosecution under this section. State v. Heard, 262 N.C. 599, 138 S.E.2d 243 (1964).

Testimony Properly Admitted Absent Showing of Prejudice. — In the appeal of a conviction for robbery with a dangerous weapon and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, where defendant assigned as error the failure of the trial court to sustain three objections made by defendant during the testimony of the victim, in which the victim stated that she was not sure how good her husband's hearing was on the side where he had been shot; that she could still see the defendant's face when she closed her eyes; and that she had let the defendant take the money becasue he had a gun, the defendant may have been correct in his assertion that these answers were in places speculative or unresponsive, but neither the defendant nor the record showed that the errors were material or prejudicial, and absent such a showing defendant was not entitled to a new trial. State v. Billups, 301 N.C. 607, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Applied in State v. Jones, 229 N.C. 276, 49 S.E.2d 463 (1948); State v. Muse, 229 N.C. 536, 50 S.E.2d 311 (1948); State v. Way, 231 N.C. 716, 58 S.E.2d 716 (1950); State v. Cooper, 238 N.C. 241, 77 S.E.2d 695 (1953); State v. Bridgers, 238 N.C. 677, 78 S.E.2d 756 (1953); State v. Cauley, 244 N.C. 701, 94 S.E.2d 915 (1956); State v. Williams, 246 N.C. 688, 99 S.E.2d 919 (1957); State v. Bullard, 253 N.C. 809, 117 S.E.2d 722 (1961); State v. Spencer, 256 N.C. 487, 124 S.E.2d 175 (1962); State v. Rorie, 258 N.C. 162, 128 S.E.2d 229 (1962); State v. Godwin, 260 N.C. 580, 133 S.E.2d 166 (1963); State v. Childs, 265 N.C. 575, 144 S.E.2d 653 (1965); State v. Cooper, 266 N.C. 644, 146 S.E.2d 663 (1966); Housing Auth. v. Thorpe, 267 N.C. 431, 148 S.E.2d 290 (1966); State v. Childs, 269 N.C. 307, 152 S.E.2d 453 (1967); State v. Howard, 272 N.C. 144, 157 S.E.2d 665 (1967); State v. Meadows, 272 N.C. 327, 158 S.E.2d 638 (1968); State v. Hinton, 14 N.C. App. 253, 188 S.E.2d 17 (1972); State v. Kinsey, 17 N.C. II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

In order for a conviction of crime under the provisions of this section as it stood before the 1969 amendment, there had to be a charge and evidence thereon of five essential elements: an assault, the use of a deadly weapon, the intent to kill, infliction of serious injury, death not resulting, and while an assault did not necessarily include a battery, where serious injury was inflicted a battery was necessarily implied. State v. Hefner, 199 N.C. 778, 155 S.E. 879 (1930).

To warrant the conviction of an accused of a felonious assault and battery under this section, as it stood before the 1969 amendment, on the theory that he participated in the offense as a principal in the first degree, the State had to produce evidence sufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that he did these four things: (1) committed an assault and battery upon another; (2) committed the assault and battery with a deadly weapon; (3) committed the assault and battery with intent to kill the victim of his violence; and (4) thus inflict on the person of his victim serious injury not resulting in death. State v. Birchfield, 235 N.C. 410, 70 S.E.2d 5 (1952).

The statutory offense under this section as it stood before the 1969 amendment, embodied (1) assault, (2) with a deadly weapon, (3) the use of the weapon must be with intent to kill, (4) the result of the use had to be the inflicting of serious injury, (5) which fell short of causing death. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962).

The crime of felonious assault, created and defined by this section as it stood before the 1969 amendment, consisted of these essential elements: (1) an assault, (2) with a deadly weapon, (3) with intent to kill, (4) inflicting serious injury, (5) not resulting in death. State v. Meadows, 272 N.C. 327, 158 S.E.2d 638 (1968); State v. Whitted, 14 N.C. App. 62, 187 S.E.2d 391 (1972).

A serious injury and an intent to kill were both essential elements of the crime of felonious assault under this section as it stood prior to the 1969 amendment. State v. Marshall, 5 N.C. App. 476, 168 S.E.2d 487 (1969).

Intent Is Not Prescribed Element under Subsection (b). — Intent is not a prescribed element of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury under subsection (b) of this section. State v. Currie, 19 N.C. App. 17, 198 S.E.2d 28 (1973).

But Is Prescribed under Subsection (c). — Intent is a prescribed element of assault with firearm with intent to kill under subsection (c) of this section. State v. Currie, 19 N.C. App. 17, 198 S.E.2d 28 (1973).

Secret manner and malice need not be shown at all in a prosecution under this section. State v. Hill, 287 N.C. 207, 214 S.E.2d 67 (1975).

Defendant Must Be Present at Scene of Assault. — Where the evidence showed that defendant procured, counseled, commanded or encouraged others to commit an attempted armed robbery and that he was absent from the scene when the others committed a felonious assault in their attempt to carry out the armed robbery, the felonious assault charge against defendant should not have been submitted to the jury and the trial court should have arrested the judgment on that charge since, in order to be guilty of a felonious assault, a defendant must be present at the scene of the assault either actually or constructively. State v. Allen, 34 N.C. App. 260, 237 S.E.2d 869, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 741, 241 S.E.2d 516 (1977).

III. INDICTMENT.

Necessity of. — A charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, resulting in serious injury, is a charge of a felony, under this section, and defendant may not be put to answer thereon but by indictment. State v. Clegg, 214 N.C. 675, 200 S.E. 371 (1939).

An indictment which follows substantially the language of this section as to its essential elements meets the requirements of law. State v. Randolph, 228 N.C. 228, 45 S.E.2d 132 (1947); State v. Wiggs, 269 N.C. 507, 153 S.E.2d 84 (1967); State v. Lane, 1 N.C. App. 539, 162 S.E.2d 149 (1968).

Injury Need Not Be Described in Indictment. — In an indictment, under this section, it is not necessary to describe the injury further than in the words of the statute. State v. Gregory, 223 N.C. 415, 27 S.E.2d 140 (1943).

Effect of Omitting Averment of Serious Injury. — An indictment charging assault with intent to kill, without averment of the infliction of serious injury, charged a misdemeanor under this section as it stood prior to the 1969 amendment. State v. Floyd, 241 N.C. 298, 84 S.E.2d 915 (1954).

An indictment which does not incorporate the word "feloniously" or charge that the offense is a felony cannot support a conviction of an offense greater than a misdemeanor. State v. Price, 265 N.C. 703, 144 S.E.2d 865 (1965).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — It is sufficient for indictments or warrants seeking to charge a crime in which one of the elements is the use of a deadly weapon (1) to name the weapon and (2) either to state expressly that the weapon used was a "deadly weapon" or to allege such facts as would necessarily demonstrate the deadly character of the weapon. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

"A certain knife" was a sufficient description of the weapon in an indictment for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. State v. Randolph, 228 N.C. 228, 45 S.E.2d 132 (1947); State v. Wiggs, 269 N.C. 507, 153 S.E.2d 84 (1967).

In an indictment charging an assault with intent to kill "and murder" the words "and murder" were surplusage and placed no additional burden on the State. State v. Plemmons, 230 N.C. 56, 52 S.E.2d 10 (1949).

Indictment Held Sufficient. — An indictment charging that defendant assaulted a named person with intent to kill and did inflict serious and permanent bodily injuries not resulting in death by setting his victim afire, was sufficient to charge an assault where serious injury was inflicted. State v. Price, 265 N.C. 703, 144 S.E.2d 865 (1965).

Offenses Not Included under Indictment for Assault with Firearm with Intent to Kill. — An indictment for assault with a firearm with intent to kill would not support a verdict of guilty of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury and did not support the verdict of guilty of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury. State v. Bryant, 19 N.C. App. 676, 199 S.E.2d 744 (1973).

The allegation in a warrant that defendant assaulted his wife "by threatening to kill her" fell short of charging that he acted with the specific intent to kill required to make the offense a felony under this section; the offense charged was a misdemeanor under § 14-33. State v. Harris, 14 N.C. App. 268, 188 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

IV. DEADLY WEAPON.

What Is a Deadly Weapon. — Any instrument which is likely to produce death or great bodily harm, under the circumstances of its use, is properly denominated a deadly weapon. State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970); State v. Whitaker, 29 N.C. App. 602, 225 S.E.2d 129 (1976); State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

A deadly weapon is not one which must kill but one which under the circumstances of its use is likely to cause death or great bodily harm. State v. Strickland, 290 N.C. 169, 225 S.E.2d 531 (1976).

A deadly weapon is any instrument which is likely to produce death or great bodily harm, under the circumstances of its use. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

May Depend upon Manner of Use. — The deadly character of a weapon depends sometimes more upon the manner of its use, and the condition of the person assaulted, than upon the intrinsic character of the weapon itself. State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970); State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

And May Be Question of Law or Fact. — Where the alleged deadly weapon and the manner of its use are of such character as to admit of but one conclusion, the question as to whether or not it is deadly is one of law, and the court must take the responsibility of so declaring. But where it may or may not be likely to produce fatal results, according to the manner of its use, or the part of the body at which the blow is aimed, its alleged deadly character is one of fact to be determined by the jury. State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970); State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

Where the instrument may or may not be likely to produce death or great bodily harm, according to the manner of its use, or the part of the body at which the blow is aimed, its alleged deadly character is one of fact to be determined by the jury. State v. Whitaker, 29 N.C. App. 602, 225 S.E.2d 129 (1976); State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

If there is a conflict in the evidence regarding either the nature of the weapon or the manner of its use, with some of the evidence tending to show that the weapon used or as used would not likely produce death or great bodily harm and other evidence tending to show the contrary, the jury must resolve the conflict. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

The deadly character of a weapon may be inferred by the jury from the manner of its use and the injury inflicted, and evidence of slashes with a knife across the upper arm and lower back along the belt line, producing cuts requiring 16 stitches to close, was sufficient for the jury to infer that the knife was a deadly weapon. State v. Randolph, 228 N.C. 228, 45 S.E.2d 132 (1947).

The introduction into evidence of the weapon used is not requisite to the admission of testimony as to the manner of its use, and the injuries inflicted, in establishing the character of the weapon as deadly. State v. Randolph, 228 N.C. 228, 45 S.E.2d 132 (1947).

The trial judge correctly submitted to the jury, under proper instructions, the questions whether the bottle involved was a deadly weapon and whether serious injury was inflicted where a lone woman, attacked by five males, was held down by defendant while an accomplice rammed a bottle into her rectum with such force as to cause excesssive bleeding, dilation of the rectum, and the infliction of multiple cuts, some deep and long, about the rectum. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

A pistol or a gun is a deadly weapon. State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970).

A pistol is a deadly weapon per se. State v. Reives, 29 N.C. App. 11, 222 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 675 (1976).

An unexplained misfiring of a loaded pistol does not change its deadly character. State v. Reives, 29 N.C. App. 11, 222 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 675 (1976).

Knife. — Under the case law of this State, a knife with a three-inch blade constitutes a deadly weapon per se when used as a weapon in an assault. State v. Cox, 11 N.C. App. 377, 181 S.E.2d 205 (1971).

A baseball bat should be denominated a deadly weapon if viciously used. State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970).

Plastic Bag. — Given proper surrounding circumstances, a plastic bag is a deadly weapon. State v. Strickland, 290 N.C. 169, 225 S.E.2d 531 (1976).

V. INTENT TO KILL.

An intent to kill is a matter for the State to prove, and is ordinarily shown by proof of facts from which an intent to kill may be reasonably inferred. State v. Thacker, 281 N.C. 447, 189 S.E.2d 145 (1972).

No Presumption of Felonious Intent. — The admission or proof of an assault with a deadly weapon, resulting in serious injury, but not in death, cannot be said, as a matter of law, to establish a presumption of felonious intent, or intent to kill. State v. Ferguson, 261 N.C. 558, 135 S.E.2d 626 (1964).

A person might intentionally and without justification or excuse assault another with a deadly weapon and inflict upon him serious injury not resulting in death, but such an assault would not establish a presumption of felonious intent, or the intent to kill. Such intent must be found by the jury as a fact from the evidence. State v. Ferguson, 261 N.C. 558, 135 S.E.2d 626 (1964).

Proof of an assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury not resulting in death does not, as a matter of law, establish a presumption of intent to kill. Such intent must be found by the jury as a fact from the evidence. State v. Thacker, 281 N.C. 447, 189 S.E.2d 145 (1972); State v. Turner, 21 N.C. App. 608, 205 S.E.2d 628, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 668, 207 S.E.2d 751 (1974).

The mere proof of an assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury does not by itself establish an intent to kill. State v. Ransom, 41 N.C. App. 583, 255 S.E.2d 237 (1979).

Intent to Kill May Be Inferred from Circumstances. — An intent to kill may be inferred from the nature of the assault, the manner in which it was made, the conduct of the parties, and other relevant circumstances. State v. Ferguson, 261 N.C. 558, 135 S.E.2d 626 (1964); State v. Thacker, 281 N.C. 447, 189 S.E.2d 145 (1972); State v. Reives, 29 N.C. App. 11, 222 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 675 (1976).

An intent to kill is a mental attitude, and ordinarily it must be proved, if proven at all, by circumstantial evidence; that is, by proving facts from which the fact sought to be proven may be reasonably inferred. State v. Ferguson, 261 N.C. 558, 135 S.E.2d 626 (1964); State v. Jones, 18 N.C. App. 531, 197 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 756, 198 S.E.2d 726 (1973).

The requisite intent to kill can be inferred from the nature of the assault on the victim, the manner in which it was made, and the conduct of the parties under the circumstances. State v. Marshall, 5 N.C. App. 476, 168 S.E.2d 487 (1969).

A person who deliberately fired a pistol into the face of his victim at point-blank range has to be held to intend the normal and natural results of his deliberate act. The fact that the victim's life was spared could be cause for a salute to medical science, but it hardly changed the intent apparently present when defendant pulled the trigger. State v. Jones, 18 N.C. App. 531, 197 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 756, 198 S.E.2d 726 (1973).

Ordinarily, a specific intent to do an act is shown by the proof of facts and circumstances from which such an intent may be inferred. State v. Parks, 290 N.C. 748, 228 S.E.2d 248 (1976).

In a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, an altercation, the shooting and resulting death of decedent soon after defendant pointed the pistol at another's chest and pulled the trigger, and other circumstances, were sufficient evidence of intent to kill. State v. Reives, 29 N.C. App. 11, 222 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 675 (1976).

The nature of the assault, the manner in which it was made, and the surrounding circumstances are all matters from which an intent to kill may be inferred. State v. Ransom, 41 N.C. App. 583, 255 S.E.2d 237 (1979).

An intent to kill, being a state of mind of the defendant not easily susceptible of proof, ordinarily must be proved by circumstantial evidence from which a jury may reasonably infer intent. State v. Ransom, 41 N.C. App. 583, 255 S.E.2d 237 (1979).

VI. SERIOUS INJURY.

The term "inflicts serious injury" means physical or bodily injury resulting from an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962); State v. Ferguson, 261 N.C. 558, 135 S.E.2d 626 (1964); State v. Marshall, 5 N.C. App. 476, 168 S.E.2d 487 (1969); State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970); State v. Whitted, 14 N.C. App. 62, 187 S.E.2d 391 (1972); State v. Williams, 29 N.C. App. 24, 222 S.E.2d 720, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 676 (1976); State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Whether the assault is calculated to create a breach of the peace that would outrage the sensibilities of the community does not adequately or correctly describe the infliction of serious injury contemplated by this section. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962).

Injury Must Fall Short of Causing Death. — The injury must be serious but it must fall short of causing death. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962); State v. Ferguson, 261 N.C. 558, 135 S.E.2d 626 (1964); State v. Meadows, 272 N.C. 327, 158 S.E.2d 638 (1968); State v. Marshall, 5 N.C. App. 476, 168 S.E.2d 487 (1969); State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970); State v. Whitted, 14 N.C. App. 62, 187 S.E.2d 391 (1972); State v. Williams, 29 N.C. App. 24, 222 S.E.2d 720, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 676 (1976); State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Facts of Particular Case Are Determinative. — Whether serious injury has been inflicted must be determined according to the particular facts of each case. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962); State v. Ferguson, 261 N.C. 558, 135 S.E.2d 626 (1964); State v. Marshall, 5 N.C. App. 476, 168 S.E.2d 487 (1969); State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970); State v. Whitted, 14 N.C. App. 62, 187 S.E.2d 391 (1972); State v. Pearson, 27 N.C. App. 157, 218 S.E.2d 192, cert. denied, 425 U.S. 938, 96 S. Ct. 1671, 48 L. Ed. 2d 179 (1975); State v. Williams, 29 N.C. App. 24, 222 S.E.2d 720, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 676 (1976).

Whether serious injury has been inflicted must be determined according to the particular facts of each case and is a question the jury must answer under proper instruction. State v. Marshall, 5 N.C. App. 476, 168 S.E.2d 487 (1969); State v. Whitted, 14 N.C. App. 62, 187 S.E.2d 391 (1972); State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

The rule that whether serious injury has been inflicted must be determined according to the particular facts of each case applies to a prosecution under subsection (b) of this section for assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury. State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970).

"Serious injury" under subsection (b) of this section is the same as under subsection (a) of this section. State v. Williams, 29 N.C. App. 24, 222 S.E.2d 720, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 676 (1976).

Evidence that the victim was hospitalized is not necessary for proof of serious injury. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

A "whiplash" injury may or may not be a serious injury, depending upon its severity and the painful effect it may have on the injured victim. State v. Ferguson, 261 N.C. 558, 135 S.E.2d 626 (1964).

Evidence of Infliction of Serious Injury. — A pistol wound in the neck, close to the spinal cord, resulting in unconsciousness, with the bullet lodging in the neck, was sufficient evidence of serious injury, within the meaning of the statute, to submit the question of serious injury to the jury. State v. Marshall, 5 N.C. App. 476, 168 S.E.2d 487 (1969).

VII. SELF-DEFENSE.

Applicability. — The law of self-defense in cases of homicide applies also in cases of assault with intent to kill, and an unsuccessful attempt to kill cannot be justified unless the homicide would have been excusable if death had ensued. It follows that where an accused has inflicted wounds upon another with intent to kill such other, he may be absolved from criminal liability for so doing upon the principle of self-defense only in case he was in actual or apparent danger of death or great bodily harm at the hands of such other. State v. Anderson, 230 N.C. 54, 51 S.E.2d 895 (1949); State v. Barnette, 8 N.C. App. 198, 174 S.E.2d 82 (1970); State v. Hall, 31 N.C. App. 34, 228 S.E.2d 637 (1976).

A defendant could assault a person with intent to kill only if such force was necessary or reasonably appeared to him to be necessary under the circumstances to protect himself from death or great bodily harm. Likewise, a defendant could be absolved from criminal liability for the assault with intent to kill only if he acted in self-defense when he was in actual or apparent danger of suffering death or great bodily harm. State v. Barnette, 8 N.C. App. 198, 174 S.E.2d 82 (1970).

If a person voluntarily, that is, aggressively and willingly, without legal provocation or excuse, enters into a fight, he cannot invoke the doctrine of self-defense unless he first abandons the fight and withdraws from it and gives notice to his adversary that he has done so. State v. Plemmons, 29 N.C. App. 159, 223 S.E.2d 549 (1976).

An assault with the intent to kill is justified under the doctrine of self-defense only when the defendant is in actual or apparent danger of death or great bodily harm at the hands of the person he assaults. State v. Dial, 38 N.C. App. 529, 248 S.E.2d 366 (1978).

In certain cases, a defendant may justify an intentional assault on the ground that it was made in an effort to defend his home from attack or to evict trespassers. State v. Dial, 38 N.C. App. 529, 248 S.E.2d 366 (1978).

The right of self-defense is available only to a person who is without fault. State v. Plemmons, 29 N.C. App. 159, 223 S.E.2d 549 (1976).

Burden of Proof. — In prosecutions for felonious assault and for assault with a deadly weapon, it is not incumbent on a defendant to satisfy the jury he acted in self-defense. On the contrary, the burden of proof rests on the State throughout the trial to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant unlawfully assaulted the alleged victim. State v. Fletcher, 268 N.C. 140, 150 S.E.2d 54 (1966); State v. Turner, 29 N.C. App. 33, 222 S.E.2d 745 (1976).

It has long been the rule in North Carolina that a defendant, in cases not involving homicide, does not have the burden of satisfying the jury that he acted in self-defense. State v. Smith, 28 N.C. App. 314, 220 S.E.2d 858 (1976).

Failure to instruct the jury with reference to defendant's right of self-defense in respect to repelling a nonfelonious assault was prejudicial error. State v. Fletcher, 268 N.C. 140, 150 S.E.2d 54 (1966).

Jury Question on Amount of Force Used. — In a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury where defendant contended that the victim grabbed defendant by the hair and t-shirt to drag him into a cell for the purpose of a homosexual act, and that defendant then swung at the victim with a razor to get the victim to remove his hands, a jury question was raised as to whether defendant reasonably felt he was in imminent danger of a homosexual assault and whether he used more force than was reasonably necessary to repel the assault. State v. Molko, 50 N.C. App. 551, — S.E.2d — (1981).

VIII. INSTRUCTIONS TO JURY.

Defendant is entitled to have the different permissible verdicts arising on the evidence presented to the jury under proper instructions. State v. Jennings, 16 N.C. App. 205, 192 S.E.2d 46, appeal dismissed, 282 N.C. 428, 192 S.E.2d 838 (1972).

Right to Instruction on Lesser Included Offense. — When the lesser included offense of assault with a firearm resulting in serious bodily injury is supported by some evidence, a defendant is entitled to have the different permissible views arising on the evidence presented to the jury under proper instructions. State v. Jones, 18 N.C. App. 531, 197 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 756, 198 S.E.2d 726 (1973).

Assault with a deadly weapon, which is a misdemeanor under § 14-33(b)(1), is a lesser included offense of the felonies described in this section. However, the necessity for instructing the jury as to an included crime of lesser degree than that charged arises when and only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. State v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 111, 228 S.E.2d 668, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 450, 230 S.E.2d 767 (1976).

The failure of the trial court to submit to the jury the lesser offense of simple assault was not error where the evidence showed that the defendant struck the victim in the head with a blackjack, since a blackjack is a deadly weapon per se. State v. Daniels, 38 N.C. App. 382, 247 S.E.2d 770 (1978).

Submission of Lesser Offense Only Where All Evidence Shows Felonious Assault. — In a prosecution for two offenses of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, wherein all the evidence showed that a deadly weapon was used in both assaults and that serious injury was inflicted on both victims, the trial court erred (1) in failing to submit defendant's guilt or innocence of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury, and (2) in submitting the misdemeanors of assault inflicting serious injury and assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Thacker, 281 N.C. 447, 189 S.E.2d 145 (1972); State v. Turner, 21 N.C. App. 608, 205 S.E.2d 628, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 668, 207 S.E.2d 751 (1974).

Failure to Submit Lesser Offense Held Not Error. — Where all the evidence presented showed a shooting with a deadly weapon with an intent to kill and none of the evidence showed the lack of such intent, it was not error for the court to fail to submit to the jury the lesser offense described in subsection (b). State v. Jennings, 16 N.C. App. 205, 192 S.E.2d 46, appeal dismissed, 282 N.C. 428, 192 S.E.2d 838 (1972); State v. Turner, 21 N.C. App. 608, 205 S.E.2d 628, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 668, 207 S.E.2d 751 (1974).

Where the uncontradicted evidence was that defendant shot a police officer at close range in the face, this evidence did not justify submission of the issue of guilt of a lesser included offense. State v. Jones, 18 N.C. App. 531, 197 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 756, 198 S.E.2d 756 (1973).

Defendants in a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury were not entitled to an instruction on the lesser included offense of assault with a deadly weapon where the evidence showed that the victim had been struck in the back of the head with a stick about two feet long; that he was hospitalized for nine days; that a neurosurgeon had to operate in order to repair the injuries to his skull; that fragments of bone had to be peeled back; and that his head was still indented from the injuries. State v. Davis, 33 N.C. App. 262, 234 S.E.2d 762 (1977).

Conviction of Simple Assault. — An instruction directing verdict of guilty of at least simple assault was not erroneous when the prosecuting witness had been injured by being struck by some hard metallic substance in the defendant's hand, which he did not see, causing his nose to be broken and other serious injuries. State v. Strickland, 192 N.C. 253, 134 S.E. 850 (1926).

Omission of "Assault with a Deadly Weapon" from Charge to Jury. — When accused was indicted, under this section, for an assault with intent to kill and with a deadly weapon, the omission, by the court in its charge, of "assault with a deadly weapon" from the catalogue of permissible verdicts, did not deprive the jury of the statutory authority to consider it. State v. Bentley, 223 N.C. 563, 27 S.E.2d 738 (1943).

Instruction on Meaning of "Assault". — It is incumbent upon the trial judge to define or otherwise explain to a jury the meaning of the legal term "assault." State v. Hickman, 21 N.C. App. 421, 204 S.E.2d 718 (1974).

Failure to Instruct Jury on Shooting by Accident. — Where in a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious bodily harm, all of the evidence indicated that defendant intended to fire and did fire the shot or shots which resulted in injury to the victim, defendant was not entitled to an instruction on shooting by accident or misadventure. State v. Efird, 37 N.C. App. 66, 245 S.E.2d 226 (1978).

Failure to Define Accident. — In a prosecution for murder and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill where the trial judge instructs the jury on the defense of accident it is not error if the court does not define the word "accident." State v. Reives, 29 N.C. App. 11, 222 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 675 (1976).

Deadly Weapons. — Instruction was erroneous and prejudicial because it invaded the province of the jury to determine whether nightstick used by the defendant was a "deadly weapon." State v. Buchanan, 28 N.C. App. 163, 220 S.E.2d 207 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 452, 223 S.E.2d 161 (1976).

State Must Prove Murderous Intent. — Upon a trial of one charged with using a deadly weapon in inflicting a serious injury not resulting in death, under this section, an instruction that the use of such weapon raised a presumption of felonious intent was reversible error, the fact of murderous intent being for the State to prove. State v. Gibson, 196 N.C. 393, 145 S.E. 772 (1928).

The term "intent to kill" is self-explanatory and the trial court is not required to define the term in its charge. State v. Plemmons, 230 N.C. 56, 52 S.E.2d 10 (1949).

In the absence of a special request for instructions from the defendant, the judge is not required to define "intent to kill." The meaning is obvious and no explanation is necessary. However, when a trial judge undertakes to define the term, he must do so correctly. State v. Parks, 290 N.C. 748, 228 S.E.2d 248 (1976).

Instruction as to Serious Injury. — Where the evidence was sufficient of an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, not resulting in death, a charge by the judge to the jury that "serious injury" included "anything that would cause a breach of the peace," was held not to be reversible error to the defendant's prejudice where all the evidence tended to show that serious injury was inflicted in violation of this section. State v. Hefner, 199 N.C. 778, 155 S.E. 879 (1930).

In a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury, the trial judge's instruction to the jury that a serious injury was any physical injury that caused great pain and suffering was not error since it imposed a greater degree of injury than necessary. State v. Williams, 29 N.C. App. 24, 222 S.E.2d 720, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 676 (1976).

In a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, where the State's evidence with respect to the injuries is uncontradicted and the injuries could not conceivably be considered anything but serious, the trial judge may instruct the jury that if they believe the evidence as to the injuries, then they will find that there was serious injury. State v. Davis, 33 N.C. App. 262, 234 S.E.2d 762 (1977).

Self-Defense. — Instructions implying that defendant could not lawfully use force in self-defense unless he was threatened with death or great bodily harm were erroneous. State v. Fletcher, 268 N.C. 140, 150 S.E.2d 54 (1966).

Instructions implying that the burden of proof was on defendant to satisfy the jury that he acted in self-defense have no application in criminal prosecutions for felonious assault or assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Fletcher, 268 N.C. 140, 150 S.E.2d 54 (1966).

Instruction on self-defense was erroneous which told the jury that defendant could use no more force than necessary in defending himself. The law is that the defendant could use such force as was reasonably necessary or apparently necessary. One may fight in self-defense and may use more force than is actually necessary to prevent death or great bodily harm, if he believes it to be necessary and has a reasonable ground for the belief. State v. Hearns, 9 N.C. App. 42, 175 S.E.2d 376 (1970).

In a felonious assault prosecution, the language used by the court in instructing the jury on self-defense effectively conveyed to the jury that it had to determine the reasonableness of defendant's belief in the necessity of force from the circumstances as they appeared to him at the time of the assault. State v. Cantrell, 24 N.C. App. 575, 211 S.E.2d 525 (1975).

The failure of the trial judge to include not guilty by reason of self-defense as a possible verdict in his final mandate to the jury was not cured by the discussion of the law of self-defense in the body of the charge. By failing to so charge, the jury could have assumed that a verdict of not guilty by reason of self-defense was not a permissible verdict in the case. State v. Girley, 27 N.C. App. 388, 219 S.E.2d 301 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 799 (1976).

Where there was evidence that defendant acted in defense of his home, an instruction on the defendant's right to act in self-defense without an instruction also on the defendant's right to act in defense of home contained prejudicial error. State v. Edwards, 28 N.C. App. 196, 220 S.E.2d 158 (1975).

In a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury, an instruction on self-defense was not warranted where defendant never abandoned the fight and never withdrew, but simply drove off a short distance out of sight of the victim and then stepped from his car and shot the victim. State v. Plemmons, 29 N.C. App. 159, 223 S.E.2d 549 (1976).

Evidence Sufficient to Require Instruction as to Defense of Third Person. — Evidence was sufficient to require an instruction as to the right of the defendant, indicted for a felonious assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, as a private citizen to interfere with and prevent the prosecuting witness from committing a felonious assault on a third person. State v. Hornbuckle, 265 N.C. 312, 144 S.E.2d 12 (1965).

Where defendant saw the victim force his former girl friend from a dance hall and down the street several blocks, knew that victim had threatened to kill the girl and that he was a dangerous man with a propensity for violent conduct, observed that the victim was acting in a wild and irrational manner as if he had been drinking or taking some drugs and observed that the victim reached for his pocket just before defendant shot him, the trial court committed prejudicial error in failing to instruct upon the right of defendant to go to the defense of a third person to prevent a felonious assault, since the court must instruct the jury on all substantial features of the case that arise from the evidence. State v. Graves, 18 N.C. App. 177, 196 S.E.2d 582 (1973).

Instruction on Defendant's Right to Evict Prosecuting Witness. — In a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, the trial court did not err in failing to charge the jury on defendant's right to evict the prosecuting witness from defendant's home and in failing to define the force which could have been used to accomplish such eviction, since defendant did not present any evidence that he tried to remove the victim by a gentle laying on of hands prior to the shooting, nor was there any evidence that the victim ever threatened or used deadly physical force upon defendant. State v. Myers, 49 N.C. App. 197, 270 S.E.2d 574 (1980).

IX. VERDICT.

Terms of Verdict. — In a prosecution under this section a verdict of guilty of "assault with intent to harm but not to kill" was a complete and sensible verdict, and supported judgment for a simple assault, the words "without intent to kill but with intent to harm" being mere surplusage. State v. Sumner, 269 N.C. 555, 153 S.E.2d 111 (1967).

Erroneous Instruction — Not Cured by Verdict. — An instruction that defendant's admission of assault with a deadly weapon, which resulted in serious injury, raised the presumption of defendant's guilt of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, resulting in serious injury, as charged, and placed the burden on defendant to satisfy the jury of matters in mitigation or excuse, was not cured by a verdict of guilty of the misdemeanor of an assault with a deadly weapon, since the instruction required defendant to show to the satisfaction of the jury, matters in mitigation or excuse before he could successfully ask for a verdict of not guilty. State v. Carver, 213 N.C. 150, 195 S.E. 349 (1938).

Same — Cured by Conviction of Lesser Included Offense. — Any error in instructing the jury as to defendant's guilt or innocence of felonious assault under subsection (a) of this section was cured by the jury's verdict which found defendant guilty of the lesser included offense described in subsection (b). State v. Hearns, 9 N.C. App. 42, 175 S.E.2d 376 (1970).

Verdict Insufficient to Support Sentence under This Section. — Although the indictment charged and the evidence showed that the deadly weapon used in an assult was a firearm, the jury's verdict of guilty of "assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill" would not support a sentence of five years for assault with a firearm with intent to kill pursuant to subsection (c) but would support a maximum sentence of two years under § 14-33. State v. Edmondson, 283 N.C. 533, 196 S.E.2d 505 (1973), decided prior to the 1973 amendment to this section.

X. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Evidence Sufficient to Support Conviction. — See State v. Cody, 225 N.C. 38, 33 S.E.2d 71 (1945); State v. Williams, 272 N.C. 273, 158 S.E.2d 85 (1967); State v. Strater, 272 N.C. 276, 158 S.E.2d 60 (1967); State v. Burns, 24 N.C. App. 392, 210 S.E.2d 524 (1975).

Evidence of Infliction of Serious Injury. — Evidence that several defendants indicted under the provisions of this section were discovered selling liquor in violation of our prohibition law, and that they were armed with pistols and blackjacks and acted in concert, and that one of them threatened the life of the officer attempting to arrest them, and that the others participated by carrying the officer to a room of a garage where they beat him with a blackjack into unconsciousness, and carried him out into a field and left him there where later and alone he recovered consciousness, was sufficient for the conviction of them all of an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, resulting in serious injury, in violation of this section. State v. Hefner, 199 N.C. 778, 155 S.E. 879 (1930).

§ 14-32.1. Assaults on handicapped persons; punishments.

(a) For purposes of this section, a "handicapped person" is a person who has:

(1) A physical or mental disability, such as decreased use of arms or legs, blindness, deafness, mental retardation or mental illness; or which would substantially impair that person's ability to defend himself.

(2) Infirmity

(b) Any person who assaults a handicapped person with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and inflicts serious injury is guilty of a Class F felony.

(c) Any person who assaults a handicapped person with a deadly weapon and inflicts serious injury is guilty of a Class G felony.

(d) Any person who assaults a handicapped person with a deadly weapon with intent to kill is guilty of a Class G felony.

(e) Unless his conduct is covered under some other provision of law providing greater punishment, any person who commits any aggravated assault or assault and battery on a handicapped person is guilty of a Class I felony. A person commits an aggravated assault or assault and battery upon a handicapped person if, in the course of the assault or assault and battery, that person:

(1) Uses a deadly weapon or other means of force likely to inflict serious injury or serious damage to a handicapped person; or

(2) Inflicts serious injury or serious damage to a handicapped person; or

(3) Intends to kill a handicapped person.

(f) Any person who commits a simple assault or battery upon a handicapped person is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine, imprisonment for not more than one year, or both. (1981, c. 780, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 780, s. 2, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1981.

§ 14-33. Misdemeanor assaults, batteries, and affrays, simple and aggravated; punishments.

(a) Any person who commits a simple assault or a simple assault and battery or participates in a simple affray is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment for not more than 30 days.

(b) Unless his conduct is covered under some other provision of law providing greater punishment, any person who commits any assault, assault and battery, or affray is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine, imprisonment for not more than two years, or both such fine and imprisonment if, in the course of the assault, assault and battery, or affray, he:

(1) Inflicts, or attempts to inflict, serious injury upon another person or uses a deadly weapon; or
(2) Assaults a female, he being a male person over the age of 18 years; or
(3) Assaults a child under the age of 12 years; or
(4) Assaults a law-enforcement officer, a custodial officer of the State Department of Correction, personnel of a detention facility or personnel of a training school, while the officer or personnel is discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office; or
(5) Assaults an officer of the North Carolina General Court of Justice while engaged in official judicial duties or on account of the performance of official judicial duties; or
(6) Assaults a school administrator, school teacher, substitute school teacher, or school teacher aide when any of these persons is discharging or attempting to discharge his official duties. (1870-1, c. 43, s. 2; 1873-4, c. 176, s. 6; 1879, c. 92, ss. 2, 6; Code, s. 987; Rev., s. 3620; 1911, c. 193; C. S., s. 4215; 1933, c. 189; 1949, c. 298; 1969, c. 618, s. 1; 1971, c. 765, s. 2; 1973, c. 229, s. 4; c. 1413; 1979, cc. 524, 656; 1981, c. 180.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added subdivision (6) of subsection (b).

VI. Punishment.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — When the punishment does not exceed the limits fixed by this section, it cannot be considered cruel and unusual punishment in a constitutional sense. State v. Caldwell, 269 N.C. 521, 153 S.E.2d 34 (1967).

A sentence of imprisonment which is within the limitation authorized by statute cannot be held cruel or unusual in the constitutional sense. State v. Cross, 27 N.C. App. 335, 219 S.E.2d 274 (1975).

There is no statutory definition of assault in North Carolina, and the crime of assault is governed by common-law rules. State v. Roberts, 270 N.C. 655, 155 S.E.2d 303 (1967).

In North Carolina, there is no statutory definition of assault and the crime remains one governed by the rules of the common law. State v. Hill, 6 N.C. App. 365, 170 S.E.2d 99 (1969).

Common Law Definition. — An assault is an intentional offer or attempt by force or violence to do injury to the person of another. State v. Thompson, 27 N.C. App. 576, 219 S.E.2d 566 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 800 (1976).

An assault is a show of violence causing a reasonable apprehension of immediate bodily harm. State v. Thompson, 27 N.C. App. 576, 219 S.E.2d 566 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 800 (1976).

The common-law offense of assault is an overt act or an attempt, or the unequivocal appearance of an attempt, with force and violence, to do some immediate physical injury to the person of another, which show of force or menace of violence must be sufficient to put a person of reasonable firmness in fear of immediate bodily harm. State v. Sawyer, 29 N.C. App. 505, 225 S.E.2d 328 (1976).

Emphasis Either on Intent of Accused or Apprehension of Victim. — In this State a criminal assault may be accomplished either by an overt act on the part of the accused evidencing an intentional offer or attempt by force and violence to do injury to the person of another or by the "show of violence" on the part of the accused sufficient to cause a reasonable apprehension of immediate bodily harm on the part of the person assailed which causes him to engage in a course of conduct which he would not otherwise have followed. Thus, either or both of two rules may be applied in prosecuting a person accused of an assault. The first places emphasis on the intent or state of mind of the person accused. Under the second, which is sometimes referred to as the "show of violence" rule, emphasis is shifted to a consideration of the apprehension of the person assailed and the reasonablensss of that apprehension. State v. O'Briant, 43 N.C. App. 341, 258 S.E.2d 839 (1979).

An affray is defined by the common law as a fight between two or more persons in a public place so as to cause terror to the people. In re Drakeford, 32 N.C. App. 113, 230 S.E.2d 779 (1977).

Serious damage includes serious physical injury. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962).

But May Include Damage Other Than Bodily Injury. — Serious damage may include damage other than bodily injury. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962).

And Does Not Necessarily Involve Use of Deadly Weapon. — The term serious damage done embraces results other than those arising from the use of a deadly weapon. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962).

"Deadly Weapon". — A deadly weapon is any instrument which is likely to produce death or great bodily harm, and the deadly character of the weapon depends sometimes more upon the manner of its use, and the condition of the person assaulted, than upon the intrinsic character of the weapon itself. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

Where the alleged deadly weapon and the manner of its use are of such character as to admit of but one conclusion, the question as to whether or not it is deadly is one of law, and the court must take the responsibility of so declaring. But where it may or may not be likely to produce fatal results, according to the manner of its use or the part of the body at which the blow is aimed, its alleged deadly character is one of fact to be determined by the jury. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

A criminal assault may be committed with an automobile. State v. Sawyer, 28 N.C. App. 490, 221 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — It is sufficient for indictments or warrants seeking to charge a crime in which one of the elements is the use of a deadly weapon (1) to name the weapon and (2) either to state expressly that the weapon used was a "deadly weapon" or to allege such facts as would necessarily demonstrate the deadly character of the weapon. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

"Show of Violence" Rule. — In some cases of assault, North Carolina has adopted the "show of violence" rule which requires a reasonable apprehension on the part of the assailed witness of immediate bodily harm or injury which caused him to engage in a course of conduct he would not have otherwise followed. State v. Sawyer, 28 N.C. App. 490, 221 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

Intent is not a prescribed element of assault with a deadly weapon. See State v. Currie, 19 N.C. App. 17, 198 S.E.2d 28 (1973).

Where evidence discloses actual battery, whether victim is "put in fear" is inapposite. State v. Thompson, 27 N.C. App. 576, 219 S.E.2d 566 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 800 (1976).

II. INCLUDED OFFENSES.

Assault with Deadly Weapon an Included Offense under § 14-32. — Assault with a deadly weapon is an essential element of the felony created and defined by § 14-32, being an included "less degree of the same crime." State v. Weaver, 264 N.C. 681, 142 S.E.2d 633 (1965).

Assault with a deadly weapon, which is a misdemeanor under subdivision (b)(1), is a lesser included offense of the felonies described in § 14-32. However, the necessity for instructing the jury as to an included crime of lesser degree than that charged arises when, and only when, there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. State v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 111 S.E.2d 668, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 450, 230 S.E.2d 767 (1976).

The allegation in a warrant that defendant assaulted his wife "by threatening to kill her" fell short of charging that he acted with the specific intent to kill required to make the offense a felony under § 14-32; the offense charged was a misdemeanor under this section. State v. Harris, 14 N.C. App. 268, 188 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

Crime of Armed Robbery Includes Assault with Deadly Weapon. — The crime of armed robbery defined in § 14-87 includes an assault on the person with a deadly weapon. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

Convictions of Armed Robbery and Assault with Deadly Weapon Arising Out of Same Conduct. — If a person is convicted simultaneously of armed robbery and of the lesser included offense of assault with a deadly weapon, and both offenses arise out of the same conduct, and separate judgments are pronounced, the judgment on the separate verdict of guilty of assault with a deadly weapon must be arrested, because in such case the armed robbery is accomplished by the assault with a deadly weapon and all essentials of this assault charge are essentials of the armed robbery charge. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

Any party charged with an affray may be charged with the lesser included offense of an assault. In re Drakeford, 32 N.C. App. 113, 230 S.E.2d 779 (1977).

Failure to Dismiss Charge Held Error. — The affray charge upon which respondent juvenile was convicted had as an essential element the assault charge which had been dismissed for lack of evidence. Consequently, respondent's acquittal on the assault charge barred further petitions based on that charge. Therefore, respondent was twice put in jeopardy for the same offense under § 14-33 and the trial judge erred in failing to dismiss the petition. In re Drakeford, 32 N.C. App. 113, 230 S.E.2d 779 (1977).

Submission of Lesser Offense Only Where All Evidence Shows Felonious Assault. — In a prosecution for two offenses of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury wherein all the evidence showed that a deadly weapon was used in both assaults and that serious injury was inflicted on both victims, the trial court erred (1) in failing to submit defendant's guilt or innocence of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury, and (2) in submitting the misdemeanors of assault inflicting serious injury and assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Thacker, 281 N.C. 447, 189 S.E.2d 145 (172).

Failure to Submit Question of Guilt of Simple Assault. — Where in a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon the evidence tended to show assault on a female at least, it was not error to fail to submit the question of guilt of simple assault. State v. Hill, 6 N.C. App. 365, 170 S.E.2d 99 (1969).

An instruction on simple assault was not necessary in a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon where the evidence showed that the victim was a female and that the defendant was a male over the age of 18 years, and the trial court included in its charge an instruction on the offense of assault on a female. State v. Barnhill, 37 N.C. App. 612, 246 S.E.2d 579 (1978).

Failure to Instruct as to Lesser Offense Held Not Error. — Since the evidence that defendant used a deadly weapon was uncontradicted, he was not entitled to a charge on assault inflicting serious injury. State v. Springs, 33 N.C. App. 61, 234 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 163, 236 S.E.2d 707 (1977).

Where the only dispute in a rape prosecution is whether an admitted act of sexual intercourse was accomplished by consent or by force, the lesser included offenses of assault with intent to commit rape and assault upon a female need not be submitted to the jury, because lesser included offenses must be submitted only where there is evidence to support them. State v. Edmondson, 302 N.C. 169, 273 S.E.2d 659 (1981).

III. ASSAULTS ON FEMALES.

Subdivision (b)(2) of this section establishes classifications by gender which serve important governmental objectives and are substantially related to achievement of those objectives. Therefore, the statute does not deny males equal protection of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. State v. Gurganus, 39 N.C. App. 395, 250 S.E.2d 668 (1979).

The General Assembly was entitled to take note of the differing physical sizes and strengths of the sexes, and reasonably to conclude that assaults and batteries without deadly weapons by physically larger and stronger males are likely to cause greater physical injury and risk of death than similar assaults by females. Having so concluded, the General Assembly could choose to provide greater punishment for these offenses, which it found created greater danger to life and limb, without violating the Fourteenth Amendment. State v. Gurganus, 39 N.C. App. 395, 250 S.E.2d 668 (1979)

The classifications based upon age found in subdivision (b)(2) of this section do not violate the Fourteenth Amendment. State v. Gurganus, 39 N.C. App. 395, 250 S.E.2d 668 (1979).

The essential elements of the crime of assault upon a female are (1) assault and (2) upon a female person by a male person. State v. Craig, 35 N.C. App. 547, 241 S.E.2d 704 (1978).

The marital relationship does not afford a license to commit assault. State v. Sherron, 4 N.C. App. 386, 166 S.E.2d 836 (1969).

Indictment Need Not Allege That Accused Was Male Person over 18. — Since it is not an essential element of the criminal offense under this section, it is not required that the indictment allege that the defendant was a male person over 18 years of age at the time of the alleged assault. State v. Smith, 157 N.C. 578, 72 S.E. 853 (1911); State v. Jones, 181 N.C. 546, 106 S.E. 817 (1921); State v. Lefler, 202 N.C. 700, 163 S.E. 873 (1932); State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E. 2d 861 (1958).

It was not necessary for the defendant's age to be stated in the bill of indictment to confict him for an assault on a female, when the proof clearly showed that he was over 18 at the time of the alleged assault, and on the trial no question was made as to that fact. State v. Beam, 255 N.C. 347, 121 S.E.2d 558 (1961).

Presumption That Accused Is over 18. — Where a male defendant is charged with an assault upon a female there is a rebuttable presumption that defendant is over 18 years of age, which presumption, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is evidence to be considered by the jury; but this does not imply that the jury is not required to determine defendant's age. State v. Lefler, 202 N.C. 700, 163 S.E. 873 (1932); State v. Lewis, 224 N.C. 774, 32 S.E.2d 334 (1944).

The presumption that defendant was over 18 years of age at the time of the alleged assault is evidence for consideration by the jury. State v. Lefler, 202 N.C. 700, 163 S.E. 873 (1932); State v. Lewis, 224 N.C. 774, 32 S.E.2d 334 (1944); State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E.2d 861 (1958).

Fact That Accused Is under 18 Is Matter of Defense. — The presumption is that the male person charged is over 18 years of age; and the fact, if it be a fact, that he is not over 18 years of age, relevant solely to punishment, is a matter of defense. State v. Smith, 157 N.C. 578, 72 S.E. 853 (1911); State v. Jones, 181 N.C. 546, 106 S.E. 817 (1921); State v. Lefler, 202 N.C. 700, 163 S.E. 873 (1932); State v. Lewis, 224 N.C. 774, 32 S.E.2d 334 (1944); State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E.2d 861 (1958).

Plea of Not Guilty as Putting Accused's Age in Issue. — Although not an essential averment, if in fact the indictment charged that the defendant was a male person over the age of 18 years, it could be considered, nothing else appearing, that the defendant's plea of not guilty was a denial of this nonessential averment; but where as in the instant case the indictment did not so charge it could not be said that the defendant, simply by his plea of not guilty, put in issue whether he was over 18 years of age at the time of the alleged assault. State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E.2d 861 (1958).

Age a Collateral Matter — How Determined. — Whether defendant was over 18 years of age is a collateral matter, wholly independent of defendant's guilt or innocence in respect of the assault charged; and it would seem appropriate that his be determined under a special issue. Unless the necessity therefor is eliminated by defendant's admission, this issue must be resolved by a jury, not by a court. State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E.2d 861 (1958).

Burden to Prove Age below 18. — The burden is upon the defendant, charged with an assault upon a woman, to show that he was under the age specified in order to except his case, and it is not necessary to the validity of the bill that it state that he was over the age, as an assault upon a woman is a crime without regard to the age of the person who commits it, and the age merely relates to the degree of punishment and is not an element or ingredient of the offense charged. State v. Smith, 157 N.C. 578, 72 S.E. 853 (1911).

The burden of establishing the defense that he is under the age of 18 rests on the defendant. State v. Morgan, 225 N.C. 549, 35 S.E.2d 621 (1945); State v. Herring, 226 N.C. 213, 37 S.E.2d 319 (1946); State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E.2d 861 (1958); State v. Beam, 255 N.C. 347, 121 S.E.2d 558 (1961).

Effect of Admission by Accused That He Is over 18. — When a male defendant, during the progress of his trial on an indictment charging an assault on a female or a more serious crime embracing the charge of assault on a female, testifies that he is over 18 years of age at the time of the alleged assault and there is no evidence or contention to the contrary, the collateral issue as to defendant's age need not be submitted to or answered by the jury. His testimony, under such circumstances, relating to such collateral issue, relevant solely to punishment, must be considered an admission on which the court may rely in the trial of the cause and in pronouncing judgment. State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E.2d 861 (1958).

Amendment of Warrant. — Where defendant entered a plea of guilty to a warrant charging an assault upon a female and nothing more, the trial court was without authority, upon a later amendment of the warrant to charge that defendant was a male person over 18 years of age, to enter judgment on the amended warrant in the absence of a verdict of a jury or a plea of guilty by defendant to the warrant as amended, and sentence in excess of that permitted by law for the offense originally charged in the warrant would be set aside and cause remanded for trial upon the warrant as amended. State v. Terry, 236 N.C. 222, 72 S.E.2d 423 (1952).

The age of defendant relates only to the punishment. State v. Beam, 255 N.C. 347, 121 S.E.2d 558 (1961).

An assault on a female, committed by a man or boy over 18 years of age, is not simple assault; it is a misdemeanor punishable in the discretion of the court. State v. Barnhill, 37 N.C. App. 612, 246 S.E.2d 579 (1978).

Lesser Offense Included in Indictment for Assault with Intent to Rape. — An indictment charging assault with intent to commit rape includes the lesser offense of assault on a female. State v. Beam, 255 N.C. 347, 121 S.E.2d 558 (1961).

In a prosecution of a defendant for assault with intent to commit rape, nonsuit of the felony does not entitle the defendant to his discharge, but the State may put defendant on trial under the same indictment for assault on a female, defendant being a male over the age of 18. State v. Gammons, 260 N.C. 753, 133 S.E.2d 649 (1963); State v. Walker, 4 N.C. App. 478, 167 S.E.2d 18 (1969).

Assault on a female by a male person is a lesser included offense in a proper bill of indictment charging an assault with intent to commit rape. State v. Mitchell, 6 N.C. App. 534, 170 S.E.2d 355 (1969).

Murder Indictment Does Not Contain All Elements of Assault upon Female. — Because an indictment for murder did not contain allegations to include the necessary elements of the crime of assault upon a female, the indictment did not support the verdict of guilty of assault upon a female. State v. Craig, 35 N.C. App. 547, 241 S.E.2d 704 (1978).

Sentence under Verdict of "Guilty of Simple Assault on a Female". — In a prosecution for an assault with intent to commit rape a verdict of "guilty of simple assault on a female" supports a sentence for an assault on a female by a male person over the age of 18 years when the defendant's own evidence discloses that he was over 18 years of age at the time of the commission of the assault, and no question of defendant's age is raised during the trial. State v. Mitchell, 6 N.C. App. 534, 170 S.E.2d 355 (1969).

Sentence on Conviction of Assault upon Female. — One lawfully convicted of assault upon a female may be sentenced to a longer term of imprisonment, if the evidence shows him to be, and he is found to be, over 18 years of age, than would be proper in the absence of such evidence and finding, even though the indictment under which he was tried does not allege his age. State v. Perry, 291 N.C. 586, 231 S.E.2d 262 (1977).

IV. ASSAULTS ON LAW-INFORCEMENT OFFICERS.

The clear legislative intent in enacting subdivision (b)(4) of this section was to provide greater punishment for those who place themselves in open defiance of duly constituted authority by assaulting public officers who are on duty. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320, appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

Assault on Officer Is Primary Conduct Proscribed. — In the offense of assaulting a public officer in the performance of some duty, the assault on the officer is the primary conduct proscribed by the statute and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being assaulted is of secondary importance. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320, appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972); State v. Bradley, 32 N.C. App. 666, 233 S.E.2d 603 (1977).

An assault upon an officer while he is discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office is an offense punishable under subdivision (b)(4) of this section, regardless of its effects or intended effects upon the officer's performance of his duties. The particular duty the officer was performing when assaulted is not of primary importance, it only being essential that the officer was performing or attempting to perform any duty of his office. State v. Waller, 37 N.C App. 133, 245 S.E.2d 808 (1978).

Where a patrolman, while not engaged in any patrol of the highway for purposes of observing traffic or making random license checks, spontaneously decided to stop petitioner, not while petitioner was "on a public highway" nor while petitioner was operating a vehicle, but instead while petitioner was in a private driveway, although petitioner would have had a meritorious defense to any prosecution based on failure to display his license, he was not entitled to invoke self-help against what was, at the time, an arguably lawful arrest, and petitioner's conviction for assaulting the highway patrolman could survive despite the finding that the officer's initial stop and demand were illegal as an unreasonable search and seizure under the Fourth Amendment. Keziah v. Bostic, 452 F. Supp. 912 (W.D.N.C. 1978).

Under subdivision (b)(4) of this section, the particular duty the officer was performing when assaulted is not of primary importance, it only being essential that the officer was performing or attempting to perform any duty of his office. Thus a magistrate's order failing to allege specifically the duty of office which the public officer was discharging or attempting to discharge is not for that reason defective. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Presumption that Public Officer is Acting Lawfully. — The offense under subdivision (b)(4) of assaulting a public officer when such officer is discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office presupposes lawful conduct of the public officer in discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office. State v. Jefferies, 17 N.C. App. 195, 193 S.E.2d 388 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 673, 194 S.E.2d 153 (1973).

Where the evidence is so conflicting as to raise the question of whether the law officer is acting lawfully, the jury must be properly instructed by the trial judge. State v. Bradley, 32 N.C. App. 666, 233 S.E.2d 603 (1977).

Although a warrant charging a violation of subdivision (b)(4) of this section is sufficient if it alleges only in general terms that the officer was discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office at the time the assault occurred, without alleging specifically what that duty was, to sustain a conviction of violating that statute it is still necessary that the State present evidence and that the jury find under appropriate instructions from the court that the officer was discharging or attempting to discharge some duty of his office when the defendant assaulted him. State v. Waller, 37 N.C. App. 133, 245 S.E.2d 808 (1978).

A charge under this section requires all the essential elements of a charge under § 14-223. State v. Caldwell, 21 N.C. App. 723, 205 S.E.2d 322 (1974).

Resisting Officer and Assaulting Officer Are Separate Offenses. — The charge of resisting an officer and the charge of assaulting a public officer while discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office are separate and distinct offenses and the trial judge did not err in failing to "merge" them. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320, appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

In a prosecution for resisting arrest and assaulting a police officer, where the warrants charge the same conduct and the evidence clearly shows that no line of demarcation between defendant's resistance of arrest and his assaults upon the officer could be drawn, the assaults being the means by which the resistance was accomplished, the State must elect between the duplicate charges. State v. Hardy, 33 N.C. App. 722, 236 S.E.2d 709 (1977), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 298 N.C. 191, 257 S.E.2d 426 (1979).

There is a distinction between the offenses of resisting an officer under § 14-223 and assault on an officer under subdivision (b)(4) of this section. In the offense of resisting an officer, the resisting of the public officer in the performance of some duty is the primary conduct proscribed by that statute and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being resisted is of paramount importance and is very material to the preparation of the defendant's defense, while in the offense of assaulting a public officer in the performance of some duty, the assault on the officer is the primary conduct proscribed by the statute and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being assaulted is of secondary importance. State v. Waller, 37 N.C. App. 133, 245 S.E.2d 808 (1978).

The offense of unlawfully resisting, delaying or obstructing a public officer in the discharge of a duty of his office, under § 14-223, is not a lesser degree of the offense of assaulting a law-enforcement officer while he is discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office, under this section. State v. Hardy, 298 N.C. 191, 257 S.E.2d 426 (1979).

Where Warrants Based on § 14-223 and Subdivision (b)(4) Included Same Elements of Offense. — Where a defendant had been tried under two warrants, one for violating § 14-223 and the other for violating subdivision (b)(4), and where each warrant included all the elements of the offense charged in the other, and each specified only acts of violence which defendant directed at the officer's person while he was attempting to hold defendant in custody, the defendant had been twice convicted and sentenced for the same criminal offense, and the constitutional guaranty against double jeopardy protected a defendant from multiple punishments for the same offense. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972).

Conviction of Both Resisting Arrest and Assault on Officer. — Where the record revealed that defendant was convicted of both resisting arrest and assault on an officer in the performance of his duties on the same evidence, the defendant was twice convicted and sentenced for the same criminal offense. The fact that defendant was given concurrent sentences did not make the duplication of punishment and sentences any less a violation of defendant's constitutional right not to be put in jeopardy twice for the same offense. State v. Raynor, 33 N.C. App. 698, 236 S.E.2d 307 (1977).

It is possible that the facts in a given case might constitute a violation of both this section and § 14-223. In such a case the defendant could not be punished twice for the same conduct. State v. Hardy, 298 N.C. 191, 257 S.E.2d 426 (1979).

Excessive Force by Officer. — In all cases where the charge is assault on a law officer in violation of subdivision (b)(4) of this section, or assault of a law officer with a firearm (§ 14-34.2), the use of excessive force by the law officer in making an arrest or preventing escape from custody does not take the officer outside the performance of his duties, nor does it make the arrest unlawful. State v. Mensch, 34 N.C. App. 572, 239 S.E.2d 297 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 443, 241 S.E.2d 845 (1978).

In a prosecution for assault on a police officer it is not incumbent upon the State to prove that the law officer did not use excessive force in making an arrest, but where there is evidence tending to show the use of such excessive force by the law officer, the trial court should instruct the jury that the assault by the defendant upon the law officer was justified or excused if the assault was limited to the use of reasonable force by the defendant in defending himself from that excessive force. State v. Mensch, 34 N.C. App. 572, 239 S.E.2d 297 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 443, 241 S.E.2d 845 (1978).

The right to use force to defend oneself against the excessive use of force during an arrest may arise despite the lawfulness of the arrest, and the use of excessive force does not render the arrest illegal. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

One resisting an illegal arrest is not resisting an officer within the discharge of his official duties. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

The bystander coming to the aid of an arrestee is entitled to use only such force as is reasonably necessary to defend the arrestee from the excessive use of force. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

One who comes to the aid of an arrestee must do so at his own peril and should be excused only when the individual would himself be justified in defending himself from the conduct of the arresting officers. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Instruction on Use of Reasonable Force to Resist Excessive Force. — When there is evidence tending to show the excessive use of force by a law-enforcement officer in making an arrest, the trial court is required to instruct the jury that the force used against the law-enforcement officer was justified or excused if the assault was limited to the use of reasonable force by defendant in defending himself from excessive force. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Included Offense under § 14-34.2. — Where defendants were charged with assault on a law-enforcement officer with a firearm under § 14-34.2 and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill under § 14-32, arrest of judgment upon their conviction of the lesser offense of assault with a deadly weapon was required, since assault and the use of a deadly weapon were necessarily included in the offense of assault on a law-enforcement officer with a firearm, and this result would punish defendants twice for the same offense. State v. Partin, 48 N.C. App. 274, 269 S.E.2d 250, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 404, 273 S.E.2d 449 (1980).

V. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Evidence Held Sufficient — Assault with Deadly Weapon. — The intentional firing of a high-powered rifle into or near a home, frightening the inmates and causing them to seek safety in the back of the house, would be sufficient evidence to make out a case of assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Blizzard, 280 N.C. 11, 184 S.E.2d 851 (1971).

Same — Assault on Female. — Evidence that the prisoner wakened the prosecutrix while she was asleep in her own room at night by placing his hand upon her forehead, was sufficient to convict of an assault upon a female, etc., and a motion as of nonsuit thereon could not be granted, though such evidence was insufficient for a conviction of the intent to ravish her. State v. Hill, 181 N.C. 558, 107 S.E. 140 (1921).

Evidence that a Negro man, 23 years of age, several times accosted a white girl 15 years of age, on the streets of a town, with improper solicitation, which resulted in her fleeing from him in a direction she had not intended to go, and, in her great fear of him, had caused her to become nervous and to lose sleep at night, was held to be such evidence of violence, begun to be executed with ability to effectuate it, as would come within the intent and meaning of this section making it a crime for a man or boy over 18 years of age to assault any female person. State v. Williams, 186 N.C. 627, 120 S.E. 224 (1923).

In a criminal prosecution upon an indictment charging defendant with assault with intent to commit rape wherein defendant tendered to the court a plea of guilty of an assault upon a female, it was held that while the court found that the assault was aggravated, shocking and outrageous to the sensibilities and decencies of right-thinking citizens, the court did not find the offense to be infamous and that the plea tendered by defendant, and accepted by the court, did not constitute a plea of guilty to an infamous offense, but, on the contrary, constituted a plea of guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in this section. State v. Tyson, 223 N.C. 492, 27 S.E.2d 113 (1943).

Where a female was approached at night on a city street by defendant, who made improper proposals and indecently exposed his person, without touching the said female, who thereupon ran a short distance to her home, the evidence was insufficient to support a conviction of assault with intent to commit rape, although it would warrant a conviction of an assault upon a female. State v. Gay, 224 N.C. 141, 29 S.E.2d 458 (1944).

In State v. Moore, 227 N.C. 326, 42 S.E.2d 84 (1947), the court held the evidence sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty of assault upon a female.

Evidence held sufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution for assault on a female. State v. Allen, 245 N.C. 185, 95 S.E.2d 526 (1956).

Same — Assault on Child. — There was ample evidence to support the verdict of guilty of assault on a child under 12 years of age. State v. Roberts, 286 N.C. 265, 210 S.E.2d 396 (1974).

Evidence Insufficient. — In State v. Silver, 227 N.C. 352, 42 S.E.2d 208 (1947), the court held the evidence insufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty of an assault upon a female.

VI. PUNISHMENT.

The 1911 amendment to this section was not intended to create a separate and distinct offense in law, to be known as an assault and battery by a man, or boy over 18 years of age, upon a woman, for it was always a crime for a man, or a boy over 18 years of age, to assault a woman. State v. Smith, 157 N.C. 578, 72 S.E. 853 (1911); State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E.2d 861 (1958).

This section creates no new offense and relates only to punishment. Under its provisions all assaults and assaults and batteries not made felonious by other statutes are general misdemeanors punishable in the discretion of the court, except that where no deadly weapon has been used and no serious damage done, the punishment may not exceed a fine of $50.00 or imprisonment for 30 days, unless the assault comes within one of the exceptions appearing in this section. Assaults and assaults and batteries upon a female by a man or boy over 18 years of age are expressly excluded from the exceptions and they remain general misdemeanors. State v. Jackson, 226 N.C. 66, 36 S.E.2d 706 (1946).

This section creates no new offense. It relates only to punishment. State v. Courtney, 248 N.C. 447, 103 S.E.2d 861 (1958); State v. Perry, 291 N.C. 586, 231 S.E.2d 262 (1977).

That defendant is over 18 years of age does not create a separate and distinct offense in a prosecution of such defendant for assault upon a female. State v. Beam, 255 N.C. 347, 121 S.E.2d 558 (1961).

This section deals with punishment for various types of assault — all common-law offenses. State v. Jones, 258 N.C. 89, 128 S.E.2d 1 (1962).

This section does not create a new offense as to assaults on a female, but only provides for different punishments for various types of assault. State v. Roberts, 270 N.C. 655, 155 S.E.2d 303 (1967).

Punishment — Extent. — While the language of this section authorizes a punishment for assault with or without intent to kill, by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court, it does not at all mean that the judge may change the character of punishment recognized and established by the law for such an offense, but that, within such limits, the extent of the fine and imprisonment, or both, is in the discretion of the trial judge, and his sentence may not be interfered with by the appellate court, except in case of manifest and gross abuse. State v. Smith, 174 N.C. 804, 93 S.E. 910 (1917).

Where in a trial of an indictment, under § 14-32, defendant was convicted of an assault with intent to kill and judgment rendered that defendant serve not less than three nor more than four years in the State's prison, there was error, as the offense described in the verdict was at most a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court as provided by this section. State v. Gregory, 223 N.C. 415, 27 S.E.2d 140 (1943).

When no imprisonment time is fixed by the statute, imprisonment for two years, as in the case of an assault with a deadly weapon, will not be held to be cruel and unusual punishment in violation of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 14 (see now N.C. Const., Art. I, § 27). State v. Crandall, 225 N.C. 148, 33 S.E.2d 861 (1945).

Where the offense charged, an assault wherein serious damage was inflicted, was a misdemeanor, conviction thereof did not support judgment of imprisonment in the State's prison from two to five years. State v. Malpass, 266 N.C. 403, 38 S.E.2d 156 (1946).

As long as the punishment rendered is within the maximum provided by law, an appellate court must assume that the trial judge acted fairly, reasonably and impartially in the performance of his office. State v. Cross, 27 N.C. App. 335, 219 S.E.2d 274 (1975).

Subsection (b) of this section and its subdivisions do not create additional or separate offenses. Instead, those subdivisions provide for differing punishments when the presence or absence of certain factors is established. State v. Gurganus, 39 N.C. App. 395, 250 S.E.2d 668 (1979).

Same — Limitation. — In prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon, appealing defendant relied upon and introduced evidence of self-defense and of matters in justification. The trial court instructed the jury that under the indictment and evidence the appealing defendant could be convicted of assault with a deadly weapon or of a simple assault. The jury convicted defendant of simple assault, but in imposing judgment the court found as a fact that said simple assault inflicted serious injury, and imposed a sentence of four months on the roads. It was held that the verdict of simple assault was permissible under the indictment and evidence, and the court was without power to sentence the appealing defendant to more than 30 days' imprisonment. State v. Palmer, 212 N.C. 10, 192 S.E. 896 (1937).

Although not elements of the crimes prohibited, the factors in subsection (b) of this section and its subdivisions must be shown to exist in order for the evidence to support a judgment imposing one of the greater sentences provided. State v. Gurganus, 39 N.C. App. 395, 250 S.E.2d 668 (1979).

Assault with a deadly weapon is a general misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment or both, at the discretion of the court. State v. Weaver, 264 N.C. 681, 142 S.E.2d 633 (1965); State v. Burris, 3 N.C. App. 35, 164 S.E.2d 52 (1968).

And the maximum legal sentence therefor is two years. State v. Weaver, 264 N.C. 681, 142 S.E.2d 633 (1965); State v. Burris, 3 N.C. App. 35, 164 S.E.2d 52 (1968).

Effect of Acquittal on Part of Verdict. — The fact that the jury convicted defendant of assault with a deadly weapon, after it had acquitted him in a previous part of the verdict of assault with a deadly weapon doing serious injury, did not entitle him to his discharge on his motion in arrest of judgment. State v. Bentley, 223 N.C. 563, 27 S.E.2d 738 (1943).

Sentence Suspended on Condition of Payment of Fine Improper. — Where defendant was found guilty of simple assault and the judgment imposed a jail sentence of 30 days which was suspended on condition that defendant pay a fine of $50.00 and costs of court, the judgment was not within the limits of this section. The penalty for violation of this section is phrased in the disjunctive. The imposition of a fine in addition to a jail sentence, exceeded the limitations of the statute, and the judgment was improper. State v. Allen, 42 N.C. App. 727, 257 S.E.2d 649 (1979).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Effect of 1969 Amendment. — This section, as rewritten in 1969, did not create new offenses. It merely classified assaults, assault and battery and affray as simple or aggravated and provided the amount of punishment which could be administered depending upon the elements of aggravation found. Opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Charles B. Winberry, 7th Judicial District Prosecutor, 40 N.C.A.G. 154 (1969).

§ 14-33.1. Evidence of former threats upon plea of self-defense.

In any case of assault, assault and battery, or affray in which the plea of the defendant is self-defense, evidence of former threats against the defendant by the person alleged to have been assaulted by him, if such threats shall have been communicated to the defendant before the altercation, shall be competent as bearing upon the reasonableness of the claim of apprehension by the defendant of bodily harm, and also as bearing upon the amount of force which reasonably appeared necessary to the defendant, under the circumstances, to repel his assailant. (1969, c. 618, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Evidence of threats is admissible in assault cases upon a plea of self-defense; therefore, it follows that, under proper factual circumstances, such evidence is admissible upon a plea of defense of others. State v. Graves, 18 N.C. App. 177, 196 S.E.2d 582 (1973).

Prior threats are admissible in assault cases where the defendant claims self-defense when the evidence of the threats is properly presented. State v. Butler, 21 N.C. App. 679, 205 S.E.2d 571 (1974).

§ 14-34. Assaulting by pointing gun.

If any person shall point any gun or pistol at any person, either in fun or otherwise, whether such gun or pistol be loaded or not loaded, he shall be guilty of an assault, and upon conviction of the same shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both such fine and imprisonment. (1889, c. 527; Rev., s. 3622; C. S., s. 4216; 1969, c. 618, s. $2^1/_2$.)

CASE NOTES

Intentional Pointing Pistol Must Be without Legal Justification. — The literal provisions of this section are subject to the qualification that the intentional pointing of a pistol is in violation thereof only if done willfully, that is, without legal justification. Lowe v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 244 N.C. 353, 93 S.E.2d 448 (1956); State v. Adams, 2 N.C. App. 282, 163 S.E.2d 1 (1968); State v. Spinks, 39 N.C. App. 340, 250 S.E.2d 90 (1979).

An officer, in making a lawful arrest, is not justified in pointing a loaded weapon at the person to be arrested except in good faith upon necessity, real or apparent. Lowe v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 244 N.C. 353, 93 S.E.2d 448 (1956).

Legal justification must be made to appear, whether it be an individual who intentionally points a pistol at his assailant in the exercise of a perfect right of self-defense or an officer who does so in good faith in the discharge of his official duty and when necessary or apparently necessary either to defend himself or to make a lawful arrest or otherwise to perform his official duty. But the mere fact that he is an officer engaged in the performance of an official duty does not perforce exempt him from the provisions of this section. Lowe v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 244 N.C. 353, 93 S.E.2d 448 (1956).

The pointing of a gun without legal justification is a violation of this section. State v. Walker, 34 N.C. App. 485, 238 S.E.2d 666 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

The rule is well established that a violation of this section requires the intentional pointing of a gun without legal justification or excuse. State v. Thornton, 43 N.C. App. 564, 259 S.E.2d 381 (1979).

And Is Negligence Per Se. — If any person intentionally points a pistol at any person, this action is in violation of this section and constitutes an assault. Moreover, such action, being in violation of the statute is negligence per se; and if the pistol accidentally discharges, the injured person may recover damages for actionable negligence. Lowe v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 244 N.C. 353, 93 S.E.2d 448 (1956).

And Constitutes Assault with a Deadly Weapon. — It is axiomatic that if the gun or pistol used is in fact a deadly weapon, then the pointing thereof is an assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Currie, 7 N.C. App. 439, 173 S.E.2d 49 (1970).

If a pistol is a deadly weapon and is pointed at the person of another, then such pointing is an assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Reives, 29 N.C. App. 11, 222 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 728, 224 S.E.2d 675 (1976).

Gun Need Not Be Loaded. — In an indictment for assault with a deadly weapon an instruction that if the State "had satisfied the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant pointed a pistol at the prosecutor, whether loaded or not, this would be an assault," and to find the defendant guilty, was correct under the provisions of this section. State v. Atkinson, 141 N.C. 734, 53 S.E. 228 (1906).

Pointing a gun at another under such circumstances as would not excuse its intentional discharge constitutes, in this and many other states, a statutory misdemeanor, and an accidental killing occasioned by it is manslaughter. In this State it is immaterial whether the gun is loaded or not. State v. Currie, 7 N.C. App. 439, 173 S.E.2d 49 (1970).

Accidental Discharge of Pointed Gun Resulting in Death Constitutes Manslaughter. — When one causes the death of another by an unlawful act which amounts to an assault on the person, as pointing a gun under circumstances which would not excuse its discharge, he is guilty at least of manslaughter. State v. Stitt, 146 N.C. 643, 61 S.E. 566 (1908).

Where one points a loaded gun at another, though without intention of discharging it, if the gun goes off accidentally and kills, it is manslaughter. State v. Coble, 177 N.C. 588, 99 S.E. 339 (1919); State v. Boldin, 227 N.C. 594, 42 S.E.2d 897 (1947).

Where one engages in an unlawful and dangerous act, such as "fooling with an old gun", i.e., using a loaded pistol in a careless and reckless manner, or pointing it at another, and kills the other by accident, he would be guilty of an unlawful homicide or manslaughter. State v. Hovis, 233 N.C. 359, 64 S.E.2d 564 (1951); State v. Stimpson, 279 N.C. 716, 185 S.E.2d 168 (1971).

With few exceptions, it may be said that every unintentional killing of a human being proximately caused by a wanton or reckless use of firearms, in the absence of intent to discharge the weapon, or in the belief that it is not loaded, and under circumstances not evidencing a heart devoid of a sense of social duty, is involuntary manslaughter. State v. Foust, 258 N.C. 453, 128 S.E.2d 889 (1963).

If a person intentionally pointed the gun at the deceased and it was then discharged, inflicting the wound of which he died, or if the person was at the time guilty of culpable negligence in the way he handled and dealt with the gun, and by reason of such negligence the gun was discharged, causing the death of deceased, in either event the person would be guilty of manslaughter, and this whether the discharge of the gun was intentional or accidental. State v. Currie, 7 N.C. App. 439, 173 S.E.2d 49 (1970).

If a person points a pistol at another in sport, as a joke, or to cause fright merely, believing and, perhaps, having some reason to think that it is not loaded, and subsequently pulls the trigger, causing the pistol to be discharged, and resulting in the killing of the person pointed at, he is guilty of manslaughter. State v. Currie, 7 N.C. App. 439, 173 S.E.2d 49 (1970).

Question of Guilt for Jury. — Where one pointed a gun at another and death ensued by its discharge evidence was sufficient to submit to the jury the question of the prisoner's guilt or innocence of the crime of manslaughter. State v. Turnage, 138 N.C. 566, 49 S.E. 913 (1905); State v. Limerick, 146 N.C. 649, 61 S.E. 568 (1908).

Discharging Firearm into Occupied Building Distinguished. — Since assault with a deadly weapon and assault by pointing a gun each involve the element of assault on a person, these two criminal offenses contain an element not essential to discharging a firearm into an occupied building and are not, therefore, lesser included offenses of that offense. State v. Bland, 34 N.C. App. 384, 238 S.E.2d 199 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 183, 241 S.E.2d 518 (1978).

Pointing Pistol in Pocket. — An instruction that if the jury were satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant had a pistol in his coat pocket and "with pistol and hand on the inside of his pocket, he pointed the pistol at the prosecutor, this would be an assault," is not error. State v. Atkinson, 141 N.C. 734, 53 S.E. 228 (1906).

Defendant Charged with Communicating Threats and Assault Was Not Subject to Double Jeopardy. — Where the defendant was charged with communicating threats and assault by pointing a gun, he was not subjected to double jeopardy, even though the charges arose out of the same incident, since the elements of the two offenses differed. State v. Evans, 40 N.C. App. 730, 253 S.E.2d 590, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 456, 256 S.E.2d 809 (1979).

Where there was no evidence that defendant intentionally pointed his pistol at anyone this section did not apply, and an instruction that the violation of the statute, proximately resulting in injury and death, would constitute manslaughter, must be held for error. The State's evidence of a statement by defendant to the effect that he was "dry firing" the pistol did not amount to evidence that defendant intentionally pointed the weapon at deceased, though it was competent upon the question of culpable negligence. State v. Kluckhohn, 243 N.C. 306, 90 S.E.2d 768 (1956).

Evidence Sufficient. — Defendant who pointed gun at the prosecutor was, under the circumstances, guilty of an assault at common law, if not under this section. State v. Scott, 142 N.C. 582, 55 S.E. 69 (1906).

Variance Between Pleading and Proof. — Where warrant charged defendant with assaulting prosecutrix with a deadly weapon, to wit, a pistol, by pointing the pistol at her, her testimony that the defendant pointed a "gun" at her was sufficient to carry the case to the jury as tending to show a violation of this section. State v. Barnes, 253 N.C. 711, 117 S.E.2d 849 (1961).

§ 14-34.1. Discharging certain barreled weapons or a firearm into occupied property.

Any person who willfully or wantonly discharges or attempts to discharge:

(1) Any barreled weapon capable of discharging shot, bullets, pellets, or other missiles at a muzzle velocity of at least 600 feet per second; or

(2) A firearm

into any building, structure, vehicle, aircraft, watercraft, or other conveyance, device, equipment, erection, or enclosure while it is occupied is guilty of a Class H felony. (1969, c. 341; c. 869, s. 7; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1981, c. 755.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable as provided in G.S. 14-2" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

The 1981 amendment substituted "or attempt to discharge: (1) Any barreled weapon capable of discharging shot, bullets, pellets, or other missiles at a muzzle velocity of at least 600 feet per second; or (2) A firearm" for "a firearm" and substituted "guilty of a Class H felony" for "punished as a Class H felon" at the end of the section.

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The protection of the occupant(s) of the building was the primary concern and objective of the General Assembly when it enacted this section. State v. Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973).

This section was enacted for the protection of occupants of the premises, vehicles, and other property described in the statute. A violation is a serious crime. State v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 525, 204 S.E.2d 864 (1974).

When Section Violated. — A person is guilty of the felony created by this section if he intentionally, without legal justification or excuse, discharges a firearm into an occupied building with knowledge that the building is then occupied by one or more persons or when he has reasonable grounds to believe that the building might be occupied by one or more persons. State v. Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973); State v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 525, 204 S.E. 864 (1974); State v. Gunn, 24 N.C. App. 561, 211 S.E.2d 508, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 724, 213 S.E.2d 724 (1975); State v. Zigler, 42 N.C. App. 148, 256 S.E.2d 479 (1979).

Same — Building Must Be Occupied. — This section is not violated unless the accused discharges or attempts to discharge the firearm into a building while it is occupied. State v. Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973).

The attempt to draw a sharp line between a "willful" act and a "wanton" act in the context of this section would be futile. The elements of each are substantially the same. State v. Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973); State v. Gunn, 24 N.C. App. 561, 211 S.E.2d 508, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 724, 213 S.E.2d 724 (1975).

Assault with Deadly Weapon Distinguished. — Discharging a firearm into an occupied building and assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury are entirely separate and distinct offenses. To prove the one, the State must show that defendant fired into an occupied building, an element which need not be shown to support the second charge. Likewise to prove the second charge, it must show the infliction of serious injury, which is not an element of the first charge. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

Assault with Deadly Weapon and Assault by Pointing Gun Are Not Lesser Included Offenses. — Since assault with a deadly weapon and assault by pointing a gun each involve the element of assault on a person, these two criminal offenses contain an element not essential to discharging a firearm into an occupied building and are not, therefore, lesser included offenses of that offense. State v. Bland, 34 N.C. App. 384, 238 S.E.2d 199 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 183, 241 S.E.2d 518 (1978).

Violation of this section is an unspecified felony within the purview of § 14-17. State v. Williams, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973).

And Can Result in Conviction of First-Degree Murder. — A homicide committed in the perpetration of the felony under this section can result in conviction for murder in the first degree under the felony-murder rule of § 14-17. State v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 525, 204 S.E.2d 864 (1974).

Indictment. — An indictment under this section, which charges the offense substantially in the words of the statute, contains allegations sufficient to apprise an accused of the offense with which he is charged and to enable the court to proceed to judgment. State v. Walker, 34 N.C. App. 271, 238 S.E.2d 154 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

Indictment which failed to state that the defendant knew or should have known that the dwelling was occupied by one or more persons was not defective, and the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss for failure of the indictment to charge a crime under this section. State v. Walker, 34 N.C. App. 271, 238 S.E.2d 154 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

Instruction Held Proper. — Where the court instructed the jury that the intent required under this section was a specific intent which could be negated by the voluntary intoxication of the defendant, the charge to the jury is free from prejudicial error. State v. Gunn, 24 N.C. App. 561, 211 S.E.2d 508, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 724, 213 S.E.2d 724 (1975).

Where the trial judge specifically instructed the jury that before it could find the defendant guilty it must find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant acted "intentionally," this was clearly proper. State v. Gunn, 24 N.C. App. 561, 211 S.E.2d 508, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 724, 213 S.E.2d 724 (1975).

A correct charge under this section would provide that the accused would be guilty if the defendant intentionally, without legal justification or excuse, discharged a firearm into an occupied vehicle with knowledge that the vehicle was occupied by one or more persons or when he had reasonable grounds to believe that the vehicle might be occupied by one or more persons. State v. Tanner, 25 N.C. App. 251, 212 S.E.2d 695 (1975).

A correct charge would provide that the accused would be guilty if he intentionally, without legal justification or excuse, discharged a firearm into an occupied building with knowledge that the building was then occupied by one or more persons, or when the accused had reasonable grounds to believe that the building might be occupied by one or more persons. State v. Burris, 27 N.C. App. 656, 219 S.E.2d 807 (1975).

Although a preferable instruction to the jury would use the language "intentionally discharged a firearm," there was no prejudicial error by the use of the language "intentionally used a firearm." State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

Instruction Held Erroneous. — It was held that an instruction to the jury on a charge under this section was erroneous where it contained provision that the jury must find that "the gun was discharged; and first and last, that the defendant acted willfully or wantonly which means that he must have known that one or more persons were in the dwelling or apartment," in that it equated willful and wanton conduct with knowledge of occupancy of the building. State v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 525, 204 S.E.2d 864 (1974).

Instruction that equates willful and wanton conduct with knowledge of occupancy of the building and thereby attempts to condense two separate elements of the crime into one is in error. State v. Furr, 26 N.C. App. 335, 215 S.E.2d 840 (1975).

In a prosecution for willfully or wantonly discharging a firearm into an occupied dwelling in violation of this section, the trial court erred in giving an instruction which equated willful or wanton conduct with knowledge that the house in question was occupied by one or more persons when the defendant fired the shot. State v. Leeper, 27 N.C. App. 420, 219 S.E.2d 253 (1975).

Applied in State v. Tripp, 9 N.C. App. 518, 176 S.E.2d 892 (1970); State v. Lowery, 12 N.C. App. 538, 183 S.E.2d 797 (1971); State v. Snipes, 16 N.C. App. 416, 192 S.E.2d 62 (1972); State v. Tinsley, 283 N.C. 564, 196 S.E.2d 746 (1973); State v. Evans, 19 N.C. App. 731, 200 S.E.2d 213 (1973); State v. Locklear, 26 N.C.

§ 14-34.2. Assault with a firearm or other deadly weapon upon law-enforcement officer, fireman, or emergency medical services personnel.

Any person who commits an assault with a firearm or any other deadly weapon upon any:

(1) Law-enforcement officer;

(2) Fireman; or

(3) Emergency medical services personnel certified to transport patients, including ambulance attendants, emergency medical technicians, emergency medical technician intermediates, and emergency medical technician paramedics, when responding to a call;

in the performance of his duties shall be guilty of a Class I felony. (1969, c. 1134; 1977, c. 829; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1981, c. 535, s. 1.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall be fined or imprisoned for a term not to exceed five years in the discretion of the court" in the penalty provisions of the section as it stood before the 1981 amendment. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, rewrote this section, making it applicable to emergency medical services personnel, and making other changes of form.

CASE NOTES

Effect of Use of Excessive Force by Officer in Making Lawful Arrest. — While the use of excessive force in a lawful arrest may subject a law-enforcement officer to civil or criminal liability, it does not take the officer outside the performance of his duties for purposes of this section. State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977).

In all cases where the charge is assault on a law officer in violation of § 14-33(b)(4), or assault on a law officer with a firearm (this section), the use of excessive force by the law officer in making an arrest or preventing escape from custody does not take the officer outside the performance of his duties, nor does it make the arrest unlawful. State v. Mensch, 34 N.C. App. 572, 239 S.E.2d 297 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 443, 241 S.E.2d 845 (1978).

State Need Not Prove Lack of Excessive Force. — In a prosecution for assault on a police officer, it is not incumbent upon the State to prove that the law officer did not use excessive force in making an arrest. State v. Mensch, 34 N.C. App. 572, 239 S.E.2d 297 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 443, 241 S.E.2d 845 (1978).

Assault May Be Justified If Excessive Force Used. — Where there is evidence tending to show the use of excessive force by the law officer in making an arrest, the trial court should instruct the jury that the assault by the defendant upon the law officer was justified or excused if the assault was limited to the use of reasonable force by the defendant in defending himself from that excessive force. State v. Mensch, 34 N.C. App. 572, 239 S.E.2d 297 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 443, 241 S.E.2d 845 (1978).

Prosecution under This Section and § 14-32 Not Double Jeopardy. — Prosecution of defendants under this section for assault on a law-enforcement officer with a firearm and under § 14-32 for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill did not violate the prohibition against double jeopardy, nor did it require the State to elect prosecution under a single statute, though the facts underlying defendants' indictment under each statute were the same, since each offense required proof of an element which did not exist in the other charge. State v. Partin, 48 N.C. App. 274, 269 S.E.2d 250, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 404, 273 S.E.2d 449 (1980).

And Election Between Charges Not Required. — The trial court did not err in denying defendant's pretrial motion to require the State to elect between the charges of felonious assault with a deadly weapon upon a law-enforcement officer in the performance of his duties and felonious assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury since a defendant may be charged with more than one offense based on a given course of conduct, and even when an election ultimately will be necessary, the State is not required to elect prior to the introduction of evidence. State v. Ward, 301 N.C. 469, 272 S.E.2d 84 (1980).

Assault with Deadly Weapon Is Lesser Included Offense. — Where defendants were charged with assault on a law-enforcement officer with a firearm and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, arrest of judgment upon their conviction of the lesser offense of assault with a deadly weapon was required, since assault and the use of a deadly weapon were necessarily included in the offense of assault on a law-enforcement officer with a firearm, and this result would punish defendants twice for the same offense. State v. Partin, 48 N.C. App. 274, 269 S.E.2d 250, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 404, 273 S.E.2d 449 (1980).

Intent Is Presumed from Act. — In order to return a verdict of guilty of assault with a firearm upon a law-enforcement officer in the performance of his duties, the jury is not required to find the defendant possessed any intent beyond the intent to commit the unlawful act, and this will be inferred or presumed from the act itself. State v. Mayberry, 38 N.C. App. 509, 248 S.E.2d 402 (1978).

Admissibility of Result of Breathalyzer Test. — Where defendant was not driving or operating a vehicle at the time of the alleged assault on a police officer, the court erred in admitting testimony showing the result of a breathalyzer test. State v. Powell, 18 N.C. App. 732, 198 S.E.2d 70, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 757, 198 S.E.2d 727 (1973).

Applied in State v. Jenkins, 12 N.C. App. 387, 183 S.E.2d 268 (1971); State v. Berry, 13 N.C. App. 310, 185 S.E.2d 463 (1971); State v. Cornell, 281 N.C. 20, 187 S.E.2d 768 (1972); State v. Norton, 14 N.C. App. 136, 187 S.E.2d 364 (1972); State v. Hammock, 22 N.C. App. 439, 206 S.E.2d 773 (1974); State v. Polk, 29 N.C. App. 360, 224 S.E.2d 272 (1976); State v. Thomas, 29 N.C. App. 757, 226 S.E.2d 163 (1976); State v. Spellman, 40 N.C. App. 591, 253 S.E.2d 320 (1979).

ARTICLE 9.

Hazing.

§ 14-35. Hazing; definition and punishment.

It shall be unlawful for any student in any college or school in this State to engage in what is known as hazing, or to aid or abet any other student in the commission of this offense. For the purposes of this section hazing is defined as follows: "to annoy any student by playing abusive or ridiculous tricks upon him, to frighten, scold, beat or harass him, or to subject him to personal indignity." Any violation of this section shall constitute a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1913, c. 169, ss. 1, 2, 3, 4; C. S., s. 4217; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

§ 14-36. Expulsion from school; duty of faculty to expel.

Upon conviction of any student of the offense of hazing, or of aiding or abetting in the commission of this offense, he shall, in addition to any punishment imposed by the court, be expelled from the college or school he is attending. The faculty or governing board of any college or school charged with the duty of expulsion of students for proper cause shall, upon such conviction at once expel the offender, and a failure to do so shall be a misdemeanor. (1913, c. 169, ss. 5, 6; C. S., s. 4218.)

§ 14-38. Witnesses in hazing trials; no indictment to be founded on self-criminating testimony.

In all trials for the offense of hazing any student or other person subpoenaed as a witness in behalf of the State shall be required to testify if called upon to do so: Provided, however, that no student or other person so testifying shall be amenable or subject to indictment on account of, or by reason of, such testimony. (1913, c. 169, s. 8; C. S., s. 4220.)

Article 10.

Kidnapping and Abduction.

§ 14-39. Kidnapping.

(a) Any person who shall unlawfully confine, restrain, or remove from one place to another, any other person 16 years of age or over without the consent of such person, or any other person under the age of 16 years without the consent of a parent or legal custodian of such person, shall be guilty of kidnapping if such confinement, restraint or removal is for the purpose of:

(1) Holding such other person for ransom or as a hostage or using such other person as a shield; or

(2) Facilitating the commission of any felony or facilitating flight of any person following the commission of a felony; or

(3) Doing serious bodily harm to or terrorizing the person so confined, restrained or removed or any other person.

(b) There shall be two degrees of kidnapping as defined by subsection (a). If the person kidnapped either was not released by the defendant in a safe place or had been seriously injured or sexually assaulted, the offense is kidnapping in the first degree and is punishable as a Class D felony. If the person kidnapped was released in a safe place by the defendant and had not been seriously injured or sexually assaulted, the offense is kidnapping in the second degree and is punishable as a Class E felony.

(c) Any firm or corporation convicted of kidnapping shall be punished by a fine of not less than five thousand dollars ($5,000) nor more than one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), and its charter and right to do business in the State of North Carolina shall be forfeited. (1933, c. 542; 1975, c. 843, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote subsection (b). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited in the following annotation were decided under this section as it stood prior to the 1975 amendment. At that time the statute did not specifically define kidnapping and was construed as incorporating common-law elements of kidnapping. They should be read in light of State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977) and State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978) which held that the 1975 amendment superseded the common law.

All of the cases cited in the following annotation were decided prior to the effective date (July 1, 1981) of the 1979 amendment which created two degrees of kidnapping.

History. — A former statute, C.S., s. 4221, provided that any person who forcibly or fraudulently kidnapped any person should be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction might be punished in the discretion of the court, not exceeding 20 years in the State's prison. As a result of the kidnapping and death in the Lindbergh tragedy, the General Assembly of North Carolina repealed C.S., s. 4221 by the enactment of Public Laws 1933, c. 542, now codified as this section. State v. Bruce, 268 N.C. 174, 150 S.E.2d 216 (1966).

The effect of the section as it stood prior to the 1975 amendment, repealing C.S., s. 4221, was to increase within the discretion of the court the maximum punishment for kidnapping from twenty years to life, and not to make a life term mandatory upon conviction, the intent of this section to this effect being shown by the use of the word "punishable" in prescribing the sentence. State v. Kelly, 206 N.C. 660, 175 S.E. 294 (1934); State v. Bruce, 268 N.C. 174, 150 S.E.2d 216 (1966).

Effect of 1975 Amendment. — Though this section, as amended in 1975, is broader than common-law kidnapping in that it eliminates asportation as a necessary element of the crime, it is restrictive in that, by limiting kidnapping to unlawful confinement, restraint or asportation for the purposes enumerated it does not include some of the situations covered by the common-law crime. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

The present statutory definition of the crime of kidnapping, enacted in 1975, must be construed in the light of recent decisions of the Supreme Court decided prior to the rewriting of the statute. When so considered, it is clear that the legislature intended to change the law as therein declared. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Common Law Superseded. — This section, as amended in 1975, supersedes the common-law crime of kidnapping. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Since this section supersedes the common-law crime of kidnapping, common-law kidnapping no longer exists in North Carolina. State v. Holmon, 36 N.C. App. 569, 244 S.E.2d 491 (1978).

The present statutory definition of the crime of kidnapping enacted in 1975 changed the law as theretofore declared by the Supreme Court. State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

This section follows the pattern of the kidnapping provision, § 212.1, of the Model Penal Code. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

Constitutionality. — This section, on its face, does not violate the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, or the law of the land clause of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, or the cruel or unusual punishment clause of either Constitution. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

This section, as herein construed, is not vague. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

This section applies to all who violate it without exception or classification. Consequently, it does not, upon its face, violate the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States or the like clause contained in N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

This section does not interfere with or prohibit any activity protected by the First Amendment or any other federal or State constitutional provision. It is a penal statute completely within the State's police power. The doctrine of overbreadth has no application to it. State v. Banks, 295 N.C. 399, 245 S.E.2d 743 (1978).

This section is neither unconstitutionally vague nor "overbroad." State v. Banks, 295 N.C. 399, 245 S.E.2d 743 (1978).

The procedure here outlined comports with both State and federal constitutional requirements. The procedures prescribed for the sentencing hearing in § 15A-1334(b) accord due process. That the judge rather than the jury makes the crucial factual determinations upon which the ultimate sentence is based does not contravene either State or federal constitutional guaranties of a jury trial in criminal cases. Neither is it violative of constitutional due process to place the burden of persuasion as to the existence of the mitigating factors on the defendant. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

This section prima facie violates no provision of the State or federal Constitutions. State v. Silhan, 297 N.C. 660, 256 S.E.2d 702 (1979).

II. WHAT CONSTITUTES KIDNAPPING.

A. In General.

Subsection (a) of this section defines the offense of kidnapping. Proof of the elements set forth therein is all that the statute requires for a conviction of kidnapping. State v. Brady, 299 N.C. 547, 264 S.E.2d 66 (1980).

"Kidnapping" Defined. — Subsection (a) of this section defines kidnapping as (1) an unlawful, nonconsensual restraint, confinement or removal from one place to another (2) for the purpose of committing or facilitating the commission of certain specified acts. On its face, this is all this section requires for a conviction of kidnapping. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

The gist of the offense proscribed by this section is the unlawful, nonconsensual confinement, restraint or removal of victim, for the purposes of committing certain acts specified in the statute. State v. Martin, 47 N.C. App. 223, 267 S.E.2d 35 (1980).

Same — "Aggravated Kidnapping" a Misnomer. — While some of the opinions of the Supreme Court refer to the crime defined in subsection (a) as "aggravated kidnapping," this is a misnomer. The proper term for the crime there defined is "kidnapping." State v. Banks, 295 N.C. 399, 245 S.E.2d 743 (1978).

As used in this section, the term "confine" connotes some form of imprisonment within a given area, such as a room, a house or a vehicle. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

The term "restrain," while broad enough to include a restriction upon freedom of movement by confinement, connotes also such a restriction, by force, threat or fraud, without a confinement. Thus, one who is physically seized and held, or whose hands or feet are bound, or who, by the threatened use of a deadly weapon, is restricted in his freedom of motion, is restrained within the meaning of this statute. Such restraint, however, is not kidnapping unless it is (1) unlawful (i.e., without legal right), (2) without the consent of the person restrained (or of his parent or guardian if he be under 16 years of age), and (3) for one of the purposes specifically enumerated in the statute. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

The word "restrain," as used in this section connotes a restraint separate and apart from that which is inherent in the commission of the other felony. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Certain felonies (e.g., forcible rape and armed robbery) cannot be committed without some restraint of the victim. This section was not intended by the legislature to make a restraint, which is an inherent, inevitable feature of such other felony, also kidnapping so as to permit the conviction and punishment of the defendant for both crimes. To hold otherwise would violate the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978); State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

The term "hostage" as used in subdivision (a)(1) of this section implies the unlawful taking, restraining or confining of a person with the intent that the person, or victim, be held as security for the performance or forbearance of some act by a third person. State v. Lee, 33 N.C. App. 162, 234 S.E.2d 482 (1977).

The victim's age is not an essential element of the crime of kidnapping itself, but it is, instead, a factor which relates to the State's burden of proof in regard to consent. If the victim is shown to be under 16, the State has the burden of showing that he or she was unlawfully confined, restrained, or removed from one place to another without the consent of a parent or legal guardian. Otherwise, the State must prove that the action was taken without his or her own consent. State v. Hunter, 299 N.C. 29, 261 S.E.2d 189 (1980); State v. Martin, 47 N.C. App. 223, 267 S.E.2d 35 (1980).

Asportation Not Essential. — This section, as amended in 1975, removes asportation as an essential element of the crime of kidnapping. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978); see State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

The legislature rejected the decision in State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971) to the effect that there must be both detention and asportation of the victim, the statute plainly stating that confinement, restraint or removal of the victim for any one of the three specified purposes is sufficient to constitute the offense of kidnapping. Thus, no asportation whatever is now required where there is the requisite confinement or restraint. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Substantiality of Time or Distance Not Essential. — The legislature in 1975 rejected the determinations in State v. Dix, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973), and in State v. Roberts, 286 N.C. 265, 210 S.E.2d 396 (1974), to the effect that, where the State relies upon asportation of the victim to establish a kidnapping, the asportation must be for a substantial distance and where the State relies upon "dominion and control," i.e., "confinement" or "restraint," such must continue "for some appreciable period of time." Thus, it was clearly the intent of the legislature to make resort to a tape measure or a stop watch unnecessary in determining whether the crime of kidnapping has been committed. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978); State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

For cases on immateriality of distance where kidnapping is by asportation, see analysis line II (B).

The use of actual physical force or violence is not always essential to the commission of the offense of kidnapping, as the word "kidnap" is used in this section and as it is defined at common law. State v. Bruce, 268 N.C. 174, 150 S.E.2d 216 (1966).

The use of actual physical force or violence is not always essential to the commission of the offense of kidnapping. State v. Penley, 277 N.C. 704, 178 S.E.2d 490 (1971); State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1974).

And Threats Are Equivalent to Actual Force. — The crime of kidnapping is frequently committed by threats and intimidation and appeals to the fears of the victim which are sufficient to put an ordinarily prudent person in fear for his life or personal safety, and to overcome the will of the victim and secure control of his person without his consent and against his will, and are equivalent to the use of actual force or violence. State v. Bruce, 268 N.C. 174, 150 S.E.2d 216 (1966); State v. Penley, 277 N.C. 704, 178 S.E.2d 490 (1971); State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1974).

Threats and intimidation are equivalent to the use of actual force or violence. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971); State v. Hudson, 281 N.C. 100, 187 S.E.2d 756 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1160, 94 S. Ct. 920, 39 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1974).

Same — Threats by actions may be more effective than when made by mere words, and defendant's uninvited entrance into the car in itself constituted a threat under this section. State v. Ballard, 28 N.C. App. 146, 220 S.E.2d 205 (1975).

Defendant's conduct on first entering a car and in directing the driver/victim where to drive constituted such a threat as to put an ordinarily prudent person in fear for her life or personal safety so as to secure control of her person against her will, and from that point on there was an ample showing of asportation to constitute the crime of kidnapping. State v. Ballard, 28 N.C. App. 146, 220 S.E.2d 205 (1975).

Likewise Crime May Be Committed by Means of Fraud Which Is Considered Equivalent to Force. — The crime of kidnapping by its very nature cannot ordinarily be committed by an act to which a person, being capable in law of consenting, consents in a legally valid manner. But where false and fraudulent representations or fraud amounting substantially to a coercion of the will of the kidnapped person are used as a substitute for force in effecting kidnapping, there is, in truth and in law, no consent at all on the part of the victim. In brief, under those circumstances the law has long considered fraud and violence as the same in the kidnapping of a person. State v. Gough, 257 N.C. 347, 126 S.E.2d 118 (1962), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), error denied, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

The use of fraud instead of force to effect a kidnapping is a violation of the kidnapping statute. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

Where false and fraudulent representations or fraud amounting substantially to a coercion of the will of the kidnapped person are used as a substitute for force in effecting kidnapping, there is, in truth and in law, no consent at all on the part of the victim; and under those circumstances the law has long considered fraud and violence as the same in the kidnapping of a person. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

Under the pristine law of kidnapping, actual physical force was contemplated to accomplish the crime — fraud was not considered; however the Supreme Court has recognized that one's will may be coerced as effectually by fraud as by force. State v. Murphy, 280 N.C. 1, 184 S.E.2d 845 (1971).

Where false and fraudulent representations amounting substantially to a coercion of the will of the victim are used in lieu of force in effecting kidnapping, there is in law no consent at all on the part of the victim. Under those circumstances the law considers fraud the equivalent of force. State v. Murphy, 280 N.C. 1, 184 S.E.2d 845 (1971).

Apparent consent, having been obtained by fraud, was no consent at all but simply the fruit of fraud amounting substantially to a coercion of the victim's will. State v. Murphy, 280 N.C. 1, 184 S.E.2d 845 (1971).

In the kidnapping of a person the law considers the use of fraud as synonymous with force. State v. Hudson, 281 N.C. 100, 187 S.E.2d 756 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1160, 94 S. Ct. 920, 39 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1974).

A person may be kidnapped by fraud as well as by force. State v. Alston, 294 N.C. 577, 243 S.E.2d 354 (1978).

Same — Legislative Intent. — Nothing in this section, as now written, indicates any legislative intent to change the holding in State v. Hudson, 281 N.C. 100, 187 S.E.2d 756 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1160, 94 S. Ct. 920, 39 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1974), to the effect that the use of fraud, threats or intimidation is equivalent to the use of force or violence so far as a charge of kidnapping is concerned. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

It is not necessary for the unlawfulness to exist from the beginning of the transaction. State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1974).

Purpose of Exposure to Danger Must Be Among Those Enumerated in Statute. — Regardless of the danger to which the victims are exposed, unless the purpose of the exposure is either felonious, or otherwise enumerated, not merely unlawful, the statutory crime of kidnapping has not been committed. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

When Person Is Guilty of Kidnapping. — Under this section a person is guilty of kidnapping (1) if he kidnaps or causes to be kidnapped any human being, or (2) if he demands a ransom of any person, firm or corporation, male or female, to be paid on account of kidnapping, or (3) if he holds any human being for ransom. State v. Gough, 257 N.C. 348, 126 S.E.2d 118 (1962), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), error denied, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

False Imprisonment Distinguished. — The common-law crime of false imprisonment, a general misdemeanor, has not been superseded by this section, as amended in 1975, because there may be an unlawful restraint without the purposes specified in the statute. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

There could be no kidnapping without there first being a false imprisonment. State v. Owen, 24 N.C. App. 598, 211 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 263, 214 S.E.2d 435 (1975).

Same — At common law forcible detention was false imprisonment, not kidnapping. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971); State v. Dix, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

False imprisonment was indictable as a specific crime at common law, and this doctrine still applies in states where the common law has been adopted. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

North Carolina does not have a criminal statute making false imprisonment a crime. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

B. Kidnapping by Asportation.

Unlawful Removal Constitutes Kidnapping. — Where a defendant by force and threat of violence took a person and carried him where he did not consent to go, this constitutes kidnapping under this section. State v. Penley, 277 N.C. 704, 178 S.E.2d 490 (1971).

The unlawful taking and carrying away of a human being fraudulently is kidnapping within the meaning of this section. State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1972).

Distance of Removal Immaterial. — It is the fact, not the distance, of forcible removal of the victim that constitutes kidnapping. State v. Lowry, 263 N.C. 536, 139 S.E.2d 870, cert. denied, 382 U.S. 22, 86 S. Ct. 227, 15 L. Ed. 2d 16 (1965); State v. Reid, 5 N.C. App. 424, 168 S.E.2d 511 (1969); State v. Dix, 14 N.C. App. 328, 188 S.E.2d 737 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

The asportation requirement has been relaxed so that any carrying away is sufficient, and the distance the victim is carried is immaterial. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971); State v. Dix, 14 N.C. App. 328, 188 S.E.2d 737 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

Where the gravamen of the crime is the carrying away of the person, the place from or to which the person is transported is not material, and an actual asportation of the victim is sufficient to constitute the offense without regard to the extent or degree of such movement; it is the fact, not the distance, of forcible removal which constitutes kidnapping. State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1974); State v. Dix, 14 N.C. App. 328, 188 S.E.2d 737 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

Any carrying away is sufficient; the distance the victim is carried is immaterial. State v. Murphy, 280 N.C. 1, 184 S.E.2d 845 (1971).

The distance the victim is carried is not material. Any carrying away is sufficient. State v. Hudson, 281 N.C. 100, 187 S.E.2d 756 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1160, 94 S. Ct. 920, 39 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1974).

In a proper case, the removal of the victim only a few feet could be sufficient to constitute kidnapping. State v. Owen, 24 N.C. App. 598, 211 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 263, 214 S.E.2d 435 (1975).

Same — Shift of Location within Same Structure May Constitute Carrying Away. — Where the shift of location or removal was done within a physical structure such a removal constituted a carrying away and sufficiently established the offense of kidnapping. State v. Dix, 14 N.C. App. 328, 188 S.E.2d 737 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

Same — Essential Element Is "Removal". — Since distance is not material to the "carrying away," the essential element must be the term "removal." State v. Dix, 14 N.C. App. 328, 188 S.E.2d 737 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

Manner of Asportation Immaterial. — Under this section, regardless of the means used, by which the taking and carrying away of a human being is effected, there must be further finding that such taking and carrying away was unlawful or done without lawful authority, or effected by fraud. State v. Witherington, 226 N.C. 211, 37 S.E.2d 497 (1946), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), error denied, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Standing alone, the fact that the taking and carrying away of the victim was accomplished by means of a truck owned and operated by the victim is of no avail as a defense to the alleged kidnapping. State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1974).

C. Kidnapping to Facilitate Commission of Felony.

There is no constitutional barrier to the conviction of a defendant for kidnapping, by restraining his victim, and also of another felony to facilitate which such restraint was committed, provided the restraint, which constitutes the kidnapping, is a separate, complete act, independent of and apart from the other felony. Such independent and separate restraint need not be, itself, substantial in time, under this section as now written. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Under this section it is necessary to prove that the confinement, restraint, or removal is for the purpose of, among other alternatives, "facilitating the commission of any felony," and if the intended felony is actually completed, the defendant can be convicted and sentenced for kidnapping and the intended felony without violating the Double Jeopardy Clause of the Fifth Amendment. State v. Handsome, 300 N.C. 313, 266 S.E.2d 670 (1980).

Elements of Kidnapping and Felony Held to Be Distinct. — The argument that assault and assault on a female are essential elements of rape and since the defendants were convicted of assault and assault on a female, respectively, when tried under the indictment for kidnapping, they have been formerly in jeopardy with reference to the offenses now charged in the indictments for rape, is ingenious but without merit. In the first place, a simple assault is probably not, and an assault on a female is certainly not, an essential element of the crime of kidnapping, since the victim of a kidnapping need not be a female and may be enticed away by fraud rather than forced by violence or threat to accompany the abductor. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967).

In a prosecution for aggravated kidnapping the felonious assault alleged in the indictment as being one of the purposes for which defendant removed the victim from one place to another was not an element of the kidnapping offense, since it was not necessary for the State to prove the felonious assault in order to convict the defendant of kidnapping, but only to prove that the purpose of the removal was a felonious assault. The felonious assault was, consequently, a separate and distinct offense and the defendant could be convicted and sentenced on both the assault and the kidnapping charges. State v. Dammons, 293 N.C. 263, 237 S.E.2d 834 (1977); State v. Martin, 47 N.C. App. 223, 267 S.E.2d 35 (1980).

Where the restraint of the two victims was for the purpose of facilitating the commission of the felony of crime against nature and for the purpose of facilitating the flight of the defendant from the room after the perpetration of the two crimes, the restraint of each woman was separate and apart from, and not an inherent incident of the crime against nature, though closely related thereto in time, and either of such purposes satisfied the statutory definition of kidnapping. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

When the State proves the elements of kidnapping and the purpose for which the victim was confined or restrained, conviction of the kidnapping may be sustained. Thus, the crimes of crime against nature, assault with intent to commit rape and robbery with a dangerous weapon are separate and distinct offenses and are punishable as such. State v. Banks, 295 N.C. 399, 245 S.E.2d 743 (1978).

The principal that when a criminal offense in its entirety is an essential element of another offense a defendant may not be punished for both offenses was not applicable in a prosecution for two counts of kidnapping and for robbery and other felonies for which the victims were kidnapped since in order to prove kidnapping it was only necessary to prove a purpose of robbery and the other felonies and not the commission of the felonies themselves. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

Even though both the prosecution and the trial court treated the "serious injury" arising out of the felonious assault charge and the "sexual assault" arising out of the rape charge as elements of the respective kidnappings in a prosecution for two counts of kidnapping, first-degree rape, two counts of armed robbery, and assault with a deadly weapon with the intent to kill inflicting serious bodily injury, the convictions and sentencing of the defendant for the kidnappings, and the assault and rape were not violations of the Double Jeopardy Clause of the United States Constitution or the Law of the Land Clause of the North Carolina Constitution. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

In a prosecution for kidnapping and armed robbery, the restraint and asportation of the victim consisting of moving her from the store to a hallway in the rear of the building and tying her to a grocery cart was not necessary to and not a part of the armed robbery, and the elements of the two offenses were not the same. Thus, conviction of both crimes did not violate due process and equal protection standards. State v. Vert, 39 N.C. App. 26, 249 S.E.2d 476 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 739, 254 S.E.2d 181 (1979).

In a prosecution for rape and kidnapping, where the victim was by trick enticed into defendant's automobile and transported about six blocks away where by force and by threat of the use of a knife, she was raped, and during a period of about 45 minutes, the victim was under the complete dominion and control of defendant, the restraint accompanying the rape was not an inherent, inevitable feature of the kidnapping. Under these circumstances, the kidnapping was a separate, complete act independent of the later committed crime of rape. Thus, the constitutional problem of double jeopardy did not arise and defendant failed to show denial of due process. State v. Wilson, 296 N.C. 298, 250 S.E.2d 621 (1979).

The restraint, confinement and asportation of a rape victim may constitute kidnapping if it is a separate, complete act, independent of and apart from the rape. State v. Silhan, 297 N.C. 660, 256 S.E.2d 702 (1979).

Where a defendant is charged with kidnapping, rape and crime against nature, an essential element of each offense being a restraint, the defendant can be convicted for each offense without violating the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy where there is also a showing of asportation as an element of kidnapping. State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

Double jeopardy did not result when defendant was tried and convicted of kidnapping for the purpose of facilitating flight following his participation in an armed robbery and of armed robbery, since the intent of the legislature in establishing the punishment for kidnapping was to impose an indivisible penalty for restraint and removal for specified purposes, no hypothetical part of which penalty represents a punishment for the felony which gave rise to the flight of defendant and his removal of the victim, and the crimes of armed robbery and kidnapping involve vastly different social implications. State v. Martin, 47 N.C. App. 223, 267 S.E.2d 35 (1980).

III. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

A. Charges.

Prosecutorial Discretion in Choice of Crime. — When kidnapping, by definition overruns other crimes for which the prescribed punishment is less severe, a prosecutor has the naked and arbitrary power to choose the crime for which he will prosecute. State v. Dix, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

Consolidation of Kidnapping and Assault Charges. — Where the kidnapping and assault charges arose out of the same transaction and elements of the assault charge were essentials of the kidnapping charge, the consolidation of the assault and kidnapping charges was permissible under § 15-152 (now § 15A-926(a)). State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1974).

State Not Required to Elect between Charges of Kidnapping and Armed Robbery. — Where a victim was forced from his residence at gunpoint and transported by a car for a distance of eight miles, where he was robbed, there was sufficient asportation and evidence to support both kidnapping and armed robbery, and the State was not required to elect between charges. State v. Sommerset, 21 N.C. App. 272, 204 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 594, 205 S.E.2d 725 (1974).

Charge May Be Confined to "Kidnapping by Unlawful Restraint". — Since "confinement" and "restraint" are practically synonymous, and there must be restraint if there is confinement, and since unlawful removal from one place to another must involve unlawful restraint, in any kidnapping case the State may confine the charge against the defendant to kidnapping by unlawful restraint. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

B. Indictment.

Indictments Held Sufficient Prior to 1975 Amendment. — A bill of indictment charging that defendant "unlawfully, willfully, feloniously and forcibly did kidnap" a named person is sufficient to withstand a motion to quash, since the word "kidnap" has a definite legal meaning. State v. Penley, 277 N.C. 704, 178 S.E.2d 490 (1971); State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

Where the bill of indictment was drafted in the language of this section as it stood prior to the 1975 amendment, charging a defendant with kidnapping without defining the word, this is sufficient. If an indictment charges the offense in a plain, intelligible, and explicit manner and contains averments sufficient to enable the court to proceed to judgment, and to bar a subsequent prosecution for the same offense, it is sufficient. State v. Penley, 277 N.C. 704, 178 S.E.2d 490 (1971); State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

An indictment charging that defendant "unlawfully, did feloniously and forcibly kidnap" a person named was not defective or violative of North Carolina Const., Art. I, §§ 22 and 23 for failure to charge additionally that the victim was forcibly carried away against her will. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

Indictment Using Common-Law Definition No Longer Sufficient. — An indictment which would have been sufficient under this section prior to the 1975 Amendment because the term "kidnap" was given the common-law definition did not allege the elements required under this section which statutorily defines kidnapping and supersedes the common-law definition of kidnapping. The indictment could not be considered sufficient even to charge common-law kidnapping as a lesser included offense. State v. Holmon, 36 N.C. App. 569, 244 S.E.2d 491 (1978).

C. Burden of Proof.

The State has the burden of proof concerning those factors in this section which would subject the defendant to increased punishment. Where the State alleges in the bill of indictment the additional factor that will support the increased punishment, the State has accepted the burden of proof as to that factor. State v. Gunther, 38 N.C. App. 279, 248 S.E.2d 97 (1978), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 296 N.C. 578, 251 S.E.2d 462 (1979).

In order for the State to subject a defendant to a punishment of greater than 25 years (now punishment as a Class D felon) upon conviction of kidnapping, the State must allege and prove beyond a reasonable doubt that in the course of the kidnapping the defendant either sexually assaulted the victim, or seriously injured the victim, or released the victim in an unsafe place. State v. Gunther, 38 N.C. App. 279, 248 S.E.2d 97 (1978), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 296 N.C. 578, 251 S.E.2d 462 (1979).

Burden on Defendant to Show Mitigation. — There is no constitutional infirmity in placing the burden of persuasion as to the mitigating factors on the defendant. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

D. Evidence.

Inferring Intent to Rape. — On a charge of kidnapping with the intent to rape, the intent to commit rape may be inferred from the evidence without a showing of an actual physical attempt to have intercourse. State v. Lang, 46 N.C. App. 138, 264 S.E.2d 821, rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 508, 272 S.E.2d 123 (1980).

Evidence held sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the charge of kidnapping. State v. Dorsett, 245 N.C. 47, 95 S.E.2d 90 (1956), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

There was ample evidence to support convictions of kidnapping in State v. Williams, 275 N.C. 77, 165 S.E.2d 481 (1969).

Where a motorist who invited a hitchhiker to ride with him is compelled by the force and intimidation exerted upon him by the hitchhiker to abandon his own desired course of travel and to drive his car as commanded by the hitchhiker, there is a kidnapping. State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1974).

In a prosecution for first-degree rape and kidnapping where the defendant told the prosecutix she would not live to be 19 if she did not cooperate with him, and she had every reason to believe that he would carry out his threat to kill her, and the defendant had exhibited a knife and threatened the life of the prosecutrix with it, and the knife continued in use as long as it was accessible to him, there was ample evidence to submit the case to the jury on first-degree rape and kidnapping. State v. Dull, 289 N.C. 55, 220 S.E.2d 344 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

Evidence held sufficient for submission to jury on charge of aggravated kidnapping. See State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977).

Evidence held sufficient for submission to jury on charge of kidnapping. See State v. Hoots, 33 N.C. App. 258, 234 S.E.2d 764 (1977).

There was ample evidence of kidnapping in a prosecution for kidnapping, armed robbery, and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious bodily harm when defendant produced a pistol and forced the victim to walk 50 feet or more into the woods where he committed the felonious assault. State v. Alston, 294 N.C. 577, 243 S.E.2d 354 (1978).

Defendant's evidence was insufficient to meet his burden of providing the mitigating circumstances set forth in subsection (b) of this section, as it stood prior to the effective date of the 1979 amendment, by a preponderance of the evidence, and the trial judge acted properly within his discretion in sentencing defendant to life imprisonment for kidnapping, where the State presented substantial evidence tending to show that the victim was kidnapped, repeatedly raped by defendant and three other males and released near her home, and defendant's evidence to the contrary consisted of his own testimony denying participation in the offenses charged and the testimony of several witnesses which tended to show an alibi for defendant at the time the crimes were committed. State v. Squire, 302 N.C. 112, 273 S.E.2d 688 (1981).

E. Instructions to Jury.

Instructions which merely list but do not define and explain the elements of kidnapping to the jury are not sufficient. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Instructions on Elements of Kidnapping Held Improper. — Where the trial judge instructed the jury that kidnapping was the taking and carrying away without lawful authority of a human being by force, threat of force, or fraud, the trial judge failed to properly instruct the jury on the elements of kidnapping. State v. Wingo, 30 N.C. App. 123, 226 S.E.2d 221 (1976).

An instruction permitting the jury to find either of the defendants guilty of kidnapping if they found from the evidence that he confined, restrained or removed from one place to another either of the victims for the purpose of obtaining information, even though such a purpose is not one of the proscribed purposes set out in subsection (a) of this section was error and entitled the defendants to a new trial. State v. Hoots, 33 N.C. App. 258, 234 S.E.2d 764 (1977).

Instruction on Elements of Kidnapping Minor Not Prejudicial. — Defendant was not prejudiced by a portion of the charge in which the court stated that two of the essential elements of kidnapping a person under the age of 16 were that the victim did not consent, that the victim had not reached his sixteenth birthday, where the court in other portions of the charge instructed the jury that before it could find defendant guilty of kidnapping the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt, among other things, that he had not reached his sixteenth birthday; and that his parents did not consent to his confinement or restraint. State v. McGuire, 49 N.C. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 526, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 529, 273 S.E.2d 457 (1980).

Instruction Requiring Substantiality in Terms of Distance and Time Is Error. — The Court of Appeals erred in its holding that "substantiality" in terms of distance or time is an essential of kidnapping and in its pronouncements that the trial judge must instruct the jury that "confinement" or "restraint," as used in this statute, means confinement or restraint "for a substantial period" and that "removal," as used in this statute, requires a movement "for a substantial distance." State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

The failure of the trial court to instruct that kidnapping by unlawful confinement means confinement for a substantial period and not merely incidental to the commission of another crime; that kidnapping by unlawful restraint means restraint for a substantial period of time and not merely incidental to the commission of another crime; or that kidnapping by unlawfully moving one from one place to another means movement for a substantial distance and not merely incidental to the commission of another crime was not error in light of State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978). State v. Alston, 294 N.C. 577, 243 S.E.2d 354 (1978).

A charge to the jury that in order to constitute kidnapping under subsection (a) any unlawful confinement, restraint, or removal from one place to another must involve a substantial period or distance would be improper. State v. Silhan, 297 N.C. 660, 256 S.E.2d 702 (1979).

Instruction on "Distance Carried Away" Held Proper. — In prosecution for kidnapping, where the distance the victim was carried is immaterial, the court's instructing the jury that "any carrying away is sufficient, members of the jury, that is the distance he is carried is immaterial," though disapproved, did not constitute reversible error. State v. Owen, 24 N.C. App. 598, 212 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 263, 214 S.E.2d 435 (1975).

Charge on Unlawful Restraint Sufficient. — Any unlawful asportation involves unlawful restraint, and any unlawful confinement must involve unlawful restraint. Therefore, if a case were to involve asportation or confinement, it would not be necessary to charge on either. A charge on unlawful restraint would be sufficient. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Instruction on Kidnapping by Fraud. — If it be conceded arguendo that the evidence in this case was sufficient to require a charge on kidnapping by fraud as well as kidnapping by force, it is not perceived how a failure to charge on the fraudulent aspect of the matter was prejudicial to defendant, since kidnapping effected by fraud is still kidnapping, and failure to so charge would have been advantageous to defendant. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

Instruction Defining Terror. — In a prosecution for kidnapping, the trial judge was correct in defining terror for purposes of this section, as involving more than ordinary fear. State v. Jones, 36 N.C. App. 447, 244 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

Instructions as to Lesser Included Offenses. — Where there was no evidence of any included lesser offenses embraced within the indictments for rape and kidnapping, the court was under no duty to charge on lesser included offenses. State v. Bynum, 282 N.C. 552, 193 S.E.2d 725, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 836, 94 S. Ct. 182, 38 L. Ed. 2d 72 (1973).

In appropriate cases the trial judge should instruct the jury on false imprisonment as a lesser offense of kidnapping. State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977), aff'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Instructions on Theories Not Charged or Substantiated Held Improper. — Where theories of the crime neither supported by the evidence nor charged in the bill of indictment were included in the trial court's instructions to the jury in a prosecution for aggravated kidnapping, the defendant was entitled to a new trial. State v. Dammons, 293 N.C. 263, 237 S.E.2d 834 (1977).

In a prosecution for kidnapping upon an indictment charging defendant with unlawfully removing the victim from one place to another for the purpose of facilitating the commission of the felony of rape and for the purpose of facilitating the flight of defendant following the commission of a felony, the trial judge improperly instructed the jury on possible theories of conviction not charged in the indictment when he instructed that defendant would be guilty of kidnapping if the jury found that defendant's confinement or constraint of the victim was for the purpose of facilitating his flight from apprehension for another crime, or to obtain the use of her vehicle. State v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 164, 270 S.E.2d 409 (1980).

F. Sentencing.

Editor's Note. — All of the following cases concerning sentencing under subsection (b) were decided prior to the effective date (July 1, 1981) of the 1979 amendment to this section, which rewrote subsection (b) so as to create two degrees of the offense of kidnapping and which substituted the present felony classifications for each degree of kidnapping for former provisions concerning minimum and maximum sentences.

Purpose of Subsection (b). — Subsection (b) of this section seeks to reduce the possibility of harm to a victim who is in an already dangerous situation. In other words, it is intended to offer a kidnapper the inducement of a lesser sentence if he refrains from injuring or permitting injury to his victim. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

It is reasonable to assume that the General Assembly had a purpose similar to that of the Model Penal Code, which was to maximize the kidnapper's incentive to return the victim alive, in providing reduced punishment under subsection (b) of this section when the victim has been released in a safe place and has not been sexually assaulted or seriously injured. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

Nature of Mitigating Factors. — The mitigating factors in subsection (b) of this section are not the antithesis of any essential element of the crime of kidnapping. Proof of these factors does not negate any element of the crime of kidnapping which the state must prove. The mitigating factors are, in reality, pleas in avoidance or mitigation of punishment and not pleas in negation. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

No Jury Determination Required. — Since the mitigating factors to be found under subsection (b) of this section relate solely to the severity of the sentence and not to any element of the offense itself, a defendant is not entitled to a jury determination under either the federal or State Constitution. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

Determination Made by Judge. — The judge may make the determination with regard to the existence of the factors in subsection (b) of this section relating to sentencing from evidence adduced at the trial of the kidnapping case itself or at the sentencing hearing provided for in § 15A-1334 following the trial, or at both proceedings. If at either or both proceedings evidence of the existence of the mitigating factors has been presented, the judge must consider this and all other evidence bearing on the question. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978); State v. Bright, 301 N.C. 243, 271 S.E.2d 368 (1980).

Since the mitigating factors in subsection (b) of this section are not elements of any substantive criminal offense but bear solely on the question of punishment, having the judge determine these matters is not violative of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 24. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

Normally a jury need only determine whether a defendant has commited the substantive offense of kidnapping as defined in subsection (a) of this section. The factors set forth in subsection (b) of this section relate only to sentencing; therefore, their existence or nonexistence should properly be determined by the trial judge. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978); State v. Brady, 299 N.C. 547, 264 S.E.2d 66 (1980); State v. Bright, 301 N.C. 243, 271 S.E.2d 368 (1980).

No Findings Required. — If no evidence either at trial or at the sentencing hearing is adduced tending to show the existence of the mitigating factors in subsection (b) of this section then the judge, without making findings, may proceed to impose a sentence. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978); State v. Bright, 301 N.C. 243, 271 S.E.2d 368 (1980).

Same — Where Separate Criminal Charges Tried Jointly with Kidnapping. — When the question of the existence of the mitigating factors in subsection (b) of this section has, in effect, been submitted to the jury in the form of separate criminal charges tried jointly with the kidnapping case, and the jury finds defendant guilty, there is no need for the judge to make separate findings. The nonexistence of mitigating factors will already have been determined beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978); State v. Bright, 301 N.C. 243, 271 S.E.2d 368 (1980).

The trial court properly sentenced defendant to life imprisonment for kidnapping without making findings of fact concerning the mitigating circumstances as to whether the victim was released by the defendant in a safe place and had not been sexually assaulted or seriously injured, where charges of kidnapping and assault with intent to commit rape were submitted to the jury, the jury found defendant guilty of both charges, and the nonexistence of the mitigating factors of subsection (b) of this section was thus already established beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Bright, 301 N.C. 243, 271 S.E.2d 368 (1980)

The State may stipulate to the presence of all the mitigating factors in subsection (b) of this section and thereby avoid determination of the question. State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

Imposition of Concurrent Sentences Not Unconstitutional. — The imposition on defendant of two concurrent terms of life imprisonment for kidnapping and first-degree rape did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment since the sentences were authorized by this section and the former § 14-21; furthermore, the sentences did not violate defendant's equal protection rights because other persons involved in the same offenses received lesser punishments. State v. Squire, 302 N.C. 112, 273 S.E.2d 688 (1981).

§ 14-40. Enticing minors out of the State for the purpose of employment.

If any person shall employ and carry beyond the limits of this State any minor, or shall induce any minor to go beyond the limits of this State, for the purpose of employment without the consent in writing, duly authenticated, of the parent, guardian or other person having authority over such minor, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. The fact of the employment and going out of the State of the minor, or of the going out of the State by the minor, at the solicitation of the person for the purpose of employment, shall be prima facie evidence of knowledge that the person employed or solicited to go beyond the limits of the State is a minor. (1891, c. 45; Rev., s. 3630; C. S., s. 4222; 1969, c. 1224, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Count Joined with One under § 14-41. — An indictment for abduction, containing two counts, one under this section and the second under § 14-41, cannot be quashed for misjoinder of two different offenses, as the two counts are merely statements of the same transaction to meet the different phases of proof. State v. Burnett, 142 N.C. 577, 55 S.E. 72 (1906).

§ 14-41. Abduction of children.

If anyone shall abduct or by any means induce any child under the age of fourteen years, who shall reside with its father, mother, uncle, aunt, brother or elder sister, or shall reside at a school, or be an orphan and reside with a guardian, to leave such person or school, he shall be punished as a Class G felon. (1879, c. 81; Code, s. 973; Rev., s. 3358; C. S., s. 4223; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class G felon" for "guilty of a felony, and on conviction shall be fined or imprisoned in the State's prison for a period not exceeding fifteen years." The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

This section is broad and comprehensive in its terms, and embraces all means by which the child may be abducted. State v. Chisenhall, 106 N.C. 676, 11 S.E. 518 (1890).

The proviso in § 14-42 must be read in harmony with this section. State v. Walker, 35 N.C. App. 182, 241 S.E.2d 89 (1978).

Definition. — Abduction under this section, is the taking and carrying away of a child, ward, etc., either by fraud, persuasion, or open violence. The consent of the child is no defense. If there is no force or inducement and the departure of the child is entirely voluntary, there is no abduction. State v. Chisenhall, 106 N.C. 676, 11 S.E. 518 (1890); State v. Burnett, 142 N.C. 577, 55 S.E. 72 (1906).

Intent Not Required. — There is nothing in this section which requires that the abduction should be with a particular intent. It is only necessary to allege and prove that the child was abducted, or by any means induced to leave its custodian. State v. Chisenhall, 106 N.C. 676, 11 S.E. 518 (1890).

Force Not Required. — In a prosecution under this section it is not necessary for the State to show that the child was carried away by force. State v. Ashburn, 230 N.C. 722, 55 S.E.2d 333 (1949).

Father's Consent a Good Defense. — If the carrying away was with the father's consent, that fact is a defense the burden of which is upon the defendant. State v. Burnett, 142 N.C. 577, 55 S.E. 72 (1906).

Where the only inference reasonably deducible from the evidence in a prosecution under this section was that the defendant was acting with the consent of the child's father, the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for judgment as of nonsuit. State v. Walker, 35 N.C. App. 182, 241 S.E.2d 89 (1978).

Father Not Guilty in Absence of Order in Favor of Mother. — In the absence of a custody order in favor of the mother, the father of the child taken cannot be guilty of the crime of child abduction. State v. Walker, 35 N.C. App. 182, 241 S.E.2d 89 (1978).

The indictment need not state the means by which the abduction was accomplished, nor that it wad done without the consent and against the will of her father, State v. Burnett, 142 N.C. 577, 55 S.E. 72 (1906), nor that the defendant was not a nearer relation to the child than the person from whose custody the child was abducted. State v. George, 93 N.C. 567 (1885).

Evidence that defendant induced a minor to accompany him on a trip for immoral purposes by promising marriage is sufficient to sustain conviction. State v. Ashburn, 230 N.C. 722, 55 S.E.2d 333 (1949).

Use of Wrong Expression in Charge to Jury. — The rule that what the court says to the jury is to be considered in its entirety and contextually saves from successful attack the use, on a trial for abduction, of the expression "taken out," where the jury must have understood from the entire charge that the court meant thereby "taken away." State v. Truelove, 224 N.C. 147, 29 S.E.2d 460 (1944).

Removal of Child from State by Parent in Absence of Custody Order. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Roy R. Holdford, Jr., Solicitor, Second Solicitorial District, 40 N.C.A.G. 143 (1970).

Applicability to Arrest by Special Police. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. G.R. Rankin, Vanguard Security Service, 40 N.C.A.G. 152 (1970).

§ 14-42. Conspiring to abduct children.

If anyone shall conspire to abduct, or by any means to induce any child under the age of fourteen years, who shall reside with any of the persons designated in G.S. 14-41, or shall reside at school, to leave such persons or the school, he shall be punished as a Class G felon: Provided, that no one who may be a nearer blood relation to the child than the persons named in G.S. 14-41 shall be indicted for either of said offenses. (1879, c. 81, s. 2; Code, s. 974; Rev., s. 3359; C. S., s. 4224; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to persuading children to leave any State institution to which they have been legally committed, see § 14-266.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class G felon" for "guilty of a felony, and on conviction shall be punished as prescribed in that section." The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

The proviso in this section must be read in harmony with § 14-41. State v. Walker, 35 N.C. App. 182, 241 S.E.2d 89 (1978).

§ 14-43. Abduction of married women.

If any male person shall abduct or elope with the wife of another, he shall be punished as a Class H felon: Provided, that the woman, since her marriage, has been an innocent and virtuous woman: Provided further, that no conviction shall be had upon the unsupported testimony of any such married woman. (1903, c. 362; Rev., s. 3360; C. S., s. 4225; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be imprisoned not less than one year nor more than ten years." The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Elopement Defined. — Elopement of wife is her voluntary act in deserting her husband to go away with and cohabit with another man. State v. O'Higgins, 178 N.C. 708, 100 S.E. 438 (1919).

The fact that the wife had voluntarily left her husband falls within the definition of this section when this results from the unlawful scheming of the man to achieve that end. State v. Hopper, 186 N.C. 405, 119 S.E. 769 (1923).

Adultery after the elopement is an essential element of the offense under this section. State v. Ashe, 196 N.C. 397, 145 S.E. 784 (1928).

Effect of Prior Adultery. — In order to constitute the offense of abducting or eloping with a married woman, under this section, the seduction by the male may be accomplished by insistent persuasion under which the woman yields her consent to be carried away from the house of her husband by the defendant charged therewith and living with him in adultery; and the defense that the woman in the course of his scheme had yielded herself before the abduction is untenable when it was shown that the wife had not thus yielded herself to any other man than the defendant. State v. Hopper, 186 N.C. 405, 119 S.E. 769 (1923); State v. Temple, 240 N.C. 738, 83 S.E.2d 792 (1954).

Burden of Proof of First Proviso. — The State has the burden of proving the facts required under the first proviso of the section. State v. Connor, 142 N.C. 700, 55 S.E. 787 (1906).

The law requires proof of the fact that at the time of the commission of the offense the wife was an innocent and virtuous woman, before a conviction can be had under this section. State v. Temple, 240 N.C. 738, 83 S.E.2d 792 (1954).

Evidence. — Evidence tending to show that the defendant knew of the whereabouts of the wife of another after she had left her husband, a room thereof is competent upon the question ill fame, and that they had shut themselves in a room thereof is competent upon the question of the abduction and of their immoral relations and a circumstance to be submitted to the jury. State v. Ashe, 196 N.C. 387, 145 S.E. 784 (1928).

Same — Adultery. — In a prosecution under this section the necessary element of adultery may be shown by circumstantial evidence which satisfies the jury of the defendant's guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Ashe, 196 N.C. 387, 145 S.E. 784 (1928).

Same — Influence of Defendant. — Upon the question of influence of the defendant over the wife of another whom he is being tried for abducting and eloping with, it is competent to show the strength of the influence he had acquired, and the admission of testimony that the defendant had deserted his wife and dependent children, and also that the abducted woman had used her own money for expenses, is not subject to just exception. State v. Hopper, 186 N.C. 405, 119 S.E. 769 (1923).

Same — Virtuousness of Wife. — In an indictment under this section, where the character of the woman is by express terms of the statute directly in question, evidence as to her general character for virtue is admissible. State v. Connor, 142 N.C. 700, 55 S.E. 787 (1906).

Evidence that a married woman had retained her innocence and virtue through some 20 years of married life and through more than 15 months of professions of love for her by defendant, and that she did not have intercourse with defendant until some six days prior to the actual elopement, and after he had asked her to marry him, is sufficient upon the question of her innocence and virtue, since the requirement of the statute is fulfilled if her innocence and virtue existed at the beginning of the acts of the defendant which in sequence led to the elopement. State v. Temple. 240 N.C. 738, 83 S.E.2d 792 (1954).

Testimony of Husband as to Chastity. — On a criminal trial for abducting and eloping with a married woman, it is competent for her husband to testify as to the chastity of his wife up to the time the defendant had invaded his home; such testimony may be sufficient to sustain a conviction. State v. O'Higgins, 178 N.C. 708, 100 S.E. 438 (1919); State v. Hopper, 186 N.C. 405, 119 S.E. 769 (1923).

Testimony of Wife Supported by Others. — The provision of this section that no conviction of abduction or eloping with the wife of another may be had on the unsupported testimony of the wife as to her virtue, is complied with when the testimony of the wife is supported by evidence of others as to her previous good character. State v. Hopper, 186 N.C. 405, 119 S.E. 769 (1923).

Instructions. — Where the evidence is that the defendant and the married woman met in a bad house, it is not prejudicial or reversible error for the judge in the statement of facts in his instructions to call it a "bad" house or "house of ill fame," where this was not brought to his attention at the time. State v. Ashe, 196 N.C. 387, 145 S.E. 784 (1928).

In a prosecution under this section, an instruction that the married woman must have been innocent and virtuous at the time of the elopement "or at some time prior to the elopement," must be held for prejudicial error. State v. Temple, 240 N.C. 738, 83 S.E.2d 792 (1954).

§ 14-43.1. Unlawful arrest by officers from other states.

A law-enforcement officer of a state other than North Carolina who, knowing that he is in the State of North Carolina and purporting to act by authority of his office, arrests a person in the State of North Carolina, other than as is permitted by G.S. 15A-403, is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1973, c. 1286, s. 10.)

Article 11.

Abortion and Kindred Offenses.

§ 14-44. Using drugs or instruments to destroy unborn child.

If any person shall willfully administer to any woman, either pregnant or quick with child, or prescribe for any such woman, or advise or procure any such woman to take any medicine, drug or other substance whatever, or shall use or employ any instrument or other means with intent thereby to destroy such child, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1881, c. 351, s. 1; Code, s. 975; Rev., s. 3618; C. S., s. 4226; 1967, c. 367, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to instances when abortion not unlawful, see § 14-45.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than one year nor more than ten years, and be fined at the discretion of the court." The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Constitutional Power of State. — See Corkey v. Edwards, 322 F. Supp. 1248 (W.D.N.C. 1971), judgment vacated, 410 U.S. 950, 93 S. Ct. 1411, 34 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1973), for reconsideration in light of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 93 S. Ct. 705, 35 L. Ed. 2d 147, rehearing denied, 410 U.S. 959, 93 S. Ct. 1409, 35 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1973) and Doe v. Bolton, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201, rehearing denied, 410 U.S. 959, 93 S. Ct. 1410, 35 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1973).

This section and § 14-45 create separate and distinct offenses, the first statute being designed to protect the life of a child in ventre sa mere, and the second being primarily for the protection of the woman. State v. Jordon, 227 N.C. 579, 42 S.E.2d 674 (1947); State v. Green, 230 N.C. 381, 53 S.E.2d 285 (1949); State v. Hoover, 252 N.C. 133, 113 S.E.2d 281 (1960).

Section relates to destruction of child. State v. Forte, 222 N.C. 537, 23 S.E.2d 842 (1943).

The words "either pregnant or quick with child" contained in this section mean "pregnant with child that is quick," since otherwise the words "or quick with child" would be merely confusing surplusage, and since the sine qua non of the offense is the intent to destroy the child in ventre sa mere, which must be quick before it has independent life. State v. Jordon, 227 N.C. 579, 42 S.E.2d 674 (1947); State v. Green, 230 N.C. 381, 53 S.E.2d 285 (1949). But see, State v. Slagle, 83 N.C. 630 (1880).

Thus, evidence that defendant, with intent to produce a miscarriage, gave a certain drug to a woman within 30 days after she had conceived, is insufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution under this section since in such instance the child could not be quick. State v. Jordon, 227 N.C. 579, 42 S.E.2d 674 (1947).

Elements of Offense — Intent. — The essential ingredient of the offense is the intent and not the noxious nature of the drug used. State v. Crews, 128 N.C. 581, 38 S.E. 293 (1901); State v. Shaft, 166 N.C. 407, 81 S.E. 932 (1914).

It is no defense even if defendant could show that the drug would not in fact cause a miscarriage. State v. Crews, 128 N.C. 581, 38 S.E. 293 (1901). For the offense is committed by administering any substance with intent to procure an abortion. State v. Shaft, 166 N.C. 407, 81 S.E. 932 (1914).

Same — Abortion or Procuring Abortion. — It is just as much a crime to produce an abortion under the advice of and with means furnished by another, as it is to have an abortion performed by another. The gravamen of the offense is the abortion, or the procuring of the abortion, and not the manner by which it is accomplished. Parker v. Edwards, 222 N.C. 75, 21 S.E.2d 876 (1942).

Same — Procurement or Use of Drug Not Essential. — For a conviction under this section it is no essential to show that defendant procured the drug or that the woman used it. If defendant prescribed or advised its use with the illegal intent, that alone is sufficient. State v. Powell, 181 N.C. 515, 106 S.E. 133 (1921).

Under this section it is not necessary to charge or prove that the accused procured the drug. State v. Crews, 128 N.C. 581, 38 S.E. 293 (1901).

Woman Not an Accomplice. — The woman is not, in a legal sense, an accomplice, whether or not she consents to the abortion. State v. Shaft, 166 N.C. 407, 81 S.E. 932 (1914).

Admissibility of Evidence — Belief of Woman as to Her Pregnancy Relevant. — In a prosecution for abortion, belief of victim on the day of alleged operation that she was pregnant is a relevant circumstance, properly proved by her own testimony. State v. Hoover, 252 N.C. 133, 113 S.E.2d 281 (1960).

Same — Statement of Woman as to Payment of Doctor's Fee Admissible. — The testimony as to the statement of a woman on whom the defendant was charged with bringing on a miscarriage or abortion, in violation of the provisions of this section and § 14-45, that the defendant had paid the physician one half of the $200.00 fee he had charged for such services, uttered in the defendant's presence, is held competent with the other evidence in this case; and whether the defendant, under the circumstances was so intoxicated that he did not understand, presented a question for the jury to determine as to whether the woman's statement was made in the hearing as well as in the defendant's presence, whether they were understood by him, whether he denied them or remained silent. State v. Martin, 182 N.C. 846, 109 S.E. 74 (1921).

Same — Admission of evidence that woman took an anesthetic was not prejudicial. State v. Evans, 211 N.C. 458, 190 S.E. 724 (1937).

Same — Evidence of Disease Facilitating Abortion Properly Excluded. — Evidence offered by the defendant tending to show that the deceased was suffering from a disease which facilitated the abortion was not relevant to the issue involving the defendant's guilt as charged in the indictment. There was no error in the exclusion of such evidence. State v. Evans, 211 N.C. 458, 190 S.E. 724 (1937).

Same — Statement Made Four Months Prior to Abortion Inadmissible. — Upon the trial of a physician for procuring an abortion, testimony of the conversation between the physician and the woman as to an abortion about four months prior to the time in controversy is irrelevant and incompetent and its admission in evidence is prejudicial to the defendant and constitutes reversible error. State v. Brown, 202 N.C. 221, 162 S.E. 216 (1932).

Same — Prejudicial Evidence. — In a prosecution for abortion, testimony of the woman that she went to defendant by reason of newspaper articles stating that defendant had performed abortions was held incompetent as hearsay and extremely prejudicial to defendant, entitling her to a new trial. State v. Gavin, 232 N.C. 323, 59 S.E.2d 823 (1950).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — Indictment and evidence that the defendant advised the prosecutrix, who was then "pregnant or quick with child," to take a certain drug, medicine or substance with intent to destroy the child is sufficient for a conviction under this section. State v. Powell, 181 N.C. 515, 106 S.E. 133 (1921).

Testimony of the relation between the defendant and the woman, his paying half of the doctor's fees, and his concern as to the result, is held sufficient to sustain the verdict of guilty, taken in connection with the other evidence in the case. State v. Martin, 182 N.C. 846, 109 S.E. 74 (1921).

Joinder of Offenses. — Where the defendant is tried under this section and § 14-45, for producing a miscarriage or abortion of a pregnant woman, the action will not be dismissed upon the evidence if it is sufficient for a conviction upon either count. State v. Martin, 182 N.C. 846, 109 S.E. 74 (1921); State v. Hoover, 252 N.C. 133, 113 S.E.2d 281 (1960).

Upon the trial on an indictment charging the performance of an operation on a woman (1) quick with child, with intent to destroy the child, and (2) with intent to procure a miscarriage, there was a verdict of guilty, and upon the jury being polled, each juror stated that the verdict related to the first count, which verdict was entered, and upon retirement and further consideration of the second count, as instructed, the verdict on that count was not guilty, the defendant is not prejudiced thereby. State v. Dilliard, 223 N.C. 446, 27 S.E.2d 85 (1943).

Variance. — On the trial of an indictment charging the performance of an operation upon a woman "quick with child," with intent thereby to destroy the child, where the proof tends to show the performance of an operation upon a pregnant woman, with no evidence that she was "quick with child," there is a fatal variance and defendant's motion for nonsuit should be allowed. State v. Forte, 222 N.C. 537, 23 S.E.2d 842 (1943).

Where warrant charged that defendant feloniously advised a woman pregnant with child to take certain medicines with intent to destroy such child, and the evidence tended to show that this was prior to the time the child was quick, nonsuit for fatal variance should have been allowed. State v. Green, 230 N.C. 381, 53 S.E.2d 285 (1949).

Stated in Perkins v. North Carolina, 234 F. Supp. 333 (W.D.N.C. 1964).

Cited in State v. Geurukus, 195 N.C. 642, 143 S.E. 208 (1928); Hallmark Clinic v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 519 F.2d 1315 (4th Cir. 1975).

§ 14-45. Using drugs or instruments to produce miscarriage or injure pregnant woman.

If any person shall administer to any pregnant woman, or prescribe for any such woman, or advise and procure such woman to take any medicine, drug or anything whatsoever, with intent thereby to procure the miscarriage of such woman, or to injure or destroy such woman, or shall use any instrument or application for any of the above purposes, he shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1881, c. 351, s. 2; Code, s. 976; Rev., s. 3619; C. S., s. 4227; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to instances when abortion not unlawful, see § 14-45.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall be imprisoned in the jail or State's prison for not less than one year nor more than five years and shall be fined, at the discretion of the court." The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

In General. — This section relates to miscarriage of, or to injury to, or destruction of the woman. State v. Forte, 222 N.C. 537, 23 S.E.2d 842 (1943).

Constitutional Power of State. — See Corkey v. Edwards, 322 F. Supp. 1248 (W.D.N.C. 1971), judgment vacated, 410 U.S. 950, 93 S. Ct. 1411, 34 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1973), for reconsideration in light of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 93 S. Ct. 705, 35 L. Ed. 2d 147, rehearing denied, 410 U.S. 959, 93 S. Ct. 1409, 35 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1973) and Doe v. Bolton, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201, rehearing denied, 410 U.S. 959, 93 S. Ct. 1410, 35 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1973).

The purpose of this section is the protection of "any pregnant woman." State v. Hoover, 252 N.C. 133, 113 S.E.2d 281 (1960).

This section is designed primarily for the protection of the woman. State v. Mitchner, 256 N.C. 620, 124 S.E.2d 831 (1962).

This section and § 14-45 create separate offenses. See note to § 14-44.

Properties of Drug Irrelevant If Intent Shown. — This section proscribes the administering of any drug with the intent to produce a miscarriage. It is the intent which is made requisite within the statute, and not the properties of the administered drug, which makes the violation of this statute a felony. State v. Lenderman, 20 N.C. App. 687, 202 S.E.2d 787, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 375, 205 S.E.2d 100 (1974).

An actual miscarriage is not a necessary element to prove violation of this section. State v. Hoover, 252 N.C. 133, 113 S.E.2d 281 (1960); State v. Mitchner, 256 N.C. 620, 124 S.E.2d 831 (1962).

But proof of pregnancy is essential. State v. Hoover, 252 N.C. 133, 113 S.E.2d 281 (1960); State v. Mitchner, 256 N.C. 620, 124 S.E.2d 831 (1962).

This section does not require that the woman be quick with child and for that reason provides for a lesser punishment than § 14-44. State v. Hoover, 252 N.C. 133, 113 S.E.2d 281 (1960).

A woman may be pregnant within the meaning of this section though the foetus has not quickened. State v. Mitchner, 256 N.C. 620, 124 S.E.2d 831 (1962).

But see § 14-45.1 permitting abortion during first 20 weeks of pregnancy.

When Death Results from Abortion, It Is Culpable Homicide. — When death results from an abortion or attempted abortion of a pregnant woman, when not necessary to save the life of the woman or that of the unborn child or to protect the health of the woman, it is a culpable homicide, even though done at the woman's request. State v. Mitchner, 256 N.C. 620, 124 S.E.2d 831 (1962).

Evidence of Previous Abortions. — Where defendant's defense to a charge of criminal abortion is that the operation was necessary to save the life of the mother, evidence that defendant had committed previous abortions is competent to show animus; but where defendant denies he performed the operation charged, evidence of previous abortions committed by him is incompetent. State v. Choate, 228 N.C. 491, 46 S.E.2d 476 (1948).

Expert Medical Testimony. — In a prosecution for abortion, testimony of a medical expert that a certain described treatment of a pregnant woman might cause an abortion is competent. State v. Brooks, 267 N.C. 427, 148 S.E.2d 263 (1966).

It was not error for the trial court to exclude testimony to the effect that pills, taken as directed, would not cause an abortion and would have no effect upon the prosecuting witness, where there was no evidence in the record that defendant was aware the drug was ineffective as a means to induce a miscarriage, and that defendant thereby lacked the intent required in this section. State v. Lenderman, 20 N.C. App. 687, 202 S.E.2d 787, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 375, 205 S.E.2d 100 (1974).

Evidence Sufficient. — In a prosecution for aiding and abetting in an abortion, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to take the case to the jury. State v. Manning, 225 N.C. 41, 33 S.E.2d 239 (1945); State v. Choate, 228 N.C. 491, 46 S.E.2d 476 (1948).

Applied in State v. Lee, 248 N.C. 327, 103 S.E.2d 295 (1958); State v. Phillip, 261 N.C. 263, 134 S.E.2d 386 (1964).

§ 14-45.1. When abortion not unlawful.

(a) Notwithstanding any of the provisions of G.S. 14-44 and 14-45, it shall not be unlawful, during the first 20 weeks of a woman's pregnancy, to advise, procure, or cause a miscarriage or abortion when the procedure is performed by a physician licensed to practice medicine in North Carolina in a hospital or clinic certified by the Department of Human Resources to be a suitable facility for the performance of abortions.

(b) Notwithstanding any of the provisions of G.S. 14-44 and 14-45, it shall not be unlawful, after the twentieth week of a woman's pregnancy, to advise, procure or cause a miscarriage or abortion when the procedure is performed by a physician licensed to practice medicine in North Carolina in a hospital licensed by the Department of Human Resources, if there is substantial risk that continuance of the pregnancy would threaten the life or gravely impair the health of the woman.

(c) The Department of Human Resources shall prescribe and collect on an annual basis, from hospitals or clinics where abortions are performed, such representative samplings of statistical summary reports concerning the medical and demographic characteristics of the abortions provided for in this section as it shall deem to be in the public interest. Hospitals or clinics where abortions are performed shall be responsible for providing these statistical summary reports to the Department of Human Resources. The reports shall be for statistical purposes only and the confidentiality of the patient relationship shall be protected.

(d) The requirements of G.S. 130-43 are not applicable to abortions performed pursuant to this section.

(e) Nothing in this section shall require a physician licensed to practice medicine in North Carolina or any nurse who shall state an objection to abortion on moral, ethical, or religious grounds, to perform or participate in medical procedures which result in an abortion. The refusal of such physician to perform or participate in these medical procedures shall not be a basis for damages for such refusal, or for any disciplinary or any other recriminatory action against such physician.

(f) Nothing in this section shall require a hospital or other health care institution to perform an abortion or to provide abortion services. (1967, c. 367, s. 2; 1971, c. 383, ss. 1, 1½; 1973, c. 139; c. 476, s. 128; c. 711.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1967, c. 367, s. 2, designated the above section as § 14-46. Since there was already a § 14-46 in the General Statutes, the section added by the 1967 act has been designated § 14-45.1 herein.

Pursuant to Session Laws 1973, c. 476, ss. 128 and 152, "Department of Human Resources" has been substituted for "North Carolina Medical Care Commission" in subsections (a) and (b) and for "State Board of Health" in subsection (c) of the section as rewritten by Session Laws 1973, c. 711.

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on this section, see 46 N.C.L. Rev. 585 (1968).

For comment on a constitutional right to abortion, see 49 N.C.L. Rev. 487 (1971).

CASE NOTES

Burden of Proof. — The legislature did not intend to reverse the presumption of innocence, and the burden of proof in a prosecution is on the State to show that an abortion did not come within the exemptions of this section. Corkey v. Edwards, 322 F. Supp. 1248 (W.D.N.C. 1971), judgment vacated, 410 U.S. 950, 93 S. Ct. 1411, 34 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1973), for reconsideration in light of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 93 S. Ct. 705, 35 L. Ed. 2d 147, rehearing denied, 410 U.S. 959, 93 S. Ct. 1409, 35 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1973) and Doe v. Bolton, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201, rehearing denied, 410 U.S. 959, 93 S. Ct. 1410, 35 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1973).

Stated in Tatham v. Hoke, 469 F. Supp. 914 (W.D.N.C. 1979).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Abortion Cannot Be Performed After Twenty Weeks for Sole Reason that Fetus Is Abnormal. — Even if a woman at 22 weeks of gestation is found to have a genetically abnormal fetus which will be severely mentally retarded and/or will not survive beyond the first year of life; an abortion cannot be performed in North Carolina for these reasons alone upon request of the woman. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Lewis H. Nelson, M.D., Assistant Professor, Bowman Gray School of Medicine, 48 N.C.A.G. 2 (1979).

§ 14-46. Concealing birth of child.

If any person shall, by secretly burying or otherwise disposing of the dead body of a newborn child, endeavor to conceal the birth of such child, such person shall be punished as a Class H felon. Any person aiding, counseling or abetting any other person in concealing the birth of a child in violation of this statute shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (21 Jac. I, c. 27; 43 Geo. III, c. 58, s. 3; 9 Geo. IV, c. 31, s. 14; 1818, c. 985, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 28; 1883, c. 390; Code, s. 1004; Rev., s. 3623; C. S., s. 4228; 1977, c. 577; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

History. — Under the section as it stood after the amendment of 1818, the offense was the concealing of the death of a being on whom murder could have been committed. If, therefore, the child was stillborn, concealment would be no offense. The burden of showing that fact would, however, be on the defendant. State v. Joiner, 11 N.C. 350 (1826).

A former conviction for concealing the birth of a child is no defense to an indictment for the murder of such child. State v. Morgan, 95 N.C. 641 (1886).

Evidence Insufficient for Directed Verdict. — Under the provisions of this section making it a felony for any person to conceal the birth of a newborn child by secretly burying or otherwise disposing of its dead body, it is reversible error for the trial judge to direct a verdict of guilty upon evidence tending to show that the defendant found the dead body of the infant in a state of decomposition and therefore buried it, and had informed the authorities thereof and directed them where he had buried it, it being required of the State to rebut the common-law presumption of innocence by establishing the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Arrowood, 187 N.C. 715, 122 S.E. 759 (1924).

ARTICLE 12.

§ 14-47. Communicating libelous matter to newspapers.

If any person shall state, deliver or transmit by any means whatever, to the manager, editor, publisher or reporter of any newspaper or periodical for publication therein any false and libelous statement concerning any person or corporation, and thereby secure the publication of the same, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1901, c. 557, ss. 2, 3; Rev., s. 3635; C. S., s. 4229; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

Article 13.

Malicious Injury or Damage by Use of Explosive or Incendiary Device or Material.

§ 14-49. Malicious use of explosive or incendiary; attempt; punishment.

(a) Any person who willfully and maliciously injures or attempts to injure another by the use of any explosive or incendiary device or material is guilty of a felony.

(b) Any person who willfully and maliciously damages or attempts to damage any real or personal property of any kind or nature belonging to another by the use of any explosive or incendiary device or material is guilty of a felony.

(c) Any person who violates any provision of this section shall be punished as a Class E felon. (1923, c. 80, s. 1; C. S., s. 4231 (a); 1951, c. 1126, s. 1; 1969, c. 869, s. 6; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class E felon" for "is punishable by an imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than five nor more than thirty years" in subsection (c). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

The offense created by this section is malicious injury or damage to property, real or personal, by the use of high explosives. State v. Conrad, 275 N.C. 342, 168 S.E.2d 39 (1969); State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973), aff'd, 22 N.C. App. 53, 205 S.E.2d 358 (1974).

The word "malicious" as used in this section connotes a feeling of animosity, hatred or ill will toward the owner, the possessor, or the occupant. State v. Conrad, 275 N.C. 342, 168 S.E.2d 39 (1969); State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973), aff'd, 22 N.C. App. 53, 205 S.E.2d 358 (1974).

"Malicious" means more than intending wrong, it connotes actual ill will or resentment toward the owner or possessor of the property and is an element of preconceived revenge. State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973), aff'd, 22 N.C. App. 53, 205 S.E.2d 358 (1974).

Count Charging Violation of This Section as Embracing a Charge under § 14-127. — See State v. Bindyke, 288 N.C. 608, 220 S.E.2d 521 (1975).

"Feloniously" Not Substitute for "Maliciously" in Indictment Under this Section. — Use of the word "feloniously" in an indictment based on subsection (b) charging defendants with damaging real and personal property of another by use of an explosive was not a sufficient substitute for the word "maliciously" as used in the statute, since the word "feloniously" implies that the act charged to have been done proceeded from an evil heart and wicked purpose but does not allege the necessary element of actual ill will, hatred or animosity of the accused toward the person whose property was injured. State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973), aff'd 22 N.C. App. 53, 205 S.E.2d 358 (1974).

Without the element of malicious damage to property being alleged in the indictment, regardless of the method with which the damage was caused, the defendants were not apprised of the crime charged and the bill of indictment was defective. State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973), aff'd, 22 N.C. App. 53, 205 S.E.2d 358 (1974).

Indictment Should Contain Identifying Description of Property. — Since no distinction whatever is made between real and personal property in this section an indictment under this section should contain an identifying description of the property which the defendant damaged or attempted to damage by the use of the explosive. State v. Conrad, 275 N.C. 342, 168 S.E.2d 39 (1969).

Where the Jury Can Consider Lesser Offense. — On an indictment under § 14-49.1, if proof of occupancy fails, the jury can consider the lesser included offense of malicious injury to unoccupied property under this section. State v. Hanford, 16 N.C. App. 353, 191 S.E.2d 910, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 428, 192 S.E.2d 841 (1972).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — In a prosecution for willful and malicious injury to person and property by means of dynamite, and conspiracy to injure a person by means of dynamite, where defendant knew the victim was an undercover narcotics agent, an informer saw defendant and his co-conspirators in possession of dynamite while they were beside the victim's car with its hood raised, defendant stated in coming away from the car that "it would happen in the morning," and the victim was injured the next morning by an explosion when he attempted to start his car, the evidence for the State was sufficient to withstand defendant's motion for nonsuit. State v. Sellers, 289 N.C. 268, 221 S.E.2d 264 (1976).

Verdict in Consolidated Trial of Separate Indictments. — See same catchline in note under § 14-49.1.

Applied in State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974); State v. Sanders, 288 N.C. 285, 218 S.E.2d 352 (1975).

Cited in State v. Grier, 30 N.C. App. 281, 227 S.E.2d 126 (1976).

§ 14-49.1. Malicious damage of occupied property by use of explosive or incendiary; attempt; punishment.

Any person who willfully and maliciously damages or attempts to damage any real or personal property of any kind or nature, being at the time occupied by another, by the use of any explosive or incendiary device or material is guilty of a felony punishable as a Class C felony. (1967, c. 342; 1969, c. 869, s. 6; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "as a Class C felony" for "by imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than ten years nor more than imprisonment for life." The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

The offense created by this section is malicious injury or damage to property, real or personal, by the use of high explosives. State v. Little, 286 N.C. 185, 209 S.E.2d 749 (1974).

The word "malicious," as used in this section, connotes a feeling of animosity, hatred or ill will toward to owner, the possessor or the occupant. State v. Little, 286 N.C. 185, 209 S.E.2d 749 (1974).

Description in the indictment of the property damaged as a "1974 Ford Torino owned by the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation, being at the time occupied by another, Albert Stout, Jr.," was sufficient to inform defendant with certainty as to the crime that he had allegedly committed. State v. Sanders, 288 N.C. 285, 218 S.E.2d 352 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1091, 96 S. Ct. 886, 47 L. Ed. 2d 102 (1976).

Indictment Should Include Description of Any Other Property Injured. — An indictment drawn under this section should include not only the description of the occupied property and the name of the occupant but any other property injured or attempted to be injured by the explosion so that if proof of occupancy fails, the jury could consider whether the defendant is guilty under § 14-49 of the lesser included offense of malicious injury to unoccupied property. State v. Conrad, 275 N.C. 342, 168 S.E.2d 39 (1969); State v. Hanford, 16 N.C. App. 353, 191 S.E.2d 910, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 428, 192 S.E.2d 841 (1972).

Where the Jury Can Consider Lesser Offense. — On an indictment under this section, if proof of occupancy fails, the jury can consider the lesser included offense of malicious injury to unoccupied property under § 14-49. State v. Hanford, 16 N.C. App. 353, 191 S.E.2d 910, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 428, 192 S.E.2d 841 (1972).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — In a prosecution for willful and malicious injury to person and property by means of dynamite, and conspiracy to injure a person by means of dynamite, where defendant knew the victim was an undercover narcotics agent, an informer saw defendant and his co-conspirators in possession of dynamite while they were beside the victim's car with its hood raised, defendant stated in coming away from the car that "it would happen in the morning," and the victim was injured the next morning by an explosion when he attempted to start his car, the evidence for the State was sufficient to withstand defendant's motion for nonsuit. State v. Sellers, 289 N.C. 268, 221 S.E.2d 264 (1976).

Verdict in Consolidated Trial of Separate Indictments. — In consolidated trial of separate indictments charging the same defendant with malicious damage to an occupied dwelling and malicious damage to an automobile, where the evidence discloses but one explosion and the jury returns a verdict finding defendant guilty of malicious damage to the occupied dwelling, a further jury verdict finding defendant guilty of malicious damage to the automobile should be treated as surplusage, since the verdict of dynamiting the occupied dwelling contains the maximum charge under § 14-49 as amended by this section. State v. Conrad, 275 N.C. 342, 168 S.E.2d 39 (1969).

Applied in State v. Conrad, 4 N.C. App. 50, 165 S.E.2d 771 (1969).

§ 14-50. Conspiracy to injure or damage by use of explosive or incendiary; punishment.

(a) Any person who conspires with another willfully and maliciously to injure another by the use of any explosive or incendiary device or material is guilty of a felony.

(b) Any person who conspires with another willfully and maliciously to damage any real or personal property of any kind or nature belonging to another by the use of any explosive or incendiary device or material is guilty of a felony.

(c) Any person who violates any provision of this section shall be punished as a Class G felon. (1923, c. 80, s. 2; C. S., s. 4231 (b); 1951, c. 1126, s. 1; 1969, c. 869, s. 6; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class G felon" for "is punishable by imprisonment in the State's prison for not more than fifteen years" in subsection (c). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

A conspiracy is an "agreement between two or more individuals to do an unlawful act or to do a lawful act in an unlawful way." State v. Grier, 30 N.C. App. 281, 227 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 177, 229 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

Criminal responsibility for a conspiracy requires more than a merely passive attitude toward and existing conspiracy. One who commits an overt act with knowledge of the conspiracy is guilty. And one who tacitly consents to the object of a conspiracy and goes along with the other conspirators, actually standing by while the others put the conspiracy into effect, is guilty though he intends to take no active part in the crime. State v. Grier, 30 N.C. App. 281, 227 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 177, 229 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

A criminal conspiracy is continued and renewed as to all its members wherever and whenever any member of the conspiracy acts in furtherance of the common design. State v. Hicks, 233 N.C. 511, 64 S.E.2d 871, cert. denied, Hicks v. North Carolina, 342 U.S. 831, 72 S. Ct. 56, 96 L. Ed. 629 (1951).

Burning of bushes and fences involves the use of an incendiary device thus making the conspiracy a felony. State v. Bindyke, 25 N.C. App. 273, 212 S.E.2d 666, rev'd on other grounds, 288 N.C. 608, 220 S.E.2d 521 (1975).

This section does not require that the owner of the property be named in the indictment but only that it be property belonging to one other than defendant. State v. Hanford, 16 N.C. App. 353, 191 S.E.2d 910, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 428, 192 S.E.2d 841 (1972).

Direct proof of the charge of conspiracy it not essential, for such is rarely obtainable. It may be, and generally is, established by a number of indefinite acts, each of which, standing alone, might have little weight, but, taken collectively, they point unerringly to the existence of a conspiracy. State v. Grier, 30 N.C. App. 281, 227 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 177, 229 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

For one to be convicted of the crime of conspiracy, the State need not prove that the parties agreed in express terms to unite for the common illegal purpose. A mutual, implied understanding is sufficient to constitute the offense. State v. Grier, 30 N.C. App. 281, 227 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 177, 299 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

Nonsuit Where Conspiracy Formed Out of State. — See note § 15-173.

Sufficiency of Evidence. — In a prosecution for willful and malicious injury to person and property by means of dynamite, and conspiracy to injure a person by means of dynamite, where defendant knew the victim was an undercover narcotics agent, an informer saw defendant and his co-conspirators in possession of dynamite while they were beside the victim's car with its hood raised, defendant stated in coming away from the car that "it would happen in the morning," and the victim was injured the next morning by an explosion when he attempted to start his car, the evidence for the State was sufficient to withstand defendant motion for nonsuit. State v. Sellers, 289 N.C. 268, 221 S.E.2d 264 (1976).

§ 14-50.1. Explosive or incendiary device or material defined.

As used in this Article, "explosive or incendiary device or material" means nitroglycerine, dynamite, gunpowder, other high explosive, incendiary bomb or grenade, other destructive incendiary device, or any other destructive incendiary or explosive device, compound, or formulation; any instrument or substance capable of being used for destructive explosive or incendiary purposes against persons or property, when the circumstances indicate some probability that such instrument or substance will be so used; or any explosive or incendiary part or ingredient in any instrument or substance included above, when the circumstances indicate some probability that such part or ingredient will be so used. (1969, c. 869, s. 6.)

SUBCHAPTER IV. OFFENSES AGAINST THE HABITATION AND OTHER BUILDINGS.

ARTICLE 14.

Burglary and Other Housebreakings.

§ 14-51. First and second degree burglary.

There shall be two degrees in the crime of burglary as defined at the common law. If the crime be committed in a dwelling house, or in a room used as a sleeping apartment in any building, and any person is in the actual occupation of any part of said dwelling house or sleeping apartment at the time of the commission of such crime, it shall be burglary in the first degree. If such crime be committed in a dwelling house or sleeping apartment not actually occupied by anyone at the time of the commission of the crime, or if it be committed in any house within the curtilage of a dwelling house or in any building not a dwelling house, but in which is a room used as a sleeping apartment and not actually occupied as such at the time of the commission of the crime, it shall be burglary in the second degree. For the purposes of defining the crime of burglary, larceny shall be deemed a felony without regard to the value of the property in question. (1889, c. 434, s. 1; Rev., s. 3331; C. S., s. 4232; 1969, c. 543, s. 1.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The purpose of this section is to protect the habitations of men, where they repose and sleep, from meditated harm. State v. Surles, 230 N.C. 272, 52 S.E.2d 880 (1949).

The purpose of the law in the offense of first-degree burglary was and is to protect the habitation of men, where they repose and sleep, from meditated harm. State v. Beaver, 291 N.C. 137, 229 S.E.2d 179 (1976).

Lesser Offense Set Forth in § 14-54. — The statutory offense set forth in § 14-54 is a less degree of the offense of burglary in the first degree as defined in this section. State v. Perry, 265 N.C. 517, 144 S.E.2d 591 (1965); State v. Fowler, 1 N.C. App. 546, 162 S.E.2d 37 (1968).

A felonious entering into a house otherwise than burglariously with intent to commit larceny, a violation of § 14-54, is a less degree of the felony of burglary in the first degree. State v. Fikes, 270 N.C. 780, 155 S.E.2d 277 (1967).

A violation of § 14-54 is a less degree of the felongy of burglary in the first degree. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

The statutory offense of felonious breaking or entering is a lesser included offense of burglary in the first and second degrees. State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

Applied in State v. Robertson, 210 N.C. 266, 186 S.E. 247 (1936); State v. Walls, 211 N.C. 487, 191 S.E. 232 (1937); State v. Virgil, 263 N.C. 73, 138 S.E.2d 777 (1964); State v. II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

A. In General.

The crime of burglary at common law was composed of five distinct elements, which were: (1) the breaking; (2) the entering; (3) that the breaking and entry be into a mansion house; (4) that the breaking and entering were in the nighttime, and (5) that the breaking and entering were with the intent to commit a felony. State v. Whit, 49 N.C. 349 (1857).

Burglary, as defined at common law, was a capital offense, i.e., the breaking into and entering of the "mansion or dwelling house of another in the nighttime, with an intent to commit a felony therein," whether the intent was executed after the burglarious act or not.

This has been changed by this section dividing the crime into two degrees, first and second, with certain designated differences between them, with different punishment prescribed for each. State v. Allen, 186 N.C. 302, 119 S.E. 504 (1923); State v. Morris, 215 N.C. 552, 2 S.E.2d 554 (1939). Burglary is a common-law offense, the elements of which are the breaking and entering during the nighttime of a dwelling or sleeping apartment with intent to commit a felony therein and whether the building is occupied at the time affects only the degree. State v. Mumford, 227 N.C. 132, 41 S.E.2d 201 (1947).

Burglary is a common-law offense. To warrant a conviction thereof it must be made to appear that there was a breaking and entering during the nighttime of a dwelling or sleeping apartment with intent to commit a felony therein. That the building was or was not occupied at the time affects the degree. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

Burglary, whether in the first degree or in the second degree, is the breaking and entering of a dwelling house of another in the nighttime with the intent to commit a felony therein. State v. Cooper, 288 N.C. 496, 219 S.E.2d 45 (1975).

To warrant a conviction for burglary the State's evidence must show that there was a breaking and entering during the nighttime of a dwelling or sleeping apartment with intent to commit a felony therein. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976); State v. Garrison, 294 N.C. 270, 240 S.E.2d 377 (1978); State v. Jones, 294 N.C. 642, 243 S.E.2d 118 (1978).

Burglary is a common-law offense. It consists of the felonious breaking and entering of the dwelling house or sleeping apartment of another in the nighttime with the intent to commit a felony therein, whether such intent be executed or not. State v. Beaver, 291 N.C. 137, 229 S.E.2d 179 (1976).

Breaking and Entering. — A "breaking" is an essential element of the offense of first-degree burglary. There is a sufficient "breaking" to sustain a charge of first-degree burglary when a person unlocks a door with a key, or opens a closed, but not fastened window. State v. Henderson, 285 N.C. 1, 203 S.E.2d 10 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U. S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3202, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976).

A "breaking" is an essential element of the crime of first-degree burglary. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976).

If any force at all is employed to effect an entrance through any usual or unusual place of ingress, whether open, partly open or closed, there is a breaking sufficient in law to constitute burglary, if the other elements of the offense are present. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976).

The moving and raising of the window would be a breaking within the meaning of the law. State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

The mere pushing or pulling open of an unlocked door constitutes a breaking. State v. Sweezy, 291 N.C. 366, 230 S.E.2d 524 (1976).

A breaking in the law of burglary constitutes any act of force, however slight, employed to effect an entrance through any usual or unusual place of ingress, whether open, partly open, or closed. State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

To justify submission of felonious breaking or entering as a permissible verdict in a prosecution for burglary there must be evidence tending to show that defendant could have gained entry to victim's motel room by means other than a burglarious breaking, i.e., a forcible entry. State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

A breaking may be actual or constructive. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976); State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

Constructive breaking, as distinguished from actual forcible breaking, may be classed under the following heads: (1) when entrance is obtained by threats, as if the felon threatens to set fire to the house unless the door is opened, (2) when in consequence of violence commenced, or threatened in order to obtain entrance, the owner, with a view more effectually to repel it, opens the door and sallies out, and the felon enters, (3) when entrance is obtained by procuring the servants or some inmate to remove the fastening, (4) when some process of law is fraudulently resorted to for the purpose of obtaining an entrance, (5) when some trick is resorted to to induce the owner to remove the fastening and open the door, and the felon enters; as, if one knocks at the door, under pretense of business, or counterfeits the voice of a friend, and, the door being open, enters. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976).

A constructive breaking occurs where entrance is obtained in consequence of violence commenced or threatened by defendant. State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

Proof that a breaking occurred, or from which it may reasonably be inferred that the defendant broke into the dwelling, is usually accomplished by testimony showing that prior to the entry all doors and windows were closed. State v. Alexander, 18 N.C. App. 460, 197 S.E.2d 272, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 666, 200 S.E.2d 655 (1973).

In order to show a breaking it is not required that the State offer evidence of damage to a door or window. State v. Henderson, 285 N.C. 1, 203 S.E.2d 10 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3202, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976).

In a prosecution for first-degree burglary and second-degree rape, defendant's entry was accomplished by a "breaking" notwithstanding the fact that the prosecuting witness "cracked" her door to see who was there. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976).

Where the evidence showed that defendant gained entry into victim's motel room by pushing victim into the room as he opened the door, this clearly constituted a constructive breaking. State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

There was sufficient evidence of a "breaking" to support the trial court's charge on burglary where the state's evidence tended to show that defendant and a male accomplice gained access to deceased's dwelling by pushing a female accomplice out of the way as she left the dwelling "busting" the door open, and rushing into the dwelling. State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

Inferring of Breaking and Entering from Possession of Stolen Articles. — Upon proof of larceny following a breaking and entering, the defendant's possession of the stolen articles under such circumstances will also support an inference that he committed the breaking and entering. State v. Greene, 30 N.C. App. 507, 227 S.E.2d 154 (1976).

The sleeping apartment referred to in the section is one in which a person regularly sleeps. State v. Foster, 129 N.C. 704, 40 S.E. 209 (1901).

Curtilage. — The meaning of the term curtilage is a piece of ground, either inclosed or not, that is commonly used with the dwelling house. State v. Twitty, 2 N.C. 102 (1794).

Burglary in a Store with Sleeping Quarters. — The offense of burglary may be committed by breaking into a store if there are sleeping quarters in the store, for the sleeping there makes it a dwelling. State v. Foster, 129 N.C. 704, 40 S.E. 209 (1901).

The trial court's statement to the jury that the motel room in question was a sleeping apartment was an impermissible expression of opinion, or an assumption that a material fact had been proved within the meaning of § 15A-1232. However, since there could be no serious contention that a motel room, regularly and usually occupied by travelers for the purpose of sleeping, was not in fact a "sleeping apartment" within the meaning of this section and its predecessors, nor did defendants contest the "sleeping apartment" issue at trial, other than by their general pleas of not guilty, there was no reasonable possibility that this error contributed to defendant's conviction or that a different result would have obtained had the language complained of been omitted, therefore, the error was harmless. State v. Nelson, 298 N.C. 573, 260 S.E.2d 629 (1979).

Burglary could not be committed in a tent or booth erected in a market or fair, although the owner lodged in it. State v. Jake, 60 N.C. 471 (1964).

The occupant of the building at the time of the burglary was the owner, and it was unnecessary to allege ownership of the title to the building. State v. Beaver, 291 N.C. 137, 229 S.E.2d 179 (1976).

There is no requirement that actual ownership of the occupied premises be alleged and proved. State v. Beaver, 291 N.C. 137, 229 S.E.2d 179 (1976).

There is no requirement that there be an individual asleep in the house which is broken into in order for burglary to be committed. Edwards v. Garrison, 529 F.2d 1374 (4th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 950, 96 S. Ct. 1421, 47 L. Ed. 2d 355 (1976).

Nighttime. — The law considers it to be nighttime when it is so dark that a man's face cannot be identified except by artificial light or moonlight. With respect to burglary, there is no statutory definition of nighttime in this State. State v. Frank, 284 N.C. 137, 200 S.E.2d 169 (1973); State v. Garrison, 294 N.C. 270, 240 S.E.2d 377 (1978).

Although the common law required an indictment for burglary to allege the hour the crime was committed, today it is sufficient to aver that the crime was committed in the nighttime. State v. Wood, 286 N.C. 248, 210 S.E.2d 52 (1974).

Since 1889, burglary has been divided into two degrees by § 14-51. If the burglarized dwelling is occupied, it is burglary in the first degree; if unoccupied, it is burglary in the second degree. To constitute burglary in either degree, however, the common law required the felonious breaking and entering to occur in the nighttime, and this common law requirement is still the law in this State. State v. Jones, 294 N.C. 642, 243 S.E.2d 118 (1978).

Intent. — The fifth element of burglary — the intent to commit a felony — must exist at the time of the breaking and entering. Intent, being a state of mind, is difficult to prove and ordinarily is a question for the jury to decide. State v. Alexander, 18 N.C. App. 460, 197 S.E.2d 272, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 666, 200 S.E.2d 655 (1973).

Intent is a mental attitude seldom provable by direct evidence. It must ordinarily be proved by circumstances from which it may be inferred. State v. Bell, 285 N.C. 746, 208 S.E.2d 506 (1974).

The fact that a felony was actually committed after the house was entered is not necessarily proof of the intent requisite for the crime of burglary, but is only evidence from which such intent at the time of the breaking and entering may be found. State v. Bell, 285 N.C. 746, 208 S.E.2d 506 (1974).

In the absence of evidence of other intent or explanation for breaking and entering, the usual object or purpose of burglarizing a dwelling house at night is theft. State v. Hedrick, 289 N.C. 232, 221 S.E.2d 350 (1976).

In a prosecution for first-degree burglary, where the State attempts to show intent to commit larceny, the fact that defendant did not disturb any of the valuables in the house does not aid him. State v. Hedrick, 289 N.C. 232, 221 S.E.2d 350 (1976).

The intelligent mind will take cognizance of the fact that people do not usually enter the dwellings of others, in the nighttime, when the inmates are asleep, with innocent intent. The most usual intent is to steal, and when there is no explanation or evidence of a different intent, the ordinary mind will infer this also. The fact of the entry alone, in the nighttime, accompanied by flight when discovered, is some evidence of guilt, and in the absence of any other proof, or evidence of other intent, and with no explanatory facts or circumstances, may warrant a reasonable inference of guilty intent. State v. Sweezy, 291 N.C. 366, 230 S.E.2d 524 (1976).

Felonious intent is an essential element of burglary which the State must allege and prove, and the felonious intent proven must be the felonious intent alleged. State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

A specific felonious intent is an essential element of burglary which must be alleged and proved and the state is held to proof of the intent alleged in the indictment, and it is error for the trial judge to permit a jury to convict upon some abstract theory not supported by the bill of indictment. State v. Joyner, 301 N.C. 18, 269 S.E.2d 125 (1980).

Jury Must Determine Whether Criminal Intent Existed. — Where the evidence is sufficient for submission to the jury upon the allegations contained in the indictment, it is for the jury to determine, under all the circumstances, whether the defendant had the ulterior criminal intent at the time of breaking and entering to commit the felony charged in the indictment. State v. Accor, 277 N.C. 65, 175 S.E.2d 583 (1970).

The indictment having identified the intent necessary, the State is held to the proof of that intent. Of course, intent or absence of it may be inferred from the circumstances surrounding the occurrence, but the inference must be drawn by the jury. State v. Accor, 277 N.C. 65, 175 S.E.2d 583 (1970).

The fact of the entry alone, in the nighttime, accompanied by flight when discovered, is some evidence of guilt, and in the absence of any other proof, or evidence of other intent, and with no explanatory facts or circumstances, may warrant a reasonable inference of guilty intent. State v. Accor, 277 N.C. 65, 175 S.E.2d 583 (1970).

First and Second Degree Burglary Distinguished. — If the burglary occurred — i.e., the breaking and entry occurred — while the dwelling house was actually occupied, that is, while some person other than the intruder was in the house, the crime is burglary in the first degree. If the house was then unoccupied, however momentarily, and whether known to the intruder or not, the offense is burglary in the second degree. Otherwise, the elements of the two offenses are identical. State v. Tippett, 270 N.C. 588, 155 S.E.2d 269 (1967).

The bill of indictment returned by the grand jury charged all of the elements of burglary in the first degree. Consequently, it necessarily charged all of the elements of burglary in the second degree plus the additional allegation that the dwelling house in question was actually occupied at the time of the alleged breaking and entry by the defendant. This further element of actual occupancy at the time of the breaking and entering is the only distinction between the two degrees of burglary. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

If the burglarized dwelling is occupied, it is burglary in the first degree; if unoccupied, it is burglary in the second degree. State v. Frank, 284 N.C. 137, 200 S.E.2d 169 (1973); State v. Wood, 286 N.C. 248, 210 S.E.2d 52 (1974); State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976).

By this section the offense of burglary is divided into two degrees, first and second. The distinction between the two degrees depends upon the actual occupancy of the dwelling house or sleeping apartment at the time of the commission of the crime. State v. Beaver, 291 N.C. 137, 229 S.E.2d 179 (1976).

The sole distinction between the two degrees of burglary is the element of actual occupancy of the dwelling house or sleeping apartment at the time of the breaking and entering. State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

B. First Degree.

Burglary in the first degree consists of the intent, which must be executed, of breaking and entering the presently occupied dwelling house or sleeping apartment of another, in the nighttime, with the further concurrent intent, which may be executed or not, then and there to commit therein some crime which is in law a felony. This particular, or ulterior, intent to commit therein some designated felony must be proved, in addition to the more general one, in order to make out the offense. State v. Thorpe, 274 N.C. 457, 164 S.E.2d 171 (1968); State v. Accor, 277 N.C. 65, 175 S.E.2d 583 (1970); State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

The elements of burglary in the first degree are: (1) the breaking (2) and entering (3) in the nighttime (4) with the intent to commit a felony (5) into a dwelling house or a room used as a sleeping apartment in any house or sleeping apartment (6) which is actually occupied at the time of the offense. State v. Davis, 282 N.C. 107, 191 S.E.2d 664 (1972).

Burglary in the first degree is the breaking and entering during the nighttime of an occupied dwelling or sleeping apartment with intent to commit a felony therein. State v. Henderson, 285 N.C. 1, 203 S.E.2d 10 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U. S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3202, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976); State v. Bell, 285 N.C. 746, 208 S.E.2d 506 (1974).

The crime of burglary in the first degree is complete when an occupied dwelling is broken and entered in the nighttime with the intent to commit larceny therein whether or not anything was actually stolen from the house. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

The constituent elements of burglary in the first degree are: (1) the breaking (2) and entering (3) in the nighttime (4) into a dwelling house or a room used as a sleeping apartment (5) which is actually occupied at the time of the offense (6) with the intent to commit a felony therein. State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

First-degree burglary is defined as the unlawful breaking and entering of an occupied dwelling or sleeping apartment in the nighttime with the intent to commit a felony therein. State v. Sweezy, 291 N.C. 366, 230 S.E.2d 524 (1976).

Value of Goods Stolen Immaterial. — A person who burglariously broke and entered a dwelling at nighttime while the same was occupied was guilty of burglary in the first degree, and the fact that the value of the goods stolen from the dwelling was less than $20.00 was no defense to the capital charge, since the provision of § 14-72, dividing larceny into two degrees, by its terms had no application to burglary. State v. Richardson, 216 N.C. 304, 4 S.E.2d 852 (1939).

C. Second Degree.

Burglary in the second degree consists of all the elements of burglary in the first degree save the element of actual occupancy. State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

An essential element of second-degree burglary, as derived from the common law, is the intent of the perpetrator to commit a felony after accomplishing the breaking and entering of a dwelling house belonging to another in the nighttime. State v. Foust, 40 N.C. App. 71, 251 S.E.2d 893 (1979).

Occupancy of Dwelling Is No Defense to Charge of Second-Degree Burglary. — If the bill of indictment, by omitting any allegation as to occupancy of the building, charged second-degree burglary only and if the evidence is sufficient to show all of the elements thereof, proof of actual occupancy of the dwelling at the time of the breaking and entering is not a defense to the charge. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

Where the solicitor's (now district attorney) announcement precluded a verdict of guilty of burglary in the first degree, it was, in effect, a stipulation by the State that the house was not actually occupied at the time of the breaking and entering. The defendant, not having objected thereto at the time of the announcement, could not await the outcome of the trial and then attack the validity of the verdict that he was guilty of second-degree burglary on the ground that the house was occupied and so he was guilty of the more serious crime. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

III. INDICTMENT.

Indictment Must Charge Intended Felony. — In order for an indictment to sustain a verdict of guilty of burglary in the first degree, it must not only charge the burglarious entry with the intent at the time, but must also charge the felony intended to be committed with sufficient definiteness, though it is not necessary that the actual commission of the intended felony be charged or proven. State v. Allen, 186 N.C. 302, 119 S.E. 504 (1923).

The indictment for burglary must specify the particular felony which the defendant is alleged to have intended to commit at the time of the breaking and entering, and it is not sufficient to charge generally an intent to commit an unspecified felony. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

In an indictment for burglary it is not enough to charge generally an intent to commit "a felony" in the dwelling house of another. State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976); State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

The particular felony which it is alleged the accused intended to commit must be specified. State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

But Not Fully and Specifically. — The indictment for burglary need not set out the felony which the defendant, at the time of the breaking and entering, intended to commit within the dwelling in as complete detail as would be required in an indictment for the actual commission of that felony. It must, however, state with certainty the felony which the State alleges he intended, at the time of his breaking and entering, to commit within the dwelling. State v. Cooper, 288 N.C. 496, 219 S.E.2d 45 (1975).

In an indictment for burglary the felony intended need not be set out as fully and specifically as would be required in an indictment for the actual commission of that felony. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

The felony intended, need not be set out as fully and specifically as would be required in an indictment for the actual commission of said felony where the State is relying only upon the charge of burglary. State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976); State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

It is ordinarily sufficient to state the intended offense generally, as by alleging an intent to steal the goods and chattels of another then being in said dwelling house, or to commit therein the crime of larceny, rape or arson. State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

It is ordinarily sufficient to state the intended offense generally, as by alleging an intent to commit therein the crime of larceny, rape or arson. State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

Actual Commission of Felony Not Required. — Actual commission of the felony, which the indictment charges was intended by the defendant at the time of the breaking and entering, is not required in order to sustain a conviction of burglary. State v. Bell, 285 N.C. 746, 208 S.E.2d 506 (1974).

The actual commission of the intended felony is not essential to the crime of burglary. State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976);

State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

The crime of burglary is completed by the breaking and entering of the occupied dwelling of another, in the nighttime, with the requisite ulterior intent to commit the designated felony therein, even though, after entering the house, the accused abandons his intent through fear or because he is resisted. State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

It is not required that indictment for first-degree burglary describe property which defendant intended to steal, or that which he did steal. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

Burglary Indictment Insufficient. — An indictment alleging that defendant broke and entered, with intent to commit a felony within, to wit: "by sexually assaulting a female," did not charge the defendant with the crime of burglary and would not support the imposition of a sentence to life imprisonment for first-degree burglary. State v. Cooper, 288 N.C. 496, 219 S.E.2d 45 (1975).

Indictment for burglary is fatally defective if it fails to identify the premises broken and entered with sufficient certainty to enable the defendant to prepare his defense and to offer him protection from another prosecution for the same incident. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976); State v. Beaver, 291 N.C. 137, 229 S.E.2d 179 (1976).

IV. INSTRUCTIONS.

Where all the evidence is to the effect that the building was actually occupied at the time of the breaking and entry, the court is not authorized to instruct the jury that it may return a verdict of burglary in the second degree. State v. Tippett, 270 N.C. 588, 155 S.E.2d 269 (1967).

Charging Elements of First and Second Degree. — Where a burglarious breaking into a dwelling house had been charged in the bill of indictment, and the evidence tended only to establish the capital felony, an instruction to the jury that they might return a verdict of guilty in either degree was erroneous. State v. Allen, 186 N.C. 302, 119 S.E. 504 (1923).

Where there is evidence of a burglarious entry into a dwelling house sufficient to convict of the capital offense, and also of the lesser offense, it is reversible error for the trial judge to refuse or neglect to charge the different elements of law relating to each of the separate offenses, though a verdict of guilty of the lesser offense might have been rendered, and this error is not cured under a general verdict of guilty of the greater offense. State v. Allen, 186 N.C. 302, 119 S.E. 504 (1923).

Where all the evidence shows that dwelling was actually occupied, instruction that verdict of burglary in second degree is not permissible is without error. State v. Johnson, 218 N.C. 604, 12 S.E.2d 278 (1940).

Where the evidence showed that the house was unoccupied for approximately half an hour, there was no error in instructing the jury that if it did not find from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the house was occupied at the time of the breaking and entering, it should find the defendant not guilty of burglary in the first degree, but it should return a verdict of burglary in the second degree if it did so find each of the elements thereof. State v. Tippett, 270 N.C. 588, 155 S.E.2d 269 (1967).

Sufficient Evidence to Submit Question of First-Degree Burglary to Jury. — Evidence that the house was broken into by forcing the door open, that the time was late at night, and that the prosecuting witness and his wife were asleep in the room entered, together with evidence that tracks in the freshly fallen snow were followed and led to the defendant's room in another house in a distant part of the city, where defendant was apprehended, was held sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the question of defendant's guilty of burglary in the first degree. State v. Oakley, 210 N.C. 206, 186 S.E. 244 (1936).

Evidence was sufficient to overrule defendant's motion to nonsuit in a prosecution for burglary. State v. Surles, 230 N.C. 272, 52 S.E.2d 880 (1949).

Evidence was held sufficient to withstand motion for nonsuit. State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977).

Sufficient Evidence to Submit Question of Second-Degree Burglary. — Evidence that the defendants encountered the owner of a dwelling house immediately outside of the house at nighttime, and marched him into the house at the point of firearms and stole money which was hidden in the house, was sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the charge of second-degree burglary, the method of entry being a constructive "breaking." State v. Rodgers, 216 N.C. 572, 5 S.E.2d 831 (1939).

When the solicitor (now district attorney) announces that he will not seek a conviction upon the maximum degree of the crime charged in the bill of indictment, and the defendant interposes no objection to being tried upon the lesser degree of the offense, the sufficiency of the evidence to support a conviction of the lesser degree must be measured by the same standards which would be applied had the bill of indictment charged only the lesser degree of the offense. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

Submission of Question of Guilt of Nonburglarious Breaking. — The evidence tended to show unlawful entry into a dwelling at nighttime while same was actually occupied, and the actual commission therein of the felony charged in the bill of indictment. The evidence also tended to show that a window of the room in which felony was committed was open, and that the perpetrator of the crime was first seen in this room, and that after the commission of the crime he escaped by the open window. There was also circumstantial evidence that entry was made by opening a window of another room of the house. There was also sufficient evidence tending to identify defendant as the perpetrator of the crime. Held: Although there was no evidence of burglary in the second degree, the evidence tended to show burglary in the first degree, or a nonburglarious breaking and entering with to commit a felony, depending upon whether the perpetrator of the crime entered by the open window or burglariously "broke" into the dwelling, and therefore the trial court should have charged that the defendant could be found guilty of burglary in the first degree, guilty of a nonburglarious breaking and entering of the dwelling house with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein, or not guilty, and its failure to submit the question of defendant's guilt of nonburglarious entry constituted reversible error. State v. Chambers, 218 N.C. 442, 11 S.E.2d 280 (1941).

Failure to Define Larceny. — Where an indictment for second-degree burglary alleged that the defendant's intent was to commit larceny, but the trial judge failed to define the term "larceny" in its instructions, the omission was prejudicial and erroneous and required a new trial. State v. Foust, 40 N.C. App. 71, 251 S.E.2d 893 (1979).

V. VERDICT.

Discretionary Power of the Jury as to Degree. — The jury does not have the discretionary power to return a verdict of burglary in the second degree if all the evidence shows burglary in the first degree. But under an indictment for burglary in the first degree a verdict of second-degree burglary may be returned if the evidence shows such an offense. State v. Fleming, 107 N.C. 905, 12 S.E. 131 (1890).

Where, in the trial of an indictment for burglary, the evidence showed that the house in which the crime was committed was actually occupied at the time, a conviction of burglary in the second degree was not authorized. State v. Alston, 113 N.C. 666, 18 S.E. 692 (1893); State v. Johnston, 119 N.C. 883, 26 S.E. 163 (1896).

Where one charged with burglary in the first degree admitted the entering and taking, the only question remaining was whether it was done at nighttime, and the jury should not have been charged that they could convict of a lesser offense as provided by this section, for the offense was either burglary in the first degree or larceny. State v. McKnight, 111 N.C. 690, 16 S.E. 319 (1892).

The jury may convict of an attempt to commit burglary in the second degree where the prosecution is for burglary in the first degree. State v. Surles, 230 N.C. 272, 52 S.E.2d 880 (1949).

Effect of Requesting Verdict of Second Degree Burglary on Indictment Charging Burglary in First Degree. — The defendant was charged with burglary in the first degree in the bill of indictment, and when the solicitor (now district attorney) stated that he would not ask for a verdict of first degree burglary, but would only ask for a verdict of second degree burglary on the indictment, it was tantamount to taking a nolle prosequi with leave on the capital charge. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

Verdict of Guilty in First Degree upon Trial for Burglary in Second Degree Set Aside. — Where defendant was tried for burglary in the second degree on indictment charging burglary in the first degree, and the verdict, as rendered, showed defendant was convicted of burglary in the first degree, or was guilty "as charged in the bill of indictment," the fact that clerk certified "that defendant was guilty of second degree burglary as charged in the bill of indictment" which was merely the clerk's interpretation of verdict, rather than a precise certification of it, was not sufficient to deny motion to set aside verdict. State v. Jordan, 226 N.C. 155, 37 S.E.2d 111 (1946).

Double Jeopardy. — The offense of burglary is completed by the breaking and entering of the occupied dwelling of another, in the nighttime, with the intent to commit the designated felony therein. The crime has been committed even though, after entering the house, the accused abandons his intent to commit the designated felony. Consequently, the felonious intent required as an element of burglary cannot be equated with the commission of the underlying felony, and if a burglar after breaking and entering proceeds to commit the underlying felony inside the dwelling, he can be convicted of both crimes. State v. Brady, 299 N.C. 547, 264 S.E.2d 66 (1980).

Defendant's conviction of felonious larceny, armed robbery, burglary, and rape, all of which arose out of the same series of events, did not place defendant in double jeopardy, since the four offenses were legally separate and distinct crimes, no one of which was a lesser included offense of the other; each clearly required the proof of at least one essential element not embodied in any of the other three offenses at issue; and the four felonies were factually distinct and independent crimes. State v. Revelle, 301 N.C. 153, S.E.2d (1980).

§ 14-52. Punishment for burglary.

Burglary in the first degree shall be punishable as a Class C felony, and burglary in the second degree shall be punishable as a Class D felony. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, with the exception of persons sentenced as committed youthful offenders, a person convicted of a burglary in the first or second degree shall serve a term of not less than seven years in prison, excluding gain time granted under G.S. 148-13. A person convicted of a burglary in the first or second degree shall receive a sentence of at least 14 years in the State's prison and shall be entitled to credit for good behavior under G.S. 15A-1340.7. The sentencing judge may not suspend the sentence and may not place the person sentenced on probation. Sentences imposed pursuant to this section shall run consecutively with and shall commence at the expiration of any sentence being served by the person sentenced hereunder. Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote this section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Convictions Remain Valid. — The Supreme Court of the United States has held that the imposition of the death penalty, under certain state statutes and in the application thereof, is unconstitutional. § 14-53. Breaking out of dwelling house burglary.

If any person shall enter the dwelling house of another with intent to commit any felony or larceny therein, or being in such dwelling house, shall commit any felony or larceny therein, and shall, in either case, break out of such dwelling house in the nighttime, such person shall be punished as a Class D felon. CASE NOTES

Indictment Must Charge Breaking Out. — One charged by indictment of breaking into a house cannot be convicted of breaking out, and a charge of the court to that effect is error. State v. McPherson, 70 N.C. 239 (1874).

The absence of evidence of breaking does not constitute a fatal defect of proof. State v. Vester, 22 N.C. App. 16, 205 S.E.2d 556, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 668, 207 S.E.2d 760 (1974), 419 U.S. 1116, 95 S. Ct. 795, 42 L. Ed. 2d 814 (1975).

§ 14-54. Breaking or entering buildings generally.

(a) Any person who breaks or enters any building with intent to commit any felony or larceny therein shall be punished as a Class H felon.

(b) Any person who wrongfully breaks or enters any building is guilty of a misdemeanor and is punishable under G.S. 14-3(a).

(c) As used in this section, "building" shall be construed to include any dwelling, dwelling house, uninhabited house, building under construction, building within the curtilage of a dwelling house, and any other structure designed to house or secure within it any activity or property. (1874-5, c. 166; 1879, c. 323; Code, s. 996; Rev., s. 3333; C. S., s. 4235; 1955, c. 1015; 1969, c. 543, s. 3; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class H felon" for "is guilty of a felony and is punishable under G.S. 14-2" at the end of subsection (a). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — This section and § 14-72 do not violate the equal protection or due process provisions of either the State or federal Constitutions. State v. Killian, 37 N.C. App. 234, 245 S.E.2d 812 (1978).

This section and § 14-72 are reasonably related to valid legislative goals. The legislature has determined that breaking or entering with intent to commit larceny is a more serious crime than breaking or entering without the intent to commit larceny or any felony, and that larceny committed pursuant to breaking or entering is more serious than simple larcenry. The legislature was acting within its authority in designating these crimes as felonies and in fixing punishment commensurate with their serious nature. State v. Killian, 37 N.C. App. 234, 245 S.E.2d 812 (1978).

This section and § 14-72 meet the test of equal protection because all persons who fall under the terms of the statutes are subject to the same sentence. State v. Killian, 37 N.C. App. 234, 245 S.E.2d 812 (1978).

Double Jeopardy. — Where a defendant has been tried for breaking and entering, and then the State tries him for a felony in which breaking and entering is an indispensable element, he has suffered double jeopardy. This is because the charge against him was increased after he had been tried for an offense consisting of an essential element of the greater offense. Wood v. Ross, 434 F.2d 297 (4th Cir. 1970), vacated on other grounds sub nom. North Carolina v. Rice, 404 U.S. 244, 92 S. Ct. 402, 30 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1971).

Same — Larceny. — Prosecution for larceny will not bar a subsequent prosecution for breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny, the larceny being necessarily distinct from the breaking and entering. State v. Hooker, 145 N.C. 581, 59 S.E. 866 (1907).

Statutory Offense. — The offense defined in this section, commonly referred to as house breaking or nonburglarious breaking, is a statutory, not a common-law, offense. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

Prior to the 1955 amendment, a nude defendant who entered the sleeping quarters of hospital nurses was not guilty of an offense under this section, where he did not flee when discovered but merely asked for a girl who worked at the hospital, and left upon demand without any attempt at larceny. State v. Cook, 242 N.C. 700, 89 S.E.2d 383 (1955).

Effect and Application of 1969 Amendment. — The title of the 1969 amendatory act, Session Laws 1969, c. 543, s. 7, expresses the legislative intent to clarify, not to repeal, "the laws relating to burglar and related offenses." It is, therefore, clear that the 1969 act amended, rather than repealed, this section. State v. Melton, 7 N.C. App. 721, 173 S.E.2d 610 (1970).

A defendant may be prosecuted, and if lawfully convicted may be punished, after the effective date of the 1969 amendment for a violation of this section as it existed prior to the effective date of that amendment, May 23, 1969, where the offense was committed prior to the effective date of May 23, 1969. State v. Melton, 7 N.C. App. 721, 173 S.E.2d 610 (1970).

A defendant is entitled to have the jury instructed as to what facts they were required to find in order to find him guilty under the statute as it existed on the date the offense was alleged to have been committed, without reference to the less stringent requirements of the amended statute. State v. Melton, 7 N.C. App. 721, 173 S.E.2d 610 (1970).

This section concerns only the crimes of breaking and entering buildings and does not relate to the felony of larceny. The crime of larceny after breaking or entering is punishable as provided in § 14-72. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 468 (1972).

II. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

A. In General.

What Constitutes Offense Generally. — Under the provisions of this section, if any person breaks and enters or enters any storehouse, shop or other building where any merchandise, chattel, money, valuable security or other personal property shall be, with the intent to commit the felony of larceny, he shall be guilty of a felony. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

In respect to a dwelling, it is the entering otherwise than by a burglarious breaking, with intent to commit a felony, that constitutes the offense condemned by this section. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971); State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

This section condemns three separate felonies as follows: (1) If any person, with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein, shall break or enter the dwelling house of another otherwise than by a burglarious breaking, he shall be guilty of a felony; (2) if any person, with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein, shall break or enter any storehouse, shop, warehouse, banking house, countinghouse or other building where any merchandise, chattel, money, valuable security or other personal property shall be, he shall be guilty of a felony; (3) if any person, with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein, shall break or enter any uninhabited house, he shall be guilty of a felony. State v. McDowell, 1 N.C. App. 361, 161 S.E.2d 769 (1968).

What Constitutes "Building" — Dwelling House. — A dwelling house is the place wherein a man reposes. State v. Clinton, 3 N.C. App. 571, 165 S.E.2d 343 (1969).

Every permanent building in which the owner or renter and his family, or any member thereof, usually and habitually dwell and sleep is deemed a dwelling. State v. Clinton, 3 N.C. App. 571, 165 S.E.2d 343 (1969).

A room in a rooming house is included in the meaning of the term "dwelling house." State v. Clinton, 3 N.C. App. 571, 165 S.E.2d 343 (1969).

Same — Clerk's Office. — The office of the clerk of a superior court in a county courthouse is a "structure designed to house or secure within it any activity or property" within the meaning of subsection (c) of this section and therefore is by statutory definition a "building" under subsection (b) of this section. Even though the office may be open to the public, it is still protected by the statute during the time that it is not open for public business. State v. Winston, 45 N.C. App. 99, 262 S.E.2d 331 (1980).

Completion of Intended Felony or Larceny Not Required. — Under this section, if a person breaks or enters one of the buildings described therein with intent to commit the crime of larceny, he does so with intent to commit a felony, without reference to whether he is completely frustrated before he accomplishes his felonious intent or whether, if successful, the goods he succeeds in stealing have a value in excess of $200.00. In short, his criminal conduct is not determinable on the basis of the success of his felonious venture. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971); State v. Smith, 266 N.C. 747, 147 S.E.2d 165 (1966); State v. Nichols, 268 N.C. 152, 150 S.E.2d 21 (1966); State v. Cloud, 271 N.C. 591, 157 S.E.2d 12 (1967); State v. Crawford, 3 N.C. App. 337, 164 S.E.2d 625 (1968).

If a person breaks or enters with intent to commit the crime of larceny, he does so with intent to commit a felony, without reference to whether he is completely frustrated before he accomplishes his felonious intent. His criminal conduct is not determinable on the basis of the success of his felonious venture. State v. Wooten, 1 N.C. App. 240, 161 S.E.2d 59 (1968); State v. Sawyer, 283 N.C. 289, 196 S.E.2d 250 (1973).

If there is a breaking and entering with the felonious intent to steal, the accomplishment of the felonious intent is not a prerequisite of guilt. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972); State v. Harlow, 16 N.C. App. 312, 191 S.E.2d 900 (1972).

Same — Effect of Arrest of Judgment in Conviction under § 14-72(b). — The trial court's arrest of judgment on defendant's conviction for felonious larceny under § 14-72(b) had no effect on his conviction for felonious breaking or entering since it is not necessary for conviction of breaking and entering under subsection (a) of this section that a felony or larceny actually be committed in the building broken into; it is merely the intent at the time of the breaking or entering to commit the felony or larceny within the building that is required. State v. Stafford, 45 N.C. App. 297, 262 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

Value of Stolen Property Immaterial. — Larceny by breaking and entering a building is a felony without regard to the value of the stolen property. State v. Stubbs, 266 N.C. 274, 145 S.E.2d 896 (1966), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Where larceny is commited pursuant to breaking and entering, it constitutes a felony without regard to the value of the property in question. State v. Richardson, 8 N.C. App. 298, 174 S.E.2d 77 (1970).

Ownership of Property Is Immaterial. — It is incumbent upon the State to establish that, at the time the defendant broke and entered, he intended to steal something. However, it is not incumbent upon the State to establish the ownership of the property which he intended to steal, the particular ownership being immaterial. State v. Crawford, 3 N.C. App. 337, 164 S.E.2d 625 (1968).

It is no defense to a larceny charge that title to the property taken is in one other than the person from whom it was taken. The same rule applies to breaking and entering with larcenous intent. State v. Richardson, 8 N.C. App. 298, 174 S.E.2d 77 (1970).

A person is guilty of feloniously breaking and entering a dwelling house if he unlawfully breaks and enters such dwelling house with the intent to steal personal property located therein without reference to the ownership thereof. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972).

But see State v. Crawford, 29 N.C. App. 117, 223 S.E.2d 534 (1976) which held that, in a prosecution for breaking or entering, and felonious larceny, the allegations of ownership described in a bill of indictment are essential and proof of ownership should not vary from ownership as alleged. State v. Crawford, 29 N.C. App. 117, 223 S.E.2d 534 (1976).

And Owner of Property Sought to Be Stolen Need Not be Identified. — If there is a breaking and entering with the felonious intent to steal, the identification of the owner of the personal property sought to be stolen is not a prerequisite to guilt. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972).

B. Intent.

Intent Must Be Shown to Establish Felonious Breaking and Entering. — In order to convict under this section it is necessary to show intent and a failure to show intent leaves no other course except acquittal. State v. Spear, 164 N.C. 452, 79 S.E. 869 (1913), disapproving dictum in State v. Hooker, 145 N.C. 581, 59 S.E. 866 (1907). And see State v. Crisp, 188 N.C. 799, 125 S.E. 543 (1924).

Felonious intent is an essential element of the crime defined in this section. It must be alleged and proved, and the felonious intent proven must be the felonious intent alleged, which is the "intent to steal." State v. Friddle, 223 N.C. 258, 25 S.E.2d 751 (1943); State v. Jones, 264 N.C. 134, 141 S.E.2d 27 (1965); State v. Crawford, 3 N.C. App. 337, 164 S.E.2d 625 (1968); State v. Jackson, 4 N.C. App. 459, 167 S.E.2d 20 (1969).

In order to satisfy the felony requirement of this section is must be made to appear that there was a breaking or entering into a designated building or room "with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein." State v. Andrews, 246 N.C. 561, 99 S.E.2d 745 (1957).

The crime defined in this section is complete, all other elements being present, if there was an entry with felonious intent. State v. Vines, 262 N.C. 747, 138 S.E.2d 630 (1964).

To convict a person of the felony defined in this section, the State must satisfy the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that a building described in this section was broken into or entered "with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein." State v. Jones, 264 N.C. 134, 141 S.E.2d 27 (1965).

An essential element of the crime stated in subsection (a) of this section is that the intent exist at the time of the breaking or entering. State v. Hill, 38 N.C. App. 75, 247 S.E.2d 295 (1978).

But intent is not a prescribed element of wrongful breaking and entering under subsection (b) of this section. See State v. Currie, 19 N.C. App. 17, 198 S.E.2d 28 (1973).

Proof. — Intent is a mental attitude which must ordinarily be proved by circumstances from which it can be inferred. State v. Bronson, 10 N.C. App. 638, 179 S.E.2d 823 (1971); State v. Harlow, 16 N.C. App. 312, 191 S.E.2d 900 (1972).

The intent with which defendant broke and entered, or entered, may be found by the jury from what he did within the building. State v. Bronson, 10 N.C. App. 638, 179 S.E.2d 823 (1971).

In determining the presence or absence of the element of intent the jury may consider the acts and conduct of defendant and the general circumstances existing at the time of the alleged commission of the offense. State v. Bronson, 10 N.C. App. 638, 179 S.E.2d 823 (1971).

Intoxication as Defense. — Intoxication which renders an offender utterly unable to form the required specific intent may be shown as a defense. State v. Bronson, 10 N.C. App. 638, 179 S.E.2d 823 (1971).

Voluntary intoxication is not a defense. State v. Tillman, 22 N.C. App. 688, 207 S.E.2d 316 (1974).

IV. TRIAL.

A. Indictment.

Bill of Indictment Must Sufficiently Describe Crime Alleged. — The bill of indictment under this section must describe the crime alleged in such detail as would enable the defendant to plead his conviction or acquittal thereof as a bar to another prosecution for the same offense. State v. Carroll, 10 N.C. App. 143, 178 S.E.2d 10 (1970).

Description of Building. — In an indictment under this section punishing the breaking and entering of buildings, a building must be described as to show that it is within the language of the statute and so as to identify it with reasonable particularity so as to enable the defendant to prepare his defense and plead his conviction or acquittal as a bar to further prosecution for the same offense. State v. Sellers, 273 N.C. 641, 161 S.E.2d 15 (1968).

Particular identification in the indictment of the building alleged to have been broken into and entered is desirable. State v. Melton, 7 N.C. App. 721, 173 S.E.2d 610 (1970).

In light of the growth in population and in the number of structures (domestic, business and governmental), the prosecuting officers of this State would be well advised to identify the subject premises in a bill of indictment under this section by street address, highway address, rural road address or some clear description and designation to set the subject premises apart from like and other structures described in Article 14 of this Chapter. State v. Carroll, 10 N.C. App. 143, 178 S.E.2d 10 (1970).

Under this section, the breaking or entering of any building with intent to commit a felony or larceny therein constitutes a felony. Thus the necessity for describing the building in the bill of indictment for the purpose of showing that it is within the statute no longer exists. It remains necessary, however, to identify the building with reasonable particularity so as to enable the defendant to prepare his defense and plead his conviction or acquittal as a bar to further prosecution for the same offense. State v. Carroll, 10 N.C. App. 143, 178 S.E.2d 10 (1970).

An indictment under this section is sufficient if the building allegedly broken and entered is described sufficiently to show that it is within the language of the section and to identify it with reasonable particularity so that defendant may prepare his defense and plead his conviction or acquittal as a bar to further prosecution for the same offense. State v. Vawter, 33 N.C. App. 131, 234 S.E.2d 438, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 257, 237 S.E.2d 539 (1977).

The recommended practice is to identify the location of the subject premises by street address, rural road address or some other clear description. However, an indictment under this section is sufficient if the building allegedly broken and entered is described sufficiently to show that it is within the language of the statute and to identify it with reasonable particularity so that defendant may prepare his defense and plead his conviction or acquittal as a bar to further prosecution for the same offense. State v. Baker, 34 N.C. App. 434, 238 S.E.2d 648 (1977).

Same — Bill of Particulars. — If a defendant is in doubt as to the identity of the building he is charged with having feloniously broken into and entered, he can call for a bill of particulars. State v. Sellers, 273 N.C. 641, 161 S.E.2d 15 (1968).

"Unlawfully Breaking" Charges Intent. — An indictment under this section for housebreaking is sufficient when charging "that defendant did break and enter (otherwise than by burglarious breaking) the storeroom and house, etc., with intent to commit a felony, to wit, with intent the goods, etc., feloniously to steal, etc.," and is not defective for the failure to allege that the breaking and entering was feloniously done, there being no distinction between the words "unlawfully breaking" and "entering with the intent to commit a felony." State v. Goffney, 157 N.C. 624, 73 S.E. 162 (1911).

Indictment Charging Intent to Commit More than One Offense. — An indictment for entering a house with an intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime is not defective because it charges an intent to commit more than one offense. State v. Christmas, 101 N.C. 749, 8 S.E. 361 (1888).

Indictment Held Sufficient. — See Doss v. North Carolina, 252 F. Supp. 298 (M.D.N.C. 1966).

The indictment charged store-breaking, larceny and receiving in the language of the statute under which it was drawn, § 14-72 and this section, and contained the elements of the offense intended to be charged, and sufficiently informed the petitioner of the crime with which he was charged so that he could adequately prepare his defense and could plead the judgment as a bar to any subsequent prosecution for the same offense. Nothing more was required. Harris v. North Carolina, 320 F. Supp. 770 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd, 435 F.2d 1305 (4th Cir. 1971).

Indictment under This Section or § 14-51. — Where on appeal defendant's motion to set aside the verdict should have been allowed for want of evidence of defendant's guilt of second degree burglary and want of charge of second degree burglary in the indictment, upon the new trial ordered, defendant may be tried upon the original bill of burglary in the first degree, or upon an indictment under this section. State v. Locklear, 226 N.C. 410, 38 S.E.2d 162 (1946).

Though not sufficient as an indictment for burglary, an indictment, under which the defendant was tried for and convicted of burglary in the first degree, alleging that the defendant, at the specified time, broke and entered the dwelling house therein described, was sufficient to support a conviction under subsection (b) for wrongfully breaking and entering a building. State v. Cooper, 288 N.C. 496, 219 S.E.2d 45 (1975).

Variance. — In a prosecution for breaking and entering a building with intent to steal, the fact that the indictment alleges an intent to steal the property of a named corporation while the evidence discloses the property actually stolen belonged to another is not fatal. State v. Crawford, 3 N.C. App. 337, 164 S.E.2d 625 (1968).

If evidence offered at trial fails to show ownership as alleged in indictment of premises entered and property taken, a motion for judgment of nonsuit should be allowed, both to a charge of breaking or entering and to a charge of felonious larceny. State v. Crawford, 29 N.C. App. 117, 223 S.E.2d 534 (1976).

There was no fatal variance where the indictment alleged a breaking and entering with intent to steal of a "building occupied by Julian Jones used as a garage" and the evidence showed that the building was a storage shed and no longer used by Mr. Jones, since it was not incumbent on the State to establish the owner of the property defendant intended to steal but only the intent to steal upon breaking or entering. State v. Graham, 47 N.C. App. 303, 267 S.E.2d 56 (1980).

C. Unlawful Breaking or Entering.

"Unlawful Breaking or Entering" Essential to Both Offenses. — The unlawful breaking or entering of a building described in this section is an essential element of both the felony and misdemeanor offenses. The distinction rests solely on whether the unlawful breaking or entering is done "with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein." State v. Jones, 264 N.C. 134, 141 S.E.2d 27 (1965).

This section defines a felony and defines a misdemeanor. The unlawful breaking or entering of a building described in this statute is an essential element of both offenses. The distinction rests solely on whether the unlawful breaking or entering is done "with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein." State v. Dickens, 272 N.C. 515, 158 S.E.2d 614 (1968); State v. Williams, 2 N.C. App. 194, 162 S.E.2d 688 (1968); State v. Green, 2 N.C. App. 221, 162 S.E.2d 513 (1968).

But Both Breaking And Entering Need Not Be Shown. — Evidence of a breaking when available is relevant, but the absence of such evidence is not a fatal defect of proof to support a conviction of breaking and entering under this section where there is proof of entry. Nor is proof of entry where there is proof of breaking necessary to support a conviction on a charge of breaking and entering under this section. Blakeney v. State, 2 N.C. App. 312, 163 S.E.2d 69 (1968).

Either a breaking or an entering with the requisite intent is sufficient to constitute a violation of this section. State v. Bronson, 10 N.C. App. 638, 179 S.E.2d 823 (1971).

Since subsection (a) of this section is in the disjunctive, the contention that there is no evidence that defendant broke and entered a house was not well taken. State v. Houston, 19 N.C. App. 542, 199 S.E.2d 668, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 426, 200 S.E.2d 662 (1973).

To convict of violating this section, it is sufficient if the State's evidence shows either a breaking or an entering; it need not show both. State v. Barnett, 41 N.C. App. 171, 254 S.E.2d 199 (1979).

Same — Breaking Not Required Where Entry Shown. — It is evident it was the intention of the legislature to make it a penal offense to wilfully break into a storehouse where merchandise, etc., is kept, or into an uninhabited house, or to willfully enter into a dwelling house in the night otherwise than by breaking, with the intent to commit a felony. State v. Hughes, 86 N.C. 662 (1882).

Housebreaking or nonburglarious breaking is a statutory and not a common-law offense, and under this section it is unlawful to enter a dwelling with intent to commit a felony therein, either with or without a breaking, and therefore while evidence of a breaking, when available, is always relevant proof of a breaking is not essential to sustain conviction. State v. Mumford, 227 N.C. 132, 41 S.E.2d 201 (1947); State v. Best, 232 N.C. 575, 61 S.E.2d 612 (1950).

A breaking is not now and has never been a prerequisite of guilt and proof thereof is not required. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Under this section it is unlawful to break into a dwelling with intent to commit a felony therein. It is likewise unlawful to enter, with like intent, without a breaking. Hence, evidence of a breaking, when available, is always relevant, but absence of such evidence does not constitute a fatal defect of proof. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), overruled on other grounds, State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Under this section it is unlawful to break into a dwelling with intent to commit a felony therein. It is likewise unlawful to enter, with like intent, without a breaking. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

A breaking is not a necessary element of the offense defined in this section and the offense defined in this section is complete, all other elements being present, if there was an entry with felonious intent. State v. Lassiter, 15 N.C. App. 265, 189 S.E.2d 798, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 358 (1972).

Same — Entry Not Required When Breaking Shown. — The fact that the shaking of a door and its opening was not followed by a physical entrance into the building does not prevent a finding by the jury that defendants broke and entered the building. They had actually opened the door although they had not entered and the crime was complete upon the finding by the jury of the overt act and felonious intent which was amply supported by the evidence. State v. Nichols, 268 N.C. 152, 150 S.E.2d 21 (1966).

Breaking of store window with requisite intent to commit a felony therein, completes offense, even though the defendant is interrupted or otherwise abandons his purpose without actually entering the building. State v. Jones, 272 N.C. 108, 157 S.E.2d 610 (1967); State v. Burgess, 1 N.C. App. 104, 160 S.E.2d 110 (1968); State v. Wooten, 1 N.C. App. 240, 161 S.E.2d 59 (1968).

Violation of subsection (a) of this section was complete when defendant broke open the door with the obvious intention to enter and take something from the store. State v. Avery, 48 N.C. App. 675, 269 S.E.2d 708 (1980).

Entry With Consent of Owner Not Unlawful. — In order to convict a person of housebreaking under this section there must have been an unlawful entry by the prisoner, and when the owner has procured the act to be done by the prisoner company with and at the instance of the one selected by the owner for the purpose, the entry is lawful, and no crime is shown to have been committed, whatever the intent of the prisoner may have been at the time. State v. Goffney, 157 N.C. 624, 73 S.E. 162 (1911).

An entry is found to be a lawful one where the owner of the premises gives the defendant permission to enter, and where the entry is with the consent and at the instance of the owner. State v. Thompson, 8 N.C. App. 313, 174 S.E.2d 130 (1970).

The entry proscribed by this section contemplates an unauthorized or unpermitted entry, and thus an entry with the consent of the owner is not an unlawful entry. State v. Boone, 39 N.C. App. 218, 249 S.E.2d 817 (1978), cert. granted, 296 N.C. 587, 251 S.E.2d 473 (1979).

An entry with consent of the owner of a building, or anyone empowered to give effective consent to entry, cannot be the basis for conviction of felonious entry under subsection (a). State v. Boone, 297 N.C. 652, 256 S.E.2d 683 (1979).

Same — Entering Place of Business During Business Hours. — A person cannot be convicted of felonious entry into a store or place of business during normal business hours through a door open to the public because there has not been an unauthorized or unpermitted entry. State v. Boone, 39 N.C. App. 218, 249 S.E.2d 817 (1978), cert. granted, 296 N.C. 537, 251 S.E.2d 473 (1979); State v. Speller, 44 N.C. App. 59, 259 S.E.2d 784 (1979).

Where defendant entered a store at a time when it was open to the public, his entry was thus with the consent, implied if not express, of the owner and it cannot serve as the basis for a conviction for felonious entry. State v. Boone, 297 N.C. 652, 256 S.E.2d 683 (1979).

Same — Same — Concealment Voided Consent to Entry. — Although a person cannot be convicted of felonious entry into a store or place of business during normal business hours through a door open to the public because there has not been an unauthorized or unpermitted entry, where defendant entered the building during normal business hours, but thereafter without the consent of the owner, he went into an area not open to the public and there secreted himself, and remained concealed until well beyond the closing of business hours for the store for the purpose of participating in a theft, these acts voided any consent to the entry. Going into an area not open to the public and remaining hidden there past closing hours made the entry through the front door open for business unlawful. State v. Speller, 44 N.C. App. 59, 259 S.E.2d 784 (1979).

Unlocking Door with Key. — There is a sufficient breaking where a person enters a building with a felonious intent by unlocking a door with a key. State v. Knight, 361 N.C. 17, 134 S.E.2d 101 (1964).

The State is not required to offer evidence of damage to a door or window. A breaking or entering condemned by the statute may be shown to be a mere pushing or pulling open of an unlocked door or the raising or lowering of an unlocked window, or the opening of a locked door with a key. State v. Bronson, 10 N.C. App. 638, 179 S.E.2d 823 (1971).

III. LESSER INCLUDED OFFENSE.

Breaking and Entering Is Lesser Included Offense of Burglary. — The statutory offense set forth in this section is a less degree of the offense of burglary in the first degree set forth in § 14-51. State v. Perry, 265 N.C. 517, 144 S.E.2d 591 (1965); State v. Fowler, 1 N.C. App. 546, 162 S.E.2d 37 (1968); State v. Bell, 284 N.C. 416, 200 S.E.2d 601 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 746, 208 S.E.2d 506 (1974).

A felonious entering into a house otherwise than burglariously with intent to commit larceny, a violation of this section, is a less degree of the felony of burglary in the first degree. State v. Fikes, 270 N.C. 780, 155 S.E.2d 277 (1967).

A violation of this section is a less degree of the felony of burglary in the first degree. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

The statutory offense of felonious breaking or entering is a lesser included offense of burglary in the first and second degree. State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

Felonious Breaking and Entering as Lesser Included Offense of Felony-Murder. — Where proof that defendant feloniously broke into and entered a dwelling is an essential and indispensable element in the State's proof of murder committed in the perpetration of the felony of feloniously breaking into and entering that particular dwelling, the conviction of defendant for felony-murder, that is, murder in the first degree without proof of malice, premeditation or deliberation, is based on a finding by the jury that the murder was committed in the perpetration of the felonious breaking and entering, and the felonious breaking and entering is a lesser included offense of the felony-murder. Hence, a separate verdict of guilty of felonious breaking and entering affords no basis for additional punishment. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972).

Receiving stolen goods is not a lesser included offense of breaking and entering but a separate and distinct offense. State v.

Miller, 18 N.C. App. 489, 197 S.E.2d 46, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 757, 198 S.E.2d 727 (1973).

Misdemeanor Breaking and Entering Is Lesser Included Offense of Felonious Breaking and Entering. — The misdemeanor defined in this section must be considered "a less degree of the same crime," an included offense, within the meaning of § 15-170. State v. Jones, 264 N.C. 134, 141 S.E.2d 27 (1965); State v. Dickens, 272 N.C. 515, 158 S.E.2d 614 (1968); State v. Williams, 2 N.C. App. 194, 162 S.E.2d 688 (1968).

Wrongful breaking or entering without intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime is a lesser degree of felonious breaking or entering within this section. State v. Worthey, 270 N.C. 444, 154 S.E.2d 515 (1967).

The misdemeanor of nonfelonious breaking and entering, if there is evidence to support it, is a lesser included offense of the felony of breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony as described in this section. State v. Johnson, 1 N.C. App. 15, 159 S.E.2d 249 (1968); State v. Fowler, 1 N.C. App. 546, 162 S.E.2d 37 (1968).

Wrongful breaking and entering without intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime is a lesser included offense of the felony of breaking or entering with intent to commit a felony under this section. State v. Fowler, 1 N.C. App. 549, 162 S.E.2d 39 (1968); State v. Lewis, 17 N.C. App. 117, 193 S.E.2d 455 (1972), cert. denied, 283 N.C. 258, 259, 195 S.E.2d 691 (1973).

Any person who breaks or enters any building described in this section with intent to commit any felony or larceny therein, is guilty of a felony. A wrongful breaking or entering into such building, without the intent to commit any felony therein, is a misdemeanor, a lesser included offense within the meaning of § 15-170. State v. Dozier, 19 N.C. App. 740, 200 S.E.2d 348 (1973), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 618, 201 S.E.2d 690 (1974).

B. Burden of Proof.

Proof of recent possession of stolen property by the State does not shift the burden of proof to the defendant but the burden remains with the State to demonstrate defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Fair, 291 N.C. 171, 229 S.E.2d 189 (1976).

Insanity as Defense. — Insanity is an affirmative defense and the burden of carrying it is upon the defendant. State v. Tillman, 22 N.C. App. 688, 207 S.E.2d 316 (1974).

C. Evidence.

Evidence Concerning Accomplice Immaterial. — Where defendant was charged under this section with nonburglariously breaking and entering and the evidence showed that he sat in his car while a friend unlawfully entered the house of another, the defendant was a principal in the crime being committed and the fact that his friend did not enter by burglarious breaking is immaterial. State v. Best, 232 N.C. 575, 61 S.E.2d 612 (1950).

Acquittal of Third Persons Not Relevant. — Since breaking and entering, larceny and uttering a forged check are offenses that require only one perpetrator, the acquittal of third persons arrested with the accused for the crime is not relevant evidence at defendant's trial. State v. McCullough, 50 N.C. App. 184, 272 S.E.2d 613 (1980).

Evidence of Entry without Breaking. — Where the evidence in the case and the inferences to be reasonably drawn therefrom were not such as would have required the jury to find that defendant entered by a burglarious breaking, the jury might reasonably have inferred that defendant made his entry without a burglarious breaking. State v. Bell, 284 N.C. 416, 200 S.E.2d 601 (1973).

Inference From Possession of Recently Stolen Property. — Evidence that defendant was in possession of stolen property shortly after the property was stolen raises a presumption of defendant's guilt of larceny of such property. State v. Jones, 3 N.C. App. 455, 165 S.E.2d 36 (1969); State v. Snuggs, 18 N.C. App. 226, 196 S.E.2d 525 (1973).

The presumption of recent possession, or inference as it is more properly called, is one of fact and not of law. The inference derived from recent possession is to be considered by the jury merely as an evidentiary fact, along with the other evidence in the case, in determining whether the State has carried the burden of satisfying the jury beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt. State v. Fair, 291 N.C. 171, 229 S.E.2d 189 (1976).

While possession of recently stolen property will support both a presumption of guilt of larceny and an inference of guilt of breaking and entering, they are mere inferences which the jury may consider along with other evidence in the case, which other evidence may be sufficient to tip the scales with respect to one count but not the other. State v. Barnes, 30 N.C. App. 671, 228 S.E.2d 83 (1976).

Tracing Stolen Articles to Defendant. — It is always competent in a prosecution for breaking and entering and larceny to show all of the goods lost from a store and to trace some or all of the articles to a defendant. State v. Richardson, 8 N.C. App. 298, 174 S.E.2d 77 (1970).

Evidence Concerning Owner's Permission. — Where the evidence tended to show that a homeowner was locked out of his house and was trying to gain entry by using a credit card when defendant approached him and opened the door with an eight inch knife, the homeowner and defendant entered the house, drank alcoholic beverages and removed some items belonging to the homeowner, and both then left the house whereupon the homeowner called the police, testimony by the homeowner that he did not forbid defendant to come into the house because he was afraid defendant had a gun or knife was evidence from which the jury could conclude defendant did not have the owner's permission to enter the house. State v. Bartlett, 45 N.C. App. 704, 263 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

For the State to survive a motion to dismiss under § 15A-1227(a)(1), it must present evidence that defendant entered a building within the meaning of subsection (b) of this section and that he did so wrongfully, that is, that he entered without any consent or permission of the owner or occupant. State v. Winston, 45 N.C. App. 99, 262 S.E.2d 331 (1980).

To justify submission of felonious breaking or entering as a permissible verdict in a prosecution for burglary there must be evidence tending to show that defendant could have gained entry to victim's motel room by means other than a burglarious breaking, i.e., a forcible entry. State v. Jolly, 297, N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence that a cotton mill had been broken into and that goods taken therefrom had been found in defendant's possession within an hour or two thereafter, with further evidence of his unlawful possession, is sufficient for conviction, under the provisions of this section and defendant's demurrer to the State's evidence, or motion for dismissal thereon, is properly overruled. State v. Williams, 187 N.C. 492, 122 S.E. 13 (1924).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction under this section. State v. Hargett, 196 N.C. 692, 146 S.E. 801 (1929).

The evidence was held amply sufficient to support verdict of guilty of feloniously breaking and entering and larceny by means of such felonious breaking and entering. State v. Majors, 268 N.C. 146, 150 S.E.2d 35 (1966).

Evidence held sufficient to overrule nonsuit in the prosecution for unlawfully breaking and entering a building with intent to steal merchandise therefrom. State v. Cloud, 271 N.C. 591, 157 S.E.2d 12 (1967).

Evidence that around midnight the defendant and a companion broke the glass door of a hardware store and took away guns and ammunition was held sufficient to show a present intent on the part of defendant to take property belonging to another and convert it to his own use. State v. Thompson, 8 N.C. App. 313, 174 S.E.2d 130 (1970).

In prosecution for breaking and entering testimony by a qualified expert that fingerprints found at the scene of the crime correspond with the fingerprints of the accused, when accompanied by substantial evidence of circumstances from which the jury can find that the fingerprints could only have been impressed at the time the crime was committed, is sufficient to withstand motion for nonsuit and carry the case to the jury. State v. Miller, 289 N.C. 1, 220 S.E.2d 572 (1975).

In prosecution for breaking and entering, where the State's evidence established that: (1) defendant's right thumbprint was found on the lock at the scene of the crime, a fact defendant solemnly admitted in open court; (2) no other fingerprints — of defendant or any one else — were found at the scene; and (3) when informed of the fingerprint defendant stated to the police that he had never been in the business establishment alleged to have been broken into, a statement now conceded to be false, defendant's motion to nonsuit on the breaking and entering count was properly denied. State v. Miller, 289 N.C. 1, 220 S.E.2d 572 (1975).

The court properly denied a motion for nonsuit where the State, having introduced substantial evidence of each element of the offense of breaking or entering the building as charged in the indictment and that defendant was one of the persons who committed the offense, the question of guilt or innocence was properly submitted to the jury. State v. Burch, 24 N.C. App. 514, 211 S.E.2d 511 (1975).

There was sufficient circumstantial evidence from which the court could have found that respondent committed the breaking or entering: (1) Numerous items similar though not identified, as those stolen were found in the car driven by respondent; (2) respondent's companion in the car had a fresh cut on his hand and at the store that was broken into, blood was found on the window and near the cash register; (3) and the officer's observation of the car being driven by respondent under suspicious circumstances "backing out from behind" the store and thereafter stopping the car. In re Frye, 32 N.C. App. 384, 232 S.E.2d 301 (1977).

Where the evidence shows (1) that a breaking and entering occurred; (2) that prior thereto the accused had possession of an instrument used to effect it; (3) that such possession occurred within a short time prior to the breaking and entering; (4) and that the instrument was found at the scene of the crime immediately after the crime was committed, a jury would be justified in finding that the instrument had been brought there by the person who had been shown to have previously possessed it and that such person used it to effect the breaking and entering. If the evidence is also sufficient to show that the crime of larceny was committed pursuant to the breaking and entering, then the jury may infer that the accused is guilty of larceny as well as breaking and entering. State v. McNair, 36 N.C. App. 196, 243 S.E.2d 805 (1978).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — There was insufficient evidence from which the jury could find that defendant committed the breaking and entering where no fingerprints were taken linking the defendant to the break-in, no effort was made to determine whether the footprints leading from the home matched the defendant's footprints, and where clearly defendant never had actual possession of the stolen merchandise. State v. McKinney, 25 N.C. App. 283, 212 S.E.2d 707 (1975).

In a prosecution of defendant for breaking or entering, evidence relating to the actions of a bloodhound should have been excluded because the State failed to show that the dog was put on the trail of the guilty party under such circumstances as to afford substantial assurance that the person trailed was in fact the person suspected, and the case should have been dismissed for insufficiency of evidence where the evidence tended to show that one and half to two hours after a breaking occurred, one and a half to two miles away, defendant was found on a little sandbar by a creek; there was no evidence tending to establish that defendant was ever at the residence broken into; the only witness to the crime was unable to identify the man he had seen leaving the residence; there was no evidence defendant was at the place at which the dog was released to track the thieves; there was no evidence placing stolen guns or other stolen items in defendant's possession; there was evidence of footprints in the vicinity of the residence, but no evidence indicating they were defendant's footprints; and there was no evidence that defendant attempted to flee to avoid capture. State v. Lanier, 50 N.C. App. 383, 273 S.E.2d 746 (1981).

Same — Evidence of Intoxication. — Evidence that defendant was in an intoxicated condition at the time he was apprehended fell short of a showing that defendant was in such an intoxicated condition that he was utterly unable to form the intent required. State v. Bronson, 10 N.C. App. 638, 179 S.E.2d 823 (1971).

D. Instructions to Jury.

Duty of Court to Submit to Jury Question of Guilt Hereunder Where Indictment Charges First-Degree Burglary. — Where the evidence is sufficient to justify it upon a bill of indictment charging a defendant with burglary in the first degree, it is the duty and mandatory upon the court to submit to the jury the question of whether or not the defendant is guilty of breaking and entering the dwelling house in question at the time and place mentioned in the bill of indictment otherwise than burglariously, and it is error for the court to fail or refuse to do so. State v. Johnson, 218 N.C. 604, 12 S.E.2d 278 (1940).

Same — Illustration. — The State's evidence tended to show that defendant broke and entered the dwelling house in question at night while same was occupied as a sleeping apartment, stole some money and ran away when the female occupant discovered him and screamed. Defendant contended, upon supporting evidence, that at the time he was too drunk to know where he was or what he was doing. The court instructed the jury that defendant might be convicted of burglary in the first degree, or of burglary in the second degree, if they found that the room was unoccupied, but if they found defendant was too drunk to form felonious intent they should return a verdict of not guilty. Held: The instruction required the jury to find the defendant guilty of burglary in the first degree or not guilty, since there was no evidence that the room was unoccupied, and defendant was entitled to a new trial for error of the court in failing to instruct that defendant might be found guilty of breaking and entering otherwise than burglariously, or of an attempt to commit the offense. State v. Feyd, 213 N.C. 617, 197 S.E. 171 (1938).

The evidence tended to show unlawful entry into a dwelling at nighttime while same was actually occupied, and the actual commission therein of the felony charged in the bill of indictment. The evidence also tended to show that the window of the room in which the felony was committed was open, and that the perpetrator of the crime was first seen in this room, and that after the commission of the crime he escaped by the open window. There was also circumstantial evidence that entry was made by opening a window of another room of the house. There was also sufficient evidence tending to identify defendant as the perpetrator of the crime. Held: Although there is no evidence of burglary in the second degree, the evidence tends to show burglary in the first degree, or a nonburglarious breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony, depending upon whether the perpetrator of the crime entered by the open window or burglariously "broke" into the dwelling, and therefore the trial court should have charged that the defendant might be found guilty of burglary in the first degree, guilty of a nonburglarious breaking and entering of the dwelling house with intent to commit a felony or other infamous crime therein, or not guilty, and its failure to submit the question of defendant's guilt of nonburglarious entry constitutes reversible error. State v. Chambers, 218 N.C. 442, 11 S.E.2d 280 (1940).

Failure to Charge on Misdemeanor Prejudicial Error. — Where the evidence as to defendant's intent was circumstantial and did not point unerringly to an intent to commit a felony, it was prejudicial error for the court to fail to charge that the jury could find a verdict of nonfelonious breaking and entering, a misdemeanor, and for the court to fail to explain the full contents of this section to the jury. State v. Worthey, 270 N.C. 444, 154 S.E.2d 515 (1967).

The term "larceny" is a vital element of the crime of breaking and entering with the intent to commit larceny and the trial judge's failure to define such term in his instructions constituted error requiring a new trial. State v. Elliott, 21 N.C. App. 555, 205 S.E.2d 106 (1974).

Proper Instruction. — See State v. Jones, 272 N.C. 108, 157 S.E.2d 610 (1967).

Same — Instruction in Words of Section. — Where the court charged in the words of this section, the instruction was free from prejudicial error. State v. Wade, 14 N.C. App. 414, 188 S.E.2d 714, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 627, 190 S.E.2d 470 (1972).

Same — Instruction Allowing Conviction on Alternative Propositions. — In prosecutions under this section, where the indictment charges the defendant with breaking and entering, proof by the State of either a breaking or an entering is sufficient, and instructions allowing juries to convict on the alternative propositions are proper. State v. Boyd, 287 N.C. 131, 214 S.E.2d 14 (1975); State v. Reagan, 35 N.C. App. 140, 240 S.E.2d 805 (1978).

E. Verdict.

Verdict Disapproved. — In a prosecution for felonious breaking and entering, a verdict that defendant is guilty of felonious "B. & E." is disapproved. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

F. Appeal.

Scope of Review. — Each defendant having entering a peal of guilty to a valid information charging the felony of nonburglarious breaking, their appeal brings up for review only the question whether the facts charged constitute an offense punishable under the laws and Constitution. Defendants' plea established a violation of this section. State v. Hodge, 267 N.C. 238, 147 S.E.2d 881 (1966).

V. SENTENCING.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under the section as it stood prior to the effective date of the 1979 amendment.

Maximum Sentence. — The punishment for a violation of this section may be a maximum of 10 years. State v. Hodge, 267 N.C. 238, 147 S.E.2d 881 (1966).

The maximum punishment for the felony of breaking and entering is 10 years' imprisonment. State v. Reed, 4 N.C. App. 109, 165 S.E.2d 674 (1969); State v. Perryman, 4 N.C. App. 684, 167 S.E.2d 517 (1969).

Larceny of any property of another of any value after breaking and entering, and larceny of property of more than $200.00 (now $400.00) in value, are felonious, each of which may be punishable by imprisonment for as much as 10 years. State v. Jones, 3 N.C. App. 455, 165 S.E.2d 36 (1969).

A sentence of 10 years is not in excess of that permitted by the statute upon a conviction of the felony of breaking and entering in violation of subsection (a) of this section. State v. Cleary, 9 N.C. App. 189, 175 S.E.2d 749 (1970).

Sentence Not Cruel or Unusual Punishment. — A sentence of 25 years' imprisonment, imposed after a plea of guilty to four indictments charging felonious breaking and entering and larceny in violation of this section and § 14-72, did not exceed the statutory maximum and was not cruel and unusal punishment in the constitutional sense. State v. Greer, 270 N.C. 143, 153 S.E.2d 849 (1967).

The impisition of a sentence of imprisonment of seven to nine years upon plea of nolo contendere to the offenses of breaking and entering and larceny is not cruel or unusual punishment in a constitutional sense. State v. Robinson, 271 N.C. 448, 156 S.E.2d 854 (1967).

Sentence of imprisonment for not less than six nor more than 10 years for felonious breaking and entering was punishment within the limits authorized by statute and is not cruel and unusual punishment within the constitutional prohibition. State v. Strickland, 10 N.C. App. 540, 179 S.E.2d 162 (1971).

Sentence Exceeding Maximum. — Where the maximum term of a sentence is set beyond statutory authorization under this section, the sentence imposed is not void in toto. Petitioner is not entitled to be released from custody since he has not served that part of the sentence which is within lawful limits. State v. Clendon, 249 N.C. 44, 105 S.E.2d 93 (1958).

Sentence Where Misdemeanor and Felony Charges Consolidated. — Where defendant was tried and convicted upon an indictment charging felonious breaking and entering and misdemeanor larceny, and both counts were consolidated for judgment, the fact that the one sentence imposed is in excess of that permissible upon conviction of the misdemeanor is immaterial and is not prejudicial where it does not exceed that permitted upon conviction of the felony. State v. Cleary, 9 N.C. App. 189, 175 S.E.2d 749 (1970).

If any person shall be found armed with any dangerous or offensive weapon, with the intent to break or enter a dwelling, or other building whatsoever, and to commit any felony or larceny therein; or shall be found having in his possession, without lawful excuse, any picklock, key, bit, or other implement of housebreaking; or shall be found in any such building, with intent to commit any felony or larceny therein such person shall be punished as a Class H felon. (Code, s. 997; Rev., s. 3334; 1907, c. 822; C. S., s. 4236; 1969, c. 543, s. 4; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and punished by fine or imprisonment in the State's prison, or both, in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

III. Practice and Procedure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Separate Offenses. — The offense of being armed with any dangerous weapon with intent to break and enter a dwelling or other building and commit a felony therein, and the offense of possessing, without lawful excuse, implements of housebreaking, are separate and distinct offenses, under this section, the first requiring a presently existing intent to break and enter, and the second mere possession, without lawful excuse, of implements of housebreaking, which infers no personal intent but rather the purpose for which the implements are kept. State v. Baldwin, 226 N.C. 295, 37 S.E.2d 898 (1946).

This section defines three separate offenses. State v. Morgan, 268 N.C. 215, 150 S.E.2d 377 (1966); State v. Shore, 10 N.C. App. 75, 178 S.E.2d 22 (1970), cert. denied, 278 N.C. 105, 179 S.E.2d 453 (1971); State v. Hines, 15 N.C. App. 337, 190 S.E.2d 293 (1972).

This section defines three separate offenses, and the part of this section relating to possession of implements of housebreaking is a separate offense. State v. Godwin, 269 N.C. 263, 152 S.E.2d 152 (1967).

This section defines a separate felony for mere possession without lawful excuse of tools or implements of housebreaking, and it is the inherent nature and purpose of the tool, or the clear effect of a combination of otherwise innocent tools, which is condemned. State v. Godwin, 3 N.C. App. 55, 164 S.E.2d 86 (1968), disapproved, State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

The second defined offense under this section is the possession of an implement of housebreaking without lawful excuse. State v. Shore, 10 N.C. App. 75, 178 S.E.2d 22 (1970), cert. denied, 278 N.C. 105, 179 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

Applied in State v. Davis, 263 N.C. 127, 139 S.E.2d 23 (1964); State v. Shedd, 274 N.C. 95, 161 S.E.2d 477 (1968); State v. Ruiz, 13 N.C. App. 187, 185 S.E.2d 300 (1971); State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

II. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

A. Possession of Housebreaking Implements.

1. In General.

Elements of Crime and Burden of Proof Thereof. The gravamen of the offense is the possession of burglar's tools without lawful excuse, and the burden is on the State to show two things: (1) That the person charged was found having in his possession an implement or implements of housebreaking enumerated in, or which come within the meaning of the statute; and (2) that such possession was without lawful excuse. State v. Boyd, 223 N.C. 79, 25 S.E.2d 456 (1943).

In a prosecution under this section for having possession without lawful excuse of a crowbar, hack saw and automatic pistol, the burden is on the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the possession of the implements was "without lawful excuse" within the spirit of the statute, and the possession of a pistol for personal protection, even though unauthorized, cannot be unlawful possession within the meaning of the statute. State v. Davis, 245 N.C. 146, 95 S.E.2d 564 (1956).

In a prosecution under the provisions of this section, the burden is on the State to show two things: (1) That the person charged was found having in his possession an implement or implements of housebreaking enumerated in, in, or which come within the meaning of the statute, and (2) that such possession was without lawful excuse. State v. Morgan, 268 N.C. 214, 150 S.E.2d 377 (1966); State v. Godwin, 269 N.C. 263, 152 S.E.2d 152 (1967); State v. Craddock, 272 N.C. 160, 158 S.E.2d 25 (1967); State v. Davis, 272 N.C. 469, 158 S.E.2d 630 (1968); State v. Styles, 3 N.C. App. 204, 164 S.E.2d 412 (1968); State v. McCloud, 7 N.C. App. 132, 171 S.E.2d 470, aff'd, 276 N.C. 518, 173 S.E.2d 753 (1970).

In a prosecution for unlawful possession of implements of housebreaking the burden is on the State to show (1) that the person charged was found having in his possession an implement of housebreaking and (2) that such possession was without lawful excuse. State v. Shore, 10 N.C. App. 75, 178 S.E.2d 22 (1970), cert. denied, 278 N.C. 105, 179 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

The essential elements of the crime of possession of implements of housebreaking are (1) the possession of an implement of housebreaking (2) without lawful excuse, and the State has the burden of proving both of these elements. State v. Stockton, 13 N.C. App. 287, 185 S.E.2d 459 (1971).

Upon indictment for a crime under this section, the State has the burden of proving the following two things: (1) that the defendant was found to have in his possession an implement or implements of housebreaking enumerated in, or which come within the meaning of the statute and (2) that such possession was without lawful excuse. State v. Beard, 22 N.C. App. 596, 207 S.E.2d 390 (1974).

The gravamen of the offense of possession of housebreaking implements, as defined by this section lies in the possession, without lawful excuse, of an implement or implements either enumerated in the statute or which fairly come within the meaning of the term other implements of housebreaking. State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Same — The phrase "without lawful excuse" must be construed in the spirit of this section, and, even though the possession of the pistols and blackjack be unlawful and even though defendants possessed the pistols and blackjack for the purpose of personal protection in the unlawful transportation of intoxicating liquor, such possession is not within the meaning of this section. State v. Boyd, 223 N.C. 79, 25 S.E.2d 456 (1943).

Proof of "Intent" or "Unlawful Use" Not Required. — The offense of possessing implements of housebreaking without lawful excuse, does not require the proof of any "intent" or "unlawful use." State v. Vick, 312 N.C. 235, 195 S.E. 779 (1938).

Where defendant is charged with possession of certain specific items condemned by this section, it is not necessary for the court to determine whether tools or implements that have legitimate purposes were being possessed for an illegitimate purpose. State v. Styles, 3 N.C. App. 204, 164 S.E.2d 412 (1968).

The offense of possessing implements of housebreaking does not require the proof of "intent" in this State. State v. Ledford, 24 N.C. App. 542, 211 S.E.2d 532 (1975).

A prosecution under this section does not require proof of any specific intent to break into a particular building at a particular time and place. State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

But State Must Show General Intent To Use Unlawfully. — Although a prosecution under this section does not require proof of any specific intent to break into a particular building at a particular time and place, the burden rests on the state to show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant possessed the article in question with a general intent to use it at some time for the purpose of facilitating a breaking. State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Character of Object of Burglary Immaterial. — The possession of an implement with intent to burglarize and not the character of the object (be it a house or vending machine) of the burglary brings the act within the condemnation of the statute. State v. Shore, 10 N.C. App. 75, 178 S.E.2d 22 (1970), cert. denied, 278 N.C. 105, 179 S.E.2d 453 (1979).

State Need Not Prove That All Articles in Defendant's Possession Are Implements of Housebreaking. — The State is not required to prove that all the articles the defendant had in his possession are implements of housebreaking. State v. Stockton, 13 N.C. App. 287, 185 S.E.2d 459 (1971).

Constructive Possession of Implements of Housebreaking. — The State need not always prove an actual possession of implements of housebreaking, but may show constructive possession by circumstantial evidence. State v. Ledford, 24 N.C. App. 542, 211 S.E.2d 532 (1975).

2. Particular Implements.

"Implements of Housebreaking" Generally. — If tools enumerated in an indictment are embraced within the general term "other implement of housebreaking," their possession without lawful excuse is prohibited by this section. State v. Morgan, 268 N.C. 214, 150 S.E.2d 377 (1966).

Items which are "implements of housebreaking" are not specifically named in this section, so if their possession without lawful excuse is proscribed at all it is under the general language of the statute. State v. Shore, 10 N.C. App. 75, 178 S.E.2d 22 (1970), cert. denied, 278 N.C. 105, 179 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

An article may be deemed an implement of housebreaking, the possession of which is made criminal by the statute, when (1) it is a picklock, key, bit, or any other instrument capable of being used for the purpose of housebreaking, and (2) at the time and place alleged, the person charged with its possession did in fact possess it for that purpose, i.e., without lawful excuse. State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Use to Which Instrument Is Put Is Not Controlling. — The fact that certain implements were possessed and used by the defendant in breaking open a window in a building is not determinative of the question of whether or not they were implements of housebreaking possessed in violation of this section. The use to which a tool or instrument is put is not necessarily controlling in determining whether it is within the intent of the phrase "or other implement of housebreaking" as contained in this section. State v. Puckett, 43 N.C. App. 596, 259 S.E.2d 310 (1979).

A crowbar is clearly a breaking tool. State v. Morgan, 268 N.C. 214, 150 S.E.2d 377 (1966).

Likewise, a Combination of Crowbar and Big Screwdriver. — Under the circumstances the possession of a crowbar and a big screwdriver were without lawful excuse, and said crowbar and big screwdriver were other implements of housebreaking within the intent and meaning of this section. State v. Morgan, 268 N.C. 214, 150 S.E.2d 377 (1966).

And a Combination of Gloves, Tapes, Chisels, Crowbars, Hammers, and Punches. — While gloves, tapes, chisels, crowbars, hammers, and punches all have their honest and legitimate uses, when no explanation is offered for this combination of articles by a man several hundred miles from his home, in the middle of the night, it is ample to sustain a possession of wrongful and unlawful possession of tools used in store breaking. State v. Nichols, 268 N.C. 152, 150 S.E.2d 21 (1966).

As Is a Picklock. — This section contemplates a picklock as being a burglary tool when it is in the possession of someone without lawful excuse. State v. Craddock, 272 N.C. 160, 158 S.E.2d 25 (1967).

A "lockpick" and a "picklock" are the same thing. State v. Craddock, 272 N.C. 160, 158 S.E.2d 25 (1967).

Chisels and Screwdrivers May Be Implements of Housebreaking. — Although the instruments have other uses which are legitimate and were not made for the specific purpose of breaking into buildings, it is common knowledge that chisels and screwdrivers can be, and may be, used as implements of housebreaking. State v. Cadora, 13 N.C. App. 176, 185 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

Tire Tool Not Necessarily an Implement For Housebreaking. — A tire tool is a part of the repair kit which the manufacturer delivers with each motor vehicle designed to run on pneumatic tires; not only is there lawful excuse for its possession, but there is little or no excuse for a motorist to be on the road without one. State v. Garrett, 263 N.C. 773, 140 S.E.2d 315 (1965), aff'd sub nom. State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

There is some doubt whether a tire tool, under the ejusdem generis rule, is of the same classification as a picklock, key, or bit, and hence, condemned by this section. State v. Garrett, 263 N.C. 773, 140 S.E.2d 315 (1965), aff'd sub nom. State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980); State v. Godwin, 3 N.C. App. 55, 164 S.E.2d 86 (1968), disapproved, State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

But May Be Under Certain Circumstances. — A tire tool was an implement of housebreaking within the meaning of this section where there was plenary circumstantial evidence which implied that defendant was in actual or constructive possession of the tire tool, that the tire tool was reasonably capable of use for the purpose of breaking into a building, and that defendant did in fact possess it for that purpose at the time and place of his arrest. State v. Bagley, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Small Screwdrivers, Tire Tool, Gloves, Flashlights, and Socks Not Implements of Housebreaking. — Two small screwdrivers, a tire tool, gloves, flashlights, and socks in defendant's possession at time store was broken into and entered by defendant were not other implements of housebreaking within the intent and meaning of this section. State v. Morgan, 268 N.C. 214, 150 S.E.2d 377 (1966).

A pistol is not an "implement of housebreaking" within the intent and meaning of this section. State v. Godwin, 269 N.C. 263, 152 S.E.2d 152 (1967).

This section does not make it illegal to possess implements used for opening car doors. State v. Kersh, 12 N.C. App. 80, 182 S.E.2d 608, appeal dismissed, 279 N.C. 513, 183 S.E.2d 689 (1971).

Ladder and Torch Not Housebreaking Implements. — Neither a three-foot long ladder nor an acetylene torch with tanks mounted on a wheeled stand possessed by defendant was reasonably adapted for use in housebreaking, and they do not qualify as implements of housebreaking within the meaning of this section. State v. Puckett, 43 N.C. App. 596, 259 S.E.2d 310 (1979).

Judicial Knowledge of Housebreaking Implements. — Although a Stillson wrench, a brace, drills of varying sizes, detonating caps, flashlight batteries, gloves, dynamite, bullets, a drill chuck key, and other like articles, are articles having legitimate uses, the court will take judicial knowledge that they are, in combination, implements of housebreaking. State v. Baldwin, 226 N.C. 295, 37 S.E.2d 898 (1946).

III. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment under this section is not fatally defective because of its failure to enumerate any of the articles specified in the statute as implements of housebreaking when it does specify implements coming within the generic term of "implements of housebreaking." State v. Morgan, 268 N.C. 214, 150 S.E.2d 377 (1966).

Where a count in an indictment contains words set forth in the second offense defined in this section, namely, "having in his possession without lawful excuse," those words are mere surplusage where the count sufficiently embraces the first offense defined in this section. State v. Hines, 15 N.C. App. 337, 190 S.E.2d 293 (1972).

Reference in an indictment to the defendant's possession of items not illegal under this section was mere surplusage and did not render the charge ambiguous since the indictment also charged the possession of specific items listed in the statute, and the proof showed that defendant possessed these specific items as well as other items which came within the generic term of implements of housebreaking. State v. Kersh, 12 N.C. App. 80, 182 S.E.2d 608, appeal dismissed, 279 N.C. 513, 183 S.E.2d 689 (1971).

Inference Where Accused Is Borrower of Vehicle Containing Contraband. — Where contraband material, such as burglary tools, is under the control of an accused, even though the accused is the borrower of a vehicle, this fact is sufficient to give rise to an inference of knowledge and possession which may be sufficient to carry the case to the jury. State v. Glaze, 24 N.C. App. 60, 210 S.E.2d 124 (1974).

And Inference May Be Rebutted. — If the owner of a vehicle loans the vehicle to an accused without telling him what is contained within the vehicle, the accused may offer evidence to that effect and thereby rebut the inference of knowledge and possession of the contents. State v. Glaze, 24 N.C. App. 60, 210 S.E.2d 124 (1974).

Possession of Bolt-Cutter Raises Inference of Unlawful Purpose. — The conduct of defendants and the circumstances under which they were in possession of a bolt-cutter may raise the inference that its possession is for an unlawful purpose. State v. Shore, 10 N.C. App. 75, 178 S.E.2d 22 (1970), cert. denied, 278 N.C. 105, 179 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

It is reasonable to perceive that a burglar with a bolt-cutter, on the prowl to steal that which belongs to others, would clip a padlock and enter and steal from a service station building as readily as he would clip a metal band securing a vending machine and steal its contents. State v. Shore, 10 N.C. App. 75, 178 S.E.2d 22 (1970), cert. denied, 278 N.C. 105, 179 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

Jury Must Decide Conflicting Evidence. — The evidence as to whether the possession of an implement was lawful, being in conflict, is for the jury to decide and a nonsuit would be improper. State v. Shore, 10 N.C. App. 75, 178 S.E.2d 22 (1970), cert. denied, 278 N.C. 105, 179 S.E.2d 453 (1971).

Testimony of Police May Be Competent Evidence of Possession of Burglary Tools. — Testimony of police officers in regard to the lack of defendant's need for certain tools in his employment may be competent evidence of possession of burglary tools without lawful excuse within this section. State v. Glaze, 24 N.C. App. 60, 210 S.E.2d 124 (1974).

Ownership of Automobile and Location of Tools Therein Need Not Be Shown. — Where the evidence tended to show that defendant was in control of an automobile, that he owned tools and had placed them therein, then who owned the automobile, and where the tools were located therein, were not essential elements which had to be shown in order to convict defendant of possession of burglary tools. State v. Kersh, 12 N.C. App. 80, 182 S.E.2d 608, appeal dismissed, 279 N.C. 513, 183 S.E.2d 689 (1971).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence tending to show that officers searched a car owned by defendant and to which defendant had the key, and found therein implements which, in combination, as a matter of common knowledge, are implements of housebreaking, is sufficient to overrule defendant's motion to nonsuit in a prosecution under this section. State v. Baldwin, 226 N.C. 295, 37 S.E.2d 898 (1946).

Evidence Held Insufficient. — The evidence failed to show that any of the articles found in the automobile was an implement made and designed for the express purpose of housebreaking, within the terms of this section. State v. Boyd, 223 N.C. 79, 25 S.E.2d 456 (1943).

Upon an indictment charging possession, without lawful excuse, of a crowbar, hack saw and automatic pistol, in a prosecution under this section, the evidence was held insufficient to be submitted to the jury. State v. Davis, 245 N.C. 146, 95 S.E.2d 564 (1956).

Evidence tending to show that defendant was a passenger in a car in which implements of housebreaking were found, without any evidence that defendant had any control whatsoever over either the automobile or the implements of housebreaking found therein, and without evidence showing when, where, or under what circumstances defendant entered the automobile, or disclosing his relationship or association with the driver thereof, is insufficient to be submitted to the jury in prosecution for possession of implements of housebreaking without lawful excuse. State v. Godwin, 269 N.C. 263, 152 S.E.2d 152 (1967).

Instruction on Elements of Offense Erroneous. — Where defendant was charged with the first offense defined in this section, the trial court erred by instructing the jury on the first and second offense defined in this section when it substituted "implementation of housebreaking," an element of the second offense, for "dangerous or offensive weapon," an element of the first offense defined. State v. Hines, 15 N.C. App. 337, 190 S.E.2d 293 (1972).

Instruction as to Tire Tool. — In a prosecution for felonious possession of implements of storebreaking pursuant to this section, it was not error for the trial court to permit the jury to conclude that a tire tool was an implement of storebreaking, where there is abundant evidence to show that the tire tool was used in the breaking, no explanation appears of record which would justify the presence of the tire tool inside the store after the breaking, no suggestion appears of record that any automobile tire was in need of or receiving repair on the premises in question at the time defendant and his companion were apprehended, and the jury was properly instructed on the principles of actual and constructive possession. State v. Bagley, 43 N.C. App. 171, 258 S.E.2d 427 (1979), aff'd, 300 N.C. 736, 268 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

§ 14-56. Breaking or entering into or breaking out of railroad cars, motor vehicles, trailers, aircraft, boats, or other watercraft.

If any person, with intent to commit any felony or larceny therein, breaks or enters any railroad car, motor vehicle, trailer, aircraft, boat, or other watercraft of any kind, containing any goods, wares, freight, or other thing of value, or, after having committed any felony or larceny therein, breaks out of any railroad car, motor vehicle, trailer, aircraft, boat, or other watercraft of any kind containing any goods, wares, freight, or other thing of value, that person is guilty of a Class I felony. It is prima facie evidence that a person entered in violation of this section if he is found unlawfully in such a railroad car, motor vehicle, trailer, aircraft, boat, or other watercraft. (1907, c. 468; C. S., s. 4237; 1969, c. 543, s. 5; 1979, c. 437; c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 10.)

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1979 amendment, effective Jan. 1, 1980, rewrote this section.

The second 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "be punished as a Class I felon" for "upon conviction be punished by confinement in the penitentiary in the discretion of the court for a term of years not exceeding five years" at the end of the first sentence of the section as it stood before the first 1979 amendment. The second 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, repealed the second 1979 amendment and substituted "Class I felony" for "felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than five years" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

The gravamen of the offense is the breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny. State v. Harrington, 15 N.C. App. 602, 190 S.E.2d 280 (1972).

And Actual Larceny Need Not Be Completed. — The language of this section does not require the actual larceny of anything in order to convict of felonious breaking or entering. It is the breaking or entering with intent to commit larceny that is proscribed. State v. Kirkpatrick, 34 N.C. App. 452, 238 S.E.2d 615 (1977).

The success of the larceny venture does not determine the grade of the breaking or entering as defendants argue. It is only necessary to establish the intent to commit larceny in order to establish a felonious breaking or entering of the motor vehicle. State v. Kirkpatrick, 34 N.C. App. 452, 238 S.E.2d 615 (1977).

Larceny May Be Felony or Misdemeanor. — This section makes it a felony to break or enter a motor vehicle containing any goods, wares, freight or other thing of value with intent to commit larceny, whether the larceny be felonious or misdemeanor larceny. State v. Kirkpatrick, 34 N.C. App. 452, 238 S.E.2d 615 (1977).

Subject of Larceny. — Papers, a shoe bag and cigarettes are without question personal property, and as such they may be the subject of larceny within the meaning of this section. State v. Quick, 20 N.C. App. 589, 202 S.E.2d 299 (1974).

Possession of Recently Stolen Goods. — In a prosecution under this section, the doctrine of possession of recently stolen goods does not apply unless there is proof that the property had been stolen. State v. McKay, 32 N.C. App. 61, 231 S.E.2d 22 (1977).

In a prosecution under this section, the doctrine of inference of guilt derived from the possession of recently stolen goods applies only when the possession is of a kind which manifests that the stolen goods came to the possessor by his own act or with his undoubted concurrence, and so recently and under such circumstances as to give reasonable assurance that such possession could not have been obtained unless the holder was himself the thief. State v. McKay, 32 N.C. App. 61, 231 S.E.2d 22 (1977).

Possession of recently stolen goods does not have to be such that the goods are actually in the hands or on the person of the accused. It is sufficient if the property was under his exclusive personal control. State v. McKay, 32 N.C. App. 61, 231 S.E.2d 22 (1977).

Allegation of Ownership of Vehicle and Property Therein. — Where the bill of indictment specifically lays the ownership of the property contained in the motor vehicle in another named person, thereby negating the possibility of defendant's breaking and entering the vehicle to steal his own property, and the motor vehicle involved is described in detail and its possession is alleged to be in another, the technical ownership of the vehicle broken into is immaterial. State v. Harrington, 15 N.C. App. 602, 190 S.E.2d 280 (1972).

The State's evidence was sufficient for submission of the question to the jury as to whether an entry had been committed by the defendant where the defendant was standing on the street at the open door of a van with the upper part of his body inside the van. State v. Sneed, 38 N.C. App. 230, 247 S.E.2d 658 (1978).

Evidence of Control by Defendant Lacking. — In a prosecution for breaking and entering a motor vehicle and larceny, evidence that defendant was present in the vehicle containing stolen items and with individuals who had attempted to negotiate stolen traveler's checks, without any evidence that any of the stolen items were under the actual control of defendant, is insufficient to carry the question of defendant's guilt to the jury. State v. Millsaps, 29 N.C. App. 176, 223 S.E.2d 559 (1976).

Cited in State v. Brown, 198 N.C. 41, 150 S.E. 635 (1929); State v. Hendricks, 207 N.C. 873, 178 S.E. 557 (1935); State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Any person who forcibly breaks into, or by the unauthorized use of a key or other instrument opens, any coin- or currency-operated machine with intent to steal any property or moneys therein shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment or both in the discretion of the court, but if such person has previously been convicted of violating this section, such person shall be punished as a Class H felon. The term "coin- or currency-operated machine" shall mean any coin- or currency-operated vending machine, pay telephone, telephone coin or currency receptacle, or other coin- or currency-activated machine or device.

There shall be posted on the machines referred to in G.S. 14-56.1 a decal stating that it is a crime to break into vending machines, and that a second offense is a felony. The absence of such a decal is not a defense to a prosecution for the crime described in this section. (1963, c. 814, s. 1; 1977, c. 723, ss. 1, 3; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; c. 767, s. 1.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony" at the end of the first sentence of the first paragraph. The first 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

The second 1979 amendment added the second sentence of the second paragraph.

§ 14-56.2. Damaging or destroying coin- or currency-operated machines.

Any person who shall willfully and maliciously damage or destroy any coin- or currency-operated machine shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment or both in the discretion of the court. The term "coin- or currency-operated machine" shall be defined as set out in G.S. 14-56.1. (1963, c. 814, s. 2; 1977, c. 723, s. 2.)

§ 14-56.3. Breaking into paper currency machines.

Any person, who with intent to steal any moneys therein forcibly breaks into any vending or dispensing machine or device which is operated or activated by the use, deposit or insertion of United States paper currency, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, but if such person has previously been convicted of violating this section, such person shall be punished as a Class H felon.

There shall be posted on the machines referred to in G.S. 14-56.3 a decal stating that it is a crime to break into paper currency machines. The absence of such a decal is not a defense to a prosecution for the crime described in this section. (1977, c. 853, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; c. 767, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony" at the end of the first paragraph. The first 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. The second 1979 amendment added the second sentence of the second paragraph.

Any person who, with intent to commit any felony or larceny therein, breaks and enters, either by day or by night, any building, whether inhabited or not, and opens or attempts to open any vault, safe, or other secure place by use of nitroglycerine, dynamite, gunpowder, or any other explosive, or acetylene torch, shall be deemed guilty of burglary with explosives. Any person convicted under this section shall be punished as a Class E felon. (1921, c. 5; C. S., s. 4237 (a); 1969, c. 543, s. 6; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "as a Class E felon" for "as burglary in the second degree, as provided in G.S. 14-52" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

"Burglary with explosives" was unknown to the common law. Obviously, it is separate and distinct from the crime of burglary named in § 14-51. United States v. Brandenburg, 144 F.2d 656 (3rd Cir. 1944).

This section is not void for vagueness. Dean v. North Carolina, 269 F. Supp. 986 (M.D.N.C. 1967).

ARTICLE 15.

Arson and Other Burnings.

§ 14-58. Punishment for arson.

There shall be two degrees of arson as defined at the common law. If the dwelling burned was occupied at the time of the burning, the offense is arson in the first degree and is punishable as a Class C felony. If the dwelling burned was unoccupied at the time of the burning, the offense is arson in the second degree and is punishable as a Class D felony. (R. C., c. 34, s. 2; 1870-1, c. 222; Code, s. 985; Rev., s. 3335; C. S., s. 4238; 1941, c. 215, s. 2; 1949, c. 299, s. 3; 1973, c. 1201, s. 4; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote this section, which formerly provided for punishment by imprisonment for life for any person convicted of arson. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — The main purpose of common law arson is to protect against danger to those persons who might be in the dwelling house which is burned. Where there are several apartments in a single building, this purpose can be served only by subjecting to punishment for arson any person who sets fire to any part of the building. State v. Jones, 296 N.C. 75, 248 S.E.2d 858 (1978); State v. Wyatt, 48 N.C. App. 709, 269 S.E.2d 717 (1980).

Common-Law Offense. — Arson is not defined by statute but is a common-law offense. State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

Specific intent is not an essential element of the crime of common-law arson. State v. White, 291 N.C. 118, 229 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

The common-law definition of arson is still in force in this State. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956); State v. Gulley, 46 N.C. App. 822, 266 S.E.2d 8 (1980).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment was sufficient to charge defendant with common-law arson of an apartment where it alleged that apartment 9F was burned and apartment 9E was occupied by a named person, since Building 9 of the apartments, comprised of apartments A through F, constituted one dwelling house such that the requirement of a burning could be satisfied by the charring in 9F while the requirement of occupancy could be satisfied by the tenant's presence in 9E. State v. Wyatt, 48 N.C. App. 709, 269 S.E.2d 717 (1980).

Evidence held admissible in prosecution for arson as tending to show ill will towards occupants of house burned and as being part of res gestae. State v. Smith, 225 N.C. 78, 33 S.E.2d 472 (1945).

Evidence Sufficient to Go to Jury. — Where the defendant set fire to his own apartment, but there were three other occupied apartments in the building, the evidence was sufficient to go to the jury on the charge of common-law arson. State v. Jones, 296 N.C. 75, 248 S.E.2d 858 (1978).

Voluntary intoxication is not a defense to a charge of arson. State v. White, 291 N.C. 118, 229 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

Instructions. — In a prosecution of defendant for burning an apartment, it was immaterial which person occupied which apartment in view of the court's ruling that Building 9 of the apartments, with all its individual apartments, constituted a single dwelling house, and defendant therefore was not prejudiced by the trial court's instructions which placed people in the wrong apartment. State v. Wyatt, 48 N.C. App. 709, 269 S.E.2d 717 (1980).

§ 14-58.1. Definition of "house" and "building."

As used in this Article, the terms "house" and "building" shall be defined to include mobile and manufactured-type housing and recreational trailers. (1973, c. 1374.)

§ 14-58.2. Burning of mobile home, manufactured-type house or recreational trailer home.

If any person shall willfully and maliciously burn any mobile home or manufactured-type house or recreational trailer home which is the dwelling house of another and which is occupied at the time of the burning, the same shall constitute the crime of arson in the first degree. (1973, c. 1374; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, added "in the first degree" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-59. Burning of certain public buildings.

If any person shall wantonly and willfully set fire to or burn or cause to be burned or aid, counsel or procure the burning of, the State Capitol, the Legislative Building, the Justice Building or any building owned or occupied by the State or any of its agencies, institutions or subdivisions or by any county, incorporated city or town or other governmental or quasi-governmental entity, he shall be punished as a Class E felon. (1830, c. 41, s. 1; R. C., c. 34, s. 7; 1868-9, c. 167, s. 5; Code, s. 985, subsec. 3; Rev., s. 3344; C. S., s. 4239; 1965, c. 14; 1971, c. 816, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class E felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall, on conviction, be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than two nor more than 30 years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Intent Necessary. — If the prisoner put fire to the jail, not with an intention of destroying it, he is not guilty under the act. But if he put fire to the jail and burnt it with an intent to burn it down and destroy it, he is guilty, notwithstanding the fire went out, or was put out by others before the intention of the prisoner was completed by burning down the jail; and this is the law, although his main intention was to escape. State v. Mitchell, 27 N.C. 350 (1845).

§ 14-60. Burning of schoolhouses or buildings of educational institutions.

If any person shall wantonly and willfully set fire to or burn or cause to be burned or aid, counsel or procure the burning of, any schoolhouse or building owned, leased or used by any public or private school, college or educational institution, he shall be punished as a Class E felon. (1901, c. 4, s. 28; Rev., s. 3345; 1919, c. 70; C. S., s. 4240; 1965, c. 870; 1971, c. 816, s. 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

City Market House. — A person charged with damaging a market house by fire must be tried under this section and not under a municipal ordinance as the general law must prevail over the ordinance, when they conflict. The municipal court would have jurisdiction only by express legislation conveying it. Town of Washington v. Hammond, 76 N.C. 33 (1877).

§ 14-62. Burning of churches and certain other buildings.

If any person shall wantonly and willfully set fire to or burn or cause to be burned, or aid, counsel or procure the burning of, any uninhabited house, any church, chapel or meetinghouse, or any stable, coach house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, barn or granary, or any building, structure or erection used or intended to be used in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof, whether the same or any of them respectively shall then be in the possession of the offender, or in the possession of any other person, he shall be punished as a Class E felon. (1874-5, c. 228; Code, s. 985, subsec. 6; 1885, c. 66; 1903, c. 665, s. 2; Rev., s. 3338; C. CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Indictment.
III. Evidence.
IV. Questions for Jury.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — This section is not unconstitutional as violative of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. State v. Stewart, 4 N.C. App. 249, 166 S.E.2d 458 (1969).

The imposition of a sentence of 12 years in prison for violation of this section is not cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. State v. Stewart, 4 N.C. App. 249, 166 S.E.2d 458 (1969).

This section clearly and specifically defines the prohibited conduct and sets out the possible punishment. State v. Stewart, 4 N.C. App. 249, 166 S.E.2d 458 (1969).

This section cannot be extended to cover structures not intended by the legislature. State v. Cuthrell, 235 N.C. 173, 69 S.E.2d 233 (1952).

Crime Fixed Herein Is Separate from That in § 14-66. — A verdict of not guilty on a count brought under this section does not necessarily carry a verdict of not guilty on a second count brought under § 14-66, the counts being separate and distinct and each requiring proof of facts which the other does not. State v. Pierce, 208 N.C. 47, 179 S.E. 8 (1935).

Inquiry Desirable. — Inquiry into such matters as the age, the character, the education, the environment, the habits, the mentality, the propensities, and the record of the person about to be sentenced is a procedure particularly desirable in respect to this section, which covers the wanton and willful burning of a wide variety of structures. State v. Stewart, 4 N.C. App. 249, 166 S.E.2d 458 (1969).

Applied in In re Reddy, 16 N.C. App. 520, 192 S.E.2d 621 (1972); State v. Caron, 288 N.C. 467, 219 S.E.2d 68 (1975); State v. Moorefield, 33 N.C. App. 37, 234 S.E.2d 25 (1977).

Cited in State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971); State v. McWhorter, 34 N.C. App. 462, 238 S.E.2d 639 (1977); Thacker v. Garrison, 445 F. Supp. 376 (W.D.N.C. 1978); Moorefield v. Garrison, 464 F. Supp. 892 (W.D.N.C. 1979).

II. INDICTMENT.

Indictment in Language of Section Insufficient. — Where a bill of indictment merely charges the offense in the language of this section, it fails to meet the minimum requirements as to identity of the offense attempted to be charged and is fatally defective. State v. Banks, 247 N.C. 745, 102 S.E.2d 245 (1958).

"Wantonly and Willfully" Must Be Charged. — An indictment charged that the defendant "did unlawfully, willfully and feloniously set fire to and burn a certain ginhouse, belonging to B. and in the possession of one G." Verdict of guilty and defendant moved in arrest of judgment for that this section had been amended (Laws 1885, c. 66) by striking out the words "unlawfully and maliciously" and "willfully," and that the words used in the indictment are not synonymous with those required by the amended statute. The objection would be well taken if this indictment was sustainable only under this section. State v. Massey, 97 N.C. 465, 2 S.E. 445 (1887); State v. Morgan, 98 N.C. 641, 3 S.E. 927 (1887). But it is a valid indictment under § 14-64, as was held in State v. Thorne, 81 N.C. 555 (1879), cited and followed by State v. Green, 92 N.C. 779 (1885). It seems to be the rule that "unlawfully and willfully" do not answer the requirements under this section but under § 14-64 it is sufficient in the indictment. State v. Pierce, 123 N.C. 745, 31 S.E. 847 (1898).

Title to Property Immaterial. — In the indictment it is not necessary to set out that the burned property "was the property of" or "was in the possession of" anyone. The constituent element is "willful and wanton." State v. Daniel, 121 N.C. 574, 28 S.E. 255 (1897).

An allegation of ownership or of possession suffices to meet the requirements of identity under this section. State v. Banks, 247 N.C. 745, 102 S.E.2d 245 (1958).

Charge of Particular Intent. — It was formerly the rule that an indictment under this section for burning a barn must aver that the act was done "with intent thereby to injure or defraud" some person. And an indictment for such offense at common law had to charge that the barn contained hay or grain, or was a parcel of the dwelling house. State v. Porter, 90 N.C. 719 (1884).

Same — Not Necessary. — An indictment for burning a mill, under this section, need not allege that the prisoner set fire to the mill with the intent to injure some particular person. State v. Rogers, 94 N.C. 860 (1886).

Defendant Is Charged with Complicity in Burning. — When an individual is prosecuted for procuring felonious burning under this section he is being charged with complicity in the burning and not with mere solicitation. State v. Sargent, 22 N.C. App. 148, 205 S.E.2d 768 (1974).

III. EVIDENCE.

Burden of Proof on Plea of Not Guilty. — Where a plea of not guilty is entered in a prosecution for common-law arson or for the statutory felony of burning a building contrary to this section it is incumbent on the State to prove both the fire and cause of the fire and the connection of the accused with the crime. State v. Cuthrell, 233 N.C. 274, 63 S.E.2d 549 (1951).

Defendant's plea of not guilty in a prosecution under this section places the burden upon the State to prove: (1) the fire, (2) that it was of incendiary origin, and (3) that defendant was connected with the crime. State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980).

State Must Prove That Building Was in Fact Burned. — To establish guilt in procuring arson, it is necessary for the State to prove not only that defendant instructed someone to burn the building, but also that the building was in fact burned. State v. Sargent, 22 N.C. App. 148, 205 S.E.2d 768 (1974).

Necessity for Proving Nature and Use of Structure. — Under an indictment charging that the defendant willfully and feloniously procured the burning of a certain building used in carrying on a trade, the burden rests on the State to prove that the defendant unlawfully procured the burning of (1) a structure that answered to the description of a "building" within the meaning of this section, and also (2) that the structure was "used in carrying on a trade," within the purview of the section. Findings by the jury concerning these two elements of the statutory offense charged are quite as essential to a conviction as proof of the fact of procuring the burning of the structure. State v. Cuthrell, 235 N.C. 173, 69 S.E.2d 233 (1952).

Proof of Title Not Necessary. — "Ownership is alleged only to identify the property, and is sufficiently proved by showing occupancy." State v. Gailor, 71 N.C. 88 (1874); State v. Jaynes, 78 N.C. 504 (1878); State v. Thompson, 97 N.C. 496, 1 S.E. 921 (1887); State v. Daniel, 121 N.C. 574, 28 S.E. 255 (1897); State v. Sprouse, 150 N.C. 860, 64 S.E. 900 (1909).

"This section was copied from the English Statute of 7 and 8 Geo. IV., c. 30; and under that it was sufficient to allege the building simply 'of' A. (Archb. Cr. Pl. [3d Am. Ed.] 262, and lxiv.); and this is the better practice, proof of either possession or property being sufficient identification." State v. Daniel, 121 N.C. 574, 28 S.E. 255 (1897).

Motive or Intent. — "It is not always necessary to show either a motive or an intent, for in some offenses the intent to do the forbidden act is the criminal intent, and the act committed with that intent constitutes the crime. If the person has done the act which in itself is a violation of the law, he will not be heard to say that he did not have the intent. State v. King, 86 N.C. 603 (1882); State v. Voight, 90 N.C. 741 (1884); State v. Smith, 93 N.C. 516 (1885); State v. McBrayer, 98 N.C. 619, 2 S.E. 755 (1887); State v. McLean, 121 N.C. 589, 28 S.E. 140, 42 L.R.A. 721 (1897). But this principle does not apply when the act is itself equivocal and becomes criminal only by reason of the intent." State v. Morgan, 136 N.C. 628, 48 S.E. 670 (1904).

The proof of threats directed against the son and grandson, from their near relationship to the owner of a burned house, was relevant, though perhaps feeble, in showing general ill will to the family and a motive for the act. State v. Rash, 34 N.C. 382 (1851); State v. Gailor, 71 N.C. 88 (1874); State v. Green, 92 N.C. 779 (1885); State v. Thompson, 97 N.C. 496, 1 S.E. 921 (1887).

Bad Feeling. — It was entirely competent for the State to show motive upon the part of the defendant to burn a barn occupied and used by the witness, and to that end it was proper to show that bad feeling existed, and the reasons for it, but that part of a reply of a witness in which he stated that defendant had been convicted of stealing and sent to the chain gang should have been excluded and the jury carefully cautioned not to regard it as it put the character of the defendant in issue. State v. Barrett, 151 N.C. 665, 65 S.E. 894 (1909).

Same — Toward Agent. — Ill will toward an agent of the owner of a building was not sufficient to show motive for setting fire to the building, as such evidence was too remote. State v. Battle, 126 N.C. 1036, 35 S.E. 624 (1900).

Admissibility. — Under an indictment for burning a barn, evidence of bad blood for the owner of the barn, footprints, failure of defendant to go to fire when the remainder of the neighborhood was there, the hour defendant arose, and his acts when notified of the fire was admissible and was sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. State v. Allen, 149 N.C. 458, 62 S.E. 597 (1908).

On trial under indictment under this section for burning a barn to collect fire insurance thereon, evidence that the defendant at another place, at some indefinite time in the past, had another barn burn was incompetent and did not come within the exceptions to the general rule, there being no causal relation between the two fires, or logical or natural connection between them, nor were they a part of the same transaction. State v. Deadmon, 195 N.C. 705, 143 S.E. 514 (1928).

Same — Opinion Evidence as to Origin of Fire. — In a prosecution under this section it was reversible error to admit opinion testimony that the fire was of incendiary origin since the facts constituting the basis for such conclusion were so simply and readily understood that it was for the jury to draw the conclusion from testimony as to the facts, and since the conclusion is not a proper subject of opinion testimony. State v. Cuthrell, 233 N.C. 274, 63 S.E.2d 549 (1951).

An expert in arson investigation may properly give his opinion that a fire was of incendiary origin where his opinion is based on the expert's own examination of the premises and based on a proper hypothetical question supported by the evidence. State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980).

Subsequent Attempt to Fire Another Building. — Where the defendant was indicted for setting fire to an outhouse, evidence was competent to show that at the same time an attempt was made to fire a dwelling house near it, the evidence directly connecting the defendant with the latter attempt. State v.

Thompson, 97 N.C. 496, 1 S.E. 921 (1887).

Effect of Evidence That Dwelling Was Inhabited. — Defendant who was charged with the unlawful burning of an uninhabited dwelling pursuant to this section was entitled to have his motion for nonsuit granted, since the evidence tended to show that the mobile home burned was used by three people as their place of residence. Their temporary absence at the time of the fire did not make the dwelling an uninhabited house within the meaning of this section. State v. Gulley, 46 N.C. App. 822, 266 S.E.2d 8 (1980).

Evidence Held Insufficient. — The evidence against the defendant on a charge of malicious burning of a dwelling house was held insufficient to survive a motion to dismiss. State v. Blizzard, 280 N.C. 11, 184 S.E.2d 851 (1971).

IV. QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

Must Be Sufficient Evidence. — The general rule is, if there be any evidence tending to prove the fact in issue the weight of it must be left to the jury, but if there be no evidence conducing to that conclusion the judge should say so, and, in a criminal case, direct an acquittal. In State v. Vinson, 63 N.C. 335 (1869), it was said: "But it is confessedly difficult to draw the line between evidence which is very slight, and that which, as having no bearing on the fact to be proved, is in relation to that fact no evidence at all." The evidence must be more than sufficient to raise a suspicion or a conjecture. State v. Rhodes, 111 N.C. 647, 15 S.E. 1038 (1892).

Nature and Use of Structure. — It is for the jury to find and declare by their verdict, among other things, (1) whether the structure alleged to have been burned had arrived at such a stage of completion as to be usable for some useful purpose so as to make it a building within the meaning of the statute, and, if so, (2) whether it had been put to use in the occupation or business of the lessee prior to the fire. The action of the trial court in assuming the existence of these disputed facts was prejudicial error. State v. Cuthrell, 235 N.C. 173, 69 S.E.2d 233 (1952).

Duty of Trial Court to Define and Explain Words. — The duty rests upon the trial court to define and explain to the jury the meaning of (1) "building," and (2) "used in carrying on any trade," as used in this section State v. Cuthrell, 235 N.C. 173, 69 S.E.2d 233 (1952).

The word "trade" as used in this section means more than traffic in goods, and the like. It is used in its broader sense, and as such is synonymous with "occupation" or "calling." Thus the word "trade" as here used embraces any ordinary occupation or business, whether manual or mercantile. State v. Cuthrell, 235 N.C. 173, 69 S.E.2d 233 (1952).

Intent. — It is prima facie presumed that a person intended the natural consequence of his act when he set fire to a building. But this is subject to rebuttal by evidence to the contrary and then "intent" becomes a question for the jury. State v. Phifer, 90 N.C. 721 (884).

Alibi. — The burden of proving an alibi does not rest on the prisoner, but the burden of proving the guilt of the prisoner rests on the State. It is for the jury to decide, and it is only necessary for the prisoner to offer enough evidence to produce in the mind of the jury a reasonable doubt. State v. Jaynes, 78 N.C. 504 (1878).

Evidence Sufficient to Submit to Jury. — On the trial of defendant of burning a barn, the tracing by the bloodhounds some two hours later of a track leading from the rear of the barn to defendant's residence, together with the identification of the track as that of defendant by one of his shoes, with evidence of motive, was sufficient evidence of guilt to take the case to the jury. State v. Thompson, 192 N.C. 704, 135 S.E. 775 (1926).

On trial for willfully and wantonly burning a barn in violation of this section, evidence of the felonious origin of the fire and of the identity of the defendant as the culprit was sufficient to be submitted to the jury that defendant had committed the crime, the corpus delicti being reasonably inferable from the circumstances, there being evidence that a fresh boot track found at the scene of the crime was made by defendant's boot, and that defendant failed to answer charges of his brother, made in presence of officers, under circumstances calling for a reply. State v. Wilson, 205 N.C. 376, 171 S.E. 338 (1933).

For circumstantial evidence sufficient for jury, see State v. Moore, 262 N.C. 431, 137 S.E.2d 812 (1964).

Evidence Insufficient to Submit to Jury. — Where the only evidence against a person accused of burning a barn was threats made by him, without any evidence connecting him with the execution of said threats, or with the offense charged, the trial judge should have withdrawn the case from the jury. State v. Freeman, 131 N.C. 725, 42 S.E. 575 (1902).

Where, in a prosecution under this section, the evidence fails to establish the felonious origin of the fire or the identity of the defendant as the one who committed the offense charged, or circumstances from which these facts might reasonably be inferred, it is insufficient to be submitted to the jury. State v. Church, 202 N.C. 692, 163 S.E. 874 (1932).

§ 14-62.1. Burning of building or structure in process of construction.

If any person shall wantonly and willfully set fire to or burn or cause to be burned, or aid, counsel or procure the burning of, any building or structure in the process of construction for use or intended to be used as a dwelling house or in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or otherwise, whether the same or any of them respectively shall then be in the possession of the offender, or in the possession of any other person, he shall be punished as a Class E felon. (1957, c. 792; 1971, c. 816, s. 5; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class E felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall, on conviction, be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than two nor more than 30 years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-63. Burning of boats and barges.

If any person shall wantonly and willfully set fire to or burn or cause to be burned or aid, counsel or procure the burning of, any boat, barge, ferry or float, without the consent of the owner thereof, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. In the event the consent of the owner is given for an unlawful or fraudulent purpose, however, the penalty provisions of this section shall remain in full force and effect. (1909, c. 854; C. S., s. 4243; 1971, c. 816, s. 6; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall, on conviction, be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than four months nor more than 10 years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

If any person shall wantonly and willfully set fire to or burn or cause to be burned, or aid, counsel or procure the burning of, any ginhouse or tobacco house, or any part thereof, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1863, c. 17; 1868-9, c. 167, s. 5; Code, s. 985, subsec. 2; 1903, c. 665, s. 1; Rev., s. 3341; C. S., s. 4244; 1971, c. 816, s. 7; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class H felon" for "shall, on conviction, be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than four months nor more than 10 years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Indictment in General. — That any informality will not be grounds for quashing proceeding if the charge is set out in a clear manner and enough matter appears to enable the court to proceed to judgment, see § 15-153. That judgments will not be vitiated for failure to aver certain unnecessary matter, see § 15-155. State v. Rogers, 168 N.C. 112, 83 S.E. 161 (1914).

Necessity of Alleging "Willful Burning". — In the case of State v. Thorne, 81 N.C. 555 (1879), there was an indictment for unlawfully, maliciously and feloniously burning a ginhouse. The court was asked to charge the jury that the defendant could not be convicted under the act of 1869, because the burning was not charged to have been willfully done. The court held that the word maliciously was more comprehensive and included willfully. State v. Green, 92 N.C. 779 (1885).

Necessity of Showing Motive. — It is never indispensable to a conviction that a motive for the commission of the crime should appear. But when the State has to rely upon circumstantial evidence to establish the guilt of the defendant, it is not only competent, but often very important, in strengthening the evidence for the prosecution, to show a motive for committing the crime. State v. Green, 92 N.C. 779 (1885).

§ 14-65. Fraudulently setting fire to dwelling houses.

If any person, being the occupant of any building used as a dwelling house, whether such person be the owner thereof or not, or, being the owner of any building designed or intended as a dwelling house, shall wantonly and willfully or for a fraudulent purpose set fire to or burn or cause to be burned, or aid, counsel or procure the burning of such building, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (Code, s. 985; 1903, c. 665, s. 3; Rev., s. 3340; 1909, c. 862; C. S., s. 4245; 1927, c. 11, s. 2; 1971, c. 816, s. 8; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall, on conviction, be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than four months nor more than 10 years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

The main import of this section is protection of the property itself, whereas the gravamen of the offense of common-law arson is the danger that results to persons who are or might be in the dwelling. State v. White, 288 N.C. 44, 215 S.E.2d 557 (1975), vacated on other grounds, 291 N.C. 118, 229 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

Essential Element of Crime. — Burning or procuring to be burned the dwelling house occupied by defendant to constitute a criminal offense must have been done willfully and wantonly, or for a fraudulent purpose. To convict the defendant something more must be found than the fact that the house was burned, and that it was done at the instance and request of the defendant. By the terms of this section an essential element of the crime charged was that it be done willfully and wantonly or for a fraudulent purpose. State v. Cash, 234 N.C. 292, 67 S.E.2d 50 (1951).

Burning a dwelling for the purpose of frightening the occupant and keeping him from testifying for the State would clearly be a willful and malicious burning, but it would not by a burning "for a fraudulent purpose." State v. White, 288 N.C. 44, 215 S.E.2d 557 (1975), vacated on other grounds, 291 N.C. 118, 229 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

Indictment Need Not Specify Particular Fraudulent Purpose. — Where in a prosecution under this section the indictment charges that the defendant burned his dwelling house for the fraudulent purpose of obtaining insurance money thereon, and the court charges the jury that if they should find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did the act charged for a fraudulent purpose, it was not necessary for the bill of indictment to specify any particular fraudulent purpose, and the unnecessary allegation in the bill is not, necessarily, fatal. State v. Morrison, 202 N.C. 60, 161 S.E. 725 (1932).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — Evidence that fire in defendant's house started in a closet in which was hanging a quilt soaked in kerosene, that kindling wood was on the floor of the closet, that the closet had no ceiling, but opened at the top into the attic, that defendant was being pressed to pay installments on the mortgage on the house, and was threatened with foreclosure, with other incriminating circumstantial evidence, establishes a motive and an opportunity for the defendant to commit the crime, and that the fire was of incendiary origin, and is sufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution under this section. State v. Moses, 207 N.C. 139, 176 S.E. 267 (1934).

§ 14-66. Burning of personal property.

If any person shall wantonly and willfully set fire to or burn, or cause to be burned, or aid, counsel or procure the burning of, any goods, wares, merchandise or other chattels or personal property of any kind, whether or not the same shall at the time be insured by any person or corporation against loss or damage by fire, with intent to injure or prejudice the insurer, the creditor or the person owning the property, or any other person, whether the property is that of such person or another, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1921, c. 119; C. S., s. 4245 (a); 1971, c. 816, s. 9; 1979, c. 760 s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall, on conviction, be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than four months nor more than 10 years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

Crime Separate From That Under § 14-62. See note under § 14-62.

Intent to Injure or Prejudice Owner. — A violation of this section requires, in addition to the willful and wanton burning of personal property, that the defendant have the specific intent to injure or prejudice the owner of the property. State v. Murchinson, 39 N.C. App. 163, 249 S.E.2d 871 (1978), overruled on other grounds, State v. Wesson, 45 N.C. 510, 263 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

The legislature chose to add the element of intent to injure or prejudice and, until this section is amended, the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt such intent. State v. Murchinson, 39 N.C. App. 163, 249 S.E.2d 871 (1978), overruled on other grounds, State v. Wesson, 45 N.C. 510, 263 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

The holding in State v. Murchinson, 39 N.C. App. 163, 249 S.E.2d 871 (1978), that an intent to injure or prejudice the owner of the burned property must be shown by evidence other than the act of buring itself, is overruled. State v. Wesson, 45 N.C. App. 510, 263 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

In a prosecution for the unlawful burning of personal property, a stolen automobile, in violation of this section, the jury could properly find an intent to injure or prejudice the owner or some other person by the burning from the nature of the act — the willful burning of an automobile stolen from a stranger, evidence that defendant poured paint thinner over the interior of the car and set it on fire, and defendant's alleged statement that the automobile should be burned because it was nothing but trash. State v. Wesson, 45 N.C. App. 510, 263 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

"Willful" means the wrongful doing of an act without justification or excuse, or purposely and deliberately in violation of the law. State v. Murchinson, 39 N.C. App. 163, 249 S.E.2d 871 (1978), overruled on other grounds, State v. Wesson, 45 N.C. 510, 263 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

Evidence Held Insufficient. — Evidence that defendant's car was driven away from defendant's house shortly before defendant's personal property therein was destroyed by fire, and that the car had been driven to the house several times during the days preceding the fire, and that the occupants of the car were heard in the house, is held insufficient, in the absence of evidence that defendant was one of the occupants of the car, to resist defendant's motions for judgment as of nonsuit in a prosecution under this section, although there was ample evidence that the fire was of incendiary origin and destroyed personal property of defendant which had been insured by him. State v. Simms, 208 N.C. 459, 181 S.E. 269 (1935).

If any person shall wantonly and willfully attempt to set fire to or burn or cause to be burned any dwelling house, uninhabited house, the State Capitol, the Legislative Building, the Justice Building or any building owned or occupied by the State or any of its agencies, institutions or subdivisions or by any county, incorporated city or town or other governmental or quasi-governmental entity, any schoolhouse or building owned, leased or used by any public or private school, college or educational institution, or any public bridge, private toll bridge or the bridge of any incorporated company, or any fire-engine house or rescue-squad building, or any house belonging to an incorporated company or unincorporated association and used in the business of such company or association, any church, chapel or meetinghouse, or any stable, coach house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, barn or granary, or any building, structure or erection used or intended to be used in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or otherwise, any boat, barge, ferry, or float, any ginhouse or tobacco house, or any part thereof, whether such buildings or structures or any of them shall then be in the possession of the offender or in the possession of any other person, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1876-7, c. 13; Code, s. 985, subsec. 7; Rev., s. 3336; C. S., s. 4246; 1957, c. 250, s. 1; 1959, c. 1298, s. 2; 1971, c. 816, s. 10; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-64. For statute providing maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to offense of burning an uninhabited house as distinguished from an attempt to do so, see § 14-144.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall, on conviction, be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than four months nor more than 10 years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

In General. — A conviction for burning a ginhouse can be had either under this section or § 14-64. All that is required is a clear statement of the charge and because of §§ 15-153, 15-155 if sufficient matter is set out in the charge, the proceedings will not be quashed, because of use of terms that have the same meaning as those used in the statute. If the punishment does not exceed that prescribed by either section it is immaterial under which section the conviction was had. State v. Rogers, 168 N.C. 112, 83 S.E. 161 (1914).

Felony created by this section is a lesser included offense of the crime of arson. State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974). See State v. Green, 298 N.C. 793, 259 S.E.2d 904 (1979).

Attempt to commit arson is now a felony rather than a common-law misdemeanor under the provisions of this section. State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

§ 14-67.1. Burning or attempting to burn other buildings.

If any person shall wantonly and willfully set fire to or burn or cause to be burned or aid, counsel or procure the burning of, or attempt to burn, any building or other structure of any type not otherwise covered by the provisions of this Article, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1971, c. 816, s. 11; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall, on conviction be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than four months nor more than 10 years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

If the owner or occupant of any building or premises shall fail to comply with the duly authorized orders of the chief of the fire department, or of the Commissioner of Insurance, or of any municipal or county inspector of buildings or of particular features, facilities, or installations of buildings, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than ten ($10.00) nor more than fifty dollars ($50.00) for each day's neglect, failure, or refusal to obey such orders. (1899, c. 58, s. 4; Rev., s. 3343; C. S., s. 4247; 1969, c. 1063, s. 1.)

§ 14-69. Failure of officers to investigate incendiary fires.

If any town or city officer shall fail, neglect or refuse to comply with any of the requirements of the law in regard to the investigation of incendiary fires, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and may be fined not less than twenty-five ($25.00) nor more than two hundred dollars ($200.00). (1899, c. 58, s. 5; Rev., s. 3342; C. S., s. 4248.)

§ 14-69.1. Making a false report concerning destructive device.

If any person shall, by any means of communication to any person or group of persons, make a report, knowing or having reason to know the same to be false, that there is located in any building, house or other structure whatsoever or any vehicle, aircraft, vessel or boat any device designed to destroy or damage the building, house or structure or vehicle, aircraft, vessel or boat by explosion, blasting or burning, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be fined or imprisoned or both in the discretion of the court. (1959, c. 555, s. 1.)

SUBCHAPTER V. OFFENSES AGAINST PROPERTY.

ARTICLE 16.

Larceny.

§ 14-70. Distinctions between grand and petit larceny abolished; punishment; accessories to larceny.

All distinctions between petit and grand larceny are abolished. Unless otherwise provided by statute, larceny is a felony punishable under G.S. 14-2 and is subject to the same rules of criminal procedure and principles of law as to accessories before and after the fact as other felonies. (R. C., c. 34, s. 26; Code, s. 1075; Rev., s. 3500; C. S., s. 4249; 1969, c. 522, s. 1.)

As to larceny of property and receipt of stolen goods, see § 14-72. As to robbery, see § 14-87. As to obtaining property by false pretense, see § 14-100 et. seq. As to taking away or injuring exhibits at fairs, see § 14-164. As to theft of property from public libraries, museums, etc., see § 14-398. As to restitution of stolen property to its owner, see § 15-8. As to stealing of aircraft, see § 63-25.

Editor's Note. — The 1979 amendment to § 14-2, referred to in this section, provides that § 14-2 is not applicable to felonies occurring after July 1, 1981 and that § 14-1.1 shall apply to such felonies.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Elements of the Offense.
III. Practice and Procedure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Larceny is a common-law offense. But common-law larceny does not include every wrongful taking and carrying away of the personal property of another. State v. Watts, 25 N.C. App. 194, 212 S.E.2d 557 (1975).

At common law both grand and petit larceny were felonies. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962).

At common law the stealing of property of any value was a felony, and both grand larceny and petit larceny were felonies. State v. Massey, 273 N.C. 721, 161 S.E.2d 103 (1968).

Accessories Abolished. — There are no accessories to larceny. All that counsel and aid are guilty of the offenses as principals. State v. Gaston, 73 N.C. 93 (1875); State v. Bennett, 237 N.C. 749, 76 S.E.2d 42 (1953).

One Act Two Offenses. — A person committing larceny from the person, upon two persons at the same time may be tried and convicted for both offenses. State v. Bynum, 117 N.C. 749, 23 S.E. 218 (1895); State v. Bynum, 117 N.C. 752, 23 S.E. 219 (1895).

App. 179, 249 S.E.2d 879 (1978); State v. Boone, 297 N.C. 652, 256 S.E.2d 683 (1979).

II. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

"Larceny". — Larceny, according to the common-law meaning of the term, may be defined as the felonious taking by trespass and carrying away by any person of the goods or personal property of another, without the latter's consent and with the felonious intent permanently to deprive the owner of his property and to convert it to the taker's own use. State v. McCrary, 263 N.C. 490, 139 S.E.2d 739 (1965); State v. Moore, 46 N.C. App. 259, 264 S.E.2d 899 (1980).

Larceny is a wrongful taking and carrying away of the personal property of another without his consent, which is done with felonious intent; that is, with intent to deprive the owner of his property and to appropriate it to the taker's use fraudulently. State v. Watts, 25 N.C. App. 194, 212 S.E.2d 557 (1975).

Larceny under §§ 14-80 and 14-148 Distinguished. — Where there was nothing in the record to establish that the urns or vases stolen by defendant from cemeteries were so connected to the land that they could not be the subject of common-law larceny or that they were affixed to the soil as tombstones or markers but rather they were movable objects of a decorative nature that were easily moved from the grave markers on which they rested, defendant was properly convicted of common-law larceny rather than the offenses under § 14-80 or § 14-148. State v. Schultz, 34 N.C. App. 120, 237 S.E.2d 349 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 281, 240 S.E.2d 451 (1978).

The phrase "felonious intent" originated when both grand and petit larceny were felonies. Now "felonious intent," in the law of larceny, does not necessarily signify an intent to commit a felony. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962).

Intent Is Necessary. — To constitute the crime of larceny, there must be an original, felonious intent, general or special, at the time of the taking. If such intent be present, no subsequent act or explanation can change the felonious character of the original act. But if the requisite intent be not present, the taking is only a trespass, and it cannot be felony by any subsequent misconduct or bad faith on the part of the taker. State v. Arkle, 116 N.C. 1017, 21 S.E. 408 (1895). State v. Holder, 188 N.C. 561, 563, 125 S.E. 113 (1924).

Felonious intent is an essential element of the crime of larceny. State v. McCrary, 263 N.C. 490, 139 S.E.2d 739 (1965).

But "Intent to appropriate the goods to his own use" has been eliminated and is not now an essential element of the crime of larceny. State v. Watts, 25 N.C. App. 194, 212 S.E.2d 557 (1975).

And Intent Need Only Be To Deprive Owner of Property. — To constitute larceny it is not required that the purpose of the taking be to convert the stolen property to the pecuniary advantage or convenience of the taker but it is sufficient if the taking be fraudulent and with the intent wholly to deprive the owner of his property. State v. Watts, 25 N.C. App. 194, 212 S.E.2d 557 (1975).

Owner's Possession Must Be Severed. — Even if only for an instant, there must be a complete severance of the object from the owner's possession, to such an extent that the defendant has absolute possession of it. State v. Carswell, 36 N.C. App. 377, 243 S.E.2d 911, aff'd, 296 N.C. 101, 249 S.E.2d 427 (1978).

Casually Lost Property as Subject of Larceny. — Notwithstanding what was said in some of the earlier cases, the modern view in this jurisdiction as well as others is that casually lost property may be the subject of larceny as well as that which is mislaid. No distinction is now made between property "lost" and property "mislaid." State v. Moore, 46 N.C. App. 259, 264 S.E.2d 899 (1980).

Same — If at the time of finding, the finder knows or has reasonable means of knowing or ascertaining the owner, he is deemed guilty of larceny if he keeps the property with the intent to deprive the owner thereof. State v. Moore, 46 N.C. App. 259, 264 S.E.2d 899 (1980).

Same — Where a closed receptable, container or pocketbook is found and the contents are not known until later, a finder may be guilty of larceny if a felonious intent is formed as soon as the contents are discovered. State v. Moore, 46 N.C. App. 259, 264 S.E.2d 899 (1980).

Mitigation of Charge. — An indictment for larceny charges a felony, and it is a matter of defense to mitigate the charge to a misdemeanor by showing that the property taken was a value of less than the amount prescribed by statute, and that it was neither taken from the person nor from a dwelling house. State v. Benfield, 9 N.C. App. 657, 177 S.E.2d 306 (1970), vacated on other grounds, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

III. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Indictment — Ownership of Property Must Be Alleged. — The common-law offense of larceny contemplates that the property taken must belong to or be in the possession of another and the statutory offense of embezzlement provides that the misappropriated property must belong to "any other person or corporation, unincorporated association, or organization." In view of the breadth of the offenses, the warrant or bill of indictment charging these offenses must allege the ownership of the property either in a natural person or a legal entity capable of owning property. State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 652, 197 S.E.2d 614, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973).

In a prosecution for breaking or entering, and felonious larceny, the allegations of ownership described in a bill of indictment are essential. State v. Crawford, 29 N.C. App. 117, 223 S.E.2d 534 (1976).

If the evidence offered at trial fails to show the ownership as alleged in the indictment of the premises entered and the property taken, a motion for judgment of nonsuit should be allowed, both to a charge of breaking or entering and to a charge of felonious larceny. State v. Crawford, 29 N.C. App. 117, 223 S.E.2d 534 (1976).

Same — Description of Property. — There is required a reasonable certainty in the designation of stolen property to enable the defendant to know and meet the specific charge if he can, and to protect himself if he cannot, from a second prosecution for the same offense. State v. Clark, 30 N.C. 226 (1848); State v. Horan, 61 N.C. 571 (1868); State v. Bragg, 86 N.C. 687 (1882).

In a prosecution for larceny, the property alledge to have been taken should be described by the name usually applied to it in its condition at that time, and, if possible, the number, kind, quality, and other distinguishing features. State v. Hartley, 39 N.C. App. 70, 249 S.E.2d 453 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 738, 254 S.E.2d 179 (1979).

Same — It is not necessary for an indictment to allege that a larceny was from the person for it to be shown. State v. Benfield, 9 N.C. App. 657, 177 S.E.2d 306 (1970), vacated on other grounds, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

Same — Larceny and Malicious Mischief Distinguished. — An indictment for larceny at common law for stealing a cow is not supported by proof that the defendant shot the cow down and then cut off her ears. Such an act is not larceny, but malicious mischief. State v. Butler, 65 N.C. 309 (1871). See § 14-85.

Inference Arising From Possession of Recently Stolen Property. — The defendant's possession of the fruits of the crime recently after its commission justifies the inference of guilt on his trial for larceny. State v. Knight, 261 N.C. 17, 134 S.E.2d 101 (1964).

The doctrine of possession of recently stolen property is a factual presumption whereby a person found in the unexplained possession of recently stolen property is presumed to be the thief. State v. Majette, 30 N.C. App. 120, 226 S.E.2d 223 (1976).

A defendant's possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is a circumstance tending to show him guilty of the larceny. State v. Greene, 30 N.C. App. 507, 227 S.E.2d 154 (1976).

Same — Burden of Proof. — Mullaney v. Wilbur, 421 U.S. 684, 95 S. Ct. 1881, 44 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1975), is inapposite to the so-called recent possession doctrine because that doctrine does not shift the burden of proof to the defendant. The doctrine only allows the jury to infer that the defendant stole the goods, because the State first proved that the stolen goods were in defendant's possession so soon after the theft that it was unlikely that he obtained them honestly. The doctrine is only an evidentiary inference shifting to the defendant the burden of going forward with evidence. Evidentiary inferences and presumptions such as this are unaffected by Mullaney. State v. Hales, 32 N.C. App. 729, 233 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 732, 235 S.E.2d 782 (1977).

Same — Instruction. — Where no evidence was presented which tended to show that codefendant was ever in possession, actual or constructive, of the recently stolen property, the instruction to apply the doctrine of possession of recently stolen property was prejudicial error as to him. State v. Majette, 30 N.C. App. 120, 226 S.E.2d 223 (1976).

Evidence held sufficient to withstand motion for nonsuit in prosecution for larceny. See State v. Ellis, 32 N.C. App. 226, 231 S.E.2d 285 (1977); State v. Craft, 32 N.C. App. 357, 232 S.E.2d 282, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 642, 235 S.E.2d 63 (1977).

Where the evidence shows (1) that a breaking and entering occurred; (2) that prior thereto the accused had possession of an instrument used to effect it; (3) that such possession occurred within a short time prior to the breaking and entering; and (4) that the instrument was found at the scene of the crime immediately after the crime was committed, a jury would be justified in finding that the instrument had been brought there by the person who had been shown to have previously possessed it and that such person used it to effect the breaking and entering. If the evidence is also sufficient to show that the crime of larceny was committed pursuant to the breaking and entering, then the jury may infer that the accused is guilty of larceny as well as breaking and entering. State v. McNair, 36 N.C. App. 196, 243 S.E.2d 805 (1978).

Evidence Insufficient. — A charge of stealing two barrels of turpentine is not supported by proof of the taking of that quantity from the box cut in the tree to receive and hold the descending sap. State v. Moore, 33 N.C. 70 (1850); State v. Bragg, 86 N.C. 687 (1882).

Instructions — Intent. — The trial court, in charging the jury where the factual situation raises a question as to the intent to deprive permanently, should instruct on this element and add that while temporary deprivation will not suffice, if the defendant did not ever intend to return the property and was totally indifferent as to whether the owner ever recovered it, then that would constitute an "intent to permanently deprive." State v. Watts, 25 N.C. App. 194, 212 S.E.2d 557 (1975).

Same — Felonious Intent. — What is meant by felonious intent is a question for the court to explain to the jury, and whether it is present at any particular time is for the jury to say. State v. McCrary, 263 N.C. 490, 139 S.E.2d 739 (1965).

Same — Felonious Larceny of Automobile. — The trial court properly charged the jury that to find defendant guilty of the felonious larceny of an automobile, they must find from the evidence and beyond a reasonable doubt not only that defendant took and carried away the automobile without the owner's consent, knowing that he was not entitled to take it and intending at the time to deprive the owner of its use permanently, but also that the automobile was worth more than $200.00 (now $400.00). State v. Dickerson, 20 N.C. App. 169, 201 S.E.2d 69 (1973).

Same — Failure to Charge Lesser Included Offense. — Where all of the evidence indicated that the value of the stolen property exceeded $200.00 (now $400.00), the trial court did not err by failing to instruct the jury to consider in addition an issue as to defendant's possible guilt or innocence of the lesser included offense of misdemeanor larceny. State v. Dickerson, 20 N.C. App. 169, 201 S.E.2d 69 (1973).

Since all the evidence indicated that the value of the stolen property exceeded $200.00 (now $400.00), the trial court did not err by failing to instruct as to the lesser included offense of misdemeanor larceny. State v. Reese, 31 N.C. App. 575, 230 S.E.2d 213 (1976).

Verdict of Guilty of "Grand Larceny". — While there is no longer a crime in this State designated as "grand larceny" the verdict of the jury must be considered as tantamount to a verdict finding the defendant guilty as charged in the bill of indictment. State v. Walker, 6 N.C. App. 740, 171 S.E.2d 91 (1969).

If any person shall receive any chattel, property, money, valuable security or other thing whatsoever, the stealing or taking whereof amounts to larceny or a felony, either at common law or by virtue of any statute made or hereafter to be made, such person knowing or having reasonable grounds to believe the same to have been feloniously stolen or taken, he shall be guilty of a criminal offense, and may be indicted and convicted, whether the felon stealing and taking such chattels, property, money, valuable security or other thing, shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice; and any such receiver may be dealt with, indicted, tried and punished in any county in which he shall have, or shall have had, any such property in his possession or in any county in which the thief may be tried, in the same manner as such receiver may be dealt with, indicted, tried and punished in the county where he actually received such chattel, money, security, or other thing; and such receiver shall be punished as one convicted of larceny. (1797, c. 485, s. 2; R. C., c. 34, s. 56; Code, s. 1074; Rev., s. 3507; C. S., s. 4250; 1949, c. 145, s. 1; 1975, c. 163, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited in the following annotation were decided under this section as it stood prior to the 1975 amendment which added the language concerning "reasonable grounds to believe" that property is stolen with respect to the degree of knowledge required to support a conviction.

I. General Consideration.
II. Elements of the Offense.
III. Practice and Procedure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The crimes of larceny and of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen, are separate and distinct offenses. However, receiving stolen property is a sort of secondary crime based upon a prior commission of the primary crime of larceny. It presupposes, but does not include, larceny. Therefore, the elements of larceny are not elements of the crime of receiving. State v. Brady, 237 N.C. 675, 75 S.E.2d 155 (1953); State v. Neill, 244 N.C. 252, 93 S.E.2d 155 (1956).

The crime of receiving stolen goods is a sort of secondary crime based upon a prior commission of the primary crime of larceny. State v. Muse, 280 N.C. 31, 185 S.E.2d 214 (1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 974, 92 S. Ct. 2409, 32 L. Ed. 2d 674, rehearing denied, 409 U.S. 898, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1972).

And Receiving Stolen Property Is Not Accessorial to Larceny. — This section, defining the offense of receiving stolen property, clearly creates an offense not accessorial to larceny. State v. Golden, 20 N.C. App. 451, 201 S.E.2d 546, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 88, 203 S.E.2d 60 (1974).

A person cannot be guilty both of stealing property and receiving the same property knowing it to have been stolen by someone else. State v. Prince, 39 N.C. App. 685, 251 S.E.2d 631, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 739, 254 S.E.2d 180 (1979).

A person cannot be guilty of both larceny and receiving the same goods. Thus, one who steals property and one who receives it afterward from him knowing it to have been stolen, are guilty of separate offenses, and neither is the accomplice of the other. State v. Whitaker, 40 N.C. App. 251, 252 S.E.2d 242 (1979).

Same — Accessories Abolished. — By abolishing the distinction between petit and grand larceny the offense of accessory after the fact was also abolished, and one receiving stolen goods is treated and punished as principal. State v. Tyler, 85 N.C. 569 (1881).

Receiving stolen goods is not a lesser included offense of larceny, and jeopardy has not attached as to a proper larceny indictment. State v. Burnette, 22 N.C. App. 29, 205 S.E.2d 357 (1974).

The crimes of larceny and receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen, are separate offenses and not degrees of the same offense. State v. Prince, 39 N.C. App. 685, 251 S.E.2d 631, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 739, 254 S.E.2d 180 (1979).

Or of Breaking and Entering. — Receiving stolen goods is not a lesser included offense of breaking and entering but a separate and distinct offense. State v. Miller, 18 N.C. App. 489, 197 S.E.2d 46, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 757, 198 S.E.2d 727 (1973).

Receiving or Transferring Stolen Vehicle Constitutes Separate Offense. — The two offenses under § 20-106 and this section are separate offenses. The latter is not a lesser included offense under the former. State v. Carlin, 37 N.C. App. 228, 245 S.E.2d 586 (1978).

Section Applies Only to Receiving, Not Possession or Offering for Sale. — The possession or offering for sale of goods, known to have been stolen, is not a statutory crime under this section, which applies only to receiving the stolen goods. State v. Burnette, 22 N.C. App. 29, 205 S.E.2d 357 (1974).

II. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

In General. — The criminality of the action denounced by this section consists in receiving with guilty knowledge and felonious intent goods which previously had been stolen. Sufficient evidence of all the essential elements of the offense must be made to appear in order to sustain a conviction. State v. Yow, 227 N.C. 585, 42 S.E.2d 661 (1947).

The essential elements of the crime of receiving stolen goods which must be proven, are stated as follows: (a) The stealing of the goods by some one other than the accused; (b) that the accused, knowing them to be stolen, received or aided in concealing the goods, and (c) continued such possession or concealment with a dishonest purpose. State v. Brady, 237 N.C. 675, 75 S.E.2d 791 (1953); State v. Muse, 280 N.C. 31, 185 S.E.2d 214 (1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 974, 92 S. Ct. 2409, 32 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1972); State v. Grant, 17 N.C. App. 15, 193 S.E.2d 308 (1972); State v. Lash, 21 N.C. App. 365, 204 S.E.2d 563, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C.

593, 206 S.E.2d 865 (1974); State v. Burnette, 22 N.C. App. 29, 205 S.E.2d 357 (1974), decided under this section as it stood before the 1975 amendment; State v. May, 41 N.C. App. 370, 255 S.E.2d 303 (1979).

The essential elements of the offense of receiving stolen goods are the receiving of goods which had been feloniously stolen by some person other than the accused, with knowledge by the accused at the time of the receiving that the goods had been theretofore feloniously stolen, and the retention of the possession of such goods with a felonious intent or with a dishonest motive. State v. Tilley, 272 N.C. 408, 158 S.E.2d 573 (1968); State v. Watson, 13 N.C. App. 189, 185 S.E.2d 33 (1971).

The criminality of the action denounced by this section consists in receiving with guilty knowledge and felonious intent goods which previously had been stolen. State v. Tilley, 272 N.C. 408, 158 S.E.2d 573 (1968).

Where a defendant, charged with a violation of this section, purchases property in a public business from one in custody or possession and with the actual or apparent authority to sell it, the State must prove that the property was taken by the seller in violation of a felony statute, such as § 14-74, and that at the time of the transaction the defendant had knowledge, or reasonable grounds to believe, that the seller had so taken the property and had no authority to transact the sale. State v. Babb, 34 N.C. App. 336, 238 S.E.2d 308 (1977).

In a prosecution for receiving stolen goods, having established the theft of goods by someone other than the accused, the State had further to establish that the accused, knowing or having reasons to know the goods were stolen, received or aided in concealing the goods and continued such possession with a dishonest purpose. State v. Moore, 46 N.C. App. 259, 264 S.E.2d 899 (1980).

Guilty Knowledge Essential. — This section makes guilty knowledge one of the essential elements of the offense of receiving stolen goods. This knowledge may be acutal, or it may be implied when the circumstances under which the goods were received are sufficient to lead the party charged to believe they were stolen. State v. Stathos, 208 N.C. 456, 181 S.E. 273 (1935); State v. Grant, 17 N.C. App. 15, 193 S.E.2d 308 (1972).

Knowledge by the accused that the goods were stolen is an essential element of the offense of receiving stolen goods. State v. Watson, 13 N.C. App. 189, 185 S.E.2d 33 (1971).

Guilty knowledge is one of the essential elements of the crime of receiving stolen goods. State v. May, 41 N.C. App. 370, 255 S.E.2d 303 (1979).

The test of guilty knowledge is whether defendant knew, or must have known, that the goods were stolen. State v. Hart, 14 N.C. App. 120, 187 S.E.2d 351, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 469 (1972).

Guilty knowledge may be inferred from incriminating circumstances. State v. Hart, 14 N.C. App. 120, 187 S.E.2d 351, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 469 (1972); State v. Allen, 45 N.C. App. 417, 263 S.E.2d 630 (1980).

Felonious intent in receiving stolen goods with knowledge at the time that they had been stolen is necessary to a conviction under this section, and a charge which fails to submit the question of such intent to the jury entitled defendant to a new trial. State v. Morrison, 207 N.C. 804, 178 S.E. 562 (1935).

Property Must Be Stolen. — If there was no theft, the buying of the property is not criminal, even if the buyer believes the property to have been stolen. State v. Collins, 240 N.C. 128, 81 S.E.2d 270 (1954).

If property was not stolen or taken from the owner in violation of this section, as where the original taking was without felonious intent, or was not against the owner's will or consent, the receiver is not guilty of receiving stolen property. State v. Collins, 240 N.C. 128, 81 S.E.2d 270 (1954).

Or Taken In Violation of Other Felony Statute. — Under this section the property knowingly received or concealed could include not only stolen property but trust property converted in violation of § 14-74 or property taken in violation of any other felony statute. But if the property knowingly received was not stolen but was taken in violation of some felony statute, the indictment should so allege. State v. Babb, 34 N.C. App. 336, 238 S.E.2d 308 (1977).

Same — Receiving Embezzled Property. — This section makes it an offense knowingly to receive embezzled property in violation of a felony embezzlement statute, but such offense is distinct from that of receiving stolen goods, and a charge of receiving stolen goods is not sustained by proof that the goods were merely embezzled. State v. Babb, 34 N.C. App. 336, 238 S.E.2d 308 (1977).

Constructive receipt is sufficient to constitute "receiving" within the meaning of this section. State v. Hart, 14 N.C. App. 120, 187 S.E.2d 351, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 469 (1972).

Goods Received through Agent. — If stolen goods are received by an agent of the accused, at his instance, that is sufficient to sustain a conviction if he knew that they were stolen goods. State v. Stroud, 95 N.C. 626 (1886).

It would certainly make the accused a receiver in contemplation of law, if the stolen property was received by his servant or agent, acting under his directions, he knowing at the time of giving the orders that it was stolen. State v. Hart, 14 N.C. App. 120, 187 S.E.2d 351, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 469 (1972).

Self-Interest Not Necessary for Conviction. — It is not necessary that one receiving stolen goods do it for the purpose of making them his own or to derive profit from them, if he receives them to help the thief, as a friendly act, he is nevertheless guilty. State v. Rushing, 69 N.C. 29 (1873).

Time Not of the Essence. — The crime of receiving stolen goods is not one of the offenses in which time is of the essence. State v. Tessnear, 254 N.C. 211, 118 S.E.2d 393 (1961).

Value of Goods Received Must Exceed $400.00. — That the value of stolen goods received with knowledge by defendant exceeded $100.00 (now $400.00) is an essential element of the offense prescribed by this section. State v. Tessnear, 254 N.C. 211, 118 S.E.2d 393 (1961). State v. Wallace, 270 N.C. 155, 153 S.E.2d 873 (1967).

In order for the defendant to be found guilty of a felony under this section, it is incumbent upon the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the value of the goods was more than $200 (now $400). This is an essential element of the crime because § 14-72 specifically provides that "the receiving of stolen goods knowing them to be stolen, of the value of not more than two hundred dollars (now $400), is hereby declared a misdemeanor." State v. Wallace, 270 N.C. 155, 153 S.E.2d 873 (1967).

III. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Venue. — Under this section, venue is proper in any county in which a defendant was in possession of the stolen goods. State v. Haywood, 297 N.C. 686, 256 S.E.2d 715 (1979).

A plea of guilty of receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen is insufficient to support a felony sentence, even though the indictment charges defendant with receiving stolen goods having a value of more than $200. State v. Wallace, 270 N.C. 155, 153 S.E.2d 873 (1967).

Indictment — Larceny and Receiving Stolen Property May Be Included in Same Indictment. — A charge of larceny of goods of the value of $3,000 and a charge of receiving the stolen property with knowledge that it had been stolen, may be joined as separate counts in a single bill, each being a felony. State v. Meshaw, 246 N.C. 205, 98 S.E.2d 13 (1957).

Same — Need Not Name Owner of Property. — It is not necessary that the warrant or indictment in a prosecution for receiving stolen goods state the names of those from whom the goods were stolen. State v. Truesdale, 13 N.C. App. 622, 186 S.E.2d 604 (1972); State v. Golden, 20 N.C. App. 451, 201 S.E.2d 546, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 88, 203 S.E.2d 60 (1974).

Same — Amendment. — The court did not err in allowing the State's motion to amend warrants for receiving stolen goods since the original warrants charged all the essential elements of the offense of receiving stolen goods, and the amendment describing ownership of the property in more detail did not change the offense with which defendants were charged. State v. Truesdale, 13 N.C. App. 622, 186 S.E.2d 604 (1972).

Same — Sufficiency. — The indictment was held sufficient in Doss v. North Carolina, 252 F. Supp 298 (M.D.N.C. 1966); State v. Matthews, 267 N.C. 244, 148 S.E.2d 38 (1966).

Same — Fatal Variance. — Where an indictment sufficiently alleged feloniously receiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen (taken by common-law larceny) in violation of this section, but the State's evidence tended to show that defendant received property which was taken by a shop foreman, in violation of the felony statute, § 14-74, there was a fatal variance in the charge and the proof, a failure by the State to show that the goods were stolen. State v. Babb, 34 N.C. App. 336, 238 S.E.2d 308 (1977).

Presumption From Recent Possession of Stolen Property Does Not Apply. — The inference or presumption arising from the recent possession of stolen property, without more, does not extend to the charge of this section of receiving said property knowing it to have been feloniously stolen or taken. State v. Best, 202 N.C. 9, 161 S.E. 535 (1931); State v. Lowe, 204 N.C. 572, 169 S.E. 180 (1933); State v. Yow, 227 N.C. 585, 42 S.E.2d 661 (1947); State v. Hoskins, 236 N.C. 412, 72 S.E.2d 876 (1952); State v. Neill, 244 N.C. 252, 93 S.E.2d 155 (1956); State v. Muse, 280 N.C. 31, 185 S.E.2d 214 (1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 974, 92 S. Ct. 2409, 32 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1972); State v. St. Clair, 17 N.C. App. 22, 193 S.E.2d 404 (1972).

Recent possession of stolen property, without more, raises no presumption in a prosecution for receiving stolen goods with knowledge that they had been feloniously stolen, and an instruction that recent possession raised no presumption of guilt but raised a presumption of fact to be considered by the jury in passing upon the guilt or innocence of defendant, must be held for reversible error. State v. Larkin, 229 N.C. 126, 47 S.E.2d 697 (1948).

Testimony of Owner on Value Admissible. — In a prosecution for receiving stolen goods, the owner who has knowledge of value gained from experience, information and observation, may give his opinion of the value of personal property; however, the approved procedure requires that he first be qualified to give the evidence. State v. Whitaker, 40 N.C. App. 251, 252 S.E.2d 242 (1979).

Evidence held sufficient to go to jury upon charge of receiving stolen property with knowledge that it had been feloniously stolen. State v. Larkin, 229 N.C. 126, 47 S.E.2d 697 (1948); State v. Chambers, 239 N.C. 114, 79 S.E.2d 262

(1953); State v. Lash, 21 N.C. App. 365, 204 S.E.2d 563, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 593, 206 S.E.2d 865 (1974).

Evidence of receiving stolen goods held amply sufficient to overrule motion for nonsuit. State v. Myers, 240 N.C. 462, 82 S.E.2d 213 (1954).

Upon appeal from a conviction under an indictment for feloniously receiving property of a value of $602, knowing it to have been feloniously stolen, it was held that, considering the evidence in the light most favorable to the State, it was amply sufficient to carry the State's case to the jury, and to support the verdict, and defendant's motions for judgment of compulsory nonsuit were property overruled by the trial judge. State v. Matthews, 267 N.C. 244, 148 S.E.2d 38 (1966).

Same — Failure to Prove Ownership of Property. — In a prosecution under this section where there was no evidence on the record tending to show that the property alleged to have been stolen was that of the owner named in the indictment, the defendant's motion for dismissal or nonsuit should be allowed. State v. Pugh, 196 N.C. 725, 147 S.E. 7 (1929).

Evidence Held Insufficient. — See State v. Hoskins, 236 N.C. 412, 72 S.E.2d 876 (1952).

There was no evidence to support the verdict, and the defendant's motion for nonsuit on the charge of feloniously receiving stolen goods should have been allowed, where all the evidence, including the defendant's possession of the goods soon after they were stolen, tended to show that the defendant, and no one else, was the thief. State v. Prince, 39 N.C. App. 685, 251 S.E.2d 631, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 739, 254 S.E.2d 180 (1979).

Same — When Acquittal of Larceny Bars Prosecution for Receiving. — Defendants acquitted of larceny, despite evidence that they had stolen the items, could not over their motion for nonsuit be convicted of receiving stolen goods, where no evidence indicated that others might have stolen the items and then transferred them to defendants. State v. Strickland, 20 N.C. App. 470, 201 S.E.2d 501 (1974).

Instructions. — Where the indictment charges the defendant with "feloniously" receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen, but the charge fails to instruct the jury that it must find that the receiving was with the felonious intent, this is error and entitles the defendant to a new trial. State v. Brady, 237 N.C. 675, 75 S.E.2d 791 (1953).

Where the trial judge clearly charged the jury in substance that if it found beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence that defendant was guilty of receiving stolen property (certain guns), knowing it to have been stolen, as he had defined the offense for it, and found beyond a reasonable doubt that the guns were of a value of $600, then it would return a verdict of guilty as charged, but if under those circumstances it found the guns were of a value of $200 or less (now $400 or less), then it would return a verdict of guilty of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen, of a value of $200 or less (now $400 or less), a misdemeanor, this conforms to the decision in State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962). State v. Matthews, 267 N.C. 244, 148 S.E.2d 38 (1966).

Where the judge charged the jury: "Now, the offense charged here has at least four distinct elements that the State must satisfy you beyond a reasonable doubt about," and the court then instructed the jury as to the essential elements of the crime of receiving stolen goods, quoting from 1 Wharton's Criminal Evidence, 10th Ed., § 325b, p. 643, with the exception that Wharton states there are three elements, and the second element is "... (b) that the accused, knowing them to be stolen, received or aided in concealing the goods," and the trial judge charged: " ... second, that the defendant received the goods that were stolen; third, that at the time of receiving the goods the defendant knew that they had been stolen," an assignment of error to the charge was overruled. State v. Matthews, 267 N.C. 244, 148 S.E.2d 38 (1966).

Where the State in a prosecution for receiving stolen goods did not rely upon the presumption arising from the possession of recently stolen goods, the trial court was not required to charge that the jury must find that the goods allegedly received by defendant were the same goods that were stolen. State v. Muse, 280 N.C. 31, 185 S.E.2d 214 (1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 974, 92 S. Ct. 2409, 32 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1972).

An essential element of the crime of receiving stolen goods in violation of this section is the stealing of the goods by someone other than the accused. Therefore, failure to properly instruct the jury with regard to this element would constitute reversible error requiring a new trial. State v. Slate, 38 N.C. App. 209, 247 S.E.2d 430 (1978).

A charge to the jury in a prosecution for felonious receiving of stolen property defining the necessary intent as the intent to convert property to the defendant's own use or deprive the owner of its use permanently was correct and sufficient. State v. Laughinghouse, 39 N.C. App. 655, 251 S.E.2d 667, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 615, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

In a prosecution for feloniously receiving stolen goods, where the trial court instructed the jury that they should return a verdict of guilty if they found from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant, with a dishonest purpose, received hams which he knew "or had reasonable gounds to believe" someone had stolen, it was not error for the court to fail to go further and charge the jury that they should judge the reasonableness of defendant's belief from the circumstances as they appeared to him at the time he received the stolen goods. State v. Lovick, 42 N.C. App. 577, 257 S.E.2d 146 (1979).

Verdict Need Not Specify Value of Goods. — In a prosecution under this section, it is not required that the jury should determine the value of the goods in its verdict. State v. Morrison, 207 N.C. 804, 178 S.E. 562 (1935); State v. Hill, 237 N.C. 764, 75 S.E.2d 915 (1953).

Defective Verdict. — Where the verdict in an indictment under this section is "guilty of receiving stolen goods," it is defective as not being responsive to the charge or falling within the requirements of the statute to constitute the offense made in the indictment, and thereon a judgment may not be entered or a sentence imposed. State v. Shaw, 194 N.C. 690, 140 S.E. 621 (1927); State v. Cannon, 218 N.C. 466, 11 S.E.2d 301 (1940).

Same — General Verdict on Separate Counts. — In a prosecution upon an indictment charging in one count larceny and in another count receiving the stolen goods, a verdict of guilty as charged is equivalent to a verdict of guilty as to each count and is not merely inconsistent, but contradictory, since a defendant may be guilty of larceny or of receiving, but not both. State v. Meshaw, 246 N.C. 205 98 S.E.2d 13 (1957).

The jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged to an indictment charging both larceny and receiving the stolen goods with knowledge that they had been stolen. A single judgment was entered on the verdict. There was error in the court's instruction to the jury on the count of receiving. Since defendant could not be guilty of both larceny and receiving the same goods, and it was impossible to determine to which count the verdict related, it was impossible to determine whether the error was prejudicial or harmless and therefore a new trial must be awarded. State v. Meshaw, 246 N.C. 205, 98 S.E.2d 13 (1957).

A judgment upon a general verdict of guilty upon an indictment containing two counts — one for horse stealing, under § 14-81, and the other for receiving, under this section, is erroneous — the offenses not being of the same grade and the punishment being different. State v. Goings, 98 N.C. 766, 4 S.E. 121 (1887).

Same — Failure to Charge as to Guilty Knowledge. — Where the evidence is conflicting as to whether the defendant knew at the time of receiving goods that they were stolen, and the charge of the court fails to instruct that finding of such knowledge was necessary for conviction, the verdict of guilty without finding that the defendant possessed such knowledge at the time he received the goods is defective, and a venire de novo will be ordered on appeal. State v. Barbee, 197 N.C. 248, 148 S.E. 249 (1929).

Conviction of Larceny Is Tantamount to Acquittal on Charge of Receiving. — Upon an indictment for larceny and for receiving property, knowing the same to have been stolen, a verdict of guilty of larceny is tantamount to an acquittal on the charge of receiving. State v. Holbrook, 223 N.C. 622, 27 S.E.2d 725 (1943).

Sentence. — An exception to a judgment of imprisonment in the State's prison for a term of three years, pronounced against a defendant upon a verdict of guilty of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen, was untenable, in that the judgment was within this section. State v. Reddick, 222 N.C. 520, 23 S.E.2d 909 (1943).

§ 14-71.1. Possessing stolen goods.

If any person shall possess any chattel, property, money, valuable security or other thing whatsoever, the stealing or taking whereof amounts to larceny or a felony, either at common law or by virtue of any statute made or hereafter to be made, such person knowing or having reasonable grounds to believe the same to have been feloniously stolen or taken, he shall be guilty of a criminal offense, and may be indicted and convicted, whether the felon stealing and taking such chattels, property, money, valuable security or other thing shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice; and any such possessor may be dealt with, indicted, tried and punished in any county in which he shall have, or shall have had, any such property in his possession or in any county in which the thief may be tried, in the same manner as such possessor may be dealt with, indicted, tried and punished in the county where he actually possessed such chattel, money, security, or other thing; and such possessor shall be punished as one convicted of larceny. (1977, c. 978, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — This section was apparently passed to provide protection for society in those incidents where the State does not have sufficient evidence to prove who committed the larceny, or the elements of receiving. State v. Kelly, 39 N.C. App. 246, 249 S.E.2d 832 (1978).

State Does Not Have to Prove Who Committed the Larceny. — To require the State to prove who committed the larceny as an element of this offense would defeat the obvious intent of the legislature. On a charge of possession of stolen property, it is not necessary that the State prove someone other than the defendant stole the property. State v. Kelly, 39 N.C. App. 246, 249 S.E.2d 832 (1978).

Defendant Can Be Convicted of Possessing Property Which He Has Stolen. — While it is true that a defendant cannot be convicted of receiving stolen property which he has stolen himself, such is not the case in a charge of possession of stolen property. State v. Kelly, 39 N.C. App. 246, 249 S.E.2d 832 (1978); State v. Davis, 48 N.C. App. 386, 269 S.E.2d 242 (1980); set aside on other grounds, 302 N.C. 370, 275 S.E.2d 491 (1981).

§ 14-72. Larceny of property; receiving stolen goods or possessing stolen goods not exceeding $400.00 in value.

(a) Larceny of goods of the value of more than four hundred dollars ($400.00) is a Class H felony. The receiving or possessing of stolen goods of the value of more than four hundred dollars ($400.00) while knowing or having reasonable grounds to believe that the goods are stolen is a Class H felony. Larceny as provided in subsection (b) of this section is a Class H felony. Receiving or possession of stolen goods as provided in subsection (c) of this section is a Class H felony. Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, larceny of property, or the receiving or possession of stolen goods knowing or having reasonable grounds to believe them to be stolen, where the value of the property or goods is not more than four hundred dollars ($400.00), is a misdemeanor punishable under G.S. 14-3(a). In all cases of doubt, the jury shall, in the verdict, fix the value of the property stolen.

(b) The crime of larceny is a felony, without regard to the value of the property in question, if the larceny is:

(1) From the person; or

(2) Committed pursuant to a violation of G.S. 14-51, 14-53, 14-54 or 14-57; or

(3) Of any explosive or incendiary device or substance. As used in this section, the phrase "explosive or incendiary device or substance" shall include any explosive or incendiary grenade or bomb; any dynamite, blasting powder, nitroglycerin, TNT, or other high explosive; or any device, ingredient for such device, or type or quantity of substance primarily useful for large-scale destruction of property by explosive or incendiary action or lethal injury to persons by explosive or incendiary action. This definition shall not include fireworks; or any form, type, or quantity of gasoline, butane gas, natural gas, or any other substance having explosive or incendiary properties but serving a legitimate nondestructive or nonlethal use in the form, type, or quantity stolen.

(4) Of any firearm. As used in this section, the term "firearm" shall include any instrument used in the propulsion of a shot, shell or bullet by the action of gunpowder or any other explosive substance within it. A "firearm," which at the time of theft is not capable of being fired, shall be included within this definition if it can be made to work. This definition shall not include air rifles or air pistols.

(5) Of any record or paper in the custody of the North Carolina State Archives as defined by G.S. 121-2(7) and 121-2(8).

(c) The crime of possessing stolen goods knowing or having reasonable grounds to believe them to be stolen in the circumstances described in subsection (b) is a felony or the crime of receiving stolen goods knowing or having reasonable grounds to believe them to be stolen in the circumstances described in subsection (b) is a felony, without regard to the value of the property in question. (1895, c. 285; Rev., s. 3506; 1913, c. 118, s. 1; C. S., s. 4251; 1941, c. 178, s. 1; 1949, c. 145, s. 2; 1959, c. 1285; 1961, c. 39, s. 1; 1965, c. 621, s. 5; 1969, c. 522, s. 2; 1973, c. 238, ss. 1, 2; 1975, c. 163, s. 2; c. 696, s. 4; 1977, c. 978, ss. 2, 3; 1979, c. 408, s. 1; c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 11.)

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1979 amendment, effective Jan. 1, 1980, and applicable to crimes committed on or after that date, substituted "four hundred dollars ($400.00)" for "two hundred dollars ($200.00)" in the first sentence of subsection (a).

The second 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote subsection (a). The second 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, added "The" at the beginning, and inserted "or possessing" near the beginning, of the second sentence in subsection (a), inserted "while" and substituted "that the goods are" for "them to be" in that sentence and inserted "or possession" near the beginning of the fourth sentence and near the middle of the fifth sentence in subsection (a). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — Section 14-54 and this section do not violate the equal protection or due process provisions of either the State or federal Constitutions. State v. Killian, 37 N.C. App. 234, 245 S.E.2d 812 (1978).

Section 14-54 and this section are reasonably related to valid legislative goals. The legislature has determined that breaking or entering with intent to commit larceny is a more serious crime than breaking or entering without the intent to commit larceny or any felony, and that larceny committed pursuant to breaking or entering is more serious than simple larceny. The legislature was acting within its authority in designating these crimes as felonies and in fixing punishment commensurate with their serious nature. State v. Killian, 37 N.C. App. 234, 245 S.E.2d 812 (1978).

Section 14-54 and this section meet the test of equal protection because all persons who fall under the terms of the statutes are subject to the same sentence. State v. Killian, 37 N.C. App. 234, 245 S.E.2d 812 (1978).

Purpose of Amendments. — It seems probable the General Assembly, in enacting the amendments to this section, was not motivated by a disposition to protect thieves from the adverse effects of inflation, but to reduce the number of cases (involving felony charges) in the exclusive jurisdiction of the superior court. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962).

This section relates solely to punishment for the separate crime of larceny. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), and State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Breaking or Entering. — This section applies where there is no charge of breaking and entering or breaking or entering involved. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), and State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Section 14-54 concerns only the crimes of breaking and entering buildings and does not relate to the felony of larceny. The crime of larceny after breaking or entering is punishable as provided in this section. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 468 (1972).

Section Does Not Apply to Burglary. — A person who burglariously breaks and enters a dwelling at nighttime while the same is occupied is guilty of burglary in the first degree, and the fact that the value of goods stolen from the dwelling is less than $20 is no defense to the capital charge, this section dividing larceny into two degrees having no application to burglary. State v. Richardson, 216 N.C. 304, 4 S.E.2d 852 (1939).

Prosecution under § 14-74 Not Barred by Dismissal under this Section. — Since the element of trespass required in this section is not required for prosecution under § 14-74, and the element of trust required under § 14-74 is not required in this section, the dismissal in district court of a charge under this section cannot be considered a prior adjudication which would bar prosecution under § 14-74. State v. Bullin, 34 N.C. App. 589, 239 S.E.2d 278 (1977).

Separate and Distinct Crimes. — Defendant's conviction of felonious larceny, armed robbery, burglary, and rape, all of which arose out of the same series of events, did not place defendant in double jeopardy, since the four offenses were legally separate and distinct crimes, no one of which was a lesser included offense of the other; each clearly required the proof of at least one essential element not embodied in any of the other three offenses at issue; and the four felonies were factually distinct and independent crimes in this case. State v. Revelle, 301 N.C. 153, 270 S.E.2d 476 (1980).

The offenses of larceny and receiving are separate and distinct. State v. Golden, 20 N.C. App. 451, 201 S.E.2d 546, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 88, 203 S.E.2d 60 (1974).

And Receiving Is Not Accessorial to Larceny. — This section, defining the offense of receiving, clearly creates an offense not accessorial to larceny. State v. Golden, 20 N.C. App. 451, 201 S.E.2d 546, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 88, 203 S.E.2d 60 (1974).

A defendant may be found guilty of larceny or receiving but not both. State v. Graham, 47 N.C. App. 303, 267 S.E.2d 56 (1980).

Only difference between larceny and embezzlement is that in the former there must be a trespass, while in the latter that is not necessary. State v. Bailey, 25 N.C. App. 412, 213 S.E.2d 400 (1975).

The misdemeanor of larceny is a lesser degree of the felony of larceny within the meaning of § 15-170. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Summers, 263 N.C. 517, 139 S.E.2d 627 (1965).

Felonious Larceny as Included Offense in Felony-Murder. — A separate judgment based on a verdict of guilty of felonious larceny was arrested on the ground that the commission of this crime was an essential of and the basis for the conviction of defendant for felony-murder and therefore no additional punishment could be imposed for it as an independent criminal offense. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972).

Larceny Not Lesser Included Offense of Larceny by Employee. — Where defendant was charged with larceny by an employee he could not be convicted of the offense of larceny, since the two are wholly separate offenses, and each requires different evidentiary showings. In short, larceny is not a lesser included offense of larceny by an employee. State v. Daniels, 43 N.C. 556, 259 S.E.2d 396 (1979).

Unauthorized Use of Conveyance Is Lesser Included Offense of Larceny. — All of the essential elements of the crime of unauthorized use of a conveyance, § 14-72.2(a), are included in larceny, and it may be a lesser included offense of larceny where there is evidence to support the charge. State v. Ross, 46 N.C. App. 338, 264 S.E.2d 742 (1980).

Applied in State v. Davidson, 124 N.C. 839, 32 S.E. 957 (1899); State v. Bennett, 237 N.C. 749, 76 S.E.2d 42 (1953); State v. Davis, 253 N.C. 224, 116 S.E.2d 381 (1960); State v. II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSES.

What Constitutes Larceny. — To constitute larceny there must be a wrongful taking and carrying away of the personal property of another without his consent, and this must be done with felonious intent; that is, with intent to deprive the owner of his property and to appropriate it to the taker's use fraudulently. State v. Bowers, 273 N.C. 652, 161 S.E.2d 11 (1968).

Larceny is the felonious taking and carrying away by any person of the goods or personal property of another, without the latter's consent and with the felonious intent permanently to deprive the owner of his property and to convert it to the taker's own use. State v. Perry, 21 N.C. App. 478, 204 S.E.2d 889 (1974).

Same — "Felonious intent" is an essential element of the crime of larceny without regard to the value of the stolen property. State v. cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Wesson, 16 N.C. App. 683, 193 S.E.2d 425 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 675, 194 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

To constitute larceny the taker must have had the intent to steal at the time he unlawfully takes the property from the owner's possession by an act of trespass. State v. Bowers, 273 N.C. 652, 161 S.E.2d 11 (1968).

Where the evidence tended to show that a defendant charged with larceny took or obtained possession of the property by trick or fraud, the burden was on the State to prove that defendant had a felonious intent at the time he took or got possession by trick or fraud. State v. Harris, 35 N.C. App. 401, 241 S.E.2d 370 (1978).

Same — Felonious Intent Defined. — For definitions of "felonious intent," an element of the crime of larceny, see State v. Powell, 103 N.C. 424, 9 S.E. 627 (1889); State v. Kirkland, 178 N.C. 810, 101 S.E. 560 (1919); State v. Booker, 250 N.C. 272, 108 S.E.2d 426 (1959); State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Wesson, 16 N.C. App. 683, 193 S.E.2d 425 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 675, 194 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

The phrase "felonious intent" originated when both grand and petit larceny were felonies. Now "felonious intent," in the law of larceny, does not necessarily signify an intent to commit a felony. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Wesson, 16 N.C. App. 683, 193 S.E.2d 425 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 675, 194 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

The "felonious intent" as applied to the crime of larceny is the intent which exists where a person knowingly takes and carries away the personal property of another without any claim or pretense of right with the intent wholly and permanently to deprive the owner of his property and to convert it to the use of the taker or to some other person than the owner. State v. Wesson, 16 N.C. App. 683, 193 S.E.2d 425 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 675, 194 S.E.2d 155 (1973); State v. Perry, 21 N.C. App. 478, 204 S.E.2d 889 (1974).

Same — Larceny involves a trespass either actual or constructive. State v. Bowers, 273 N.C. 652, 161 S.E.2d 11 (1968).

An act of trespass is an essential element in the crime of larceny. State v. Bailey, 25 N.C. App. 412, 213 S.E.2d 400 (1975).

Every larceny includes a trespass, and if there is no trespass in taking the goods, there can be no felony committed in carrying them away. State v. Bailey, 25 N.C. App. 412, 213 S.E.2d 400 (1975).

A conviction under this section requires that either an actual or constructive trespass be shown. State v. Bullin, 34 N.C. App. 589, 239 S.E.2d 278 (1977).

One who lawfully acquires possession of goods or money of another cannot commit larceny by feloniously converting them to his own use, for the reason that larceny, being a criminal trespass on the right of possession, cannot be committed by one who, being invested with that right, is consequently incapable of trespassing on it. State v. Bailey, 25 N.C. App. 412, 213 S.E.2d 400 (1975).

But actual trespass is not a necessary element of larceny when possession of property is fraudulently obtained by some trick or artifice. State v. Bowers, 273 N.C. 652, 161 S.E.2d 11 (1968).

Same — Taking and Carrying Away. — While there must be a taking and carrying away of the personal property of another to complete the crime of larceny, it is not necessary that the property be completely removed from the premises of the owner. The least removal of an article, from the actual or constructive possession of the owner, so as to be under the control of the felon, will be a sufficient asportation. State v. Walker, 6 N.C. App. 740, 171 S.E.2d 91 (1969).

Same — Severance from Owner's Possession. — Even if only for an instant, there must be a complete severance of the object from the owner's possession, to such an extent that the defendant has absolute possession of it. State v. Carswell, 36 N.C. App. 377, 243 S.E.2d 911, rev'd on other grounds, 296 N.C. 101, 249 S.E.2d 427 (1978).

Same — Length of Time Immaterial. — The fact that the property may have been in defendant's possession and under his control for only an instant is immaterial if his removal of the property from its original status was such as would constitute a complete severance from the possession of the owner. State v. Walker, 6 N.C. App. 740, 171 S.E.2d 91 (1969).

Same — Exclusive Control. — It is not always necessary that the stolen property should have been actually in the hands or on the person of the accused and it is sufficient if such property was under his exclusive personal control. State v. Foster, 268 N.C. 480, 151 S.E.2d 62 (1966); State v. Solomon, 24 N.C. App. 527, 211 S.E.2d 478 (1975).

Same — Title to Property Taken. — It is no defense to a larceny charge that title to the property taken is in one other than the person from whom it was taken. State v. Richardson, 8 N.C. App. 298, 174 S.E.2d 77 (1970); State v. Eppley, 14 N.C. App. 314, 188 S.E.2d 758, rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 249, 192 S.E.2d 441 (1972).

Receiving Stolen Property. — Knowledge that the goods were stolen at the time of receiving them is an essential element of the offense of receiving stolen goods, and although guilty knowledge may be inferred from incriminating circumstances, a charge that such knowledge might be actual or implied, without specifying that it would have to exist at the time of the receiving, is erroneous. State v. Saulding, 211 N.C. 63, 188 S.E. 647 (1936).

Same — Under Subsection (c). — In order for the crime of receiving stolen property to be rendered a felony by subsection (c) without regard to the value of the property, the defendant must have known not only that the property was stolen, but also that the theft was accomplished under circumstances enumerated in subsection (b). State v. Scott, 11 N.C. App. 642, 182 S.E.2d 256 (1971), decided under this section as it stood before the 1975 amendment.

Possession of Stolen Goods. — There may be joint possession of stolen goods by two or more persons if they are shown to have acted in concert, the possession of one participant being the possession of all. State v. Eppley, 14 N.C. App. 314, 188 S.E.2d 758, rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 249, 192 S.E.2d 441 (1972).

Same — Exclusive possession of stolen property may be joint possession if persons are shown to have acted in concert or to have been particeps criminis. State v. Solomon, 24 N.C. App. 527, 211 S.E.2d 478 (1975).

III. DEGREES OF OFFENSES.

A. Determined by Value of Property.

This section divides larceny into two degrees, one a misdemeanor, the other a felony. State v. Andrews, 246 N.C. 561, 99 S.E.2d 745 (1957); State v. Barber, 5 N.C. App. 126, 167 S.E.2d 883 (1969).

Degree of Offense Depends Solely on Value of Property Taken. — Whether a person who commits the crime of larceny is guilty of a felony or guilty of a misdemeanor depends solely upon the value of the property taken. State v. Summers, 263 N.C. 517, 139 S.E.2d 627 (1965).

In cases under this section, it is incumbent upon the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the property stolen had a value in excess of $200 (now $400) in order for the punishment to be that provided for a felony. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), and State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

The dividing line between felonious and nonfelonious larceny, not perpetrated by breaking and entering, is $200 (now $400). Anders v. Turner, 379 F.2d 46 (4th Cir. 1967).

Thus, larceny of property of a value in excess of $200 (now $400) is a felony. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

Larceny of any property of another of any value after breaking and entering, and larceny of property of more than $200 (now $400) in value, are felonious, each of which may be punishable by imprisonment for as much as ten years. State v. Jones, 3 N.C. App. 455, 165 S.E.2d 36 (1969).

As Is Receiving Stolen Property of Such Value. — The criminal offense of receiving stolen property, defined in § 14-71, where the value of the property is in excess of $200 (now $400), is a felony. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962).

In order for the defendant to be found guilty of a felony under § 14-71, it is incumbent upon the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the value of the goods was more than $200 (now $400). This is an essential element of the crime because this section specifically provides that "the receiving of stolen goods knowing them to be stolen, of the value of not more than two hundred dollars is hereby declared a misdemeanor." State v. Wallace, 270 N.C. 155, 153 S.E.2d 873 (1967).

But Larceny of Property of a Value of Not More than $200 (now $400) Is Only a Misdemeanor. — If the value of the stolen property is found to be of the value of not more than $200 (now $400) or less, such larceny is only a misdemeanor and punishable as such. State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), and State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Nothing else appearing, larceny of goods of the value of not more than $200 (now $400) is a misdemeanor. State v. Barber, 5 N.C. App. 126, 167 S.E.2d 883 (1969).

Actual Value of Property Not Taker's Intent Determines Grade of Larceny. — The actual value of the thing wrongfully appropriated, rather than the intention of the taker with respect to value, determines the grade of larceny. State v. Dees, 14 N.C. App. 110, 187 S.E.2d 433 (1972).

Value of Property Taken, Not Property Possessed, Is Determinative. — This section requires the State to prove the value of the property taken, not the property possessed by the accused, to be in excess of $200 (now $400). State v. Boomer, 33 N.C. App. 324, 235 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 254, 237 S.E.2d 536 (1977).

"Value" as used in this section means fair market value. State v. Cotten, 2 N.C. App. 305, 163 S.E.2d 100 (1968).

The "market value" of the stolen item is used in determining whether the crime is felonious or nonfelonious. State v. Dees, 14 N.C. App. 110, 187 S.E.2d 433 (1972).

In the case of common articles having a market value, the courts have usually rejected the original cost and any special value to the owner personally as standards of value for purposes of graduation of the offense, and have declared the proper criterion to be the price which the subject of the larceny would bring in open market — its "market value" or its "reasonable selling price," at the time and place of the theft and in the condition in which it was when the thief commenced the acts culminating in the larceny. State v. Dees, 14 N.C. App. 110, 187 S.E.2d 433 (1972).

For determining whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor under this section, the word "value" means the fair market value of the stolen item at the time of the theft. State v. Shaw, 26 N.C. App. 154, 215 S.E.2d 390 (1975).

The word "value" as used in this section does not mean the price at which the owner would sell, but means fair market value. State v. Haney, 28 N.C. App. 222, 220 S.E.2d 371 (1975).

And money is the standard of value. If the amount is known there can be no disagreement as to value. State v. Summers, 263 N.C. 517, 139 S.E.2d 627 (1965).

Price Received for Stolen Goods Is Irrelevant. — The price received for stolen tools had no relevance to the "market value." State v. Dees, 14 N.C. App. 110, 187 S.E.2d 433 (1972).

State Must Prove That Value of Property Exceeded $200 (now $400). — Except in those instances where this section does not apply, to convict of the felony of larceny, it is incumbent upon the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the value of the stolen property was more than $200 (now $400); and, this being an essential element of the offense, it is incumbent upon the trial judge to so instruct the jury. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Holloway, 265 N.C. 581, 144 S.E.2d 634 (1965); State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Except in those cases where this section is inapplicable, the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the value of the stolen property was more than $200 (now $400) in order to convict of felony-larceny, and the trial judge must so instruct the jury even though no request is made for such instruction. The reason for this requirement is that the defendant's plea of not guilty places in issue every essential element of the offense, including the element of value of the property stolen, and the credibility of the testimony must be passed upon by the jury. State v. Walker, 6 N.C. App. 740, 171 S.E.2d 91 (1969).

The burden of proof as to value in excess of $200 (now $400) is upon the State as an essential element of the crime of felonious larceny where defendant is not charged with or found guilty of felonious breaking or entering as a part of the same occurrence. State v. Lilly, 25 N.C. App. 453, 213 S.E.2d 418 (1975).

Although an indictment charges, and all the evidence tends to show, that the value of the stolen property was more than $200 (now $400), the jury, under appropriate instructions, must find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that this is the fact. State v. Curry, 288 N.C. 312, 218 S.E.2d 374 (1975).

It is incumbent upon the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the value of the stolen property was more than $200 (now $400); and, value in excess of $200 (now $400) being an essential element of the offense, it is incumbent upon the trial judge to so instruct the jury. The basis for this requirement is the elementary proposition that the credibility of the tesimony, even though unequivocal and uncontradicted, must be passed upon by the jury. State v. Curry, 288 N.C. 312, 218 S.E.2d 374 (1975).

Effect of Plea of Not Guilty. — A plea of not guilty to an indictment charging the felony of larceny puts in issue every essential element of the crime and constitutes a denial of the charge that the value of the stolen property was more than $200 (now $400). State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

B. Offenses Which Are Felonies Regardless of Value of Property.

Where this section does not apply, the larceny is a felony, as at common law, without regard to the value of the stolen property. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Fowler, 266 N.C. 667, 147 S.E.2d 36 (1966).

Larceny from a person is a felony. State v. Williams, 261 N.C. 172, 134 S.E.2d 163 (1964), overruled on other grounds, State v. Weaver, 264 N.C. 681, 142 S.E.2d 633 (1965).

In larceny from the person there must be a taking, though the value of the property is immaterial. State v. Parker, 262 N.C. 679, 138 S.E.2d 496 (1964).

Larceny from the person as at common law is a felony without regard to the value of the property stolen. State v. Massey, 273 N.C. 721, 161 S.E.2d 103 (1968).

Larceny from the person is a felony, without regard to the value of the property. State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

Larceny from Building. — Larceny from a building in violation of § 14-51, 14-53, 14-54 or 14-57 is a felony, without regard to the value of the property. State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

Same — Larceny by Breaking and Entering. — Under the amendment of this section, larceny by breaking and entering any building referred to therein is a felony without regard to the value of the stolen property. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Jones, 264 N.C. 134, 141 S.E.2d 27 (1965); State v. Wilson, 264 N.C. 595, 142 S.E.2d 180 (1965); State v. McKoy, 265 N.C. 380, 144 S.E.2d 46 (1965); State v. Brown, 266 N.C. 55, 145 S.E.2d 297 (1965), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969), and State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Where larceny is committed pursuant to breaking and entering, it constitutes a felony without regard to the value of the property in question. State v. Richardson, 8 N.C. App. 298, 174 S.E.2d 77 (1970); State v. Wright, 22 N.C. App. 428, 206 S.E.2d 787 (1974).

Larceny of any explosive or incendiary device or substance is a felony. State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

IV. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

A. Indictment.

Required Allegations Generally. — To convict of felony-larceny, the indictment must allege and the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt, as an essential element of the crime, that the value of the property exceeded $200 (now $400), or that the larceny was from the person, or that the larceny was from a building in violation of § 14-51, 14-53, 14-54 or 14-57, or that the property involved was an explosive or incendiary device or substance. State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971); State v. Corpening, 31 N.C. App. 376, 229 S.E.2d 206 (1976), appeal dismissed, 291 N.C. 712, 232 S.E.2d 205 (1977).

Decisions subsequent to the Act of 1913 and at variance with the legal propositions stated herein, for example, State v. Flynn, 230 N.C. 293, 52 S.E.2d 791 (1949), and State v. Stevens, 252 N.C. 331, 113 S.E.2d 577 (1960), to the extent of such variance, are overruled. Too, decisions based on the Act of 1895, including State v. Bynum, 117 N.C. 749, 23 S.E. 218 (1895), and State v. Harris, 119 N.C. 811, 26 S.E. 148 (1896), and other decisions based thereon, are no longer authoritative. State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

Ownership of Property. — The indictment in a larceny case must allege a person who has a property interest in the property stolen. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

In a prosecution for larceny the State must prove that the person alleged in the indictment to have a property interest in the property stolen has ownership, meaning title to the property or some special property interest. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

The purpose of the requirement that ownership be alleged in an indictment for larceny is to (1) inform defendant of the elements of the alleged crime, (2) enable him to determine whether the allegations constitute an indictable offense, (3) enable him to prepare for trial and (4) enable him to plead the verdict in bar of subsequent prosecution for the same offense. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

The indictment for larceny must correctly charge the owner or the person in possession of the property stolen. State v. Vawter, 33 N.C. App. 131, 234 S.E.2d 438, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 257, 237 S.E.2d 539 (1977).

An indictment for larceny of property is fatally defective if it fails to allege the ownership of the property in a natural person or a legal entity capable of owning property. State v. Roberts, 14 N.C. App. 6 S.E.2d 610 (1972).

Same — Not in a Servant. — In an indictment for larceny, it is not sufficient to charge the stolen property to be the property of one who is a mere servant, although he may have had actual possession at the time of the larceny; because having no property, his possession is the possession of his master. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

Description of Property. — The description in a warrant or bill of indictment of the goods alleged to have been stolen is sufficient if from it defendant can have a fair and reasonable opportunity to prepare his defense, can avail himself of his conviction or acquittal as a bar to subsequent prosecution for the same offense, and the court is enabled, on conviction, to pronounce sentence according to law. State v. Fuller, 13 N.C. App. 193, 185 S.E.2d 312 (1971).

Whether the description of property in a larceny indictment is sufficient or so defective as to be void depends on the certainty educed by the description. The property alleged to have been taken must be described with "reasonable certainty." State v. Boomer, 33 N.C. App. 324, 235 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 254, 237 S.E.2d 536 (1977).

Reasonable certainty is attained when the description reasonably informs the accused of the transaction meant, when it protects the accused in the event of subsequent prosecutions for the same offense, when it enables the court to see that the property described is the subject of larceny, and when it enables the jury to say that the article proved to be stolen is the same as the one described. State v. Boomer, 33 N.C. App. 324, 235 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 254, 237 S.E.2d 536 (1977).

When describing an animal in an indictment for larceny, it is sufficient to refer to it by the name commonly applied to animals of its kind without further description. A specific description of the animal, such as its color, age, weight, sex, markings or brand, is not necessary. State v. Boomer, 33 N.C. App. 324, 235 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 254, 237 S.E.2d 536 (1977).

The general term "hogs" in a larceny indictment sufficiently described the animals taken so as to identify them with reasonable certainty. State v. Boomer, 33 N.C. App. 324, 235 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 254, 237 S.E.2d 536 (1977).

Value of Property. — Where neither larceny from the person nor by breaking and entering is involved, an indictment for the felony of larceny must charge, as an essential element of the crime, that the value of the stolen goods was more than $200 (nor $400). State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Same — Misdemeanor. — Where the indictment charges the larceny of $200 (now $400) or less and does not charge that the larceny was from a building by breaking or entering, or by any other means of such nature as to make the larceny a felony, the indictment charges only a misdemeanor, and a sentence on the count in excess of two years must be vacated and the cause remanded for proper judgment. State v. Fowler, 266 N.C. 667, 147 S.E.2d 36 (1966).

Where an indictment charges larceny of property of the value of $200 (now $400) or less, but contains no allegation the larceny was from a building by breaking and entering, the crime charged is a misdemeanor for which the maximum prison sentence is two years, notwithstanding all the evidence tends to show the larceny was accomplished by means of a felonious breaking and entering. State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Felony Irrespective of Value. — In order to properly charge the felony of larceny of property, without regard to the value of the property, the bill of indictment must contain one or more of the elements set out in subsection (b) of this section. State v. Cleary, 9 N.C. App. 189, 175 S.E.2d 749 (1970).

Same — Larceny from the Person. — Solicitors would do well to include in bills of indictment the words "from the person" if and when they intend to prosecute for the felony of larceny from the person. State v. Bowers, 273 N.C. 652, 161 S.E.2d 11 (1968).

A person may not be convicted and punished for the felony of larceny from the person when the indictment on which he is tried fails to allege that the larceny was from the person. State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

Decisions based on the Act of 1895, including State v. Bynum, 117 N.C. 749, 23 S.E. 218 (1895), and State v. Harris, 119 N.C. 811, 26 S.E. 148 (1896), and other decisions based thereon, are no longer authoritative. Too, decisions subsequent to the Act of 1913 and at variance with the legal propositions stated herein, for example, State v. Flynn, 230 N.C. 293, 52 S.E.2d 791 (1949), and State v. Stevens, 252 N.C. 331, 113 S.E.2d 577 (1960), to the extent of such variance, are overruled. State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

Variance — Value. — Where the offense charged is that of felonious larceny, in order to distinguish the offense of felonious larceny from misdemeanor larceny, it is necessary to show that the value of the property stolen was more than $200 (now $400); this having been done, a difference between the value alleged in the bill of indictment and the value shown by the evidence is immaterial. State v. McCall, 12 N.C. App. 85, 182 S.E.2d 617, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 513, 183 S.E.2d 689 (1971).

Same — Ownership. — There was no fatal variance between indictment and proof where the indictment charged the larceny of money from "Piggly Wiggly Store #7," and witnesses referred to the store as "Piggly Wiggly in Wilson," "Piggly Wiggly Store," "Piggly Wiggly," and "Piggly Wiggly Wilson, Inc.," there being no evidence that any other Piggly Wiggly store existed in the city or county, and there being nothing to indicate that the defendants, witnesses or jurors were confused by the difference in names. State v. McCall, 12 N.C. App. 85, 182 S.E.2d 617, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 513, 183 S.E.2d 689 (1971).

There was no fatal variance in a larceny indictment placing ownership of stolen tools in a corporation and evidence that, although the tools were personally owned by individual mechanics working for the corporation, they were left overnight on the corporation's premises and were in the possession of the corporation at the time of the theft. State v. Dees, 14 N.C. App. 110, 187 S.E.2d 433 (1972).

There is no fatal variance in an indictment for larceny where the indictment alleges that two persons had a property interest in the stolen property when in fact, one was the bailee or special owner of the property, and the other had legal title to the property, since the property may be laid in either the owner, the special owner or both. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

In a prosecution for larceny, if the person alleged in the indictment to have a property interest in the stolen property is not the owner or special owner of it, there is a fatal variance entitling defendant to a nonsuit. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

Same — Description of Property. — Where a larceny indictment described the stolen property as "a 1970 Plymouth, Serial # PM14360F239110, the personal property of George Edison Biggs," and the evidence showed the taking by defendant of a 1970 Plymouth which was owned by George Edison Biggs but there was no evidence as to the serial number, the variance was not fatal. State v. Coleman, 24 N.C. App. 530, 211 S.E.2d 542 (1975).

The indictment was held sufficient in Doss v. North Carolina, 252 F. Supp. 298 (M.D.N.C. 1966).

The indictment charged store-breaking, larceny and receiving in the language of the statute under which it was drawn, § 14-54 and this section, and contained the elements of the offense intended to be charged, and sufficiently informed the petitioner of the crime with which he was charged so that he could adequately prepare his defense and could plead the judgment as a bar to any subsequent prosecution for the same offense. Nothing more was required. Harris v. North Carolina, 320 F. Supp. 770 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd, 435 F.2d 1305 (4th Cir. (1971).

An indictment charging that defendant at a specified time and place did "with force and arms" feloniously steal, take, and carry away from a person specified a sum of money, charges the crime of larceny and not that of robbery. State v. Acrey, 262 N.C. 90, 136 S.E.2d 201 (1964).

"Steal" Synonymous with "Felonious Intent" in Warrant Charging Misdemeanor Larceny. — The word "steal" as used in a warrant charging misdemeanor larceny encompassed and was synonymous with the required "felonious intent" and was therefore sufficient to withstand the defendant's motion to quash. State v. Wesson, 16 N.C. App. 683, 193 S.E.2d 425 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 675, 194 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

"Larceny by trick" is not a crime separate and distinct from common-law larceny, but the term is often used to describe a larceny when possession was obtained by trick or fraud. It is not necessary that the manner in which the stolen property was taken and carried away be alleged, and the words "by trick" are not required in an indictment charging larceny. State v. Harris, 35 N.C. App. 401, 241 S.E.2d 370 (1978).

B. Evidence.

Opinion as to Value. — It is not necessary that a witness be an expert in order to give his opinion as to value. State v. Cotten, 2 N.C. App. 305, 163 S.E.2d 100 (1968).

A witness who has knowledge of value gained from experience, information and observation may give his opinion of the value of specific real property, personal property, or services. State v. Cotten, 2 N.C. App. 305, 163 S.E.2d 100 (1968).

An estimate has been held to be some evidence of value. State v. Cotten, 2 N.C. App. 305, 163 S.E.2d 100 (1968).

The witness's testimony as to his opinion of the "value" of the stolen automobile was properly admitted and was sufficient to require submission to the jury of an issue as to defendant's guilt of felonious larceny under this section where defendant did not object to the form of the question or move to strike the answer. State v. Coleman, 24 N.C. App. 530, 211 S.E.2d 542 (1975).

Circumstantial Evidence Admissible. — All of the essential elements of larceny must be established by sufficient, competent evidence; and the essential facts can be proved by circumstantial evidence where the circumstance raises a logical inference of the fact to be proved and not just a mere suspicion or conjecture. State v. Boomer, 33 N.C. App. 324, 235 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 254, 237 S.E.2d 536 (1977).

It is always competent in a prosecution for breaking and entering and larceny to show all of the goods lost from a store and to trace some or all of the articles to a defendant. State v. Richardson, 8 N.C. App. 298, 174 S.E.2d 177 (1970); State v. Eppley, 14 N.C. App. 314, 188 S.E.2d 758, rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 249, 192 S.E.2d 441 (1972).

Evidence Held Admissible. — In a prosecution for larceny and receiving of paper, evidence of size, weight, quantity and value of the paper, from experienced witnesses, who based their opinions on personal observation, is admissible to show a value of more than $50 (now $400) to establish a felony under this section. State v. Weinstein, 224 N.C. 645, 31 S.E.2d 920 (1944), cert. denied, 324 U.S. 849, 65 S. Ct. 689, 89 L. Ed. 1410 (1945).

Evidence Sufficient. — Evidence was held amply sufficient to support verdict of guilty of feloniously breaking and entering and larceny by means of such felonious breaking and entering in State v. Majors, 268 N.C. 146, 150 S.E.2d 35 (1966).

Evidence held sufficient to show a present intent on the part of defendant to take property belonging to another and convert it to his own use. State v. Thompson, 8 N.C. App. 313, 174 S.E.2d 130 (1970).

Nonsuit was properly denied upon proof of exercise of control over stolen goods by (1) offer of sale, (2) rental of warehouse space for storage of the goods, and (3) borrowing money upon pledge of the stolen goods. State v. Carter, 20 N.C. App. 461, 201 S.E.2d 500, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 87, 203 S.E.2d 60 (1974).

Evidence Insufficient. — Where the State's evidence was that $400 was stolen, and defendant testified that she received $420 by gift, and that she stole nothing, there was no evidence from which the jury could have found the defendant guilty of larceny of a value of $200 (now $400) or less. State v. Summers, 263 N.C. 517, 139 S.E.2d 627 (1965).

There was insufficient evidence from which the jury could find that defendant committed the larceny where no fingerprints were taken linking the defendant to the larceny, no effort was made to determine whether the footprints leading from the home matched the defendant's footprints, and where clearly defendant never had actual possession of the stolen merchandise. State v. McKinney, 25 N.C. App. 283, 212 S.E.2d 707 (1975).

C. Presumptive from Possession of Recently Stolen Property.

In General. — If the circumstances are such as to exclude the intervening agency of others between the theft and the recent possession of stolen goods, then such recent possession may afford presumptive evidence that the person in possession is the thief. State v. Foster, 268 N.C. 480, 151 S.E.2d 62 (1966); State v. Cotten, 2 N.C. App. 305, 163 S.E.2d 100 (1968).

The principle of law known as recent possession of stolen property itself indicates the conditions under which it operates, and to bring it into play there must be proof of three things: (1) That the property described in the indictment was stolen, the mere fact of finding one man's property in another man's possession raising no presumption that the latter stole it; (2) that the property shown to have been possessed by accused was the stolen property; and (3) that the possession was recently after the larceny, since mere possession of stolen property raises no presumption of guilt. State v. Foster, 268 N.C. 480, 151 S.E.2d 62 (1966); State v. Black, 14 N.C. App. 373, 188 S.E.2d 634, appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 624, 190 S.E.2d 467 (1972); State v. Solomon, 24 N.C. App. 527, 211 S.E.2d 478 (1975); State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

The presumption of recent possession is not in aid of identifying or locating the stolen property, but in tracking down the thief upon its discovery. State v. Foster, 268 N.C. 480, 151 S.E.2d 62 (1966); State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

The applicability of the doctrine of the inference of guilt derived from the recent possession of stolen goods depends upon the circumstance and character of the possession. It applies only when the possession is of a kind which manifests that the stolen goods came to the possessor by his own act or with his undoubted concurrence, and so recently and under such circumstances as to give reasonable assurance that such possession could not have been obtained unless the holder was himself the thief. State v. Foster, 268 N.C. 480, 151 S.E.2d 62 (1966).

Evidence that defendant was in possession of stolen property shortly after the property was stolen raises a presumption of defendant's guilt of larceny of such property. State v. Jones, 3 N.C. App. 455, 165 S.E.2d 36 (1969).

When goods are stolen and one is found in possession so soon thereafter that he could not have reasonably gotten the possession unless he had stolen them himself, the law presumes he was the thief. State v. Solomon, 24 N.C. App. 527, 211 S.E.2d 478 (1975).

The presumption spawned by possession of recently stolen property arises when, and only when, the State shows beyond a reasonable doubt that the property described in the indictment was stolen; the stolen goods were found in defendant's custody and subject to his control and disposition to the exclusion of other, though not necessarily found in defendant's hands or on his person so long as he had the power and intent to control the goods; and the possession was recently after the larceny, mere possession of stolen property being insufficient to raise the presumption of guilt. State v. Maines, 301 N.C. 669, 273 S.E.2d 289 (1981).

When there is evidence that a building has been broken into and entered and thereby the property in question has been stolen, the possession of such stolen property recently after the larceny raises presumptions that the possessor is guilty of the larceny and also of the breaking and entering. State v. Maines, 301 N.C. 669, 273 S.E.2d 289 (1981).

Larceny Must Be Established. — Before the presumption of guilt stemming from possession of recently stolen property can attach, the State must show by positive or circumstantial evidence a prima facie larceny of the goods. State v. Boomer, 33 N.C. App. 324, 235 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 254, 237 S.E.2d 536 (1977).

The identity of the fruits of the crime must be established before the presumption of recent possession can apply. State v. Foster, 268 N.C. 480, 151 S.E.2d 62 (1966); State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

Possession of stolen property shortly after the time of theft raises a presumption of the possessor's guilt of larceny of such property but the presumption does not apply until the identity of the property is established. State v. Bembery, 33 N.C. App. 31, 234 S.E.2d 33, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 160, 236 S.E.2d 704 (1977).

Control of Stolen Property. — The principle of law known as recent possession of stolen property is usually applied to possession which involves custody about the person, but it is not necessarily so limited. It may be of things elsewhere deposited, but under the control of a party. It may be in a storeroom or barn when the party has the key. In short, it may be in any place where it is manifest it must have been put by the act of the party or his undoubted concurrence. State v. Foster, 268 N.C. 480, 151 S.E.2d 62 (1966).

Possession of a part of the recently stolen property under some circumstances warrants the inference that the accused stole all of it. The inference of guilt is not always repelled by the fact that only part of the recently stolen property is found in the possession of the accused. State v. Boomer, 33 N.C. App. 324, 235 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 254, 237 S.E.2d 536 (1977).

Strength of Presumption Depends on Lapse of Time and Other Circumstances. — The possession of stolen property recently after the theft, and under circumstances excluding the intervening agency of others, affords presumptive evidence that the person in possession is himself the thief, and the evidence is stronger or weaker as the possession is nearer to or more distant from the time of the commission of the offense. State v. Cotten, 2 N.C. App. 305, 163 S.E.2d 100 (1968).

The presumption that the possessor is the thief, which arises from the possession of stolen goods, is strong or weak as the time elapsing between the stealing of the goods and the finding of them in the possession of the defendant is short or long. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

It is the general rule in this State that one found in the unexplained possession of recently stolen property is presumed to be the thief. This is a factual presumption and is strong or weak depending on circumstances — the time between the theft and the possession, the type of property involved and its legitimate availability in the community. State v. Hagler, 32 N.C. App. 444, 232 S.E.2d 712, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 642, 235 S.E.2d 63 (1977).

The presumption is strong or weak depending upon the circumstances of the case and the length of time intervening between the larceny of the goods and the discovery of them in defendant's possession. State v. Maines, 301 N.C. 669, 273 S.E.2d 289 (1981).

Proof of recent possession by the State does not shift the burden of proof to the defendant but the burden remains with the State to demonstrate defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Fair, 291 N.C. 171, 229 S.E.2d 189 (1976).

Mullaney v. Wilbur, 421 U.S. 684, 95 S. Ct. 1881, 44 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1975), is inapposite to the so-called recent possession doctrine because that doctrine does not shift the burden of proof to the defendant. The doctrine only allows the jury to infer that the defendant stole the goods, because the State first proved that the stolen goods were in defendant's possession so soon after the theft that it was unlikely that he obtained them honestly. The doctrine is only an evidentiary inference shifting to the defendant the burden of going forward with evidence. Evidentiary inferences and presumptions such as this are unaffected by Mullaney. State v. Hales, 32 N.C. App. 729, 233 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 732, 235 S.E.2d 782 (1977).

Presumption is Evidential Fact. — The presumption, however, is one of fact only and is to be considered by the jury merely as an evidential fact along with other evidence in determining the defendant's guilt. State v. Foster, 268 N.C. 480, 151 S.E.2d 62 (1966).

The presumption that the possessor is the thief, which arises from the possession of stolen goods, is to be considered by the jury merely as an evidential fact, along with the other evidence in the case, in determining whether the State has carried the burden of satisfying the jury beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976); State v. Maines, 301 N.C. 669, 273 S.E.2d 289 (1981).

The presumption that the possessor is the thief which arises from the possession of stolen goods is a presumption of fact and not of law. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

The presumption of recent possession, or inference as it is more properly called, is one of fact and not of law. The inference derived from recent possession is to be considered by the jury merely as an evidentiary fact, along with the other evidence in the case, in determining whether the State has carried the burden of satisfying the jury beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt. State v. Fair, 291 N.C. 171, 229 S.E.2d 189 (1976).

However, recent possession is not evidence of guilt; it just raises an inference that will permit the case to go to the jury under proper instructions from the court. State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976).

Inference Insufficient to Support Conviction. — Evidence was insufficient to support the conviction of defendant of felonious breaking and entering and larceny under the doctrine of possession of recently stolen property where it tended to show that defendant was one of four persons in a car which contained stolen goods; the State did not demonstrate a criminal conspiracy among the four; only one of the four claimed a possessory interest in the stolen goods; that person also owned the car; in order to convict defendant, the jury must infer that he possessed the goods from the mere fact of driving with the owner of the car seated beside him, and then infer he was the thief that stole them based on the possession of recently stolen goods, and such a conviction based on stacked inferences could not stand. State v. Maines, 301 N.C. 669, 273 S.E.2d 289 (1981).

D. Instructions.

Larceny. — Where a defendant is indicted for the larceny of property of the value of more than $200 (now $400), except in those instances where this section does not apply, it is incumbent upon the trial judge to instruct the jury, if they find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of larceny but fail to find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the value of the stolen property exceeds $200 (now $400), the jury should return a verdict of guilty of larceny of property of a value not exceeding $200 (now $400). State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962).

When there is evidence tending to show the value of the stolen goods was more than $200 (now $400) and other evidence tending to show the value thereof was $200 (now $400) or less, the jury should be instructed that if they find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of larceny and that the value of the stolen property was more than $200 (now $400), it would be their duty to return a verdict of guilty of felony-larceny; however, if they find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of larceny but fail to find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the value of the stolen goods was more than $200 (now $400), it would be their duty to return a verdict of guilty of misdemeanor-larceny. State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Although an indictment charges, and all the evidence tends to show, that the value of the stolen property was more than $200 (now $400), the jury, under appropriate instructions, must find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that this is the fact. In such case, there is no basis, and it is inappropriate, for the court to instruct the jury with reference to a verdict of guilty of misdemeanor-larceny. State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

The court should submit to the jury the issue of defendant's guilt of misdemeanor-larceny, where the evidence of the State does not show the value of the property that was taken. State v. Walker, 6 N.C. App. 740, 171 S.E.2d 91 (1969).

Trial judges should bear in mind that instructions requiring proof beyond a reasonable doubt and jury findings as to all essential elements thereof are prerequisite to a conviction of felony-larceny. State v. Benfield, 278 N.C. 199, 179 S.E.2d 388 (1971).

As to a possible verdict of misdemeanor-larceny, it is well-established that where there is no evidence from which it can be inferred that the value of the stolen property was less than $200 (now $400), defendant is not entitled to an instruction with respect to larceny of property of a value less than $200 (now $400). State v. Reese, 31 N.C. App. 575, 230 S.E.2d 213 (1976).

Receiving Stolen Property. — Where the trial judge clearly charged the jury in substance that if it found beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence that defendant was guilty of receiving stolen property (certain guns), knowing it to have been stolen, as he had defined the offense for it, and found beyond a reasonable doubt that the guns were of a value of $600, then it would return a verdict of guilty as charged, but if under those circumstances it found the guns were of a value of $200 (now $400) or less, then it would return a verdict of guilty of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen, of a value of $200 (now $400) or less, a misdemeanor, this conforms to the decision in State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962). State v. Matthews, 267 N.C. 244, 148 S.E.2d 38 (1966).

What is meant by "felonious intent" is a matter for the court to explain to the jury and no exact words are required to instruct the jury as to its meaning. State v. Wesson, 16 N.C. App. 683, 193 S.E.2d 425 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 675, 194 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

E. Verdict.

Verdict Need Not Fix Precise Value of Stolen Property. — The final sentence of this section does not require that the jury fix the precise value of the stolen property. The only issue of legal significance is whether the value thereof exceeds $200 (now $400). When the jury is properly instructed, the verdict necessarily determines whether the value of the stolen property exceeds $200 (now $400). State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962).

This section does not require that the jury fix the precise value of the stolen property. The only issue of legal significance is whether the value thereof exceeds $200 (now $400). State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Except in Cases of Doubt. — The portion of this section which expressly states, "In all cases of doubt the jury shall in its verdict fix the value of the property stolen," means exactly what it says, and where all the evidence is to the effect that the stolen property had a value many times in excess of $200 (now $400), and there is no evidence or contention to the contrary, the trial court is under no legal obligation to require the jury to fix the value of the stolen property. State v. Brown, 267 N.C. 189, 147 S.E.2d 916 (1966), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Where the bill upon which the defendant was tried charged the defendant with the larceny of a 1961 Chevrolet automobile of the value of $1200 and the evidence amply supported the charge, and there was no evidence to the contrary, it was unnecessary upon such a factual situation to require the jury to find that a 1961 Chevrolet automobile of the value of $1200 was worth more than $200 (now $400). State v. Brown, 267 N.C. 189, 147 S.E.2d 916 (1966), overruled on other grounds, 275 N.C. 432, 168 S.E.2d 380 (1969).

Section 15A-1237(a) does not require that a verdict in a felonious larceny case establish the value of the allegedly stolen property. State v. Jefferies, 41 N.C. App. 95, 254 S.E.2d 550, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Verdict Where Court Failed to Instruct as to Duty to Find Value of Property. — A verdict finding the defendant guilty as charged in the bill of indictment must be considered as a verdict of guilty of larceny of personal property having a value of $200 (now $400) or less, a misdemeanor, where the trial court failed to instruct the jury as to their duty to fix the value of the property. State v. Walker, 6 N.C. App. 740, 171 S.E.2d 91 (1969).

Where, absent a finding of guilty of the breaking and entering, a verdict of guilty of larceny of property of a value of more than $200.00 (now $400) (a felony), or of guilty of larceny of property of a value of $200.00 (now $400) or less (a misdemeanor), was permissible under appropriate instructions, but the jury was not instructed as to its duty to fix the value of the property in question, the verdict must be considered as a verdict of guilty of larceny of property of a value of $200.00 (now $400) or less (a misdemeanor). State v. Teel, 20 N.C. App. 398, 201 S.E.2d 733 (1974).

Finding. — A finding that defendant stole property of the value of more than $50 was not a finding that the property had a value of more than $100 (now $400). State v. Williams, 235 N.C. 429, 70 S.E.2d 1 (1952).

Acquittal of Breaking and Entering Does Not Preclude Conviction of Larceny. — Where trial proceeded on the theory that defendant was guilty, if at all, as an aider and abettor of two other principal perpetrators, a not guilty verdict on a count of breaking and entering is not necessarily a finding by the jury that larceny was not committed by defendant pursuant to a breaking. It could be a finding simply that defendant was not an aider and abettor on the breaking count. The jury could, therefore, consistently with its verdict on the breaking count find that felonious larceny was committed pursuant to a breaking by the principal perpetrators and defendant, by reason of aiding and abetting, was guilty of the felony as a principal in the second degree, provided, of course, this theory of the case was presented to them in the trial judge's instructions. State v. Curry, 288 N.C. 312, 218 S.E.2d 374 (1975).

F. Sentencing.

Felony. — The punishment for larceny from the person may be for as much as ten years in State prison. State v. Massey, 273 N.C. 721, 161 S.E.2d 103 (1968).

The punishment for larceny from the person may include imprisonment for a term of ten years. State v. Bowers, 273 N.C. 652, 161 S.E.2d 11 (1968).

The maximum punishment is ten years' imprisonment for the felony of larceny of property from a building referred to in this section by breaking or entering therein with intent to steal. State v. Reed, 4 N.C. App. 109, 165 S.E.2d 674 (1969).

Misdemeanor. — A plea of guilty to the larceny of a sum less than $200 (now $400) does not support a sentence of ten years' imprisonment, and the imposition of such sentence must be vacated. State v. Davis, 267 N.C. 126, 147 S.E.2d 570 (1966).

The maximum imprisonment for the misdemeanor of larceny is two years. State v. Barber, 5 N.C. App. 126, 167 S.E.2d 883 (1969).

Where an indictment charges larceny of property of the value of $200 (now $400) or less, but contains no allegation the larceny was from a building by breaking and entering, the crime charged is a misdemeanor for which the maximum prison sentence is two years, notwithstanding all the evidence tends to show the larceny was accomplished by means of a felonious breaking and entering. State v. Bowers, 273 N.C. 652, 161 S.E.2d 11 (1968).

Where an indictment charges larceny of $200 (now $400) or less, but does not contain allegations that the larceny was from a building by breaking and entering, the punishment cannot exceed two years in prison, even though all the evidence tends to show the larceny was accomplished by a felonious breaking and entering. State v. Massey, 273 N.C. 721, 161 S.E.2d 103 (1968).

The punishment upon conviction of the misdemeanor of larceny may not exceed two years. State v. Cleary, 9 N.C. App. 189, 175 S.E.2d 749 (1970).

Not Cruel and Unusual Punishment. — A sentence of twenty-five years imprisonment, imposed after a plea of guilty to four indictments charging felonious breaking and entering and larceny in violation of § 14-54 and this section, did not exceed the statutory maximum and was not cruel and unusual punishment in the constitutional sense. State v. Greer, 270 N.C. 143, 153 S.E.2d 849 (1967).

The imposition of a sentence of imprisonment of seven to nine years upon plea of nolo contendere to the offenses of breaking and entering and larceny is not cruel or unusual punishment in a constitutional sense. State v. Robinson, 271 N.C. 448, 156 S.E.2d 854 (1967).

Consolidated Counts. — Where defendant was tried and convicted upon an indictment charging felonious breaking and entering and misdemeanor-larceny, and both counts were consolidated for judgment, the fact that the one sentence imposed is in excess of that permissible upon conviction of the misdemeanor is immaterial and is not prejudicial where it does not exceed that permitted upon conviction of the felony. State v. Cleary, 9 N.C. App. 189, 175 S.E.2d 749 (1970).

§ 14-72.1. Concealment of merchandise in mercantile establishments.

(a) Whoever, without authority, willfully conceals the goods or merchandise of any store, not theretofore purchased by such person, while still upon the premises of such store, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00), or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Such goods or merchandise found concealed upon or about the person and which have not theretofore been purchased by such person shall be prima facie evidence of a willful concealment.

(b) Any person who has been found guilty of an offense under either subsection (a) or subsection (d) of this section and who is later found guilty of an offense under either subsection (a) or subsection (d) of this section shall be guilty of a general misdemeanor and shall be punished in the discretion of the court.

(c) A merchant, or his agent or employee, or a peace officer who detains or causes the arrest of any person shall not be held civilly liable for detention, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, or false arrest of the person detained or arrested, where such detention is in a reasonable manner for a reasonable length of time, if in detaining or in causing the arrest of such person, the merchant, or his agent or employee, or the peace officer had at the time of the detention or arrest probable cause to believe that the person committed the offense created by this section. If the person being detained by the merchant, or his agent or employee, is a minor 16 years of age or younger, the merchant or his agent or employee, shall call or notify, or make a reasonable effort to call or notify the parent or guardian of the minor, during the period of detention.

(d) Whoever, without authority, willfully transfers any price tag from goods or merchandise to other goods or merchandise having a higher selling price or marks said goods at a lower price or substitutes or superimposes thereon a false price tag and then presents said goods or merchandise for purchase shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00) or by imprisonment for not more than six months or by both fine and imprisonment.

Nothing herein shall be construed to provide that the mere possession of goods or the production by shoppers of improperly priced merchandise for checkout shall constitute prima facie evidence of guilt. (1957, c. 301; 1971, c. 238; 1973, c. 457, ss. 1, 2.)

CASE NOTES

This section violates neither N.C. Const., Art. I, § 17, (now Art. I, § 19) nor the due process clauses of the federal Constitution, by reason of vagueness and uncertainty, and of not informing a person of ordinary intelligence with reasonable precision of the acts it prohibits. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961).

It Is Sufficiently Definite. — This section is sufficiently definite to guide the judge in its application and the lawyer in defending one charged with its violation. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961).

This section defines with sufficient clarity and definiteness the acts which are penalized, and informs a person of ordinary intelligence with reasonable precision what acts it intends to prohibit so that he may know what acts he should avoid, in order that he may not "cross the line" and bring himself within its penalties. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961).

And Omits No Essential Provisions. — This section omits no essential provisions which go to impress the inhibited acts committed as being wrongful and criminal. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961).

And Has a Substantial Relation to the End Sought to Be Accomplished. — It is manifest that this section has a rational, real and substantial relation to the end sought to be accomplished, which is the protection of our merchants from shoplifting, and that such was the manifest purpose and design of the legislation. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961).

Act May Be Made Criminal Irrespective of Intent. — It is within the power of the legislature to declare an act criminal irrespective of the intent of the doer of the act. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961).

The statutory offense of shoplifting is very limited in its application, particularly with respect to the owner or possessor of the property covered. State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 652, 197 S.E.2d 614, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973).

This section, due to its narrow scope, would not cover property in a residence, bank, school or church — only "the goods or merchandise of any store." State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 652, 197 S.E.2d 614, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973).

Elements of Offense. — The statutory offense created by this section is composed of four essential elements: Whoever (1) without authority, (2) willfully conceals the goods or merchandise of any store, (3) not theretofore purchased by such person, (4) while still upon the premises of the store, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961); State v. Watts, 31 N.C. App. 513, 229 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

Felonious or Criminal Intent Is Not a Necessary Element. — It is manifest from the language of this section, in view of its manifest purpose and design, that the legislature intended that a felonious intent or a criminal intent should not be a necessary element of the statutory crime of shoplifting. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961).

Willful Concealment. — "Willfully conceals" as used in this section means that the concealing is done under the circumstances set forth in the statute voluntarily, intentionally, purposely and deliberately, indicating a purpose to do it without authority, and in violation of law, and this is an essential element of the statutory offense of shoplifting. State v. Hales, 256 N.C. 27, 122 S.E.2d 768 (1961); State v. Watts, 31 N.C. App. 513, 229 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

Ownership Need Not Be Alleged. — Although a warrant for larceny which fails to allege the ownership of the property either in a natural person or a legal entity capable of owning property is fatally defective the rule is not applicable to the shoplifting statute. State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 652, 197 S.E.2d 614, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973).

While drafters of warrants charging a violation of this statute would be well advised to allege whether the merchandising firm is a natural person or a corporation, the failure to do so did not here render the warrant fatally defective. State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 652, 197 S.E.2d 614, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973).

Evidence Sufficient to Convict. — See State v. Watts, 31 N.C. App. 513, 229 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

§ 14-72.2. Unauthorized use of a motor-propelled conveyance.

(a) A person is guilty of an offense under this section if, without the express or implied consent of the owner or person in lawful possession, he takes or operates an aircraft, motorboat, motor vehicle, or other motor-propelled conveyance of another.

(b) Unauthorized use of an aircraft is a Class I felony. All other unauthorized use of a motor-propelled conveyance is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine, imprisonment not to exceed two years, or both, in the discretion of the court.

(c) Unauthorized use of a motor-propelled conveyance shall be a lesser-included offense of unauthorized use of an aircraft.

(d) As used in this section, "owner" means any person with a property interest in the motor-propelled conveyance. (1973, c. 1330, s. 38; 1977, c. 919; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "Class I felony" for "felony punishable by a fine, imprisonment not to exceed five years, or both, in the discretion of the court" at the end of the first sentence of subsection (b). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under former § 20-105.

Constitutionality. — See State v. Graham, 32 N.C. App. 601, 233 S.E.2d 615 (1977), decided prior to the 1977 amendment.

Lesser Included Offense of Larceny. — All of the essential elements of the crime of unauthorized use of a conveyance are included in larceny, § 14-72, and it may be a lesser included offense of larceny where there is evidence to support the charge. State v. Ross, 46 N.C. App. 338, 264 S.E.2d 742 (1980).

Inference Arising from Unlawful Possession of Vehicle. — See State v. Frazier, 268 N.C. 249, 150 S.E.2d 431 (1966); State v. Hayes, 273 N.C. 712, 161 S.E.2d 185 (1968).

Possession of One Participant Is the Possession of All. — Possession may be personal and exclusive, although it is the joint possession of two or more persons, if they are shown to have acted in concert, or to have been particeps criminis, the possession of one participant being the possession of all. State v. Frazier, 268 N.C. 249, 150 S.E.2d 431 (1966).

Immediate flight of both defendants, without explanation, at mere approach of officers may be considered more than slight corroborative evidence of relation between their then unlawful possession and the unlawful removal of automobile from parking lot. State v. Frazier, 268 N.C. 249, 150 S.E.2d 431 (1966).

Applied in Ford Marketing Corp. v. National Grange Mut. Ins. Co., 33 N.C. App. 297, 235 S.E.2d 82 (1977); State v. Herman, 45 N.C. App. 711, 264 S.E.2d 122 (1980).

§ 14-73. Jurisdiction of the superior courts in cases of larceny and receiving stolen goods.

The superior courts shall have exclusive jurisdiction of the trial of all cases of the larceny of property, or the receiving of stolen goods knowing them to be stolen, of the value of more than four hundred dollars ($400.00). (1913, c. 118, s. 2; C.S., s. 4252; 1941, c. 178, s. 2; 1949, c. 145, s. 3; 1961, c. 39, s. 2; 1979, c. 408, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective Jan. 1, 1980, substituted "four hundred dollars ($400.00)" for "two hundred dollars" at the end of this section.

Session Laws 1979, c. 408, s. 3, provides: "This act shall become effective on January 1, 1980, and applies to all crimes committed on or after that date."

§ 14-73.1. Petty misdemeanors.

The offenses of larceny and the receiving of stolen goods knowing the same to have been stolen, which are made misdemeanors by Article 16, Subchapter V, Chapter 14 of the General Statutes, as amended, are hereby declared to be petty misdemeanors. (1949, c. 145, s. 4; 1973, c. 108, s. 1.)

§ 14-74. Larceny by servants and other employees.

If any servant or other employee, to whom any money, goods or other chattels, or any of the articles, securities or choses in action mentioned in the following section [G.S. 14-75], by his master shall be delivered safely to be kept to the use of his master, shall withdraw himself from his master and go away with such money, goods or other chattels, or any of the articles, securities or choses in action mentioned as aforesaid, or any part thereof, with intent to steal the same and defraud his master thereof, contrary to the trust and confidence in him reposed by his said master; or if any servant, being in the service of his master, without the assent of his master, shall embezzle such money, goods or other chattels, or any of the articles, securities or choses in action mentioned as aforesaid, or any part thereof, or otherwise convert the same to his own use, with like purpose to steal them, or to defraud his master thereof, the servant so offending shall be punished as a Class H felon: Provided, that nothing contained in this section shall extend to apprentices or servants within the age of 16 years. (21 Hen. VIII, c. 7, ss. 1, 2; R. C., c. 34, s. 18; Code, s. 1065; Rev., s. 3499; C. S., s. 4253; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "fined or imprisoned in the State prison or county jail not less than four months nor more than ten years, at the discretion of the court" immediately preceding the proviso at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1; as to embezzlement, see § 14-90 et seq.

CASE NOTES

The purpose of this section was to make the conduct described therein a crime because it does not constitute the crime of common-law larceny. State v. Babb, 34 N.C. App. 336, 238 S.E.2d 308 (1977).

Larceny Not Lesser Included Offense. — Where defendant was charged with larceny by an employee he could not be convicted of the offense of larceny, since the two are wholly separate offenses, and each requires different evidentiary showings. In short, larceny is not a lesser included offense of larceny by an employee. State v. Daniels, 43 N.C. 556, 259 S.E.2d 396 (1979).

Servant Defined. — In a strict sense all employees are servants but the term servant is usually applied, and meant to apply to one of menial rank. State v. Higgins, 1 N.C. 36 (1792).

Trust Relation Necessary. — A person employed as a clerk, who takes goods from his employer's store and sends them to another at a distance to be sold cannot be convicted under this statute as there was no parting with possession by the owner which brought about a trust relation. State v. Higgins, 1 N.C. 36 (1792).

This section requires by its express terms that the larceny be committed in violation of a trust relationship between the employee and the employer. State v. Bullin, 34 N.C. App. 589, 239 S.E.2d 278 (1977).

And Must Be Alleged. — In an indictment under this section, it is necessary to allege that the property was received and held by the defendant in trust, or for the use of the owner, and beng so held it was feloniously converted or made way with by the servant or agent. State v. Wilson, 101 N.C. 730, 7 S.E. 872 (1888).

Value Is Immaterial. — This section does not believe its terms require that the property stolen reflect a minimum value in order for a violation thereof to constitute a felony. State v. Monk, 36 N.C. App. 337, 244 S.E.2d 186 (1978).

Dismissal under § 14-72 No Bar to Prosecution under this Section. — Since the element of trespass required in § 14-72 is not required for prosecution under this section, and the element of trust required under this section is not required in § 14-72, the dismissal in district court of a charge under § 14-72 cannot be considered a prior adjudication which would bar prosecution under this section. State v. Bullin, 34 N.C. App. 589, 239 S.E.2d 278 (1977).

Adequate Notice of Charge. — The defendant was adequately notified in the indictment that he would be put on trial for the embezzlement of certain nuts and bolts during a certain period of time where the crime alleged in the bill of indictment was embezzlement but the proof adduced at trial showed that the defendant aided and abetted another in the crime of embezzlement. He could not be misled or prejudiced by being convicted of a lower grade of the principal offense charged. State v. Lancaster, 37 N.C. App. 528, 246 S.E.2d 575, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 650, 248 S.E.2d 255 (1978).

Evidence Admissible. — In a prosecution of defendant for embezzlement of merchandise from his employer, the trial court did not err in admitting testimony concerning certain state's exhibits and in admitting the exhibits consisting of cigarettes, matches, soup, soap and hams, since the items and the circumstances under which they were found were sufficiently identified and described by the officer who retrieved them, and since the evidence was relevant to show that the crime of embezzlement was committed. State v. Bryant, 50 N.C. App. 139, 272 S.E.2d 916 (1980).

Applied in State v. Hauser, 257 N.C. 158, 125 S.E.2d 389 (1962); State v. Lovick, 42 N.C. App. 577, 257 S.E.2d 146 (1979).

§ 14-75. Larceny of chose in action.

If any person shall feloniously steal, take and carry away, or take by robbery, any bank note, check or other order for the payment of money issued by or drawn on any bank or other society or corporation within this State or within any of the United States, or any treasury warrant, debenture, certificate of stock or other public security, or certificate of stock in any corporation, or any order, bill of exchange, bond, promissory note or other obligation, either for the payment of money or for the delivery of specific articles, being the property of any other person, or of any corporation (notwithstanding any of the said particulars may be termed in law a chose in action), such felonious stealing, taking and carrying away, or taking by robbery, shall be a crime of the same nature and degree and in the same manner as it would have been if the offender had feloniously stolen, or taken by robbery money, goods or property of the same value, and the offender for every such offense shall suffer the same punishment and be subject to the same pains, penalties and disabilities as he should or might have suffered if he had feloniously stolen or taken by robbery money, goods or other property of such value. (1811, c. 814, s. 1; R. C., c. 34, s. 20; Code, s. 1064; Rev., s. 3498; C. S., s. 4254; 1945, c. 635.)

Cross References. — As to description of stoeln money in indictment, see § 15-149.

CASE NOTES

Treasury Notes. — Treasury notes issued by the United States Treasury Department are covered by this statute as they are "public securities." Although a class of securities issued after the enactment of the statute they are subject to larceny the same as any other note issued after the enactment. State v. Thompson, 71 N.C. 146 (1874).

Due Bills. — While a "due bill" is not a promissory note, and negotiable by endorsement, it is within the meaning of the words, "or other obligation," in this section. The larceny of such a paper is indictable. State v. Campbell, 103 N.C. 344, 9 S.E. 410 (1889).

A pension check on the United States Treasury comes under this section. State v. Bishop, 98 N.C. 773, 4 S.E. 357 (1887).

Charter of Bank Issuing Immaterial. — If a stolen note was issued by a bank within one of the United States, it is within the letter of the act, and there cannot be the slightest doubt but that it is also within its spirit and meaning. The act is silent as to the authority by which the bank must be chartered, and the mischief of stealing one of its notes from a bona fide holder is the same, whether it derives its existence from an act of Congress or from the legislature of New York. State v. Banks, 61 N.C. 577 (1868).

Larceny of the Instrument and Paper Distinguished. — When a person is indicted for stealing a promissory note or any other chose in action, it is upon the State to prove the larceny of the instrument, and proof of larceny of a piece of paper is not sufficient. If the instrument has been paid before the alleged felonious taking, the indictment charging only larceny of a chose in action is not sufficient to convict. State v. Campbell, 103 N.C. 344, 9 S.E. 410 (1889).

Sufficient Description. — An indictment for larceny which describes the thing stolen, as "one promissory note issued by the Treasury Department of the government of the United States for the payment of one dollar," is in that respect sufficient. State v. Fulford, 61 N.C. 563 (1868).

Amount Must Be Set Out. — An indictment for stealing a bank note is sufficient if it states the amount of the note and what bank it was drawn on. Some cases hold that the mere statement of the amount of the note is sufficient description. State v. Rout, 10 N.C. 618 (1825).

Cited in State v. Freeman, 88 N.C. 469 (1883).

§ 14-75.1. Larceny of secret technical processes.

Any person who steals property consisting of a sample, culture, microorganism, specimen, record, recording, document, drawing, or any other article, material, device, or substance which constitutes, represents, evidences, reflects, or records a secret scientific or technical process, invention, formula, or any phase or part thereof shall be punished as a Class H felon. A process, invention, or formula is "secret" when it is not, and is not intended to be, available to anyone other than the owner thereof or selected persons having access thereto for limited purposes with his consent, and when it accords or may accord the owner an advantage over competitors or other persons who do not have knowledge or the benefit thereof. (1967, c. 1175; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to an employee's right to certain inventions, see § 66-57.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment not exceeding four years or by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars ($5,000), or by both" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-76. Larceny, mutilation, or destruction of public records and papers.

If any person shall steal, or for any fraudulent purpose shall take from its place of deposit for the time being, or from any person having the lawful custody thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously obliterate, injure or destroy any record, writ, return, panel, process, interrogatory, deposition, affidavit, rule, order or warrant of attorney or any original document whatsoever, of or belonging to any court of record, or relating to any matter, civil or criminal, begun, pending or terminated in any such court, or any bill, answer, interrogatory, deposition, affidavit, order or decree or any original document whatsoever, of or belonging to any court or relating to any cause or matter begun, pending or terminated in any such court, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; and in any indictment for such offense it shall not be necessary to allege that the article, in respect to which the offense is committed, is the property of any person or that the same is of any value. If any person shall steal or for any fraudulent purpose shall take from the register's office, or from any person having the lawful custody thereof, or shall unlawfully and willfully obliterate, injure or destroy any book wherein deeds or other instruments of writing are registered, or any other book of registration or record required to be kept by the register of deeds or shall unlawfully destroy, obliterate, deface or remove any records of proceedings of the board of county commissioners, or unlawfully and fraudulently abstract any record, receipt, order or voucher or other paper writing required to be kept by the clerk of the board of commissioners of any county, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (8 Hen. VI, c. 12, s. 3; R. C., c. 34, s. 31; 1881, c. 17; Code, s. 1071; Rev., s. 3508; C. S., s. 4255.)

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — See State v. West, 31 N.C. App. 431, 229 S.E.2d 826 (1976), aff'd, 293 N.C. 18, 235 S.E.2d 150 (1977).

Offense Is a Felony. — Nonmenclature does not always determine the grade or class of a crime; a felony is a crime which is or may be punishable either by death or by imprisonment in the State prison and any other crime is a misdemeanor. Calling an offense a misdemeanor does not make it so when the punishment imposed makes it a felony and construed with § 14-3 the offense prescribed by this section is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, and therefore a felony. State v. Harwood, 206 N.C. 87, 173 S.E. 24 (1934).

Injury to Tax Books. — An indictment will lie under this section for changing, injuring or obliterating tax books, and the oral testimony of the register of deeds is competent to show the amount of the abstract made by him and sent to the auditor, the changed amount, and the acts of the deputy sheriff, as circumstances to show his guilt. State v. Gouge, 157 N.C. 602, 72 S.E. 994 (1911).

Evidence Insufficient. — On a trial under this section for the destruction of certain pages of a book in the office of the register of deeds, wherein the defendant's interest in so doing was shown, it was required of the State to show that the offense was committed on the day the defendant had an opportunity to commit the offense, and a margin of several weeks, in which the offense might have been committed, during which time the books were open to the public generally, was insufficient evidence to be submitted to the jury, and defendant's motion as of nonsuit should have been allowed. State v. Swinson, 196 N.C. 100, 144 S.E. 555 (1928).

Quoted in State v. Bellar, 16 N.C. App. 339, 192 S.E.2d 86 (1972).

§ 14-76.1. Mutilation or defacement of records and papers in the North Carolina State Archives.

If any person shall willfully or maliciously obliterate, injure, deface, or alter any record or paper in the custody of the North Carolina State Archives as defined by G.S. 121-2(7) and 121-2(8), he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction imprisoned for a term not exceeding two years or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1,000) or both. The provisions of this section do not apply to employees of the Department of Cultural Resources who may destroy any accessioned records or papers that are approved for destruction by the North Carolina Historical Commission pursuant to the authority contained in G.S. 121-4(12). (1975, c. 696, s. 3.)

§ 14-77. Larceny, concealment or destruction of wills.

If any person, either during the life of the testator or after his death, shall steal or, for any fraudulent purpose, shall destroy or conceal any will, codicil or other testamentary instrument, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (R. C., c. 34, s. 32; Code, s. 1072; Rev., s. 3510; C. S., s. 4256.)

Cross References. — As to clerk's power to compel production of will when one in whose custody it is refuses to produce it, see § 31-15.

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — Obviously the basis for making the fraudulent suppression of a will a crime as provided by this section is the fact that it is the policy of the law that wills should be probated, and that the rights of the parties in cases of dispute should be openly arrived at according to the orderly process of law. Wells v. Odum, 207 N.C. 226, 176 S.E. 563 (1934).

A family settlement agreement was supported by consideration and was not void as against public policy because it included an agreement not to probate a codicil to testatrix's will. Holt v. Holt, 47 N.C. App. 618, 267 S.E.2d 711 (1980).

§ 14-78. Larceny of ungathered crops.

If any person shall steal or feloniously take and carry away any maize, corn, wheat, rice or other grain, or any cotton, tobacco, potatoes, peanuts, pulse, fruit, vegetable or other product cultivated for food or market, growing, standing or remaining ungathered in any field or ground, he shall be guilty of larceny, and shall be punished accordingly, such punishment to include a fine of not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00). (1811, c. 816, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 21; 1868-9, c. 251; Code, s. 1069; Rev., s. 3503; C. S., s. 4257; 1975, c. 697.)

CASE NOTES

At Common Law. — By the common law, larceny cannot be committed of things which savor of the realty, and are at the time they are taken a part of the freehold, such as corn and the produce of land. State v. Foy, 82 N.C. 679 (1880); State v. Thompson, 93 N.C. 537 (1885).

What Indictment Must Allege. — On trial of an indictment for larceny charging the defendant with stealing "seed cotton and lint cotton," evidence that defendant took the gleanings of the cotton from the field, was not admissible. To render such evidence competent, the indictment should have been framed under the statute, and described the crop as "growing, standing or ungathered" in the field, and cultivated for food or market. State v. Bragg, 86 N.C. 687 (1882).

In the case of State v. Liles, 78 N.C. 496 (1878), the defendant was indicted for the larceny of figs, "remaining ungathered in a certain field," etc., and the words "cultivated for food or market," were omitted and it was held that the indictment, for that reason, was fatally defective. State v. Thompson, 93 N.C. 537 (1885).

Indictment Must Conclude against the Statute. — An indictment for larceny of growing cabbage must conclude against the statute, and a failure to so conclude makes the indictment one at common law. As the offense at common law was not larceny but only a civil trespass, there can be no judgment. State v. Foy, 82 N.C. 679 (1880).

Applies to All Crops. — This section applies to any growing crops cultivated for food or market, and is not restricted to serveral articles specifically named. State v. Ballard, 97 N.C. 443, 1 S.E. 685 (1887).

§ 14-78.1. Trading for corn without permission of owner of premises.

Any person engaged in traveling from house to house or from place to place, buying or trading for corn, without the permission of the landowner upon whose premises such buying or trading is conducted, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. This section shall apply only to the counties of Bertie, Columbus, Craven, Edgecombe, Greene, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Perquimans, Robeson, Sampson, Wake, Warren, Wayne and Wilson. (1951, c. 30; 1955, c. 684; 1957, c. 356; 1969, c. 1224, s. 4.)

§ 14-79. Larceny of ginseng.

If any person shall take and carry away, or shall aid in taking or carrying away, any ginseng growing upon the lands of another person, with intent to steal the same, he shall be punished as a Class I felon: Provided, that such ginseng, at the time the same is taken, shall be in beds and the land upon which such beds are located shall be surrounded by a lawful fence. (1905, c. 211; Rev., s. 3502; C. S., s. 4258; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to digging ginseng out of season on the lands of another, § 14-392.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not less than two years nor more than five years, in the discretion of the court" near the middle of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-80. Larceny of wood and other property from land.

If any person, not being the present owner or bona fide claimant thereof, shall willfully and unlawfully enter upon the lands of another, carrying off or being engaged in carrying off any wood or other kind of property whatsoever, growing or being thereon, the same being the property of the owner of the premises, or under his control, keeping or care, such person shall, if the act be done with felonious intent, be guilty of larceny, and punished as for that offense; and if not done with such intent, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1866, c. 60; Code, s. 1070; Rev., s. 3511; C. S., s. 4259.)

Cross References. — As to cutting, injuring, or removing another's timber, see § 14-135. As to larceny of branded timber, see §§ 80-21 and 80-22.

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — This section was enacted immediately after the Civil War to protect landowners from aimless wanderers who entered land without force, but often did great damage. It was not intended to prevent entry by person who had an honest claim to the land, nor was it intended to apply when force was employed. State v. Crawley, 103 N.C. 353, 9 S.E. 409 (1889). It was intended to prevent the willful and unlawful taking from the land of another property that was not by common law or prior statute subject to larceny. State v. Vosburg, 111 N.C. 718, 16 S.E. 392 (1892).

This section was enacted to eliminate a defect in the common-law rule and to extend it so as to make chattels real, such as growing trees, plants, minerals, metals and fences, connected in some way with the land, the subject of larceny. The obvious intent of the act was to prevent the willful and unlawful entry upon the land of another and the taking and carrying away of such articles as were not, at common law or by previous statute, the subject of larceny. State v. Jackson, 218 N.C. 373, 11 S.E.2d 149 (1940).

This section was enacted in 1866, immediately after the Civil War, to suppress aimless wanderers, from entering land and doing great damage. State v. Andrews, 11 N.C. App. 341, 181 S.E.2d 142 (1971).

Prior to the enactment of this section, landowners had little or no protection against the willful and unlawful taking from their land property which was not, either by common law or previous statute, the subject of larceny. State v. Andrews, 11 N.C. App. 341, 181 S.E.2d 142 (1971).

No latitude of construction is permitted in the interpretation of a penal statute. This section is highly penal in character, and the court is not at liberty to extend its import by implication or equitable construction to include an offense not clearly described. State v. Andrews, 11 N.C. App. 341, 181 S.E.2d 142 (1971).

The word "whatsoever" shows a clear intent of the legislature to make it general in its application. State v. Beck, 141 N.C. 829, 53 S.E. 843 (1906).

Trespass upon land is an essential element of the offense hereby created. State v. Jackson, 218 N.C. 373, 11 S.E.2d 149 (1940); State v. Gaddy, 16 N.C. App. 436, 192 S.E.2d 18 (1972).

Bona Fide Claimants Not Liable. — One having title to the land or a bona fide claim thereto is not liable under this section by its express terms. One who enters as a servant of a bona fide claimant or one having title is not subject to the application of this section as the protection afforded the master extends to his servant. State v. Boyce, 109 N.C. 739, 14 S.E. 98 (1891).

A tenant of seven acres being a part of a tract of thirty-five acres claimed by the landlord, when expressly prohibited from cutting timber on any of the tract except the seven acres on which he is a tenant, could as the servant of a third person claiming adversely go on the other part of the tract and cut timber, and he would not be estopped to deny his landlord's title except as to the seven acres leased to him, nor would he be liable under this section if the person whose servant he had been could prove his title or bona fide claim. State v. Boyce, 109 N.C. 739, 14 S.E. 98 (1891).

Claim of Interest Must Be Founded. — An entry, without a survey and grant from the State was not sufficient to support a claim to the land, and was no defense to an indictment under this section. State v. Calloway, 119 N.C. 864, 26 S.E. 46 (1896).

Warrant Not Charging Offense. — A warrant charging that defendant unlawfully and willfully authorized and directed his employee to enter upon the lands of another and carry off sand and gravel therefrom, without alleging what, if anything, the employee did pursuant to such authorization, did not charge a criminal offense. State v. Everett, 244 N.C. 596, 94 S.E.2d 576 (1956).

Indictment Must Allege That Property Taken Was Property of Landowner. — The particularly peculiar wording of this section clearly requires that the indictment allege that the property taken was the property of the owner of the land. State v. Andrews, 11 N.C. App. 341, 181 S.E.2d 142 (1971).

Tombstones. — Defendant was charged with feloniously stealing and carrying away one tombstone erected at the grave of a deceased person, being the goods and chattels of a named person. The court instructed the jury that the offense charged was larceny, which is the wrongful and felonious taking and carrying away of personal property of some value belonging to another, with felonious intent. Held: Neither the indictment nor the theory of trial referred to trespass constituting an element of the statutory crime of larceny of chattels real, nor to the distinction of taking with, and taking without felonious intent set forth in this section, and there was a fatal variance between the indictment for common-law larceny and the proof of the statutory larceny of a chattel real, and defendant's motion to nonsuit should have been granted. State v. Jackson, 218 N.C. 373, 11 S.E.2d 149 (1940).

Turpentine which has flowed down trees into boxes made to catch it, and is in a state to be dipped out, is a subject of larceny. State v. Moore, 33 N.C. 70 (1850); State v. King, 98 N.C. 648, 4 S.E. 44 (1887).

Brass Rails from Stationary Engine. — The taking of a brass rail from around an engine that is stationary is larceny under this section. State v. Beck, 141 N.C. 829, 53 S.E. 843 (1906).

Money Not Included. — The penalty for entering the lands of another and carrying off wood or any other kind of property whatsoever growing or being thereon, does not contemplate or embrace such taking and carrying away of money; it means such property as was not, at common law, subject to larceny. State v. Vosburg, 111 N.C. 718, 16 S.E. 392 (1892).

Evidence Insufficient to Go to Jury. — Testimony that defendant was paid for dogwood delivered to a woodyard, without evidence that defendant actually delivered the wood with further evidence that dogwood taken from the yard fitted stumps on prosecuting witness land from which the wood had been wrongfully taken, was held insufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution under this section, even though the doctrine of recent possession be invoked, since the evidence did not disclose that defendant had been in possession of the wood. State v. Turner, 238 N.C. 411, 77 S.E.2d 782 (1953).

Instructions Held Error. — In a prosecution for larceny of property from land in violation of this section, the trial court erred in giving the jury instructions which would have permitted it to return a verdict of guilty upon a finding of the elements of common-law larceny. State v. Gaddy, 16 N.C. App. 436, 192 S.E.2d 18 (1972).

Cemetery Urns Unconnected to Land. — Where was nothing in the record to establish that the urns or vases stolen by defendant from cemeteries were so connected to the land that they could not be the subject of common-law larceny or that they were affixed to the soil as tombstones, or markers but rather were movable object of a decorative nature that were easily moved from the grave markers on which they rested, defendant was properly convicted of common-law larceny rather than the offenses under this section, or § 14-148. State v. Schultz, 34 N.C. App. 120, 237 S.E.2d 349 (1977), aff'd 294 N.C. 281, 240 S.E.2d 451 (1978).

§ 14-81. Larceny of horses, mules, swine, and cattle.

(a) Larceny of horses, mules, swine, or cattle is a Class H felony.

(b) In sentencing a person convicted of violating this section, the judge shall, as a minimum punishment, place a person on probation subject to the following conditions:

(1) A person must make restitution for the damage or loss caused by the larceny of the livestock, and

(2) A person must pay a fine of not less than the amount of the damages or loss caused by the larceny of the livestock.

(c) No provision in this section shall limit the authority of the judge to sentence the person convicted of violating this section to an active sentence. (1866-7, c. 62; 1868, c. 37, s. 1; 1879, c. 234, s. 2; Code, s. 1066; Rev., s. 3505; 1917, c. 162, s. 2; C. S., s. 4260; 1965, c. 621, s. 6; 1981, c. 664, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, rewrote this section, which formerly read, in its entirety: "If any person shall steal any horse, mare, gelding, or mule he shall be guilty of larceny and punished as provided by this Article for the crime of larceny."

CASE NOTES

Taking with Belief of Interest. — One taking a mule from the stable of another at night and without the consent of the owner is not guilty of larceny if he believed at the time when he took the mule that he had an interest in it. State v. Thompson, 95 N.C. 596 (1886).

Same — Question for a Jury. — One who takes a mule from the stable of another in a manner indicating felonious purpose but under a claim of interest should have the question of his act being under a bona fide claim submitted to the jury, and a charge that if the taking was not under a bona fide belief that he had a property or interest in the mule he would be guilty of larceny was not error. State v. Thompson, 95 N.C. 596 (1886).

Joinder with Charge of Receiving Stolen Goods. — An indictment for horse stealing concluded at common law is punishable as petit larceny. If there are two counts and the second is for receiving stolen goods and concludes against the statute, the punishment for the two is the same and they may be joined, but on conviction a sentence of ten years is all that can be given. State v. Lawrence, 81 N.C. 522 (1879).

§ 14-82. Taking horses or mules for temporary purposes.

If any person shall unlawfully take and carry away any horse, gelding, mare or mule, the property of another person, secretly and against the will of the owner of such property, with intent to deprive the owner of the special or temporary use of the same, or with the intent to use such property for a special or temporary purpose, the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1879, c. 234, s. 1; Code, s. 1067; Rev., s. 3509; 1913, c. 11; C. S., s. 4261; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Indictment. — An indictment for stealing the temporary use of a horse in violation of this section was not defective because it charged the stealing of the temporary use of a buggy also. State v. Darden, 117 N.C. 697, 23 S.E. 106 (1895).

Employee Liable. — An occasional employee, who took the employer's mule at night and drove it off without the knowledge or consent of the employer, was guilty of a tortious conversion, and an act indictable under this section; and where the mule died in his possession he was liable for its value, at least in the absence of any evidence in support of his claim that the death was accidental. Clark v. Whitehurst, 171 N.C. 1, 86 S.E. 78 (1915).

§ 14-84. Larceny of dogs misdemeanor.

The larceny of any dog upon which a license tax has or has not been paid shall be a misdemeanor. Any person convicted of a larceny of any dog shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court. (1919, c. 116, s. 9; C. S., 4263; 1955, c. 804.)

Cross References. — As to dogs, when listed for taxes, becoming personal property, see § 67-15.

CASE NOTES

Applied in Development Assocs. v. Wake County Bd. of Adjustment, 48 N.C. App. 541, 269 S.E.2d 700 (1980).

§ 14-85. Pursuing or injuring livestock with intent to steal.

If any person shall pursue, kill or wound any horse, mule, ass, jennet, cattle, hog, sheep or goat, the property of another, with the intent unlawfully and feloniously to convert the same to his own use, he shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be punishable, in all respects, as if convicted of larceny, though such animal may not have come into the actual possession of the person so offending. (1866, c. 57; Code, s. 1068; Rev., s. 3504; C. S., s. 4264.)

CASE NOTES

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment under this section for injury to livestock, in which the animal alleged to have been injured is described as a "certain cattle beast," was sufficiently definite. State v. Credle, 91 N.C. 640 (1884).

Applied in Development Assocs. v. Wake County Bd. of Adjustment, 48 N.C. App. 541, 269 S.E.2d 700 (1980).

§ 14-86. Destruction or taking of soft drink bottles.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or any employee thereof, to maliciously take up, carry away, destroy or in any way dispose of bottles or other property belonging to any bottler, bottling company, person, firm or corporation engaged in the business of bottling and/or distributing in bottles or other closed containers soda water, Coca-Cola, Pepsi-Cola, cheri-wine, Chero-Cola, ginger ale, grape and other fruit juices or imitations thereof, carbonated or malted beverages and like preparations commonly known as soft drinks. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1937, c. 322, ss. 1, 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 5.)

Cross References. — As to pollution of soft drink bottles, see § 14-288.

§ 14-86.1. Seizure and forfeiture of conveyances used in committing larceny and similar crimes.

(a) All conveyances, including vehicles, watercraft or aircraft, used to unlawfully conceal, convey or transport property in violation of G.S. 14-71, 14-71.1, or 20-106 or used by any person in the commission of any larceny when the value of the property taken is more than four hundred dollars ($400.00) shall be subject to forfeiture as provided herein, except that:

(1) No conveyance used by any person as a common carrier in the transaction of the business of the common carrier shall be forfeited under the provisions of this section unless it shall appear that the owner or other person in custody or control of such conveyance was a consenting party or privy to a violation that may subject the conveyance to forfeiture under this section;

(2) No conveyance shall be forfeited under the provisions of this section by reason of any act or omission committed or omitted while such conveyance was unlawfully in the possession of a person other than the owner in violation of the criminal laws of the United States, or any state;

(3) No conveyance shall be forfeited pursuant to this section unless the violation involved is a felony;

(4) A forfeiture of a conveyance encumbered by a bona fide security interest is subject to the interest of the secured party who neither had knowledge of nor consented to the act or omission;

(5) No conveyance shall be forfeited under the provisions of this section unless the owner knew or had reason to believe the vehicle was being used in the commission of any violation that may subject the conveyance to forfeiture under this section;

(6) The trial judge in the criminal proceeding which may subject the conveyance to forfeiture may order the seized conveyance returned to the owner if he finds forfeiture inappropriate. If the conveyance is not returned to the owner the procedures provided in subsection (e) shall apply.

(b) Any conveyance subject to forfeiture under this section may be seized by any law-enforcement officer upon process issued by any district or superior court having original jurisdiction over the offense except that seizure without such process may be made when:

(1) The seizure is incident to an arrest or subject to a search under a search warrant; or

(2) The property subject to seizure has been the subject of a prior judgment in favor of the State in a criminal injunction or forfeiture proceeding under this section.

(c) The conveyance shall be deemed to be in custody of the law-enforcement agency seizing it. The law-enforcement agency may remove the property to a place designated by it or request that the North Carolina Department of Justice or Department of Crime Control and Public Safety take custody of the property and remove it to an appropriate location for disposition in accordance with law; provided, the conveyance shall be returned to the owner upon execution by him of a good and valid bond, with sufficient sureties, in a sum double the value of the property, which said bond shall be approved by an officer of the agency seizing the conveyance and shall be conditioned upon the return of said property to the custody of said officer on the day of trial to abide the judgment of the court.

(d) Whenever a conveyance is forfeited under this section, the law-enforcement agency having custody of it may:

(1) Retain the conveyance for official use; or

(2) Transfer the conveyance which was forfeited under the provisions of this section to the North Carolina Department of Justice or to the North Carolina Department of Crime Control and Public Safety when, in the discretion of the presiding judge and upon application of the North Carolina Department of Justice or the North Carolina Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said conveyance may be of official use to the North Carolina Department of Justice or the North Carolina Department of Crime Control and Public Safety; or

(3) Upon determination by the director of any law-enforcement agency that a conveyance transferred pursuant to the provisions of this section is of no further use to said agency, such conveyance may be sold as surplus property in the same manner as other conveyances owned by the law-enforcement agency. The proceeds from such sale, after deducting the cost thereof, shall be paid to the school fund of the county in which said conveyance was seized. Any conveyance transferred to any law-enforcement agency under the provisions of this section which has been modified or especially equipped from its original manufactured condition so as to increase its speed shall be used in the performance of official duties only. Such conveyance shall not be resold, transferred or disposed of other than as junk unless the special equipment or modification has been removed and destroyed, and the vehicle restored to its original manufactured condition.

(e) All conveyances subject to forfeiture under the provisions of this section shall be forfeited pursuant to the procedures for forfeiture of conveyances used to conceal, convey, or transport intoxicating beverages found in G.S. 18A-21. Provided, nothing in this section or G.S. 18A-21 shall be construed to require a conveyance to be sold when it can be used in the performance of official duties of the law-enforcement agency. (1979, c. 592.)

Editor's Note. — Section 18A-21, referred to in subsection (e) of this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 412, s. 1, effective Jan. 1, 1982. As to forfeiture of conveyances, see § 18B-504, effective Jan. 1, 1982.

Article 17.

Robbery.

§ 14-87. Robbery with firearms or other dangerous weapons.

(a) Any person or persons who, having in possession or with the use or threatened use of any firearms or other dangerous weapon, implement or means, whereby the life of a person is endangered or threatened, unlawfully takes or attempts to take personal property from another or from any place of business, residence or banking institution or any other place where there is a person or persons in attendance, at any time, either day or night, or who aids or abets any such person or persons in the commission of such crime, shall be guilty of a Class D felony.

(b) Repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 5, effective July 1, 1981.

(c) Repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 5, effective July 1, 1981.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, with the exception of persons sentenced as committed youthful offenders, a person convicted of robbery with firearms or other dangerous weapons shall serve a term of not less than seven years in prison, excluding gain time granted under G.S. 148-13. A person convicted of robbery with firearms or other dangerous weapons shall receive a sentence of at least 14 years in the State's prison and shall be entitled to credit for good behavior under G.S. 15A-1340.7. The sentencing judge may not suspend the sentence and may not place the person sentenced on probation. Sentences imposed pursuant to this section shall run consecutively with and shall commence at the expiration of any sentence being served by the person sentenced hereunder. (1929, c. 187, s. 1; 1975, cc. 543, 846; 1977, c. 871, ss. 1, 6; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 12.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class D felon" for "punished by imprisonment for not less than seven years nor more than life imprisonment in the State's prison" at the end of subsection (a), deleted subsections (b), relating to punishment for second and subsequent offenses, and (c), requiring a person convicted under subsection (a) to serve seven years without benefit of parole, probation, suspended sentence or any other judicial or administrative procedure except for time off for good behavior, and providing that sentences imposed pursuant to this section shall run consecutively, and added subsection (d). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class D felony" for "punished as a Class D felon" at the end of subsection (a). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

A. In General.

The primary purpose and intent of the legislature in enacting this section, was to provide for more severe punishment for the commission of robbery when such offense is committed or attempted with the use or threatened use of firearms or other dangerous weapons. It does not add to or subtract from the common-law offense of robbery except to provide that when firearms or other dangerous weapons are used in the commission or attempted commission of the offense sentence shall be imposed as therein directed. State v. Jones, 227 N.C. 402, 42 S.E.2d 465 (1947), State v. Hare, 243 N.C. 262, 90 S.E.2d 550 (1955), See State v. Chase, 231 N.C. 589, 58 S.E.2d 364 (1950).

Common-Law Offense Not Changed. — This section does not change the offense of common-law robbery or divide it into degrees. State v. Hare, 243 N.C. 262, 90 S.E.2d 550 (1955).

This section creates no new offense. It does not add to or subtract from the common-law offense of robbery except to provide that when firearms or other dangerous weapons are used in the commission of the offense, more severe punishment may be imposed. In re Sellers, 234 N.C. 648, 68 S.E.2d 308 (1951); State v. Stewart, 255 N.C. 571, 122 S.E.2d 355 (1961); State v. Norris, 264 N.C. 470, 141 S.E.2d 869 (1965); State v. Bell, 270 N.C. 25, 153 S.E.2d 741 (1967); State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972); State v. Osborne, 13 N.C. App. 420, 185 S.E.2d 593 (1972); State v. Ribens, 299 N.C. 385, 261 S.E.2d 867 (1980).

The use, or threatened use, of firearms or other dangerous weapons in perpetrating a robbery does not add to or subtract from the common-law offense of robbery, but this section provides a more severe punishment for a robbery attempted or accomplished with the use of a dangerous weapon. State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966); State v. Faulkner, 5 N.C. App. 113, 168 S.E.2d 9 (1969); State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969).

This section creates no new offense, but provides that when firearms or other dangerous weapons are used, more severe punishment may be imposed. State v. Rogers, 273 N.C. 208, 159 S.E.2d 525 (1968); State v. Black, 286 N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974); State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

This section does not attempt to change the offense of common-law robbery or divide it into degrees. State v. Massey, 273 N.C. 721, 161 S.E.2d 103 (1968).

This section creates no new offense, but merely provides for more severe punishment for the commission, or attempt to commit, common-law robbery when that offense is committed or attempted with the use or threatened use of firearms or other dangerous weapons. State v. Barksdale, 16 N.C. App. 559, 192 S.E.2d 659 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 673, 194 S.E.2d 152 (1973).

State must show active participation or accessory before the fact in a prosecution for armed robbery. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964).

Principals Equally Guilty. — All who are present at the place of a crime and are either aiding, abetting, assisting or advising in its commission, or are present for such purpose to the knowledge of the actual perpetrator, are principals and equally guilty. State v. Dowd, 28 N.C. App. 32, 220 S.E.2d 393 (1975).

Armed robbery is a crime of violence, the very nature of which suffices to support a reasonable belief that defendant would evade arrest if not immediately taken into custody. State v. Shore, 285 N.C. 328, 204 S.E.2d 682 (1974).

Applied in State v. Riddle, 205 N.C. 591, 172 S.E. 400 (1934); State v. Marsh, 243 N.C. 101, 66 S.E.2d 684 (1951); State v. Kerley, 246 N.C. 157, 97 S.E.2d 876 (1957); State v. Sheffield, 251 N.C. 309, 1 S.E.2d 195 (1959); State v. Graves, 251 N.C. 550, 112 S.E.2d 85 (1960); State v. Patton, 260 N.C. 359, 132 S.E.2d 891 (1963); State v. Goins, 261 N.C. 707, 136 S.E.2d 97 (1964); State v. McNeil, 263 N.C. 260, 139 S.E.2d 667 (1965); State v. Chamberlain, 263 N.C. 406, 139 S.E.2d 620 (1965); State v. B. Common Law Robbery.

Definitions. — Robbery at common law is the felonious taking of money or goods of any value from the person of another, or in his presence, against his will, by violence or putting him fear. State v. Stewart, 255 N.C. 571, 122 S.E.2d 355 (1961); State v. Lawrence, 262 N.C. 162, 136 S.E.2d 595 (1964); State v. Norris, 264 N.C. 470, 141 S.E.2d 869 (1965); State v. Rogers, 273 N.C. 208, 159 S.E.2d 525 (1968); State v. Faulkner, 5 N.C. App. 113, 168 S.E.2d 9 (1969); State v. Moore, 279 N.C. 455, 183 S.E.2d 546 (1971); State v. Osborne, 13 N.C. App. 420, 185 S.E.2d 593 (1972); State v. Hoover, 14 N.C. App. 154, 187 S.E.2d 453, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 316, 188 S.E.2d 899 (1972); State v. Black, 286 N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974); State v. Dixon, 34 N.C. App. 388, 238 S.E.2d 183 (1977).

An essential element of the offense of common-law robbery is a felonious taking, i.e., a taking with the felonious intent on the part of the taker to deprive the owner of his property permanently and to convert it to the use of the taker. State v. Norris, 264 N.C. 470, 141 S.E.2d 869 (1965); State v. Mundy, 265 N.C. 528, 144 S.E.2d 572 (1965).

Robbery is the taking, with intent to steal, of the personal property of another, from his person or in his presence, without his consent or against his will, by violence or intimidation. State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966); State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969); State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972); State v. Young, 16 N.C. App. 101, 191 S.E.2d 369 (1972); State v. Rivens, 299 N.C. 385, 261 S.E.2d 867 (1980); State v. Chapman, 49 N.C. 103, 270 S.E.2d 524 (1980).

The word "fear" as used in the phrase, "putting him in fear," in the definition of common-law robbery is not confined to fear of death. State v. Moore, 279 N.C. 455, 183 S.E.2d 546 (1971).

Not Defined by Statute. — Robbery, a common-law offense not defined by statute in North Carolina, is merely an aggravated from of larceny State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966); State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969); State v. Hullender, 8 N.C. App. 41, 173 S.E.2d 581 (1970); State v. Chapman, 49 N.C. App. 103, 270 S.E.2d 524 (1980).

Proof of Necessary Elements. — For robbery at common law it is not necessary to prove both violence and putting in fear — proof of either is sufficient. State v. Moore, 279 N.C. 455, 183 S.E.2d 546 (1971); State v. Dixon, 34 N.C. App. 388, 238 S.E.2d 183 (1977).

The use or threatened use of a firearm or other dangerous weapon is not an essential of common-law robbery. State v. Moore, 279 N.C. 455, 183 S.E.2d 546 (1971).

The degree of force used in common-law robbery is immaterial so long as it is sufficient to cause the victim to part with his property. State v. Dixon, 34 N.C. App. 388, 238 S.E.2d 183 (1977).

Absent the elements of violence or intimidation, the offense becomes larceny. State v. Chapman, 49 N.C. App. 103, 270 S.E.2d 524 (1980).

Highway robbery is a common-law offense and is frequently denominated "common-law robbery." State v. Stewart, 255 N.C. 571, 122 S.E.2d 355 (1961).

This section superadds to the minimum essentials of common-law robbery the additional requirement that the robbery must be committed "with the use or threatened use of . . . firearms or other dangerous weapon, implement or means whereby the life of a person is endangered or threatened." State v. Rogers, 246 N.C. 611, 99 S.E.2d 803 (1957); State v. Stewart, 255 N.C. 571, 122 S.E.2d 355 (1961); State v. Norris, 264 N.C. 470, 141 S.E.2d 869 (1965).

The critical and essential difference between armed robbery and common-law robbery is that in order for the jury to convict for armed robbery the victim must be endangered or threatened by the use or threatened use of a "firearm or other dangerous weapon, implement or means." State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972).

Where a weapon which is dangerous within the meaning of this section is used in a robbery, the only difference between common-law robbery and armed robbery is whether the life of the person robbed is endangered or threatened by the weapon. State v. Osborne, 13 N.C. App. 420, 185 S.E.2d 593 (1972).

The essential difference between armed robbery and common-law robbery is that the former is accomplished by the use or threatened use of a firearm or other dangerous weapon whereby the life of a person is endangered or threatened. State v. Lee, 282 N.C. 566, 193 S.E.2d 705 (1973); State v. Dollar, 292 N.C. 344, 233 S.E.2d 521 (1977); State v. Clemmons, 34 N.C. App. 101, 237 S.E.2d 298 (1977), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 412, 251 S.E.2d 471 (1979); State v. Coats, 301 N.C. 216, 270 S.E.2d 422 (1980).

The essential difference between armed robbery and common-law robbery is that, to prove the former, the State must produce evidence sufficient to show that the victim was endangered or threatened by the use or threatened use of a firearm or other dangerous weapon, implement or means. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

C. Attempted Robbery.

This section makes the attempt to commit the offense an offense of equal gravity with the completed act. State v. Sanders, 280 N.C. 81, 185 S.E.2d 158 (1971).

The attempt to rob now is on equal level with the taking: Each offense is of equal gravity. State v. Cherry, 29 N.C. App. 599, 225 S.E.2d 119 (1976).

By its express terms, this section extends to one who aids and abets in an attempt to commit armed robbery. State v. Dowd, 28 N.C. App. 32, 220 S.E.2d 393 (1975).

What Constitutes Attempt. — In determining whether a person has been guilty of the offense of attempting to commit robbery, the courts are guided by the peculiar facts of each case, in order to decide whether the acts of the defendant have advanced beyond the stage of mere preparation, to the point where it can be said that an attempt to commit the crime has been made. The question is one of degree, and cannot be controlled by exact definition. State v. Powell, 6 N.C. App. 8, 169 S.E.2d 210 (1969).

There can be no attempt to commit robbery in the absence of an overt act in part execution of the intent to commit the crime. State v. Powell, 6 N.C. App. 8, 169 S.E.2d 210 (1969).

An attempt occurs when the defendant, with the requisite intent to rob, does some overt act calculated and designed to bring about the robbery, thereby endangering or threatening the life of a person. State v. Price, 280 N.C. 154, 184 S.E.2d 866 (1971); State v. Cherry, 29 N.C. App. 599, 225 S.E.2d 119 (1976); State v. May, 292 N.C. 644, 235 S.E.2d 178, rehearing denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977).

In order to constitute an attempt, it is essential that the defendant, with the intent of committing the particular crime, should have done some overt act adapted to, approximating, and which in the ordinary and likely course of things would result in the commission thereof. State v. Dowd, 28 N.C. App. 32, 220 S.E.2d 393 (1975).

In a prosecution for attempted armed robbery, the evidence did no more than place defendant in the hardware store with a pistol in his belt. He had no accomplice. He did not make a gesture indicating an intent to touch, withdraw or otherwise threaten the use of the pistol. There was, therefore, no threat, actual or constructive, of the use of a deadly weapon. He did not make a demand, express or implied, for money or other property. The evidence raised a suspicion that defendant may have intended to commit a robbery or other crime but fell short of showing an overt act in furtherance of an intent to rob. State v. Jacobs, 31 N.C. App. 582, 230 S.E.2d 550 (1976).

Completed Offense. — An attempt to take money or other personal property from another under the circumstances delineated by this section constitutes an accomplished offense, and is punishable to the same extent as if there was an actual taking. State v. Spratt, 265 N.C. 524, 144 S.E.2d 569 (1965).

The attempt to take property by the forbidden means, all other elements being present, completes the offense of armed robbery. State v. Jenkins, 8 N.C. App. 532, 174 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

The offense is complete if there is either a taking or an attempt to take the personal property of another by the means and in the manner prescribed by this section, but there must be one or the other. State v. Evans, 279 N.C. 447, 183 S.E.2d 540 (1971); State v. Clemmons, 35 N.C. App. 192, 241 S.E.2d 116, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 737, 244 S.E.2d 155 (1978).

Under this section an attempt to rob another of personal property, made with the use of a dangerous weapon, whereby the life of a person is endangered or threatened, is a completed crime and is punishable to the same extent as if the property had been taken as intended. State v. Price, 280 N.C. 154, 184 S.E.2d 866 (1971); State v. Cherry, 29 N.C. App. 599, 225 S.E.2d 119 (1976).

Under this section the offense is complete if there is an attempt to take personal property by use of firearms or other dangerous weapon. State v. Duncan, 14 N.C. App. 113, 187 S.E.2d 353 (1972); State v. Hunt, 297 N.C. 447, 255 S.E.2d 182 (1979).

If all of the elements are present, the offense is complete whether the taking is successful or amounts only to an attempt to take personalty from the victim. State v. Kinsey, 17 N.C. App. 57, 193 S.E.2d 430 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 674, 194 S.E.2d 153 (1973).

By the terms of this section, the offense is complete if there is an attempt to take personal property by use of firearms or other dangerous weapons. The attempt itself is a violation of the statute and is a felony. State v. May, 292 N.C. 644, 235 S.E.2d 178, rehearing denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977).

The crime of armed robbery was complete as the defendant stood over the man he had stabbed and made the decision whether to keep the small sum of money that he had taken from his victim or to discard it before fleeing. State v. King, 299 N.C. 707, 264 S.E.2d 40 (1980).

Where defendant entered a store, pulled a gun from under his shirt, pointed it at the proprietor at close range and ordered the proprietor not to move and not to put his hands under the counter, and having obtained the owner's compliance with his demands, then proceeded to order him to move away from the counter, directing him to move to the center of the store, and at this point the intended robbery was interrupted, the crime of attempted armed robbery was complete because defendant had manifested an intent to rob and had done an affirmative act beyond mere preparation in furtherance of that intent. State v. Smith, 300 N.C. 71, 265 S.E.2d 164 (1980).

II. ELEMENTS OF CRIME.

A. In General.

Prerequisite to conviction for armed robbery, the jury must find from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the life of the victim was endangered or threatened by the use, or threatened use, of firearms or other dangerous weapon, implement, or means. A conviction of "guilty as charged" may not be based on a finding that the accused "used force or intimidation sufficient to create an apprehension of danger." This is a critical distinction between armed robbery as defined in this section, and common-law robbery. State v. Covington, 273 N.C. 690, 161 S.E.2d 140 (1968).

Under this section, an armed robbery is defined as the taking of the personal property of another in his presence or from his person without his consent by endangering or threatening his life with a firearm, with the taker knowing that he is not entitled to the property and the taker intending to permanently deprive the owner of the property. State v. May, 292 N.C. 644, 235 S.E.2d 178, rehearing denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977); State v. Davis, 301 N.C. 394, 271 S.E.2d 263 (1980).

The crime of armed robbery includes an assault on the person with a deadly weapon, but it does not include the additional elements of (1) intent to kill or (2) inflicting serious injury. State v. Kearns, 27 N.C. App. 354, 219 S.E.2d 228 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 300, 222 S.E.2d 700 (1976).

This section requires, among other things, that a robbery be accomplished by the use or threatened use of a firearm or other dangerous weapon whereby the life of a person is endangered or threatened. State v. Jones, 292 N.C. 255, 232 S.E.2d 707 (1977).

The essentials of the offense set forth in this section are (1) the unlawful taking or attempted taking of personal property from another; (2) the possession, use or threatened use of "firearms or other dangerous weapon, implement or means"; and (3) danger or threat to the life of the victim. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978); State v. Moore, 37 N.C. App. 248, 245 S.E.2d 898, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 651, 248 S.E.2d 255 (1978).

Presence of the Victim. — The definition of robbery necessarily carries with it the concept that the offense can only be committed in the presence of the victim. State v. Jacobs, 25 N.C. App. 500, 214 S.E.2d 254, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 666, 216 S.E.2d 909 (1975).

The word "presence" taken from the common-law elements and used in an indictment under this section, must be interpreted broadly and with due consideration to the main element of the crime — intimidation or force by the use or threatened use of firearms. State v. Clemmons, 35 N.C. App. 192, 241 S.E.2d 116, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 737, 244 S.E.2d 155 (1978).

If the force or intimidation by the use of firearms for the purpose of taking personal property has been used and caused the victim in possession or control to flee the premises and this is followed by the taking of the property in a continuous course of conduct, the taking is from the "presence" of the victim. State v. Clemmons, 35 N.C. App. 192, 241 S.E.2d 116, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 737, 244 S.E.2d 155 (1978); State v. Edwards, 49 N.C. App. 547, 272 S.E.2d 384 (1980).

Possession Raises Presumption. — If and when it is established that there was an armed robbery in which property was stolen, then the possession of such recently stolen property raises a presumption of fact that the possessor is guilty of the armed robbery. State v. Hickson, 25 N.C. App. 619, 214 S.E.2d 259, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 246, 217 S.E.2d 670 (1975).

Profit Immaterial. — So great is the offense when life is endangered and threatened by the use of firearms or other dangerous weapons, that it is not of controlling consequence whether the assailants profit much or little, or nothing, from their felonious undertaking. State v. Parker, 262 N.C. 679, 138 S.E.2d 496 (1964); State v. Jenkins, 8 N.C. App. 532, 174 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

B. Use or Threatened Use of Dangerous Weapons.

The main element of the offense is force or intimidation occasioned by the use or threatened use of firearms. State v. Mull, 224 N.C. 574, 31 S.E.2d 764 (1944); State v. Waddell, 279 N.C. 442, 183 S.E.2d 644 (1971); State v. Ballard, 280 N.C. 479, 186 S.E.2d 372 (1972); State v. Clemmons, 35 N.C. App. 192, 241 S.E.2d 116, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 737, 244 S.E.2d 155 (1978).

The gist of the offense of robbery with firearms is the accomplishment of the robbery by the use of or threatened use of firearms or other dangerous weapon. State v. Williams, 265 N.C. 446, 144 S.E.2d 267 (1965); State v. Waddell, 279 N.C. 442, 183 S.E.2d 644 (1971); State v. Black 286 N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974).

In an indictment for robbery, the kind and value of the property taken is not material — the gist of the offense is not the taking, but a taking by force or putting in fear. State v. Rogers, 273 N.C. 208, 159 S.E.2d 525 (1968); State v. Johnson, 20 N.C. App. 53, 200 S.E.2d 395 (1973), appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 620, 202 S.E.2d 276 (1974).

In an indictment for robbery with firearms or other dangerous weapons, the gist of the offense is not the taking of personal property, but a taking or attempted taking by force or putting in fear by the use of firearms or other dangerous weapons. State v. Harris, 8 N.C. App. 653, 175 S.E.2d 334 (1970).

The gist of the offense of armed robbery is not the taking but the taking by force or putting in fear. Testimony by the victim of the armed robbery that he was scared is sufficient to meet the requirements of the statute. State v. Swaney, 277 N.C. 602, 178 S.E.2d 399, appeal dismissed, 402 U.S. 1006, 91 S. Ct. 199, 29 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1971); State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972).

The gravemen of the offense of armed robbery is the endangering or threatening of human life by the use or threatened use of firearms or other dangerous weapons in the perpetration of or even in the attempt to perpetrate the crime of robbery. State v. Ballard, 280 N.C. 479, 186 S.E.2d 372 (1972).

The gist of the offense of robbery with firearms is the accomplishment of the robbery by the use or threatened use of firearms or other dangerous weapons whereby the life of a person is endangered or threatenred. State v. Harris, 281 N.C. 542, 189 S.E.2d 249 (1972); State v. Martin, 47 N.C. App. 223, 267 S.E.2d 35 (1980).

The question in an armed robbery case is whether a person's life was in fact endangered or threatened by defendant's possession, use or threatened use of a dangerous weapon, not whether the victim was scared or in fear of his life. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

State Must Show That Life of Victim Was Endangered or Threatened. — For a conviction of robbery with firearms or other dangerous weapons, the State must further show beyond a reasonable doubt that the life of a person was endangered or threatened by the defendant's, or his accomplice's, possession, use or threatened use of a firearm or other dangerous weapon, implement or means; proof of this additional element is not required for conviction of the offense of common-law robbery. State v. Evans, 279 N.C. 447, 183 S.E.2d 540 (1971).

Where there was evidence sufficient to show that the victim was in fear for her life, the State did not have to prove such fear to overcome defendant's motion for nonsuit. Rather, the State could prove, at the least, that during the course of the robbery or attempted robbery, there was a threatened use of a dangerous weapon which endangered or threatened the life of the victim. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

The question under this section is whether a person's life was in fact endangered or threatened by defendant's possession, use or threatened use of the opened knife, not whether the person was scared or in fear of his life. State v. Moore, 279 N.C. 455, 183 S.E.2d 546 (1971).

"Endangered or Threatened" Construed Conjunctively. — Although this section sets forth disjunctively, "endangered or threatened," several means or ways by which this offense may be committed, a warrant thereunder correctly charges them conjunctively, as "endangered and threatened." State v. Swaney, 277 N.C. 602, 178 S.E.2d 399, appeal dismissed, 402 U.S. 1006, 91 S. Ct. 199, 29 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1971).

Force May Be Actual or Constructive. — The element of force in the offense of robbery may be actual or constructive. State v. Norris, 264 N.C. 470, 141 S.E.2d 869 (1965).

"Actual Force". — Actual force implies physical violence. State v. Norris, 264 N.C. 470, 141 S.E.2d 869 (1965).

"Constructive Force". — Under constructive force are included all demonstrations of force, menaces, and other means by which the person robbed is put in fear sufficient to suspend the free exercise of his will or prevent resistance to the taking. State v. Norris, 264 N.C. 470, 141 S.E.2d 869 (1965).

Threatened Use of Firearm. — Where, although the victim did not testify that defendant actually pointed the gun at her at the time she gave her ring to his accomplice, earlier there had been such "use" of the firearm as to force her to commit certain acts, and it had been made clear to her on several occasions prior to the actual taking of her ring that the firearm would be used against her if she did not comply, this continuing threat extended to every subsequent act by her, and thus constituted a "threatened use" of a firearm which "endangered or threatened" her life within the terms of subsection (a). State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Dangerous Character of Weapon Inferred. — Evidence tending to show that the victim of a robbery was left unconscious from a blow, inflicting a wound in the back of her head requiring eight stitches to close and causing her to be hospitalized for two weeks, was sufficient to show that the robbery was committed by the use of a dangerous weapon, since the dangerous character of the weapon may be inferred from the wound. State v. Rowland, 263 N.C. 353, 139 S.E.2d 661 (1965).

It may be inferred that the threat of use and actual use of a knife constitute a danger to a person's life for the purposes of this section. State v. Moore, 279 N.C. 455, 183 S.E.2d 546 (1971).

Serious injury need not be shown at all in a prosecution for armed robbery. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

Nor Need Intent to Kill. — Neither the infliction of serious injury nor an intent to kill is an essential element of the charge of armed robbery. State v. Wheeler, 21 N.C. App. 514, 204 S.E.2d 862 (1974).

Actual Possession of Firearms Necessary. — The purpose and intent of this section is to provide for more severe punishment for the commission of robbery with firearms, and other specified weapons, than is prescribed for common-law robbery, and construing the title and context of the statute together to ascertain the legislative intent, it was held that possession of firearms or other of the specified weapons is necessary to constitute the offense of "robbery with firearms" under this section, and it was reversible error for the court to refuse to so instruct the jury in accordance with defendants' prayers for special instructions upon evidence tending to show that defendants sought to make their victim believe they had firearms, and threatened to use same, but that they actually carried no weapon. State v. Keller, 214 N.C. 447, 199 S.E. 620 (1938).

In a prosecution for robbery by use of a knife, an instruction to return a verdict of guilty "as charged," without any reference to a knife or other weapon whereby the life of the victim was endangered or threatened, was erroneous. State v. Ross, 268 N.C. 282, 150 S.E.2d 421 (1966).

The actual possession and use or threatened use of firearms or other dangerous weapon is necessary to constitute the offense of robbery with firearms or other dangerous weapon. Whether it was a firearm or a toy pistol, and if a toy pistol, whether it was a dangerous weapon were questions for the jury under proper instructions. State v. Faulkner, 5 N.C. App. 113, 168 S.E.2d 9 (1969).

Pocketknife as Dangerous Weapon. — A pocketknife, considering its use or threatened use by defendant, was a dangerous weapon. State v. Norris, 264 N.C. 470, 141 S.E.2d 869 (1965).

Exhibition of a pistol while demanding money conveyed the message loud and clear that the victim's life was being threatened. State v. Green, 2 N.C. App. 170, 162 S.E.2d 641 (1968).

Inability to Identify Weapon. — When a witness testified that he was robbed by use of a firearm or other dangerous weapon, his admission on cross-examination that he could not positively say it was a gun or dangerous weapon was without probative value. State v. Thompson, 297 N.C. 285, 254 S.E.2d 526 (1979).

When the State offered evidence in an armed robbery case that the robbery was attempted or accomplished by the use or threatened use of what appeared to the victim to be a firearm or other dangerous weapon, evidence elicited on cross-examination that the witness or witnesses could not positively testify that the instrument used was in fact a firearm or dangerous weapon was not of sufficient probative value to warrant submission of the lesser included offense of common-law robbery. That portion of State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972), which is inconsistent with this is no longer authoritative. State v. Thompson, 297 N.C. 285, 254 S.E.2d 526 (1979).

Verbal Demand to Surrender Money Not Required. — The fact that neither defendant nor a companion made any verbal demand on the prosecuting witness to surrender money did not entitle defendant to a nonsuit in an armed robbery prosecution, where evidence showed that the witness had immediately pitched the money onto the floor when a gun was pointed in his face. State v. Jenkins, 8 N.C. App. 532, 174 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

Threats Expressed by Nonverbal Conduct. — Threats under this section may be expressed by nonverbal conduct as well as by words, and the fact that defendant left the pistol stuck in his belt or pants instead of pointing it directly at his victim did not lessen his implied threat to use it or the danger to the life of his victim had they not yielded. State v. Allen, 47 N.C. App. 482, 267 S.E.2d 514 (1980).

C. Taking and Intent.

The offense requires the taking, or the attempt to take, in robbery with firearms. State v. Parker, 262 N.C. 679, 138 S.E.2d 496 (1964).

The taking must be done animo furandi, with a felonious intent to appropriate the goods taken to some use or purpose of the taker. State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966).

There must be an actual taking of property for there to be the crime of common-law robbery, whereas under this section the offense is complete if there is an attempt to take personal property by use of firearms or other dangerous weapon. State v. Rogers, 273 N.C. 208, 159 S.E.2d 525 (1968); State v. Black, 286 N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974).

In order to commit robbery, property must be taken, which is larceny; thus the taking or attempted taking of property is an essential element of robbery. State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969).

It is not incumbent upon the State to prove that defendants actually took money. In a prosecution for the offense of armed robbery the offense is complete if there is an attempt to take personal property by use of firearms. State v. Jenkins, 8 N.C. App. 532, 174 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

In common-law robbery a taking is necessary, but in armed robbery either the taking or the attempt to take will support a verdict under this section. State v. Lock, 284 N.C. 182, 200 S.E.2d 49 (1973).

The taking and carrying away is an essential element of the crime of robbery. State v. Bobbitt, 29 N.C. App. 155, 223 S.E.2d 398 (1976).

A taking with "felonious intent" is an essential element of the offense of armed robbery, of attempt to commit armed robbery, and of common-law robbery, and it is prejudicial error for the court to charge that defendant may be convicted of such offense even though the taking was without felonious intent. State v. Spratt, 265 N.C. 524, 144 S.E.2d 569 (1965).

A taking of personal property with felonious intent is an essential element of the offense of armed robbery, of attempt to commit armed robbery, and of common-law robbery. The court must so instruct the jury in every robbery case, and must in some sufficient form explain and define the term "felonious intent." The extent of the definition required depends upon the evidence in the particular case. State v. Mundy, 265 N.C. 528, 144 S.E.2d 572 (1965).

In robbery, as in larceny, the taking of the property must be with the felonious intent permanently to deprive the owner of his property. Thus, if one disarms another in self-defense with no intent to steal his weapon, he is not guilty of robbery. If he takes another's property for the taker's immediate and temporary use with no intent permanently to deprive the owner of his property, he is not guilty of larceny. State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966).

"Felonious taking" is an essential element of the crime of armed robbery, and it means "a taking with the felonious intent on the part of the taker to deprive the owner of his property permanently and to convert it to the use of the taker." State v. Harmon, 21 N.C. App. 508, 204 S.E.2d 883, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 593, 206 S.E.2d 864 (1974); State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

The felonious intent to take the goods of another and appropriate them to defendant's own use is a necessary element of armed robbery. State v. Webb, 27 N.C. App. 391, 219 S.E.2d 268 (1975).

Determining Definition of "Felonious Intent." — The comprehensiveness and specificality of the definition and explanation of "felonious intent" required in a charge depends on the facts in the particular case. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

"Intent to Rob" Is a Sufficient Definition of "Felonious Intent." — The word "rob" was known to the common law and the expression "intent to rob" is a sufficient definition of "felonious intent" as applied to this section, in the absence of evidence raising an inference of a different intent or purpose. State v. Spratt, 265 N.C. 524, 144 S.E.2d 569 (1965).

In some cases, as where the defense is an alibi or the evidence develops no direct issue or contention that the taking was under a bona fide claim of right or was without any intent to steal, "felonious intent" may be simply defined as an "intent to rob" or "intent to steal." On the other hand, where the evidence raises a direct issue as to the intent and purpose of the taking, a more comprehensive definition is required. State v. Mundy, 265 N.C. 528, 144 S.E.2d 572 (1965).

The expression "intent to rob" is a sufficient definition of "felonious intent" as applied to the robbery statute, in the absence of evidence raising an inference of a different intent to purpose. State v. Webb, 27 N.C. App. 391, 219 S.E.2d 268 (1975); State v. Hunter, 290 N.C. 556, 227 S.E.2d 535 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1093, 97 S. Ct. 1106, 51 L. Ed. 2d 539 (1977).

Since "Rob" Imports an Intent to Steal. — "Rob" or "robbery" has a well-defined meaning and imports an intent to steal. State v. Spratt, 265 N.C. 524, 144 S.E.2d 569 (1965).

Proof of Intent. — When, in order to serve a temporary purpose of his own, one takes property (1) with the specific intent wholly and permanently to deprive the owner of it, or (2) under circumstances which render it unlikely that the owner will ever recover his property and which disclose the taker's total indifference to his rights, one takes it with the intent to steal (animus furandi). State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966); State v. Reaves, 9 N.C. App. 315, 176 S.E.2d 13 (1970).

Where the evidence did not permit the inference that defendant ever intended to return the property forcibly taken but required the conclusion that defendant was totally indifferent as to whether the owner ever recovered the property, there was no justification for indulging the fiction that the taking was for a temporary purpose, without any animus furandi or lucri causa. State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966).

A defendant is not guilty of robbery if he forcibly takes personal property from the actual possession of another under a bona fide claim of right or title to the property, or for the personal protection and safety of defendant and others, or as a frolic, prank or practical joke, or under color of official authority. State v. Spratt, 265 N.C. 524, 144 S.E.2d 569 (1965).

Defendant's Claim of Title. — In a prosecution for armed robbery the defendant's contention that he could not be found guilty of robbery and forcibly taking property from the actual possession of another where he had a bona fide claim of right or title to the property since such belief negates the requisite animus furandi or intent to steal was without merit where (1) the defendant denied taking any property from the prosecuting witness at all; (2) the defendant and others were "dealing" in marijuana, which is prohibited by Chapter 90 of the General Statutes; (3) the alleged claim or debt was an unliquidated amount of money; and (4) the defendant used a "sawed-off" shotgun to aid him in collection of the debt or claim to the property taken over the objections of the prosecuting witness. State v. Oxner, 37 N.C. 600, 246 S.E.2d 546 (1978), aff'd 297 N.C. 44, 252 S.E.2d 705 (1979).

Bill of indictment for armed robbery sufficiently charged felonious intent where it alleged that defendants, by the use and threatened use of firearms whereby the life of a motel night clerk was endangered, unlawfully, willfully and feloniously took money from the motel. State v. Frietch, 8 N.C. App. 331, 174 S.E.2d 149 (1970).

Bill Need Not Allege That Defendant Intended Conversion of Property. — A bill of indictment for armed robbery need not allege that defendants intended to convert the personal property stolen to their own use. State v. Frietch, 8 N.C. App. 331, 174 S.E.2d 149 (1970).

The distinction between robbery and forcible trespass is that in the former there is, and in the latter is not, a felonious intention to take the goods, and appropriate them to the offender's own use. State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966); State v. Spratt, 265 N.C. 524, 144 S.E.2d 569 (1965).

III. LESSER INCLUDED OFFENSES.

An indictment for robbery with firearms will support a conviction of the lesser offenses of common-law robbery, assault, larceny from the person, or simple larceny, if there is evidence of guilt of such lesser offenses. State v. Bell, 228 N.C. 659, 46 S.E.2d 834 (1948); State v. Hare, 243 N.C. 262, 90 S.E.2d 550 (1955); State v. Wenrich, 251 N.C. 460, 111 S.E.2d 582 (1959); State v. Swaney, 277 N.C. 602, 178 S.E.2d 399, appeal dismissed, 402 U.S. 1006, 91 S. Ct. 199, 29 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1971).

Highway robbery is a lesser offense embraced in the charge of robbery with firearms or other dangerous weapon. State v. Stewart, 255 N.C. 571, 122 S.E.2d 355 (1961).

In a prosecution for robbery with firearms, an accused may be acquitted of the major charge and convicted of an included or lesser offense, such as common-law robbery, or assault, or larceny from the person, or simple larceny, if a verdict for the included or lesser offense is supported by allegations of the indictment and by evidence on the trial. State v. Parker, 262 N.C. 679, 138 S.E.2d 496 (1964); State v. Rogers, 273 N.C. 208, 159 S.E.2d 525 (1968); State v. Conrad, 275 N.C. 342, 168 S.E.2d 39 (1969); State v. Black, 286, N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974); State v. Fletcher, 27 N.C. App. 672, 220 S.E.2d 101 (1975).

An indictment under this section includes common-law robbery. State v. Rowland, 263 N.C. 353, 139 S.E.2d 661 (1965).

An indictment for robbery with firearms will support a conviction of a lesser offense such as common-law robbery, assault with a deadly weapon, larceny from the person, simple larceny or simple assault, if a verdict for the included or lesser offense is supported by the evidence on the trial. State v. Faulkner, 5 N.C. App. 113, 168 S.E.2d 9 (1969); State v. Allen, 47 N.C. App. 482, 267 S.E.2d 514 (1980).

The crime of robbery ex vi termini includes an assault on the person. State v. Powell, 6 N.C. App. 8, 169 S.E.2d 210 (1969).

An indictment for armed robbery under this section will support a verdict of guilty of common-law robbery. State v. Jackson, 6 N.C. App. 406, 170 S.E.2d 137 (1969); State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972).

The fact that the allegations in an armed robbery indictment include a charge of assault does not render the indictment invalid. State v. Swaney, 277 N.C. 602, 178 S.E.2d 399, appeal dismissed, 402 U.S. 1006, 91 S. Ct. 199, 29 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1971).

The crime of armed robbery defined in this section includes an assault on the person with a deadly weapon. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971); State v. Harris, 27 N.C. App. 520, 219 S.E.2d 538 (1975); State v. Davis, 31 N.C. App. 590, 230 S.E.2d 203 (1976); State v. Mullen, 47 N.C. App. 667, 267 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

The crime of accessory before the fact to robbery is included in the indictment for robbery. State v. Wiggins, 21 N.C. App. 441, 204 S.E.2d 692, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 595, 206 S.E.2d 866 (1974).

In a prosecution for robbery with a dangerous weapon, the accused may be acquitted of the crime charged and convicted of a lesser offense included in the offense charged, such as common-law robbery, if there is evidence from which the commission of such lesser offense can be found. State v. Black, 21 N.C. App. 640, 205 S.E.2d 154, aff'd, 286 N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974).

The crime of armed robbery includes an assault on a person with a deadly weapon; however, where the assault charged contains a necessary ingredient which is not an essential ingredient of armed robbery, the fact that the assault is committed during the perpetration of the armed robbery does not deprive the assault of its character as a complete and separate offense. State v. Teel, 24 N.C. App. 385, 210 S.E.2d 517 (1975).

Assault with a deadly weapon is a lesser included offense of robbery with firearms, and the jury may acquit as to the greater charge and return a verdict as to the lesser if the evidence warrants such a finding. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

Defendant's conviction of felonious larceny, armed robbery, burglary, and rape, all of which arose out of the same series of events, did not place defendant in double jeopardy, since the four offenses were legally separate and distinct crimes, no one of which was a lesser included offense of the other; each clearly required the proof of at least one essential element not embodied in any of the other three offenses at issue; and the four felonies were factually distinct and independent crimes in this case. State v. Revelle, 301 N.C. 153, 270 S.E.2d 476 (1980).

But Felonious Assault under § 14-32 Is Not Lesser Included Offense in Armed Robbery. — The crime of felonious assault defined in § 14-32(a) is an assault with a deadly weapon which is made with intent to kill and which inflicts serious injury. These additional elements of the crime of felonious assault are not elements of the crime of armed robbery defined in this section. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971); State v. Harris, 27 N.C. App. 520, 219 S.E.2d 538 (1975); State v. Edwards, 49 N.C. App. 547, 272 S.E.2d 384 (1980).

A conviction of armed robbery does not establish a defendant's guilt of felonious assault. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971); State v. Alexander, 284 N.C. 87, 199 S.E.2d 450 (1973), cert. denied, 415 U.S. 927, 94 S. Ct. 1434, 39 L. Ed. 2d 484 (1974).

The fact that a felonious assault is committed during the perpetration of armed robbery does not deprive the felonious assault of its character as a complete and separate felony. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

An assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury, defined by § 14-32(b), is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery because the infliction of serious injury is not an essential ingredient of armed robbery. State v. Stepney, 280 N.C. 306, 185 S.E.2d 844 (1972); State v. Teel, 24 N.C. App. 385, 210 S.E.2d 517 (1975); State v. Edwards, 49 N.C. App. 547, 272 S.E.2d 384 (1980).

Where defendant was charged with armed robbery but found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious bodily injury, the trial court should have granted his motion in arrest of judgment, since assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery, but a separate offense. State v. Perry, 18 N.C. App. 141, 196 S.E.2d 369 (1973).

Armed robbery and felonious assault charges are separate and distinct offenses. State v. Wheeler, 21 N.C. App. 514, 204 S.E.2d 862 (1974).

Assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury is not a lesser included offense of attempted common-law robbery. State v. Wilson, 26 N.C. App. 188, 215 S.E.2d 167 (1975).

Assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury cannot be considered a lesser included offense of armed robbery. The two offenses are separate and complete and an acquittal on the assault charge would not bar a conviction on the armed robbery charge. State v. Wheeler, 34 N.C. App. 243, 237 S.E.2d 874 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 187, 241 S.E.2d 522 (1978).

And Neither Is a Charge of Accessory After the Fact. — Armed robbery differs in fact and in law from accessory after the fact under § 14-7. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964).

Where the bill of indictment charges armed robbery, both a waiver and information are necessary, under § 15-140.1 (now § 15A-642), to vest the court with jurisdiction to try the defendant, or to entertain his plea, on a charge of accessory after the fact of armed robbery, because the offense of accessory after the fact is not a lesser included offense of the principal crime. State v. Brown, 21 N.C. App. 87, 202 S.E.2d 798 (1974).

A directed verdict of not guilty of armed robbery foreclosed the State from subsequent prosecutions of defendant for armed robbery or for any lesser included offenses of armed robbery. But accessory after the fact of armed robbery is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery. Therefore, general double jeopardy principles would not bar the trial of defendant on charges of accessory after the fact to armed robbery. State v. Cox, 37 N.C. App. 356, 246 S.E.2d 152, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 649, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930, 99 S. Ct. 1268, 59 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1979).

When Instructions on Lesser Included Offenses Required. — The court should not submit to the jury an included lesser crime where there is no testimony tending to show that such lesser offense was committed. But where there is evidence tending to show the commission of a lesser offense the court, of its own motion, should submit such offense to the jury for its determination. State v. Wenrich, 251 N.C. 460, 111 S.E.2d 582 (1959).

It is true that in a prosecution for robbery with firearms, an accused may be acquitted of the major charge and convicted of an included or lesser offense, such as common-law robbery, or assault, or larceny from the person, or simple larceny, if a verdict for the included or lesser offense is supported by allegations of the indictment and by evidence on the trial. However, the trial court is not required to submit to the jury the question of a lesser offense, included in that charged in the indictment, where there is no evidence to support such a verdict. State v. Owens, 277 N.C. 697, 178 S.E.2d 442 (1971).

The necessity for instructing the jury as to an included crime of lesser degree than that charged, arises when and only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed, and the presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. Hence, there is no such necessity if the State's evidence tends to show a completed robbery and there is no conflicting evidence relating to elements of the crime charged. Mere contention that the jury might accept the State's evidence in part and might reject it in part will not suffice. State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972); State v. Allen, 47 N.C. App. 482, 267 S.E.2d 514 (1980).

In a prosecution for attempted armed robbery, the necessity for instructing the jury as to included crimes of assault with a deadly weapon and simple assault arises when and only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crimes of lesser degree were committed. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. State v. Sanders, 29 N.C. App. 662, 225 S.E.2d 620 (1976).

Common-law robbery is a lesser included offense of armed robbery. However, the necessity for instructing the jury as to a lesser included offense arises only when there is evidence to support such a verdict. State v. Wilson, 31 N.C. App. 323, 229 S.E.2d 314 (1976).

Defendant Entitled to Charge on Assault with Deadly Weapon. — Although there was evidence of all the essntial elements of the crime of robbery, defendant's evidence asserting a claim of ownership of the stereo created a conflict in the evidence as to felonious intent. There certainly was ample evidence of the lesser included crime of an assault with a deadly weapon. Thus, defendant was entitled to a charge on the crime of assault with a deadly weapon in order to have the different views arising on the evidence presented to the jury upon proper instructions. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

Failure to Instruct on Common-Law Robbery. — Where the State's evidence was to the effect that defendant's companion held a knife to the victim's throat in perpetrating a robbery, and that the victim received a cut on his neck, and that defendant and his companion attacked and beat their victim and took money from his person, but no knife was introduced in evidence or described by any witness, it was error for the court to fail to submit the question of defendant's guilt of the lesser crime of common-law robbery. State v. Ross, 268 N.C. 282, 150 S.E.2d 421 (1966).

When there is evidence of defendant's guilt of common-law robbery, it is error for the court to fail to submit the lesser offense to the jury. State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972).

Where conflicting testimony raised an issue for the jury as to whether defendant had in his possession and used or threatened to use a firearm or other dangerous weapon to perpetrate the robbery, the trial judge, even without request for special instructions, should have submitted the lesser offense of common-law robbery to the jury under proper instructions. State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972).

In an armed robbery prosecution where there was no other evidence of a weapon, and the robbery victim was not sure whether defendant actually had a weapon, it was error for the trial judge to fail to charge on the lesser offense of common-law robbery. State v. Jackson, 27 N.C. App. 675, 219 S.E.2d 816 (1975).

Failure to Instruct on Lesser Included Offense Held Error. — In a prosecution for armed robbery the trial court erred in failing to instruct the jury on the lesser included offense of felonious larceny where defendant's testimony, that he did not at any time draw a knife on the victim's assistant manager, did not have a knife in his possession at any time while he was with the assistant manager, did not say anything at any time to threaten or force the assistant manager to give him money, but merely walked out with the money when the assistant manager turned his back to defendant, would have negated the element of violence or intimidation required to elevate the crime of felonious larceny to that of common-law robbery or armed robbery; moreover, the fact that defendant closed the door to the assistant manager's office as he ran out and locked it from the outside, leaving the assistant manager confined inside was not precedent to nor concomitant or contemporaneous with the act of taking the money bag, and the act of closing and locking the door therefore could not be held to constitute the requisite violence or putting in fear to make the crime in question robbery as a matter of law. State v. Chapman, 49 N.C. App. 103, 270 S.E.2d 524 (1980).

Necessity for Instruction as to Lesser Included Offense Arises Only Where Evidence Warrants. — In an armed robbery prosecution, there is no necessity for the trial judge to instruct the jury as to an included crime of lesser degree where the State's evidence tends to show a completed robbery and there is no conflicting evidence relating to the elements of the crime charged. State v. Reaves, 9 N.C. App. 315, 176 S.E.2d 13 (1970).

Where the evidence for the State clearly shows an armed robbery and there is no evidence of a lesser offense, the trial court is not required to submit to the jury the lesser included offenses of common-law robbery and assault. State v. Swaney, 277 N.C. 602, 178 S.E.2d 399, appeal dismissed, 402 U.S. 1006, 91 S. Ct. 199, 29 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1971).

Where under the State's evidence, a defendant would be guilty of attempted armed robbery, and under the defendant's evidence, he would not be guilty of attempted armed robbery or attempted common-law robbery, the judge is not required to instruct the jury that it might return a verdict of guilty of attempted common-law robbery. State v. Owens, 277 N.C. 697, 178 S.E.2d 442 (1971).

The evidence did not support an instruction on common-law robbery, where there was no evidence in the record of a taking, an essential element of the crime of common-law robbery. State v. Duncan, 14 N.C. App. 113, 187 S.E.2d 353 (1972).

The trial court is not rquired to charge the jury upon the question of a defendant's guilt of lesser degrees of the crime charged in the indictment when there is no evidence to sustain a verdict of defendant's guilt of such lesser degrees. State v. Hailstock, 15 N.C. App. 556, 190 S.E.2d 376, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 760, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

If the State's evidence shows an armed robbery as charged in the indictment and there is no conflicting evidence relating to the elements of the crime charged, an instruction on common-law robbery is not required. State v. Lee, 282 N.C. 566, 193 S.E.2d 705 (1973); State v. Martin, 29 N.C. App. 17, 222 S.E.2d 718, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 96, 225 S.E.2d 325 (1976); State v. Dollar, 292 N.C. 344, 233 S.E.2d 521 (1977); State v. Clemmons, 34 N.C. App. 101, 237 S.E.2d 298 (1977), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 412, 251 S.E.2d 471 (1979); State v. Coats, 301 N.C. 216, 270 S.E.2d 422 (1980).

Where all of the evidence tended to show that an armed robbery was committed by the defendant, and others, acting in concert, and that the defendant aided and abetted in the use and threatened use of a firearm wielded by another, and there was no evidence tending to show the commission of common-law robbery, it would have been error for the trial court to charge on the unsupported lesser degree of the crime. State v. Curtis, 18 N.C. App. 116, 196 S.E.2d 278 (1973).

The trial court is not required to submit to the jury the question of a lesser offense included in that charged where there is no evidence to support such a verdict. State v. Black, 21 N.C. App. 640, 205 S.E.2d 154, aff'd, 286 N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974).

When the State's evidence tends to show armed robbery, there is no conflicting evidence relating to elements of the offense and the only offense committed, if any, was the one charged, the court is not required to instruct on the lesser included offense of assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Davis, 31 N.C. App. 590, 230 S.E.2d 203 (1976).

Where the State's evidence was positive and without conflict on all of the elements of the charge of robbery with a firearm, and there was no evidence to the contrary, instructions on the lesser included offenses of common-law robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and simple assault were not required. State v. Wheeler, 34 N.C. App. 243, 237 S.E.2d 874 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 187, 241 S.E.2d 522 (1978).

The trial court in a prosecution for attempted armed robbery was not required to submit the lesser offense of attempted common-law robbery because of the failure of the State's witnesess to testify that the sawed-off shotgun used by defendant was not a toy, where all of the evidence indicated that defendant used a sawed-off shotgun in the crime and there was no evidence that the shotgun was not a real and functioning deadly weapon. State v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 173, 245 S.E.2d 583, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 650, 248 S.E.2d 254 (1978).

It is not necessary to submit the lesser included offense to the jury if the evidence discloses no conflicting evidence relating to the essential elements of the greater crime. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

Failing to Submit Issues of Assault with a Deadly Weapon and Simple Assault. — Where there was no evidence in an armed robbery prosecution that any offense other than armed robbery or common-law robbery had been committed, the trial court did not err in failing to submit the issues of assault with a deadly weapon and simple assault. State v. Gurkin, 8 N.C. App. 304, 174 S.E.2d 20 (1970).

Where all of the State's evidence tended to show the armed robbery of another person and where all of defendant's evidence tended to show that he committed no crime, the trial court was not required to charge on the lesser offense of assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Allison, 280 N.C. 175, 184 S.E.2d 857 (1971).

Even though the crime of attempted armed robbery as defined in this section includes the crime of assault with a deadly weapon, the absence of any evidence that the defendant committed such a crime of lesser degree made it unnecessary for the court to sumbit to the jury as one of its permissible verdicts the crime of assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Harris, 27 N.C. App. 520, 219 S.E.2d 538 (1975).

Refusal to charge on lesser included offenses held proper. State v. Harmon, 21 N.C. App. 508, 204 S.E.2d 883, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 593, 206 S.E.2d 864 (1974).

IV. INDICTMENT.

An indictment for robbery must contain a description of the property sufficient, at least, to show that such property is the subject of robbery. State v. Rogers, 273 N.C. 208, 159 S.E.2d 525 (1968).

An indictment was defective under this section where it did not describe any property sufficiently to show that it was the subject of robbery, and although the indictment stated a value, what property had that value did not appear. State v. Owens, 277 N.C. 697, 178 S.E.2d 442 (1971).

It is not necessary to describe accurately or prove the particular identity or value of the property further than to show it was the property of the person assaulted or in his care, and had a value. State v. Mull, 224 N.C. 574, 31 S.E.2d 764 (1944); State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969).

Property alleged to have been taken should be described by the name usually applied to it when in the condition it was in when taken, and where possible to state the number or quantity, kind, quality, distinguishing features, etc., thereof. State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969).

It is not necessary that ownership of the property be laid in any particular person in order to allege and prove the crime of armed robbery. State v. Rogers, 273 N.C. 208, 159 S.E.2d 525 (1968); State v. McGilvery, 9 N.C. App. 15, 175 S.E.2d 328 (1970); State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972); State v. Johnson, 20 N.C. App. 53, 200 S.E.2d 395 (1973), appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 620, 202 S.E.2d 276 (1974).

In an indictment for robbery the allegation of ownership of the property taken is sufficient when it negatives the idea that the accused was taking his own property. State v. Ballard, 280 N.C. 479, 186 S.E.2d 372 (1972).

To allege and prove the crime of armed robbery, it is not necessary that ownership of the property be laid in any particular person, at least so long as the allegation and proof are sufficient to negative the idea of the accused's taking his own property. State v. Fountain, 14 N.C. App. 82, 187 S.E.2d 493 (1972).

It Must Appear That Article Taken Had Some Value. — Although value need not be averred by a specific allegation, it must appear from the indictment that the article taken had some value. State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969).

The allegation in a bill of indictment that the property taken was "personal property of the value of . . ." was insufficient to charge the offense of robbery. State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969).

Where the gist of the offense as described in the indictment is the attempt to commit robbery by the use or threatened use of firearms, the force or intimidation occasioned by the use or threatened use of firearms is the main element of the offense. In such a case, it is not necessary or material to describe accurately or prove the particular identity or value of the property, provided the indictment shows that the property was that of the person assaulted or under his care, and that such property is the subject of robbery and that it had some value. State v. Owens, 277 N.C. 697, 178 S.E.2d 442 (1971).

Where the property involved is described in an indictment under this section as "U.S. currency," it is the subject of robbery and some value can be inferred from the description of the property itself. State v. Owens, 277 N.C. 697, 178 S.E.2d 442 (1971).

An indictment for robbery will not fail if the description of the property is sufficient to show it to be the subject of robbery and negates the idea that the accused was taking his own property. State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972).

The kind and value of the property taken is not material so long as it is described by allegation and proof sufficient to show that it is the subject of robbery. State v. Fountain, 14 N.C. App. 82, 187 S.E.2d 493 (1972).

It is not necessary in an armed robbery prosecution to allege or prove the particular value of the property taken, provided the indictment and proof show that the property was that of the person assaulted or under his care, and that such property is the subject of robbery and that it had some value. State v. Reaves, 15 N.C. App. 476, 190 S.E.2d 358, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 155, 191 S.E.2d 604 (1972).

The bill of indictment upon which defendant is tried for attempted armed robbery is fatally defective when it fails to allege that defendant attempted to take any property or thing of value from anyone. State v. Teel, 24 N.C. App. 385, 210 S.E.2d 517 (1975).

And That It May Be Subject of Larceny. — The property taken must be such as is the subject of larceny to constitute the offense of robbery. State v. Rogers, 273 N.C. 208, 159 S.E.2d 525 (1968).

An indictment for robbery must contain a description of the property sufficient, at least, to show that such property is the subject of robbery. To constitute the offense of robbery the property must be such as is the subject of larceny. State v. Council, 6 N.C. App. 397, 169 S.E.2d 921 (1969); State v. Johnson, 20 N.C. App. 53, 200 S.E.2d 395 (1973), appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 620, 202 S.E.2d 276 (1974).

Money is recognized by law as property which may be the subject of larceny, and hence of robbery. State v. Owens, 277 N.C. 697, 178 S.E.2d 442 (1971).

Indictments Consolidated. — An indictment charging defendants with rape and an indictment charging defendants with armed robbery could be consolidated for trial when it appeared that defendants stopped the car in which husband and wife were riding, forced them into the woods where each raped the wife while the other held a pistol on the husband, and that one of them committed robbery from the person of the husband while he was being held at the point of the pistol, since the crimes were so connected in time and place that the evidence on the trial of the one was competent and admissible on the trial of the other. State v. Morrow, 262 N.C. 592, 138 S.E.2d 245 (1964).

In a prosecution of defendant for armed robbery and murder, the trial court did not err in consolidating defendant's case for trial with that of a codefendant since defendants were charged in separate indictments for the same crimes; they were tried upon the theory that the murder with which they were charged was committed in connection with a robbery committed by them jointly; their defenses were not antagonistic; and neither attempted to incriminate the other in the presentation of an alibi. State v. Smith, 301 N.C. 695, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Bill of indictment illegally amended to charge felony of attempted armed robbery. — See State v. Teel, 24 N.C. App. 385, 210 S.E.2d 517 (1975).

Indictment Charged Larceny Not Robbery. — An indictment charging that defendant at a specified time and place did "with force and arms" feloniously steal, take, and carry away from a person specified, a sum of money, charged the crime of larceny and not that of robbery. State v. Acrey, 262 N.C. 90, 136 S.E.2d 201 (1964).

V. EVIDENCE.

Admissibility. — Upon a conviction of robbery with firearms, the verdict conforming to the charge and evidence, there was no error where evidence, of a demand on the victim for property not mentioned in the indictment, was admitted without objection and referred to in the court's charge. State v. Mull, 224 N.C. 574, 31 S.E.2d 764 (1944).

In prosecution for armed robbery the trial court did not err in allowing an eyewitness to testify that the defendant robbed the same restaurant three days before the crime for which he was on trial. State v. Garnett, 24 N.C. App. 489, 211 S.E.2d 519, appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 724, 215 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

The trial court properly allowed the photographs of the robbery to be admitted into evidence where the accuracy of the photographs was established by the testimony of a witness who was familiar with the scene, object and person portrayed therein. State v. Garnett, 24 N.C.

App. 489, 211 S.E.2d 519, appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 724, 215 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

In a prosecution of defendant for armed robbery and murder, trial court did not commit prejudicial error in denying defendant's motion for a mistrial after striking the testimony of several witnesses concerning the absence of fingerprints of defendant at the murder scene and the absence of gunpowder on the hands of bystanders after the robbery-murder, since, the trial court, after the motions to strike were allowed, instructed the jury not to consider the striken evidence and specifically referred to the evidence and the witness who provided it, there was no way in which defendant would have been prejudiced by the evidence had it not been withdrawn from the jury's consideration, and defendant's motion for mistrial was a matter addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and no abuse of that discretion appeared. State v. Smith, 301 N.C. 695, — S.E.2d — (1981).

In a prosecution for armed robbery, the Court of Appeals erred in determining that the admission of handguns taken from defendants five weeks after the crime with which they were charged was prejudicial error, since (1) on the basis of the record before the court, it was unable to conclude that the admission of the exhibits by the trial court was in fact error, as the exhibits in question were not placed before the court for its examination, nor was there any stipulation placed in the record which would serve to describe the exhibits; and (2) even if the exhibits were erroneously admitted, defendants were not prejudicied by their admission into evidence, as several witnesses positively identified defendants as the persons who perpetrated the robbery. State v. Milby, 302 N.C. 137, 273 S.E.2d 716 (1981).

Evidence held sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the charge of robbery with firearms. State v. Dorsett, 245 N.C. 47, 95 S.E.2d 90 (1956); overruled on other grounds, State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

Testimony by armed robbery victim, including identification of defendant, was sufficient for submission of case to the jury. State v. Canady, 8 N.C. App. 320, 174 S.E.2d 140 (1970).

The evidence that defendant had a pistol within easy reach, that he had threatened the prosecutrix with it, and that she was in fear for her life when he took her money, was sufficient to go to the jury on the robbery with firearms charge. State v. Harris, 281 N.C. 542, 189 S.E.2d 249 (1972).

Evidence Sufficient to Be Submitted to Jury in Prosecution for Conspiracy to Commit Armed Robbery. — See State v. Mason, 24 N.C. App. 568, 211 S.E.2d 501, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 725, 213 S.E.2d 725 (1975).

Evidence was sufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution for armed robbery where the evidence tended to show that the night manager of a motel sensed an object against his head which felt like a pistol barrel and he heard it click, a toy pistol was found in defendant's room, and money and a .38 caliber pistol were taken in the robbery. State v. Dark, 26 N.C. App. 610, 216 S.E.2d 498, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 245, 217 S.E.2d 669 (1975).

Where the State's evidence showed that the defendant held a dangerous weapon in his hand at the time he assaulted the victim, that he still had the weapon hanging from his arm at the time he went into the kitchen to take food from the refrigerator, and that it was no longer necessary for him to use or threaten to use the weapon at the time of the robbery since he had already injured and subdued the victim, viewing this evidence in the light most favorable to the State, there was sufficient evidence to submit the charge of armed robbery to the jury and the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for nonsuit as to that charge. State v. Lilly, 32 N.C. App. 467, 232 S.E.2d 495, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 643, 235 S.E.2d 64 (1977).

Evidence was sufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution for armed robbery where it tended to show that a male wearing a stocking mask over his face ran toward the manager of a grocery store who was leaving the store after closing; the man had a gun pointed at the manager; the manager, who was carrying an automatic pistol, turned and fired six times at the man who then fled; approximately an hour later police went to an apartment about six blocks from the store where they found defendant lying on the floor bleeding from gunshot wounds; the apartment was the residence of defendant's aunt; defendant was taken to the hospital where clothes he was wearing, including trousers and tennis shoes, were taken into custody by police; the tread pattern on the bottom of the tennis shoes was found to be similar to a footprint found near a mud puddle behind the store and to other footprints in the area; and no other shootings were reported that evening. State v. Quinerly, 50 N.C. App. 563, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Evidence Insufficient to Require Submission of Lesser Offenses. — The evidence tended to show that defendant was apprehended by the owner of a filling station after defendant had broken into the station, and that defendant by the use of a pistol disarmed such owner and took his rifle. Even conceding that defendant took the rifle "for a temporary use" and that he intended thereafter to abandon the rifle at the first opportunity, the evidence conclusively showed that defendant intended to deprive the owner permanently of the rifle or to leave the recovery of the rifle by the owner to mere chance, and therefore the evidence disclosed the animus furandi, and did not require the court to submit the question of defendant's guilt of assault as a less degree of the offense of robbery with firearms. State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966).

In a prosecution for robbery with a dangerous weapon, defendant's denial of his participation in the robbery and his denial that he saw a gun during the robbery did not constitute evidence sufficient to require the trial court to submit an issue of common-law robbery to the jury. State v. Coats, 46 N.C. App. 615, 265 S.E.2d 486 (1980).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction in State v. Vance, 268 N.C. 287, 150 S.E.2d 418 (1966).

The evidence of the State was sufficient to support the verdict of robbery with a firearm where it was established that defendant picked the victim, furnished the weapon, was present during the robbery, refused to identify the robbers, and tried to mislead the officers by identifying another person. State v. Moore, 22 N.C. App. 679, 207 S.E.2d 358 (1974), cert. denied, 285 N.C. 762, 209 S.E.2d 286 (1974).

The evidence was sufficent to show that the crime of armed robbery was committed and that defendant committed it, where it tended to show that the victim's personal property was taken from his person without his consent by violent means with the intent to steal, and a firearm was used, even though the victim was shot first and then his money was taken. State v. Handsome, 300 N.C. 313, 266 S.E.2d 670 (1980).

Insufficient to Support Conviction. — Proof of the defendant's presence in a place of business, his possession therein of a firearm and his intent to commit the offense of robbery was not sufficient to support a conviction of the offense described in this section, for it omitted the essential elements of (1) a taking or attempt to take personal property, and (2) the endangering or threatening of the life of a person. State v. Evans, 279 N.C. 447, 183 S.E.2d 540 (1971).

Failure to Show Material or Prejudicial Errors. — In the appeal of a conviction for robbery with a dangerous weapon and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, where defendant assigned as error the failure of the trial court to sustain three objections made by defendant during the testimony of the victim in which the victim stated that she was not sure how good her husband's hearing was on the side where he had been shot; that she can still see the defendant's face when she closes her eyes; and that she let the defendant take the money because he had a gun, the defendant may have been correct in his assertion that these answers were in places speculative or unresponsive, but neither the defendant nor the record showed that the errors were material or prejudicial, and absent such a showing defendant was not entitled to a new trial. State v. Billups, 301 N.C. 607, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Exception to signing of judgment entered upon defendant's conviction of armed robbery was without merit where the indictment properly charged defendant with armed robbery, the evidence supported the judgment and the sentence was within the statutory limits. State v. Hughes, 8 N.C. App. 334, 174 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

No Fatal Variance between Indictment and Evidence. — There was no fatal variance between an indictment which charged that property was taken from the "residence" or "place of business" of a named person and evidence that the armed robbery occurred at a finance company where the person named was employed, the property having been in the lawful custody of such person. State v. McGilvery, 9 N.C. App. 15, 175 S.E.2d 328 (1970).

Variance as to Ownership of Store from Which Property Taken. — A variance between the allegation in the indictment which alleged that one person was the owner and in charge of the store from which the property was forcibly taken and the evidence which disclosed that another person owned the store was not fatal to an indictment which contained all essential averments required by the statute. State v. Waddell, 279 N.C. 442, 183 S.E.2d 644 (1971).

Variance between Allegations and Proof as to Property Taken Not Material. — Variance between the allegations of the indictment and the proof in respect of the property taken was not material. State v. Ballard, 280 N.C. 479, 186 S.E.2d 372 (1972).

Judgment of Nonsuit for Variance Improvidently Entered. — The fact that one employee named in the indictment as the person endangered and threatened and from whom the store's money had been taken happened to be farther from the store's money than two other employees when it was taken into possession by robbers did not negate the fact that the money was taken from the presence of that employee and all other employees then on duty in the store; therefore a judgment of nonsuit for variance was improvidently entered. State v. Ballard, 280 N.C. 479, 186 S.E.2d 372 (1972).

VI. INSTRUCTIONS.

Instruction on Element of Felonious Taking. — In every armed robbery case the judge must instruct the jury on the element of felonious taking, but he need not use the specific words "felonious taking;" he is only required to describe in accurate terms the state of mind necessary for the crime. State v.

Harmon, 21 N.C. App. 508, 204 S.E.2d 883, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 593, 206 S.E.2d 864 (1974).

Explanation of Principles of Aiding and Abetting. — When the State presents evidence tending to show defendant might have aided and abetted, it is incumbent upon the trial court to explain the principles of aiding and abetting which apply to the particular evidence in the case. State v. Logan, 25 N.C. App. 49, 212 S.E.2d 236 (1975).

Reading Statute to Jury without Further Comment. — Any error resulting from a plain reading of the statute to the jury without further comment is neither material nor prejudicial. State v. Westry, 15 N.C. App. 1, 189 S.E.2d 618, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 763, 191 S.E.2d 360 (1972).

Instruction Not Misleading. — In its instructions, the trial court's use of the words "some weapon" rather than "firearms or other dangerous weapon," although not approved, was not such as to mislead or misinform the jury, where the court specified a pistol as the weapon allegedly used elsewhere in the charge. State v. Bailey, 278 N.C. 80, 178 S.E.2d 809 (1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972).

Instruction Not Relieving State of Proving Essential Element. — An instruction which merely informed the jury that a .22 caliber pistol was, in fact, a firearm, and should the jury find that defendant used a .22 caliber pistol on the occasion in question then such a weapon would be a firearm within the meaning of that term as used in this section, was not objectionable on the ground that the instruction in effect told the jury that defendant used a firearm in the commission of the robbery, thereby relieving the State of the burden of proving an essential element of armed robbery. State v. Bailey, 280 N.C. 264, 185 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 948, 93 S. Ct. 293, 34 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1972).

Unauthorized Expression of Opinion. — Where defendants entered pleas of not guilty to charges of armed robbery and there was nothing in the record to show that they made any judicial admission that the offense had actually occurred, a trial court's instruction to the jury that defendants "do not deny that somebody did this, but they say they are not the men, and some other men did it, not themselves," was an unauthorized expression of opinion on the evidence in violation of this section. State v. Brinkley, 10 N.C. App. 160, 177 S.E.2d 727 (1970).

Facts Supporting Only One Count of Robbery. — Where defendant took money from a store owner and no injury was inflicted on any one of the employees, even though the lives of all employees present were endangered, a charge and conviction of two counts of robbery was erroneous: Defendant committed only one robbery. State v. Potter, 285 N.C. 238, 204 S.E.2d 649 (1974).

Evidence Supporting Charge on Both Kidnapping and Armed Robbery. — Where a victim was forced from his residence at gunpoint and transported by a car for a distance of eight miles where he was robbed, there was sufficient asportation and evidence to support a charge to the jury on both kidnapping and armed robbery, and the State is not required to elect between charges. State v. Sommerset, 21 N.C. App. 272, 204 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 594, 205 S.E.2d 725 (1974).

VII. PUNISHMENT.

Punishment Provisions of Section Valid. — It is within the province of the General Assembly to prescribe maximum punishments which may be imposed upon those convicted of crime. It is not for courts to say that the policy judgment of the General Assembly with respect to punishment for armed robbery is wrong. Armed robbery is a crime of violence and those who take the risk must assume the consequences involved. The punishment provisions of this section are constitutionally valid. State v. Legette, 292 N.C. 44, 231 S.E.2d 896 (1977); State v. Watson, 294 N.C. 159, 240 S.E.2d 440 (1978).

Punishment Within Statutory Limits. — A sentence of 24 to 30 years for the offense of robbery with firearms does not exceed the maximum prescribed by this section and does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. State v. LePard, 270 N.C. 157, 153 S.E.2d 875 (1967).

A sentence for robbery which was within the statutory maximum did not constitute the cruel and unusual punishment forbidden by N.C. Const., Art. I, § 14 (now N.C. Const., Art. I, § 27). State v. Witherspoon, 271 N.C. 714, 157 S.E.2d 362 (1967).

Punishment under this section which does not exceed the limit fixed by this section cannot be considered cruel and unusual in a constitutional sense. State v. Frietch, 8 N.C. App. 331, 174 S.E.2d 149 (1970).

The sentences of defendants cannot be considered cruel and unusual punishment, where they are within the limits established by this section. State v. Neal, 19 N.C. App. 426, 199 S.E.2d 143 (1973); State v. Slade, 291 N.C. 275, 229 S.E.2d 921 (1976).

In a prosecution for armed robbery, the trial court did not err in sentencing defendant to prison "for the term of not less than thirty (30) years" without specifying a minimum term, since the maximum punishment for armed robbery was 30 years (now 40 years), and the judge set the minimum sentence at the maximum allowed by law. State v. Lipscomb, 27 N.C. App. 416, 219 S.E.2d 349 (1975).

A sentence which is within the maximum authorized by statute is not cruel and unusual in a constitutional sense, unless the punishment provisions of the statute itself are unconstitutional. State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977).

If defendant believes that the sentence imposed under this section upon his plea of guilty, understandingly and voluntarily made, is excessive, his sole recourse is to executive clemency, the sentence being within the statutory maximum. State v. Baugh, 268 N.C. 294, 150 S.E.2d 437 (1966).

Maximum Punishment for Common Law Robbery. — When, on a charge of robbery with firearms or other dangerous weapon, the jury returns a verdict of guilty of robbery, the maximum sentence that may be imposed is ten years. State v. Williams, 265 N.C. 446, 144 S.E.2d 267 (1965).

Discretion of Trial Judge in Imposing Sentence. — As long as a sentence is within the statutory limits, the punishment imposed by a trial judge is in his discretion. State v. Slade, 291 N.C. 275, 229 S.E.2d 921 (1976).

By virtue of subsection (a) of this section, the legislature has granted a wide discretion to the trained presiding judge who has had the opportunity to hear the facts, observe the parties to the proceeding and, after verdict, to inquire into the habits, mentality and past record of the person to be sentenced before imposing punishment within the limits of this section. The use of this discretionary power by the trial judge is not a denial of equal protection of the laws. State v. Jenkins, 292 N.C. 179, 232 S.E.2d 648 (1977).

Where a sentence is within statutory limits the punishment actually imposed by the trial judge is a discretionary matter. State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977).

The actual length of a sentence imposed is at the discretion of a trial judge so long as it is within statutory limits. State v. Watson, 294 N.C. 159, 240 S.E.2d 440 (1978).

Allowing Victim to Comment on Punishment of Defendant. — In a prosecution for armed robbery the trial court did not commit prejudicial error by allowing a victim of the attempted armed robbery to make a statement relating to the punishment of the defendant. State v. Clemmons, 34 N.C. App. 101, 237 S.E.2d 298 (1977), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 412, 251 S.E.2d 471 (1979).

Indictment Insufficient to Permit Punishment under Section. — A bill of indictment was sufficient to support a plea or conviction of highway robbery, for the facts alleged were sufficient to charge robbery by intimidation or violence, which is the gist of common-law robbery, but it did not allege that the life of a person was endangered or threatened by the use or threatened use of a dangerous weapon, instrument or means; hence, the indictment did not contain the additional allegations required in order to permit the more severe punishment provided for in this section. State v. Stewart, 255 N.C. 571, 122 S.E.2d 355 (1961).

Plea of Guilty of Robbery without Firearms. — Where defendant was charged with attempted robbery with firearms, his plea of guilty of robbery without firearms was insufficient to support judgment, and the court erred in accepting such plea. State v. Hare, 243 N.C. 262, 90 S.E.2d 550 (1955).

Court May Not Change Effect of Guilty Plea by Increasing Punishment. — Upon a plea of guilty of highway robbery the court could not change the effect of the plea by finding facts and thereby exposing defendant to greater punishment than the plea would support. State v. Stewart, 255 N.C. 571, 122 S.E.2d 355 (1961).

VIII. DOUBLE JEOPARDY.

Effect of Directed Verdict. — Since the crime of accessory after the fact has its beginning after the principal offense has been committed, a directed verdict of not guilty of armed robbery does not decide the issue of whether the defendant joined the criminal scheme after the robbery was complete. State v. Cox, 37 N.C. App. 356, 246 S.E.2d 152, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 649, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930, 99 S.Ct. 1268, 59 L.Ed.2d 487 (1979).

Trial Court Erred in Allowing Conviction. — The trial court erred in allowing the jury to convict defendant of attempted armed robbery and of aiding and abetting in common-law robbery, a lesser included offense of armed robbery. State v. Barksdale, 16 N.C. App. 559, 192 S.E.2d 659 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 673, 194 S.E.2d 152 (1973).

Prosecution As Accessory Before the Fact Not Barred by Insufficiency of Evidence to Support Armed Robbery Charge. — Insufficiency of the evidence to support a conviction for robbery did not entitle defendant to his discharge, and the State properly tried defendant on the same indictment as an accessory before the fact to the robbery. State v. Wiggins, 21 N.C. App. 441, 204 S.E.2d 692, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 595, 206 S.E.2d 866 (1974).

Prosecution for Armed Robbery Not Barred by Accquittal as Accessory. — An acquittal of a charge of accessory after the fact of armed robbery will not support a plea of former jeopardy in a subsequent prosecution of the same defendant for armed robbery. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L.Ed.2d 302 (1964).

Where an indictment charged defendants with robbery with firearms from the companion of the person they were formerly charged with killing, even though the two offenses were committed at the same time, and evidence of guilt of one of the offenses was substantially the same as the evidence of guilt of the other, the acquittal or conviction for one offense would not bar a subsequent prosecution for the other. State v. Dills, 210 N.C. 178, 185 S.E. 677 (1936).

Merger of Armed Robbery and Murder Charges. — Where it appeared conclusively that armed robbery charges were proved as essential elements in the capital offense of murder in the first degree upon which the defendants were convicted, the robberies became a part of and were merged into the murder charges, and having been so used, the defendants could not again be charged, convicted and sentenced for these elements although the robberies constituted crimes within themselves. State v. Carroll, 282 N.C. 326, 193 S.E.2d 85 (1972).

A defendant may be convicted for both conspiracy to commit robbery and the commission of the same robbery without being subject to double jeopardy. State v. Wiggins, 21 N.C. App. 441, 204 S.E.2d 692, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 595, 206 S.E.2d 866 (1974).

Separate Judgments May Be Entered for Armed Robbery and Felonious Assault. — When separate indictments for armed robbery and felonious assault based on separate features of one continuous course of conduct are tried together, and verdicts of guilty as charged are returned, these verdicts provide support for separate judgments. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

Convictions of Armed Robbery and Assault with a Deadly Weapon Arising from Same Conduct Will Not Support Separate Judgments. — If a person is convicted simultaneously of armed robbery and of the lesser included offense of assault with a deadly weapon, and both offenses arise out of the same conduct, and separate judgments are pronounced, the judgment on the separate verdict of guilty of assault with a deadly weapon must be arrested because in such case, the armed robbery is accomplished by the assault with a deadly weapon and all essentials of this assault charge are essentials of the armed robbery charge. State v. Richardson, 279 N.C. 621, 185 S.E.2d 102 (1971); State v. Lunsford, 26 N.C. App. 78, 214 S.E.2d 619 (1975).

If a person is convicted simultaneously of armed robbery and the lesser included offense of assault with a deadly weapon, and both offenses arise out of the same conduct, separate judgments may not be pronounced. State v. Alexander, 284 N.C. 87, 199 S.E.2d 450 (1973), cert. denied, 415 U.S. 927, 94 S. Ct. 1434, 39 L. Ed. 2d 484 (1974).

§ 14-87.1. Punishment for common-law robbery and attempted common-law robbery.

Robbery and attempted robbery as defined at common law, other than robbery with a firearm or other dangerous weapon as defined by G.S. 14-87, shall be punishable as a Class H felony. (1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

§ 14-88. Train robbery.

If any person shall enter upon any locomotive engine or car on any railroad in this State, and by threats, the exhibition of deadly weapons or the discharge of any pistol or gun, in or near any such engine or car, shall induce or compel any person on such engine or car to submit and deliver up, or allow to be taken therefrom, or from him, anything of value, he shall be guilty of train robbery, and on conviction thereof shall be punished as a Class F felon. (1895, c. 204, s. 2; Rev., s. 3765; C. S., s. 4266; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "as a Class F felon" for "by imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than ten years nor more than twenty years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws

1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

If any person shall stop, or cause to be stopped, or impede, or cause to be impeded, or conspire with others for that purpose, any locomotive engine or car on any railroad in this State, by intimidation of those in charge thereof or by force, threats or otherwise, for the purpose of taking therefrom or causing to be delivered up to such person so forcing, threatening or intimidating, anything of value, to be appropriated to his own use, he shall be guilty of attempting train robbery, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished as a Class F felon. § 14-89.1. Safecracking.

(a) A person is guilty of safecracking if he unlawfully opens, enters, or attempts to open or enter a safe or vault:

(1) By the use of explosives, drills, or tools; or

(2) Through the use of a stolen combination, key, electronic device, or other fraudulently acquired implement or means; or

(3) Through the use of a master key, duplicate key or device made or obtained in an unauthorized manner, stethoscope or other listening device, electronic device used for unauthorized entry in a safe or vault, or other surreptitious means; or

(4) By the use of any other safecracking implement or means.

(b) A person is also guilty of safecracking if he unlawfully removes from its premises a safe or vault for the purpose of stealing, tampering with, or ascertaining its contents.

(c) Safecracking shall be punishable as a Class H felony. (1961, c. 653; 1973, c. 235, s. 1; 1977, c. 1106; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote subsection (c), which formerly provided that safecracking should be a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than two nor more than 30 years. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Violation of this section is a felony. State v. Whaley, 262 N.C. 536, 138 S.E.2d 138 (1964).

Safecracking is a separate and distinct crime, usually requiring special implements or explosives and particular skills. State v. Buie, 26 N.C. App. 151, 215 S.E.2d 401 (1975).

Attempt and Completed Offense Are of Equal Dignity. — This section makes the completed act of safecracking and attempted safecracking offenses of equal dignity. State v. Sanders, 280 N.C. 81, 185 S.E.2d 158 (1971).

This section makes an attempt to force open a safe or vault a crime of equal dignity with the completed offense. State v. Sanders, 280 N.C. 81, 185 S.E.2d 158 (1971).

Acts Constituting Attempted Safecracking. — Removing the dial, sawing off the hinges, chiseling out a part of the concrete bottom of a small safe and smudging it with a blowtorch were held to go beyond mere preparation for safecracking and in law to constitute attempted safecracking. State v. Sanders, 280 N.C. 81, 185 S.E.2d 158 (1971).

Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction for safecracking. State v. Walker, 6 N.C. App. 447, 170 S.E.2d 627 (1969).

Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction of defendant as abettor of offense of attempted safecracking. State v. Spears, 268 N.C. 303, 150 S.E.2d 499 (1966).

Failure to Allege "Feloniously". — An indictment for violation of this section which does not contain the word "feloniously" is fatally defective. State v. Whaley, 262 N.C. 536, 138 S.E.2d 138 (1964).

An indictment which clearly states that a safe was opened "by the use of chopping tools," follows the language of the safecracking statute, and is entirely proper. State v. Martin, 20 N.C. App. 477, 201 S.E.2d 540 (1974).

Sentence of 48-50 years under former section held cruel and unusual punishment. See Thacker v. Garrison, 445 F. Supp. 376 (W.D.N.C. 1978).

ARTICLE 18.

Embezzlement.

§ 14-90. Embezzlement of property received by virtue of office or employment.

If any person exercising a public trust or holding a public office, or any guardian, administrator, executor, trustee, or any receiver, or any other fiduciary, or any officer or agent of a corporation, or any agent, consignee, clerk, bailee or servant, except persons under the age of 16 years, of any person, shall embezzle or fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapply or convert to his own use, or shall take, make away with or secrete, with intent to embezzle or fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapply or convert to his own use any money, goods or other chattels, bank note, check or order for the payment of money issued by or drawn on any bank or other corporation, or any treasury warrant, treasury note, bond or obligation for the payment of money issued by the United States or by any state, or any other valuable security whatsoever belonging to any other person or corporation, unincorporated association or organization which shall have come into his possession or under his care, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (21 Hen. VII, c. 7; 1871-2, c. 145, s. 2; Code, s. 1014; 1889, c. 226; 1891, c. 188; 1897, c. 31; Rev., s. 3406; 1919, c. 97, s. 25; C. S., s. 4268; 1931, c. 158; 1939, c. 1; 1941, c. 31; 1967, c. 819; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

As to embezzlement by a member of the State Sinking Fund Commission, see § 142-40. As to description in indictment for embezzlement, see § 15-150.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be punished as in cases of larceny" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Origin and Purpose. — Embezzlement was not a common-law offense. State v. Hill, 91 N.C. 561 (1884). It was first made a criminal offense in England by statute, 21 Henry VIII, ch. 7, to punish the appropriation by servants of the property of their masters in violation of the trust and confidence reposed in them. 1 McLain Cr. Law, § 621. It was enacted in consequence of a decision that a banker's clerk, who received money from a customer and appropriated it to his own use, could not be convicted of larceny on the ground that the money had never been in the employer's possession. Clark's Cr. Law, p. 308. State v. McDonald, 133 N.C. 680, 45 S.E.

582 (1903); State v. Griffin, 239 N.C. 41, 79 S.E.2d 230 (1953).

Strict Construction. — Statutes creating criminal offenses must be strictly construed. This rule has been applied with vigor in the construction of the embezzlement statute. State v. Ross, 272 N.C. 67, 157 S.E.2d 712 (1967).

This section is a penal statute, creating a new offense, and cannot be extended by construction to persons not within the classes designated. State v. Eurell, 220 N.C. 519, 17 S.E.2d 669 (1941).

The words "or any other fiduciary" show clearly the General Assembly did not intend to restrict the application of the 1939 amendment to receivers. State v. Ross, 272 N.C. 67, 157 S.E.2d 712 (1967).

The manifest purpose of the 1939 amendment was to enlarge the scope of the embezzlement statute. State v. Ross, 272 N.C. 67, 157 S.E.2d 712 (1967).

The offense of embezzlement is exclusively statutory. State v. Blair, 227 N.C. 70, 40 S.E.2d 460 (1946); State v. Thornton, 251 N.C. 658, 111 S.E.2d 901 (1960).

The crime of embezzlement, unknown to the common law, was created and is defined by statute. State v. Ross, 272 N.C. 67, 157 S.E.2d 712 (1967); State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971); State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 652, 197 S.E.2d 614 (1973), cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973); State v. Agnew, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684 (1978).

Embezzlement is a statutory crime. State v. Ellis, 33 N.C. App. 667, 236 S.E.2d 299, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 255, 236 S.E.2d 708 (1977).

Embezzlement Defined. — Embezzlement is simply a fraudulent breach of trust by misapplying the property entrusted to the defendant to the use either of himself or another, when done with a fraudulent intent. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Embezzlement and fraudulent conversion are not necessarily and strictly synonymous. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Section 14-168.1 Compared. — Section 14-168.1 is more limited in its scope with regard to bailees than this section; it appears to embrace a bailee "who fraudulent converts the same" to his own use, while this section covers the bailee who "shall embezzle or fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapply or convert to his own use." State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Section 14-168.1 does not remove bailees from this section or make embezzlement by a bailee a misdemeanor. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

There is no irreconcilable conflict between this section and § 14-168.1 as they relate to bailees. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Section 14-254 Compared. — The use of the word "abstract" in § 14-254 differentiates it from this section. The latter applies to embezzlement and excepts offenders under sixteen years of age. It is not necessary under § 14-254 to allege that the defendant is more than sixteen years old. State v. Switzer, 187 N.C. 88, 121 S.E. 143 (1924).

Accusation of Embezzlement Actionable Per Se in Slander. — The offense defined in this section is a felony, and a false accusation thereof is slander, actionable per se, and malice is presumed. Elmore v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 189 N.C. 658, 127 S.E. 710 (1925).

Applied in State v. Hitt, 25 N.C. App. 216, 212 S.E.2d 540 (1975).

Stated in In re Hege, 205 N.C. 625, 172 S.E. 345 (1934).

Cited in State v. Hill, 91 N.C. 561 (1884); State v. Harper, 94 N.C. 936 (1886); State v. Dunn, 134 N.C. 663, 46 S.E. 949 (1904); State v. Connor, 142 N.C. 700, 55 S.E. 787 (1906); Beck v. Bank of Thomasville, 161 N.C. 201, 76 S.E. 722 (1912); State v. Wadford, 194 N.C. 336, 139 S.E. 608 (1927); State v. Harwood, 206 N.C. 87, 173 S.E. 24 (1934); State v. Shore, 206 N.C. 743, 175 S.E. 116 (1934); State v. Babb, 34 N.C. App. 336, 238 S.E.2d 308 (1977).

II. WHO MAY BE GUILTY OF EMBEZZLEMENT.

Fiduciary Defined. — The trial court in a prosecution for embezzlement in violation of this section properly defined a fiduciary as "a person having a duty created by his undertaking to act primarily for another's benefit." State v. Seay, 44 N.C. App. 301, 260 S.E.2d 786 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 333, 265 S.E.2d 401, — U.S. —, 101 S. Ct. 89, 66 L. Ed. 2d 29 (1980).

Bailee. — The fact that ch. 31, Public Laws 1941, amended this section, by adding "bailee" to the classes of persons specified constitutes a legislative declaration that theretofore a bailee was not included in the definition of classes of persons made by the statute. State v. Eurell, 220 N.C. 519, 17 S.E.2d 669 (1941).

A contractor is not an officer, clerk or servant within the meaning of this section. State v. Barton, 125 N.C. 702, 34 S.E. 553 (1899).

Vendor. — This section does not embrace a vendor in an executory contract of purchase and sale. State v. Blair, 227 N.C. 70, 40 S.E.2d 460 (1946); State v. Thornton, 251 N.C. 658, 111 S.E.2d 901 (1960).

The relation of lessor and lessee is not embraced by this section. State v. Keith, 126 N.C. 1114, 36 S.E. 169 (1900).

Debtor and Creditor. — Where the relationship between the parties is that of debtor and creditor and not that of employee and employer the debtor cannot be guilty of embezzlement of any funds due on the account. Gray v. Bennett, 250 N.C. 707, 110 S.E.2d 324 (1959).

Clerks of the Superior Courts. — This section does not apply to clerks of the superior courts and like officers who would seem to fall within the terms of § 14-92. State v. Connelly, 104 N.C. 794, 10 S.E. 469 (1889).

One Commissioned by Clerk of Superior Court. — One who, under authority of and subject to the orders of the clerk of the superior court, is commissioned to collect, receive and handle money, and to disburse it to those entitled thereto under the law, has substantially the same status as a court-appointed receiver. Such commissioner is a fiduciary in the same sense a receiver is a fiduciary. State v. Ross, 272 N.C. 67, 157 S.E.2d 712 (1967).

Commissioner in Equity Cannot Be Convicted as Agent or Attorney. — A commissioner appointed by a court of equity to sell land is empowered to do one specific act, viz: to sell the land and distribute the proceeds to the parties entitled thereto; immediately upon his appointment he ceases to be an attorney or agent for either party, and where the indictment charges the defendant with embezzlement of funds under this section as commissioner the defendant could not be convicted as agent or attorney. State v. Ray, 207 N.C. 642, 178 S.E. 224 (1935).

III. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

Elements Generally. — To convict a defendant of embezzlement in violation of this section the Supreme Court has declared that "four distinct propositions of fact must be established, (1) that the defendant was the agent of the prosecutor, and (2) by the terms of his employment had received property of his principal; (3) that he received it in the course of his employment; and (4) knowing it was not his own, converted it to his own use." State v. Buzzelli, 11 N.C. App. 52, 180 S.E.2d 472, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 350, 182 S.E.2d 583 (1971).

Embezzlement in violation of this section requires the establishment of four elements: (1) that the defendant was the agent of the prosecutor; (2) that by the terms of his employment he was to receive the property of his principal; (3) that he received the property in the course of his employment; and (4) that, knowing it was not his own, he converted it to his own use or fraudulently misapplied it. State v. Ellis, 33 N.C. App. 667, 236 S.E.2d 299, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 255, 236 S.E.2d 708 (1977); State v. Seay, 44 N.C. App. 301, 260 S.E.2d 786 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 333, 265 S.E.2d 401, — U.S. —, 101 S. Ct. 89, 66 L. Ed. 2d 29 (1980).

In order to convict a defendant of embezzlement under this section, the State must prove three distinct elements: (1) that the defendant, being more than 16 years of age, acted as an agent or fiduciary for his principal, (2) that he received money or valuable property of his principal in the course of his employment and by virtue of his fiduciary relationship, and (3) that he fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapplied or converted to his own use such money or valuable property of his principal which he had received in his fiduciary capacity. State v. Pate, 40 N.C. App. 580, 253 S.E.2d 266, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 616, 257 S.E.2d 222 (1979).

This section makes criminal the fraudulent conversion of personal property by one occupying some position of trust or some fiduciary relationship. The person accused must have been entrusted with and received into his possession lawfully the personal property of another, and thereafter with felonious intent must have fraudulent converted the property to his own use. State v. Griffin, 239 N.C. 41, 79 S.E.2d 230 (1953).

In order to convict a defendant of embezzlement, four distinct propositions of fact must be established: (1) that the defendant was the agent of the prosecutor, and (2) by the terms of his employment had received property of his principal; (3) that he received it in the course of his employment; and (4) knowing it was not his own, converted it to his own use. State v. Block, 245 N.C. 661, 97 S.E.2d 243 (1957); State v. McCaskill, 47 N.C. App. 289, 267 S.E.2d 331 (1980).

The establishment by the State of the following elements was sufficient to constitute embezzlement under this section: (1) Defendant was the agent of his principal and charged with the duty of receiving from his principal in his fiduciary capacity, and paying over to a third party certain payments; (2) that he did in fact receive such money; (3) that he received his money in the course of his employment and by virtue of his fiduciary relationship; and (4) defendant knowing this money was not his own fraudulently embezzled and converted some of these payments entrusted to him in his fiduciary relationship to his own use. State v. Helsabeck, 258 N.C. 107, 128 S.E.2d 205 (1962).

To withstand the defendant's motion to dismiss, the burden was on the State to offer substantial evidence of the material elements of embezzlement as follow: (1) defendant, President of employer-corporation, was the agent of the employees of the corporation with the duty of receiving in his fiduciary capacity money of the employees deducted from their wages for payment over to an insurance company on a group life, medical, and accidental death policy; (2) he did in fact receive such money; (3) he received this money as such agent by virtue of his fiduciary relationship; and (4) he, knowing this money was not his own, with fraudulent intent embezzled or misapplied the money so entrusted to him. State v. Seufert, 49 N.C. App. 524, — S.E.2d — (1980).

Fraudulent intent is a necessary element of the statutory offense of embezzlement and the State must prove such intent beyond a reasonable doubt, but direct proof is not necessary, it being sufficient if facts and circumstances are shown from which it may be reasonably inferred. State v. McLean, 209 N.C. 38, 182 S.E. 700 (1935).

The criminality of the act of embezzlement depends upon the intent, and therefore the State must show the intent to defraud beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, — S.E.2d — (1981).

The intent to fraudulently or willfully misapply the principal's property for purposes other than that for which it was received is an essential element of embezzlement that the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Pate, 40 N.C. App. 580, 253 S.E.2d 266, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 616, 257 S.E.2d 222 (1979).

Conversion To Own Use Not Necessary. — To embezzle is for an agent fraudulently to misapply the property of his principal; it is not necessary that the agent should convert it to his own use, that is, expend the money for his own benefit. State v. Foust, 114 N.C. 842, 19 S.E. 276 (1894).

It is not necessary to show that the agent converted his principal's property to the agent's own use. It is sufficient to show that the agent fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapplied it, or that he secreted it with intent to embezzle or fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapply it. State v. Smithey, 15 N.C. App. 427, 190 S.E.2d 369 (1972); State v. Bryant, 50 N.C. App. 139, 272 S.E.2d 916 (1980).

It is not necessary to show that the agent converted his principal's property to his own use so long as it is shown that the agent fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapplied it. State v. Pate, 40 N.C. App. 580, 253 S.E.2d 266, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 616, 257 S.E.2d 222 (1979).

And Mere Conversion Is Insufficient. — The mere converting or appropriating the property of another to one's own use is not sufficient to constitute the crime of embezzlement, fraudulent intent in the act of such conversion or appropriation being an essential element of the offense. State v. Cahoon, 206 N.C. 388, 174 S.E. 91 (1934).

And the act of conversion does not raise the presumption of a felonious intent in a prosecution of an indictment for embezzlement. State v. Agnew, 33 N.C. App. 496, 236 S.E.2d 287 (1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 830, 99 S. Ct. 107, 58 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1978).

Meaning of Fraudulent Intent. — Fraudulent intent within the meaning of this section is the intent to willfully or corruptly use or misapply the property of another for purposes other than that for which it is held, and evidence tending to show that defendant, without authorization, applied funds of his employer to his own use, although defendant testified that he used the funds to pay a debt due him by his employer, is sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the question of fraudulent intent. State v. McLean, 209 N.C. 38, 182 S.E. 700 (1935); State v. Howard, 222 N.C. 291, 22 S.E.2d 917 (1942); State v. Agnew, 33 N.C. App. 496, 236 S.E.2d 287 (1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 830, 99 S. Ct. 107, 58 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1978).

Fraudulent intent which constitutes a necessary element of embezzlement, within the meaning of this section, is the intent of the agent to embezzle or otherwise willfully and corruptly use or misapply the property of the principal or employer for purposes other than those for which the property is held. State v. Gentry, 228 N.C. 643, 46 S.E.2d 863, cert. denied, 335 U.S. 818, 69 S. Ct. 39, 93 L. Ed. 372 (1948); State v. Smithey, 15 N.C. App. 427, 190 S.E.2d 369 (1972).

The fraudulent intent required under this section is the intent to willfully or corruptly use or misapply the property of another for purposes other than those for which the agent or fiduciary received it in the course of his employment. State v. Pate, 40 N.C. App. 580, 253 S.E.2d 266, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 616, 257 S.E.2d 222 (1979).

Intent to Repay No Defense. — An intent to restore the property embezzled or a readiness and willingness at a latter date is not a defense to a prosecution under this section. State v. Summers, 141 N.C. 841, 53 S.E. 856 (1906).

It is no defense to a prosecution for embezzlement that the defendant intended to return the property obtained or was able and willing to do so at a later date. State v. Agnew, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684 (1978).

Trespass is not a necessary element. In embezzlement the possession of the property is acquired lawfully by virtue of the fiduciary relationship and thereafter the felonious intent and fraudulent conversion enter in to make the act of appropriation a crime. State v. Griffin, 239 N.C. 41, 79 S.E.2d 230 (1953).

Nor Is Demand for Payment. — A demand is not necessary to support a prosecution under this section as it is not made a prerequisite to prosecution. State v. Blackley, 138 N.C. 620, 50 S.E. 310 (1905).

Property of Prosecutor. — The property alleged to have been embezzled must be the property of the prosecutor. State v. Barton, 125 N.C. 702, 34 S.E. 553 (1899).

Goods Received under Special Directions. — Where goods come into the possession of a servant, out of the ordinary course of his employment, but in pursuance of special directions from the master to receive them, and the servant embezzles the same, he is indictable under this section. State v. Costin, 89 N.C. 511 (1883).

IV. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

A. In General.

Burden of Proof — Intent. — The conversion being admitted or shown, the burden is on the State to show beyond a reasonable doubt the intent to defraud. State v. McDonald, 133 N.C. 680, 45 S.E. 582 (1903).

Same — Age of Defendant. — The burden of showing that he is under age is on the defendant and the State is not called on to prove that he is past sixteen years old, for this is a matter of defense and within the defendant's knowledge. State v. Blackley, 138 N.C. 620, 50 S.E. 310 (1905).

B. Indictment.

The name of the person from whom the money was received need not be stated. State v. Lanier, 88 N.C. 658 (1883); State v. Lanier, 89 N.C. 517 (1883).

Name of Corporation. — In an indictment for embezzlement, where the property belongs to a corporation, the name of the corporation should be given, and the fact that it is a corporation stated, unless the name itself imports a corporation. State v. Ellis, 33 N.C. App. 667, 236 S.E.2d 299, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 255, 236 S.E.2d 708 (1977).

Age of Defendant. — The averment that the defendant is neither an apprentice nor under the age of sixteen years, is a substantial compliance with the statute. State v. Lanier, 88 N.C. 658 (1883); State v. Lanier, 89 N.C. 517 (1883).

It need not be alleged or proved that the property had been committed to the care of defendant, nor that any breach of confidence or trust, save that which grows out of the relation of owner and servant or agent, had occurred. State v. Wilson, 101 N.C. 730, 7 S.E. 872 (1888).

Necessity of Alleging Ownership. — In an indictment for embezzlement it is necessary to allege ownership of the property in a person, corporation, or other legal entity able to own property. State v. Ellis, 33 N.C. App. 667, 236 S.E.2d 299, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 255, 236 S.E.2d 708 (1977).

Where the owner of embezzled property is an association, partnership, corporation, or other firm or organization, there must be allegations showing such organization to be a legal entity capable of owning property as such, or the individuals comprising the same and owing the property should be set out as owners. State v. Thornton, 251 N.C. 658, 111 S.E.2d 901 (1960).

The common-law offense of larceny contemplates that the property taken must belong to or be in the possession of another and the statutory offense of embezzlement provides that the misappropriated property must belong to "any other person or corporation, unincorporated association, or organization." In view of the breadth of the offenses, the warrant or bill of indictment charging these offenses must allege the ownership of the property either in a natural person or a legal entity capable of owning property. State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 652, 197 S.E.2d 614 (1973), cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973).

It is unnecessary to determine whether an indictment could be sustained under other of the cognate statutes, §§ 14-91 through 14-99; where an indictment of a bank receiver for embezzlement is drawn under this section. State v. Whitehurst, 212 N.C. 300, 193 S.E. 657 (1937).

Fatal Variance Where Only Violation of § 14-92 Charged. — The crime of embezzlement rests upon statute alone and conviction thereof under an indictment drawn under this section, when the evidence tends only to show a violation of § 14-92, is erroneous upon the ground that the proof is at variance with the offense charged in the bill. State v. Grace, 196 N.C. 280, 145 S.E. 399 (1928).

Indictment Sufficient under Both This Section and § 14-92. — There was no merit to defendant city clerk's contention that her convictions for embezzlement from the city were invalid in that she was convicted for violations of this section, which is a private sector embezzlement statute, when she should have been tried for violations of § 14-92, a statute applicable to public officials, since the indictments against defendant did not refer specifically to any statute, they were sufficient to charge defendant with violations of either this section or § 14-92, and the sentence imposed for each offense of which defendant was convicted was within the maximum permissible under either statute. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Indictment under This Section Rather Than § 14-168.1. — It was proper for the State to elect to indict the defendant for felonious embezzlement under this section, the broader statute, rather than to indict him under § 14-168.1, the narrower statute. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

C. Evidence.

Proof of Fraudulent Intent. — The element of fraudulent intent necessary to sustain an embezzlement conviction may be established by evidence of facts and circumstances from which it reasonably may be inferred, as well as by direct evidence. State v. Agnew, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684 (1978).

The fraudulent intent within the meaning of this section may be shown by direct evidence, or by evidence of facts and circumstances from which it may reasonably be inferred. State v. Helsabeck, 258 N.C. 107, 128 S.E.2d 205 (1962); State v. Smithey, 15 N.C. App. 427, 190 S.E.2d 369 (1972).

It is not necessary that the State offer direct proof of fraudulent intent, it being sufficient if facts and circumstances are shown from which it may be reasonably inferred. State v. Pate, 40 N.C. App. 580, 253 S.E.2d 266, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 616, 257 S.E.2d 222 (1977).

Sufficiency To Show Conversion. — The mere making of false entries in books of account is not sufficient evidence of an act of conversion constituent to the crime of embezzlement regardless of the defendant's fraudulent intent at the time of making such a false entry. But depositing funds of another in one's own account, together with the making of incorrect entries in books of account, and failing to turn the other's funds over to him at a time when obligated to do so, is sufficient evidence of conversion. State v. Buzzelli, 11 N.C. App. 52, 180 S.E.2d 472, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 350, 182 S.E.2d 583 (1971).

Evidence of Defendant's Spending and Deposits. — Evidence that during a period in which a defendant had allegedly been guilty of embezzling money from his employer the defendant spent money considerably in excess of his known income or made large bank deposits has been held admissible. State v. Buzzelli, 11 N.C. App. 52, 180 S.E.2d 472, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 350, 182 S.E.2d 583 (1971).

Testimony as to Signatures. — The trial court in an embezzlement case properly allowed a State's witness to testify that the signature on checks introduced as State's exhibits was that of defendant where the witness testified that he had seen defendant write her signature on thousands of occasions. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, — S.E.2d — (1981).

D. Instructions.

Reference to Crime of Larceny. — The trial court in an embezzlement case did not err in referring in the instructions to the crime of larceny where the court was simply explaining the crime of embezzlement by contrasting it with the crime of larceny. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, — S.E.2d — (1981).

§ 14-91. Embezzlement of State property by public officers and employees.

If any officer, agent, or employee of the State, or other person having or holding in trust for the same any bonds issued by the State, or any security, or other property and effects of the same, shall embezzle or knowingly and willfully misapply or convert the same to his own use, or otherwise willfully or corruptly abuse such trust, such offender and all persons knowingly and willfully aiding and abetting or otherwise assisting therein shall be punished as a Class F felon. (1874-5, c. 52; Code, s. 1015; Rev., s. 3407; C. S., s. 4269; 1979, c. 716; c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1979 amendment inserted "knowingly and willfully" preceding "aiding and abetting or otherwise assisting" near the end of the section, and deleted "and shall be fined not less than ten thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the State's prison not less than twenty years, or both, at the discretion of the court" at the end of this section.

The second 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class F felon" for "guilty of a felony" at the end of the section. The second 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

The word "property" is sufficiently all inclusive to embrace money, goods, chattels, evidences of debt and things in action. State v. Ward, 222 N.C. 316, 22 S.E.2d 922 (1942).

The fraudulent intent which constitutes a necessary element of the crime of embezzlement, within this section, is the intent to embezzle or otherwise willfully and corruptly use or misapply the property of the principal or employer for purposes other than those for which the property is held. State v. Howard, 222 N.C. 291, 22 S.E.2d 917 (1942).

§ 14-92. Embezzlement of funds by public officers and trustees.

If any officer, agent, or employee of any city, county or incorporated town, or of any penal, charitable, religious or educational institution; or if any person having or holding any moneys or property in trust for any city, county, incorporated town, penal, charitable, religious or educational institution, shall embezzle or otherwise willfully and corruptly use or misapply the same for any purpose other than that for which such moneys or property is held, such person shall be punished as a Class H felon. If any clerk of the superior court or any sheriff, treasurer, register of deeds or other public officer of any county or town of the State shall embezzle or wrongfully convert to his own use, or corruptly use, or shall misapply for any purpose other than that for which the same are held, or shall fail to pay over and deliver to the proper persons entitled to receive the same when lawfully required so to do, any moneys, funds, securities or other property which such officer shall have received by virtue or color of his office in trust for any person or corporation, such officer shall be punished as a Class H felon. The provisions of this section shall apply to all persons who shall go out of office and fail or neglect to account to or deliver over to their successors in office or other persons lawfully entitled to receive the same all such moneys, funds and securities or property aforesaid. (1876-7, c. 47; Code, s. 1016; 1891, c. 241; Rev., s. 3408; C. S., s. 4270; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be fined and imprisoned in the State's prison in the discretion of the court" at the end of the first sentence, substituted "shall be punished as a Class H felon" for "shall be guilty of a felony" at the end of the second sentence and deleted the former last sentence, which read: "The punishment shall be imprisonment in the State's prison or county jail, or fine in the discretion of the court." The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Section 14-231 Compared. — See State v. Windley, 178 N.C. 670, 100 S.E. 116 (1919).

Section Inapplicable to Private Property. — This section does not embrace the unlawful appropriation of the property of private individuals. State v. Connelly, 104 N.C. 794, 10 S.E. 469 (1889).

Meaning of "Willfully and Corruptly". — The words "willfully" and "corruptly," as they relate to misapplication of funds under this section, have been defined as "[d]one with an unlawful intent," and "the act of an official or fiduciary person who unlawfully and wrongfully uses his station or character to procure some benefit for himself or for another person, contrary to duty and the rights of others," State v. Agnew, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684 (1978).

In a charge upon the trial of county officials for the misapplication of county funds under the provisions of this section, the definition that "wilfully and corruptly" meant with "bad faith and without regard to the rights of others and in the interest of such parties for whom the funds were held" was not erroneous under the circumstances of the case. State v. Shipman, 202 N.C. 518, 163 S.E. 657 (1932).

Fraudulent Intent Is Necessary. — Unless fraudulent intent is proved, the offense under this section is not proved. State v. Agnew, 33 N.C. App. 496, 236 S.E.2d 287, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 361, 237 S.E.2d 848 (1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 830, 99 S. Ct. 107, 58 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1978).

The State need not prove embezzlement or misapplication of the entire sum alleged in the indictment. State v. Agnew, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684 (1978).

Nor Exclusive Possession. — It is not necessary for the State to prove that defendant had exclusive possession of the funds to sustain a charge of embezzlement under this section. More than one person can have possession of the same property at the same time. State v. Barbour, 43 N.C. App. 143, 258 S.E.2d 475 (1979).

Knowledge of Supervisory Board No Excuse. — The fact that a supervisory board has knowledge of a subordinate's unlawful use of public moneys, does not excuse or justify one who knowingly misapplies such funds unlawfully. State v. Angnew, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684 (1978).

Sufficiency of Indictment under Both this Section and § 14-90. — There was no merit to defendant city clerk's contention that her convictions for embezzlement from the city were invalid in that she was convicted for violations of § 14-90, which is a private sector embezzlement statute, when she should have been tried for violations of this section, a statute applicable to public officials, since the indictments against defendant did not refer specifically to any statute, they were sufficient to charge defendant with violations of either § 14-90 or this section, and the sentence imposed for each offense of which defendant was convicted was within the maximum permissible under either statute. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Fraudulent Intent Can Be Inferred. — The fraudulent intent required in the charge of embezzlement can be inferred from the facts proven. It is not necessary that there be direct evidence of such intent. State v. Barbour, 43 N.C. App. 143, 258 S.E.2d 475 (1979).

Evidence that defendant city clerk wrote salary checks to herself in excess of the amount authorized was sufficient to permit a reasonable inference that defendant fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapplied the city's funds to her own use without authorization so as to support her conviction of embezzlement. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Testimony as to Signature. — The trial court in an embezzlement case properly allowed a State's witness to testify that the signature on checks introduced as State's exhibits was that of defendant where the witness testified that he had seen defendant write her signature on thousands of occasions. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Instructions — Use of Words "Fiduciary Person". — Trial court in an embezzlement case did not commit prejudicial error in charging the jury that defendant was a fiduciary person though this section, neither contains nor refers to the words "fiduciary person," since the trial court was not restricted to using the exact words of the statute in giving instructions and the use of "fiduciary person" to define that statutory phrasing of this section has been specifically approved by the North Carolina Supreme Court. The use of the words was not an expression of trial judge's opinion contrary to the mandate of § 15A-1222. State v. Barbour, 43 N.C. App. 143, 258 S.E.2d 475 (1979).

Same — Reference to Crime of Larceny. — The trial court in an embezzlement case did not err in referring in the instructions to the crime of larceny where the court was simply explaining the crime of embezzlement by contrasting it with the crime of larceny. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, — S.E.2d — (1981).

§ 14-93. Embezzlement by treasurers of charitable and religious organizations.

If any treasurer or other financial officer of any benevolent or religious institution, society or congregation shall lend any of the moneys coming into his hands to any other person or association without the consent of the institution, association or congregation to whom such moneys belong; or, if he shall fail to account for such moneys when called on, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1879, c. 105; Code, s. 1017; Rev., s. 3409; C. S., s. 4271.)

CASE NOTES

Two Offenses Created. — Under this section two offenses are created which apply to certain officers of benevolent or religious institutions. One offense is the lending of their moneys without consent; the other is the failure to account for such moneys. State v. Dunn, 138 N.C. 672, 50 S.E. 772 (1905).

Association for Members Solely. — An association organized for the benefit of its members solely is not a benevolent or religious association and in indictment under this section cannot be sustained against an officer who misappropriates funds of the association. State v. Dunn, 134 N.C. 663, 46 S.E. 949 (1904).

§ 14-94. Embezzlement by officers of railroad companies.

If any president, secretary, treasurer, director, engineer, agent or other officer of any railroad company shall embezzle any moneys, bonds or other valuable funds or securities, with which such president, secretary, treasurer, director, engineer, agent or other officer shall be charged by virtue of his office or agency, or shall in any way, directly or indirectly, apply or appropriate the same for the use or benefit of himself or any other person, state or corporation, other than the company of which he is president, secretary, treasurer, director, engineer, agent or other officer, for every such offense the person so offending shall be guilty of a felony, and on conviction in the superior or criminal court of any county through which the railroad of such company shall pass, shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1870-1, c. 103, s. 1; Code, s. 1018; Rev., s. 3403; C. S., s. 4272; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "imprisoned in the State's prison not less than three nor more than ten years, and fined not less than one thousand nor more than ten thousand dollars" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-95. Conspiring with officers of railroad companies to embezzle.

If any person shall agree, combine, collude or conspire with the president, secretary, treasurer, director, engineer or agent of any railroad company to commit any offense specified in G.S. 14-94, such person so offending shall be guilty of a felony, and on conviction in the superior or criminal court of a county through which the railroad of any company against which such offense may be perpetrated passes, shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1870-1, c. 103, s. 2; Code, s. 1019; Rev., s. 3404; C. S., s. 4273; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than three nor more than ten years, and fined not less than one thousand nor more than ten thousand dollars" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-96. Embezzlement by insurance agents and brokers.

If any insurance agent or broker who acts in negotiating a contract of insurance by an insurance company, association or fraternal order or society, lawfully doing business in this State, embezzles or fraudulently converts to his own use, or, with intent to use or embezzle, takes, secretes or otherwise disposes of, or fraudulently withholds, appropriates, lends, invests or otherwise uses or applies any money or substitute for money received by him as such agent or broker, contrary to the instructions or without the consent of the company for or on account of which the same was received by him, he shall be deemed guilty of larceny. (1889, c. 54, s. 103; Rev., s. 3489; 1911, c. 196, s. 8; C. S., s. 4274.)

§ 14-96.1. Report to Commissioner.

Whenever any insurance company, its manager, general agent or other representative knows or has reasonable cause to believe that any agent, broker or other representative of such company is guilty under the preceding section [G.S. 14-96], it shall be the duty of such company, its manager, general agent or other representative, within thirty days after acquiring such knowledge to file with the Commissioner a complete statement of all the relevant facts and circumstances. All such reports shall be privileged communications, and when filed in good faith shall in nowise subject the company or individuals making the same to any liability whatsoever. The Commissioner may suspend the license to do business in this State of any insurance company, its general manager, agent or other representative who willfully fails to comply with this section. (1945, c. 382.)

§ 14-97. Appropriation of partnership funds by partner to personal use.

Any person engaged in a partnership business in the State of North Carolina who shall, without the knowledge and consent of his copartner or copartners, take funds belonging to the partnership business and appropriate the same to his own personal use with the fraudulent intent of depriving his copartners of the use thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person or persons violating the provisions of this section, upon conviction, shall be punished as is now done in cases of misdemeanor. (1921, c. 127; C. S., s. 4274(a).)

CASE NOTES

Fraudulent intent is an essential element of this crime and must be proved by the State, and in a prosecution under this section an instruction that the jury should return a verdict of guilty if they found beyond a reasonable doubt the facts to be as the evidence tended to show, is error, the question of fraudulent intent being a question for the jury to determine from the evidence. State v. Rawls, 202 N.C. 397, 162 S.E. 899 (1932).

§ 14-98. Embezzlement by surviving partner.

If any surviving partner shall willfully and intentionally convert any of the property, money or effects belonging to the partnership to his own use, and refuse to account for the same on settlement, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1901, c. 640, s. 9; Rev., s. 3405; C. S., s. 4275; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be punished by fine or imprisonment in the State's prison in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-99. Embezzlement of taxes by officers.

If any officer appropriates to his own use the State, county, school, city or town taxes, he shall be guilty of embezzlement, and shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1883, c. 136, s. 49; Code, s. 3705; Rev., s. 3410; C. S., s. 4276; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class I felon" for "may be punished by confinement in the State's prison not exceeding five years, at the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Inference of Fraudulent Intent. — While the intent to commit the offense of embezzlement is an essential ingredient of the crime, the fraudulent intent may be inferred by the jury under evidence sufficient to show it, and where under such evidence the trial court correctly defines such intent, and places the burden of proof throughout the trial on the State to show the intent beyond a reasonable doubt, an exception that the court failed to instruct the jury upon the element of felonious intent is untenable. State v. Lancaster, 202 N.C. 204, 162 S.E. 367 (1932).

ARTICLE 19.

False Pretenses and Cheats.

§ 14-100. Obtaining property by false pretenses.

(a) If any person shall knowingly and designedly by means of any kind of false pretense whatsoever, whether the false pretense is of a past or subsisting fact or of a future fulfillment or event, obtain or attempt to obtain from any person within this State any money, goods, property, services, chose in action, or other thing of value with intent to cheat or defraud any person of such money, goods, property, services, chose in action or other thing of value, such person shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished as a Class H felon: Provided, that if, on the trial of anyone indicted for such crime, it shall be proved that he obtained the property in such manner as to amount to larceny or embezzlement, the jury shall have submitted to them such other felony proved; and no person tried for such felony shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for larceny or embezzlement upon the same facts: Provided, further, that it shall be sufficient in any indictment for obtaining or attempting to obtain any such money, goods, property, services, chose in action, or other thing of value by false pretenses to allege that the party accused did the act with intent to defraud, without alleging an intent to defraud any particular person, and without alleging any ownership of the money, goods, property, services, chose in action or other thing of value; and upon the trial of any such indictment, it shall not be necessary to prove either an intent to defraud any particular person or that the person to whom the false pretense was made was the person defrauded, but it shall be sufficient to allege and prove that the party accused made the false pretense charged with an intent to defraud.

(b) Evidence of nonfulfillment of a contract obligation standing alone shall not establish the essential element of intent to defraud.

(c) For purposes of this section, "person" means person, association, consortium, corporation, body politic, partnership, or other group, entity, or organization. (33 Hen. VIII, c. 1, ss. 1, 2; 30 Geo. II, c. 24, s. 1; 1811, c. 814, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 67; Code, s. 1025; Rev., s. 3432; C. S., s. 4277; 1975, c. 783; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "imprisoned in the State's prison not less than four months nor more than ten years, and fined, in the discretion of the court" in subsection (a) immediately preceding the first proviso. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Elements of The Offense.
III. Indictment.
IV. Illustrative Cases.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Origin of Section. — This section was derived from the English statutes, 33 Henry VIII, and 30 George II. State v. Yarboro, 194 N.C. 498, 140 S.E. 216 (1927).

Purpose. — The simple purpose of this section is to prevent persons from using false pretenses to obtain property. The ultimate loss to the victim, therefore, is an issue which is irrelevant to the purpose of the criminal statute and is an issue properly within the province of the civil courts. State v. Hines, 36 N.C. App. 33, 243 S.E.2d 782, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 262, 245 S.E.2d 779 (1978).

The gist of the offense described in this section is obtaining something of value from the owner thereof by false pretense. State v. Wilson, 34 N.C. App. 474, 238 S.E.2d 632, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 188, 241 S.E.2d 72 (1977).

The essence of the crime is the intentional false pretense — not the resulting economic harm to the victim. State v. Hines, 36 N.C. App. 33, 243 S.E.2d 782, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 262, 245 S.E.2d 779 (1978).

Scope of Proscribed Activity Broadened by 1975 Amendment. — The legislature, by the unambiguous language of the 1975 amendment of this section, clearly intended to broaden the scope of the proscribed activity so as to make a false representation "of a past or subsisting fact or of a future fulfillment or event" punishable under the statute, and to include in the definition of the crime an attempt to obtain something of value with an intent to defraud. State v. Cronin, 299 N.C. 229, 262 S.E.2d 277 (1980).

Corporations Liable. — See State v. Rowland Lumber Co., 153 N.C. 610, 69 S.E. 58 (1910).

Applied in State v. Simpson, 25 N.C. App. 176, 212 S.E.2d 566 (1975); State v. Grier, 35 N.C. App. 119, 239 S.E.2d 870 (1978).

Cited in State v. Page, 32 N.C. App. 478, 232 S.E.2d 460 (1977); State v. Hill, 45 N.C. App. 136, 263 S.E.2d 14 (1980).

II. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

Elements Generally. — The crime of obtaining property by false pretenses pursuant to this section should be defined as a false representation: (1) of a subsisting fact or a future fulfillment or event, (2) which is calculated and intended to deceive, (3) which does in fact deceive, and (4) by which one person obtains or attempts to obtain value from another. State v. Cronin, 299 N.C. 229, 262 S.E.2d 277 (1980). State v. Davis, 48 N.C. App. 526, 269 S.E.2d 291 (1980).

The constituent elements of the offense of false pretense are: (1) that the representation was made as alleged; (2) that property or something of value was obtained by reason of the representation; (3) that the representation was false; (4) that it was made with intent to defraud; (5) that it actually did deceive and defraud the person to whom it was made. State v. Carlson, 171 N.C. 818, 89 S.E. 30 (1916); State v. Johnson, 195 N.C. 506, 142 S.E. 775 (1928).

Victim's Failure to Receive Compensation Not an Element. — The Supreme Court never intended the victim's failure to receive compensation to be an element of the offense. Beginning with the statute codified as Potter's Revisal of 1819, Laws 1811, c. 814, s. 2, through the present § 14-100, there is and has been no statutory requirement that the State must prove that the defendant obtained the goods, property, things of value, services, etc., without compensation to the victims. Research discloses no case in which the question of the victim's compensation was before the court, although in some cases the victim received nothing at all, and in some the victim did receive some compensation of a sort. State v. Hines, 36 N.C. App. 33, 243 S.E.2d 782, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 262, 245 S.E.2d 779 (1978).

The phrase "without compensation" has constituted obiter dictum in the cases where it has been used, and it it not an element of the offense of false pretense, State v. Hines, 36 N.C. App. 33, 243 S.E.2d 782, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 262, 245 S.E.2d 779 (1978).

A defendant can be convicted of obtaining goods by false pretenses in violation of this section even though some compensation is paid if the compensation actually paid is less than the amount represented. State v. Hines, 36 N.C. App. 33, 243 S.E.2d, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 262, 245 S.E.2d 779 (1978).

An essential element of the offense proscribed by this section is that accused "obtain or attempt to obtain" something of value by means of any kind of false pretense. State v. Hadlock, 34 N.C. App. 226, 237 S.E.2d 748 (1977).

The intent to cheat and defraud the prosecutor is an essential ingredient in the crime of false pretense. State v. Blue, 84 N.C. 807 (1881); State v. Oakley, 103 N.C. 408, 9 S.E. 575 (1889).

An element of the offense is that the party to whom the false representation was made was deceived by it. State v. Whedbee, 152 N.C. 770, 67 S.E. 60 (1910). If he is so deceived it matters not whether he parted with goods for the sake of gain or for a charitable purpose. State v. Matthews, 91 N.C. 635 (1884).

The false pretense may be by act or conduct without spoken words. State v. Matthews, 121 N.C. 604, 28 S.E. 469 (1897).

Caveat Emptor Inapplicable. — The doctrine of caveat emptor "let the buyer beware" does not apply to actual fraud or obtaining property by false representation. By this doctrine the purchaser is forewarned of tricks of the trade, bluster, puffs and empty boasts on the part of the person putting his property on the market; but the seller cannot escape the penalty by reason of the doctrine where the facts constituting the crime are made to appear. State v. Jones, 70 N.C. 75 (1874); State v. Young, 76 N.C. 258 (1877); State v. Burke, 108 N.C. 750, 12 S.E. 1000 (1891).

Representation to Agent of Owner of Goods. — It is not necessary that the false representations be made to the owner of the goods directly, but it is sufficient if they were made to his agent. State v. Taylor, 131 N.C. 711, 42 S.E. 539 (1902).

Intent to Repay Is No Defense. — The crime under this section is committed even though the borrower who obtained a loan by means of a false representation may have intended to repay and may even have honestly believed that he would be able to repay. State v. Tesenair, 35 N.C. App. 531, 241 S.E.2d 877 (1978).

Instruction as to "Intent to Deceive" Proper. — In the context of the provisions of this section, when a person obtains something of value by means of misrepresentations with intent to deceive the victim, the requisite intent to cheat or defraud exists. Therefore, an instruction to the jury that in order to find defendant guilty it must find that defendant "intended to deceive" meets the statutory requirement that there be an "intent to cheat or defraud." State v. Cronin, 299 N.C. 229, 262 S.E.2d 277 (1980).

III. INDICTMENT.

Indictment Generally. — The indictment must allege all of the essential elements of the offense. State v. Claudius, 164 N.C. 521, 80 S.E. 261 (1913).

Necessary Allegations — Accused "Obtained or Attempted to Obtain". — An indictment was insufficient to charge an offense under this section where the indictment failed to allege that defendant obtained or attempted to obtain anything. State v. Hadlock, 34 N.C. App. 226, 237 S.E.2d 748 (1977).

Same — "Feloniously". — The offense is a felony and a bill of indictment charging such offense and which omits the word "feloniously" is defective, and judgment will be arrested on a verdict of guilty. State v. Caldwell, 112 N.C. 854, 16 S.E. 1010 (1893).

Indictment failing to include the word "feloniously" was held insufficient in State v. Fowler, 266 N.C. 528, 146 S.E.2d 418 (1966).

Same — Intent to Defraud. — Where the indictment upon which the defendant was charged failed to allege that the defendant acted with the intent to defraud, the omission of an essential element of this section was fatal to the indictment. State v. Moore, 38 N.C. App. 239, 247 S.E.2d 670, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 736, 248 S.E.2d 866 (1978).

Same — Causal Connection. — The indictment must show a causal connection between the false representation and the parting with the property (State v. Whedbee, 152 N.C. 770, 67 S.E. 60 (1910)) but no particular form of words is necessary; an allegation that "by means of the false pretense" or "relying on the false pretense," or the like, is sufficient, where it is apparent that the delivery of the property was the natural result of the pretense alleged. State v. Claudius, 164 N.C. 521, 80 S.E. 261 (1913).

Same — Property Obtained. — The indictment must describe the thing alleged to have been obtained with reasonable certainty, and by the name or term usually employed to describe it. State v. Gibson, 169 N.C. 318, 85 S.E. 7 (1915).

Unnecessary Allegations — Person Intended to be Cheated. — The charge as to the persons intended to be cheated is surplusage and immaterial, all that is necessary is a charge of intent. State v. Ridge, 125 N.C. 655, 34 S.E. 439 (1899); State v. Salisbury Ice & Fuel Co., 166 N.C. 366, 81 S.E. 737 (1914).

Same — Actual Deceit. — The specific allegation in the bill of indictment that the victim was in fact deceived is unnecessary when the facts alleged suggest that the false pretense was the probable motivation for the victim's conduct. State v. Hines, 36 N.C. App. 33, 243 S.E.2d 782, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 262, 245 S.E.2d 779 (1978).

Same — "Without compensation." — The phrase "without compensation" is not an essential element of the offense of false pretenses, and, therefore, it is not necessary to allege in a bill of indictment charging false pretenses that the accused obtained property from the victim "without compensation." State v. Cronin, 299 N.C. 229, 262 S.E.2d 277 (1980).

Same — Value of Property. — No averment of the value of the property obtained is necessary. State v. Gillespie, 80 N.C. 396 (1879).

Same — Present Form of Property. — It is not legally significant whether the thing gained by the party perpetrating the criminal act under this section is in the same form as it was when taken by false pretense from the owner. Thus, there was no variance in cases where the bills of indictment charged that the defendant obtained money from his employer and the evidence disclosed that he received a color television set and a clothes dryer from another party in exchange for the money pursuant to a prior agreement. State v. Wilson, 34 N.C. App. 474, 238 S.E.2d 632, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 188, 241 S.E.2d 72 (1977).

IV. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

False Representations as to Deed of Trust. — A representation that a deed of trust covered certain land, which was not in fact included, on the faith of which defendant obtained money is a false pretense within this section. State v. Roberts, 189 N.C. 93, 126 S.E. 161 (1925).

False representation that land is free from encumbrances, when knowingly made in order to effect a sale, or to obtain a loan, may be the subject matter of this offense. State v. Banks, 24 N.C. App. 604, 211 S.E.2d 860 (1975); State v. Wallace, 25 N.C. App. 360, 213 S.E.2d 420, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 468, 215 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

One who obtains money as the purchase price of land sold by him to another upon the representation that the land is unencumbered when it is encumbered by a mortgage, is liable in a prosecution for obtaining goods under false pretenses. State v. Munday, 78 N.C. 460 (1878).

False Representations as to Standing Timber. — A conviction under this section for false and fraudulent representations as to the quantity of standing timber on land sold to the prosecutor cannot be sustained where the amount of the purchase price for land is to be determined by the number of feet of timber cut therefrom, the prosecutor not being damaged thereby; nor can the conviction be sustained for misrepresentations as to the quality of the trees when the prosecutor had ample opportunity to inspect them and had been urged to do so by the defendant. State v. Corey, 199 N.C. 209, 153 S.E. 923 (1930).

Misrepresentation of Personal Identity. — The crime of obtaining property by means of a false pretense may be committed when one obtains goods on credit by a willful misrepresentation of his identity, quite apart from any intention of the defendant ultimately to pay or not to pay. State v. Tesenair, 35 N.C. App. 531, 241 S.E.2d 877 (1978).

False Representation as to Security for Loan. — The crime of obtaining property for means of a false pretense is committed when one obtains a loan of money by falsely representing the nature of the security given, or by falsely representing that the property pledged as security is free from liens. State v. Tesenair, 35 N.C. App. 531, 241 S.E.2d 877 (1978).

The falsification of expense records cannot in itself constitute the crime of false pretenses, since it is essential that the false pretense must have included the transfer of money or property, i.e., there must be a casual relationship between the representation alleged to have been made and the obtaining of the money or property. State v. Davis, 48 N.C. App. 526, 269 S.E.2d 291 (1980).

§ 14-101. Obtaining signatures by false pretenses.

If any person, with intent to defraud or cheat another, shall designedly, by color of any false token or writing, or by any other false pretense, obtain the signature of any person to any written instrument, the false making of which would be punishable as forgery, he shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1871-2, c. 92; Code, s. 1026; Rev., s. 3433; C. S., s. 4278; 1945, c. 635; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — As to forger, see § 14-119 et seq. As to uttering a false bill of lading, see § 21-42. For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "punishable by fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the State's prison for a term of not less than one year nor more than five years, or both, at the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Signing or Endorsing Note. — It is an indictable offense under this section, to procure a person to sign or endorse a note by means of false representation and with intent to cheat and defraud. State v. Johnson, 195 N.C. 506, 142 S.E. 775 (1928).

Indictment Must Allege Offense with Certainty. — An indictment should state with reasonable certainty the offense charged, and an indictment charging the defendant with obtaining money when he obtained a note, is defective. State v. Gibson, 169 N.C. 318, 85 S.E. 7 (1915).

§ 14-102. Obtaining property by false representation of pedigree of animals.

If any person shall, with intent to defraud or cheat, knowingly represent any animal for breeding purposes as being of greater degree of any particular strain of blood than such animal actually possesses, and by such representation obtain from any other person money or other thing of value, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall for each offense be punished by a fine of not less than sixty dollars ($60.00) nor more than three hundred dollars ($300.00), or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months. (1891, c. 94, s. 2; Rev., s. 3307; C. S., s. 4279.)

§ 14-103. Obtaining certificate of registration of animals by false representation.

If any person shall, by any false representation or pretense, with intent to defraud or cheat, obtain from any club, association, society or company for the improvement of the breed of cattle, horses, sheep, swine, fowls or other domestic animals or birds, a certificate of registration of any animal in the herd register of any such association, society or company, or a transfer of any such registration, upon conviction thereof he shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100.00), or by both such fine and imprisonment. (1891, c. 94, s. 1; Rev. s. 3308; C. S., s. 4280.)

§ 14-104. Obtaining advances under promise to work and pay for same.

If any person, with intent to cheat or defraud another, shall obtain any advances in money, provisions, goods, wares or merchandise of any description from any other person or corporation upon and by color of any promise or agreement that the person making the same will begin any work or labor of any description for such person or corporation from whom the advances are obtained, and the person making the promise or agreement shall willfully fail, without a lawful excuse, to commence or complete such work according to contract, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding thirty days. (1889, c. 444; 1891, c. 106; 1905, c. 411; Rev., s. 3431; C. S., s. 4281.)

Cross References. — As to tenant or croper willfully abandoning landlord after advances have been made, see § 14-358.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The gist of the offense of procuring advances "with intent to cheat and defraud" is not the obtaining of the advances, and afterwards refusing to perform the labor, but in the fraudulent intent at the time of obtaining the advances, and making the promise. This section is constitutional. State v. Norman, 110 N.C. 484, 14 S.E. 968 (1892).

Intent Must Be Shown. — To convict under this section it is necessary to show the fraudulent intent on the part of the promisor; and merely the facts of obtaining the advances, the promise to do the work, and a breach of that promise, are insufficient to sustain a conviction. State v. Griffin, 154 N.C. 611, 70 S.E. 292 (1911); State v. Islay, 164 N.C. 491, 79 S.E. 1105 (1913).

And Must Be Alleged in Warrant. — A warrant charging defendant with obtaining a money advance under promise to do certain work, and with failure to perform the work, without alleging that the advance was obtained with intent to cheat or defraud, if fatally defective. State v. Phillips, 228 N.C. 446, 45 S.E.2d 535 (1947).

No Day of Grace. — Where, upon a promise to begin work on the following Monday, the prosecutor made advances to the defendant, and the latter failed, without proper excuse, to begin work at the time stipulated, and was arrested on complaint of prosecutor on Tuesday, defendant's failure was held to be a failure to begin work within the meaning of the statute. State v. Norman, 110 N.C. 484, 14 S.E. 968 (1892).

Cited in State v. Moore, 38 N.C. App. 239, 247 S.E.2d 670 (1978).

§ 14-105. Obtaining advances under written promise to pay therefor out of designated property.

If any person shall obtain any advances in money, provisions, goods, wares or merchandise of any description from any other person or corporation, upon any written representation that the person making the same is the owner of any article of produce, or of any other specific chattel or personal property, which property, or the proceeds of which the owner in such representation thereby agrees to apply to the discharge of the debt so created, and the owner shall fail to apply such produce or other property, or the proceeds thereof, in accordance with such agreement, or shall dispose of the same in any other manner than is so agreed upon by the parties to the transaction, the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, whether he shall or shall not have been the owner of any such property at the time such representation was made. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1879, cc. 185, 186; Code, s. 1027; 1905, c. 104; Rev., s. 3434; C. S., s. 4282; 1969, c. 1224, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — It is not the failure to pay the debt which is made indictable, but the failure to apply certain property, which, in writing, has been pledged for its payment, and advances made on the faith of such pledge; on this ground it is declared constitutional. State v. Torrence, 127 N.C. 550, 37 S.E. 268 (1900); State v. Mooney, 173 N.C. 798, 92 S.E. 610 (1917).

Representations Must Be of Existing Facts. — An indictment for obtaining goods under a false pretense, must be founded on a false representation by the defendant of an existing fact, and the pledging of a check to be received at a subsequent date does not come within the meaning of the section. State v. Whidbee, 124 N.C. 796, 32 S.E. 318 (1899).

Indictment Should Charge Exact Terms. — The indictment should charge in the exact terms of the statute, and on failure to follow the statute it is subject to being quashed. State v. Mooney, 173 N.C. 798, 92 S.E. 610 (1917).

Section 14-114 Compared. — This section is on the same footing as § 14-114 for disposing of mortgaged property. It is not the failure to pay the debt which is made indictable, but the fraud in disposing of or withholding property which the owner has in writing agreed shall be applied in payment of advances made on the faith of such quasi mortgage, to one who has thus pro tanto become the owner thereof, and the subsequent conversion of said property, and diversion of the proceeds to the detriment of the equitable owner and in fraud of his rights. State v. Mooney, 173 N.C. 798, 92 S.E. 610 (1917).

§ 14-106. Obtaining property in return for worthless check, draft or order.

Every person who, with intent to cheat and defraud another, shall obtain money, credit, goods, wares or any other thing of value by means of a check, draft or order of any kind upon any bank, person, firm or corporation, not indebted to the drawer, or where he has not provided for the payment or acceptance of the same, and the same be not paid upon presentation, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned, or both, at the discretion of the court. The giving of the aforesaid worthless check, draft, or order shall be prima facie evidence of an intent to cheat and defraud. (1907, c. 975; 1909, c. 647; C. S., s. 4283.)

Local Modification. New Hanover: Pub. Loc. 1927, c. 636.

Cross References. — As to false warehouse receipts, see § 27-54 et seq.

CASE NOTES

It is a misdemeanor for any person knowingly to utter a worthless check in this State and such act involves moral turpitude under this section if done with intent to defraud. Oates v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 205 N.C. 14, 169 S.E. 869 (1933).

Intent to Cheat or Defraud. — In order to convict a defendant under the provisions of this section for obtaining property in return for a worthless check, the indictment must sufficiently charge an intent to cheat or defraud or that the defendant obtained a thing of value. State v. Horton, 199 N.C. 771, 155 S.E. 866 (1930).

Signing in Name of Company. — Upon the trial under indictment for violating this section, the evidence tended to show that the check in question was signed in the name of a certain company by the defendant, and was conflicting as to whether the defendant was a member of the concern. It was held, that the question as to whether the defendant was a member of the company when he drew the check in question was not necessarily decisive of his guilt, and an instruction to find him guilty if the jury should find from the evidence he was not a partner, was reversible error. State v. Anderson, 194 N.C. 377, 139 S.E. 701 (1927).

Same — Burden of Proof. — The burden of proving the guilt of defendant in violating this section, the worthless check statute, is on the State, and where the check in question has been signed by him in the name of a certain firm and there is evidence tending to show that other checks similarly signed had been paid, with further evidence that defendant's authority to sign such checks had been revoked, the burden of proving defendant's guilt is on the State, and raises the question as to the defendant's good faith for the jury to determine. State v. Anderson, 194 N.C. 377, 139 S.E. 701 (1927).

Reference to § 14-107 in Judgment Is Harmless Surplusage. — The reference to § 14-107 in a judgment for violation of this section prior to amendment of judgment did not vitiate that judgment or render the sentence imposed a sentence in excess of that provided by law for the violation of this section, which the defendant was found to have committed. The reference to § 14-107 in the judgment was harmless surplusage. State v. McKinnon, 35 N.C. App. 741, 242 S.E.2d 545 (1978).

§ 14-107. Worthless checks.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, to draw, make, utter or issue and deliver to another, any check or draft on any bank or depository, for the payment of money or its equivalent, knowing at the time of the making, drawing, uttering, issuing and delivering such check or draft as aforesaid, that the maker or drawer thereof has not sufficient funds on deposit in or credit with such bank or depository with which to pay the same upon presentation.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to solicit or to aid and abet any other person, firm or corporation to draw, make, utter or issue and deliver to any person, firm or corporation, any check or draft on any bank or depository for the payment of money or its equivalent, being informed, knowing or having reasonable grounds for believing at the time of the soliciting or the aiding and abetting that the maker or the drawer of the check or draft has not sufficient funds on deposit in, or credit with, such bank or depository with which to pay the same upon presentation.

The word "credit" as used herein shall be construed to mean an arrangement or understanding with the bank or depository for the payment of any such check or draft.

Any person, firm or corporation violating any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished as follows:

(1) If the amount of such check or draft is not over fifty dollars ($50.00), the punishment shall be by a fine not to exceed fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment for not more than 30 days. Provided, however, if such person has been convicted three times of violating G.S. 14-107, he shall on the fourth and all subsequent convictions be punished in the discretion of the district or superior court as for a general misdemeanor.

(2) If the amount of such check or draft is over fifty dollars ($50.00), the punishment shall be by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. Provided, however, if such person has been convicted three times of violating G.S. 14-107, he shall on the fourth and all subsequent convictions be punished in the discretion of the district or superior court as for a general misdemeanor.

(3) If such check or draft is drawn upon a nonexistent account, the punishment shall be by a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000) or imprisonment for not more than two years, or both.

(4) If such check or draft is drawn upon an account that has been closed by the drawer prior to time the check is drawn, the punishment shall be a fine not to exceed four hundred dollars ($400.00) or imprisonment for not more than five months or both.

(5) In deciding to impose any sentence other than an active prison sentence, the sentencing judge may require, in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 15A-1343, restitution to the victim for the amount of the check or draft and each prosecuting witness (whether or not under subpoena) shall be entitled to a witness fee as provided by G.S. 7A-314 which shall be taxed as part of the cost and assessed to the defendant. (1925, c. 14; 1927, c. 62; 1929, c. 273, ss. 1, 2; 1931, cc. 63, 138; 1933, cc. 43, 64, 93, 170, 265, 362, 458; 1939, c. 346; 1949, cc. 183, 332; 1951, c. 356; 1961, c. 89; 1963, cc. 73, 547, 870; 1967, c. 49, s. 1; c. 661, s. 1; 1969, c. 157; c. 876, s. 1; cc. 909, 1014, 1224, s. 10; 1971, c. 243, s. 1; 1977, c. 885; 1979, c. 837.)

CASE NOTES

This Section Is Constitutional. — See Mathis v. North Carolina, 266 F. Supp. 841 (M.D.N.C. 1967).

In General. — The gravamen of the offense proscribed by this section is the putting into circulation worthless commercial paper to the public detriment, and not that of the individual payee. State v. Levy, 220 N.C. 812, 18 S.E.2d 355 (1942).

It is not the attempted payment of a debt that is condemned by the statute, but the giving of a worthless check and its consequent disturbance of business integrity. State v. White, 230 N.C. 513, 53 S.E.2d 436 (1949); State v. Jackson, 243 N.C. 216, 90 S.E.2d 507 (1955).

The offense condemned by this section is the giving of a worthless check and its consequent disturbance of business integrity. State v. Ivey, 248 N.C. 316, 103 S.E.2d 398 (1958).

The act made criminal by this section is knowingly putting worthless commercial paper in circulation. Nunn v. Smith, 270 N.C. 374, 154 S.E.2d 497 (1967).

Section Not Applicable to Person Signing Check under Direction as a Clerical Task. — A person authorized to sign his name under the printed name of his employer on the employer's checks, who does so under direction merely as a clerical task to authenticate the checks, cannot be found guilty of violating this section upon the nonpayment of the checks for insufficient funds. State v. Cruse, 253 N.C. 456, 117 S.E.2d 49 (1960).

But Employer Is Liable. — Persons directing their employee to issue checks on the firm's account, knowing at the time that the firm did not have sufficient funds or credits with the drawee bank to pay the checks on presentation, are guilty of knowingly putting worthless commercial paper in circulation. State v. Cruse, 253 N.C. 456, 117 S.E.2d 49 (1960).

Use of Wrong Check Form Not A Violation of This Section. — Where the evidence disclosed that the check issued by defendant was returned by the bank, not on account of insufficient funds, but because it was written on the wrong kind of check form, the court should enter a judgment of not guilty in a prosecution for issuing a worthless check. State v. Coppley, 260 N.C. 542, 133 S.E.2d 147 (1963).

Instrument Signed by Defendant Held Not a Check. — If the instrument defendant signed did not contain a promise or order to pay any sum in any amount nor state to whom it was payable and he did not authorize anyone to fill it out in any amount and he did not know by whom or when it was filled out, what he signed was not a check, and he was not guilty of the offense charged against him in the warrant under this section. State v. Ivey, 248 N.C. 316, 103 S.E.2d 398 (1958).

Representation Constituting False Pretense. — The drawing and delivery of a check to a third person, without more, is a representation that drawer has funds sufficient to insure payment upon presentation, and if known to be untrue, is a false pretense. Nunn v. Smith, 270 N.C. 374, 154 S.E.2d 497 (1967).

Same — Postdated Check. — A postdated check given for a past-due account and so accepted is not a representation importing a criminal liability if untrue that comes within the intent and meaning of the "bad check law," making it a misdemeanor for a person to issue and deliver to another any check on any bank or depository for the payment of money or its equivalent knowing at the time that he has not sufficient funds on deposit or credit with the bank or depository for its payment. State v. Crawford, 198 N.C. 522, 152 S.E. 504 (1930).

Consent Not A Defense. — Regardless of the consent of anyone, the giving of a worthless check in contravention of this section is a crime. State v. Jackson, 243 N.C. 216, 90 S.E.2d 507 (1957).

If at the time of delivering a check to the payee the maker knows that he has neither funds nor credit to pay the check upon presentation, the fact that the payee agrees that the check would not be presented for collection, would not constitute a defense. State v. Jackson, 243 N.C. 216, 90 S.E.2d 507 (1955).

Entrapment Not A Defense. — Defense of entrapment on a charge of giving a worthless check cannot be maintained where the inducement to give the worthless check came from a person unconnected with the State. State v. Jackson, 243 N.C. 216, 90 S.E.2d 507 (1955).

Indictment. — In order to charge a statutory offense (the giving of a bad check), the indictment should set forth all the essential requisites therein prescribed, and no element should be left to inference or implication, and where the indictment is defective a demurrer is good. State v. Edwards, 190 N.C. 322, 130 S.E. 10 (1925).

Warrant. — A warrant charging that defendant, trading under a trade name, did, on a specified date, unlawfully and willfully issue a check knowing at the time that the named defendant, or the named defendant trading under the designated trade name, or the designated firm, did not have sufficient funds or credit to pay the check upon presentation, is sufficient and is not objectionable on the ground that the offense was charged disjunctively or alternately. State v. Jackson, 243 N.C. 216, 90 S.E.2d 507 (1955).

Prior Convictions Must Be Alleged in Warrant or Indictment. — Where a statute prescribes a higher penalty in case of repeated convictions for similar offenses, an indictment for a subsequent offense must allege facts showing that the offense charged is a second or subsequent crime within the contemplation of the statute in order to subject the accused to the higher penalty. State v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 70, 203 S.E.2d 399 (1974).

Where there is no allegation in the warrant that defendant had been convicted three prior times of that offense, nor is there any other evidence in the record of that circumstance, a 90-day sentence exceeds the permissible statutory limit. State v. McCotter, 18 N.C. App. 411, 197 S.E.2d 50 (1973).

Fatal Variance. — An indictment charging the defendant with obtaining money on a day named by the issuance of a worthless check in violation of the statute, and evidence that it was given for the hire of an automobile, ten days later, are at fatal variance, and will not support a conviction. State v. Corpening, 191 N.C. 751, 133 S.E. 14 (1926).

The indictment charged that defendant issued a worthless check knowing at the time that he did not have sufficient funds or credit for its payment. The proof was that defendant issued a check of a corporation of which he was an executive officer, and that the corporation did not have sufficient funds or credit for its payment. There is a fatal variance between allegation and proof, and defendant's motion to nonsuit should have been allowed. State v. Dowless, 217 N.C. 589, 9 S.E.2d 18 (1940).

What State Must Prove. — In a prosecution under this statute the State must prove that the maker of the check had neither sufficient funds on deposit in, nor credit with, the bank on which the check was drawn to pay it on presentation. State v. Jackson, 243 N.C. 216, 90 S.E.2d 507 (1955).

Right to Trial by Jury May Not Be Waived. — Where the defendant in a criminal action enters the plea of "not guilty," the requirement of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 13, (now Art. I, § 24) of trial by jury may not be waived by the accused nor another method substituted by agreement, and where a defendant is indicted for violating the statute commonly known as the "bad check law," an agreement between the State and the accused that the judge may find the facts under a plea of "not guilty," will be disregarded on appeal and the case remanded to be tried according to law. State v. Crawford, 197 N.C. 513, 149 S.E. 729 (1929).

Instruction held proper. State v. Levy, 220 N.C. 812, 18 S.E.2d 355 (1942).

§ 14-107.1. Prima facie evidence in worthless check cases.

(a) Unless the context otherwise requires, the following definitions apply in this section:

(1) Check Passer. — A natural person who draws, makes, utters, or issues and delivers, or causes to be delivered to another any check or draft on any bank or depository for the payment of money or its equivalent.

(2) Acceptor. — A person, firm, corporation or any authorized employee thereof accepting a check or draft from a check passer.

(3) Check Taker. — A natural person who is an acceptor, or an employee or agent of an acceptor, of a check or draft in a face-to-face transaction.

(b) In prosecutions under G.S. 14-107 the prima facie evidence provisions of subsections (d) and (e) apply if all the conditions of subdivisions (1) through (7) below are met. The prima facie evidence provisions of subsection (e) apply if only conditions (5) through (7) are met. The conditions are:

(1) The check or draft is delivered to a check taker.

(2) The name and mailing address of the check passer are written or printed on the check or draft.

(3) The check taker identifies the check passer at the time of accepting the check by means of a North Carolina driver's license, a special identification card issued pursuant to G.S. 20-37.7, or other reliable serially numbered identification card containing a photograph and mailing address of the person in question.

(4) The license or identification card number of the check passer appears on the check or draft.

(5) After dishonor of the check or draft by the bank or depository, the acceptor sends the check passer a letter by certified mail, to the address recorded on the check, identifying the check or draft, setting forth the circumstances of dishonor, and requesting rectification of any bank error or other error in connection with the transaction within 10 days.

(6) The acceptor files the affidavit described in subdivision (7) with a judicial official, as defined in G.S. 15A-101(5), before issuance of the first process or pleading in the prosecution under G.S. 14-107. The affidavit must be kept in the case file (attached to the criminal pleading in the case).

(7) The affidavit of the acceptor, sworn to before a person authorized to administer oaths, must:

a. State the facts surrounding acceptance of the check or draft. If the conditions set forth in subdivisions (1) through (5) have been met, the specific facts demonstrating observance of those conditions must be stated.

b. Indicate that at least 15 days have elapsed since the mailing of the letter required under subdivision (5) and that the check passer has failed to rectify any error that may have occurred with respect to the dishonored check or draft.

c. Have attached a copy of the letter sent to the check passer pursuant to subdivision (5).

d. Have attached the receipt, or a copy of it, from the United States Postal Service certifying the mailing of the letter described in subdivision (5).

e. Have attached the check or draft or a copy thereof, including any stamp, marking or attachment indicating the reason for dishonor.

(c) In prosecutions under G.S. 14-107, where the check or draft is delivered to the acceptor by mail, or delivered other than in person, the prima facie evidence rule in subsections (d) and (e) shall apply if all the conditions below are met. The prima facie evidence rule in subsection (e) shall apply if conditions (5) through (7) below are met. The conditions are:

(1) The check or draft is delivered to the acceptor by United States mail, or by some person or instrumentality other than a check passer.

(2) The name and mailing address of the check passer are recorded on the check or draft.

(3) The acceptor has previously identified the check passer, at the time of opening the account, establishing the course of dealing, or initiating the lease or contract, by means of a North Carolina driver's license, a special identification card issued pursuant to G.S. 20-37.7, or other reliable serially numbered identification card containing a photograph and mailing address of the person in question, and obtained the signature of the person or persons who will be making payments on the account, course of dealing, lease or contract, and such signature is retained in the account file.

(4) The acceptor compares the name, address, and signature on the check with the name, address, and signature on file in the account, course of dealing, lease, or contract, and notes that the information contained on the check corresponds with the information contained in the file, and the signature on the check appears genuine when compared to the signature in the file.

(5) After dishonor of the check or draft by the bank or depository, the acceptor sends the check passer a letter by certified mail to the address recorded on the check or draft identifying the check or draft, setting forth the circumstances of dishonor and requesting rectification of any bank error or other error in connection with the transaction within 10 days.

(6) The acceptor files the affidavits described in subdivision (7) of this subsection with a judicial official, as defined in G.S. 15A-101(5), before issuance of the first process or pleading in the prosecution under G.S. 14-107. The affidavit must be kept in the case file (attached to the criminal pleading in the case).

(7) The affidavit of the acceptor, sworn to before a person authorized to administer oaths, must:

a. State the facts surrounding acceptance of the check or draft. If the conditions set forth in subdivisions (1) through (5) have been met, the specific facts demonstrating observance of those conditions must be stated.

b. Indicate that at least 15 days have elapsed since the mailing of the letter required under subdivision (5) and that the check passer has failed to rectify any error that may have occurred with respect to the dishonored check or draft.

c. Have attached a copy of the letter sent to the check passer pursuant to subdivision (5).

d. Have attached the receipt, or a copy of it, from the United States Postal Service certifying the mailing of the letter described in subdivision (5).

e. Have attached the check or draft or a copy thereof, including any stamp, marking or attachment indicating the reason for dishonor.

(d) If the conditions of subsection (b) or (c) have been met, proof of meeting them is prima facie evidence that the person charged was in fact the identified check passer.

(e) If the bank or depository dishonoring a check or draft has returned it in the regular course of business stamped or marked or with an attachment indicating the reason for dishonor ("insufficient funds," "no account," "account closed" or words of like meaning), the check or draft and any attachment may be introduced in evidence and constitute prima facie evidence of the facts of dishonor if the conditions of subdivisions (5) through (7) of subsection (b) or subdivisions (5) through (7) of subsection (c) have been met. The fact that the check or draft was returned dishonored may be received as evidence that the check passer had no credit with the bank or depository for payment of the check or draft. (1979, c. 615, s. 1.)

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

This section does not provide the exclusive method of proving a violation of § 14-107. See opinion of Attorney General to Ed McClearen, Assistant District Attorney, 10th Judicial District, 49 N.C.A.G. 168 (1980).

§ 14-108. Obtaining property or services from slot machines, etc., by false coins or tokens.

Any person who shall operate, or cause to be operated, or who shall attempt to operate, or attempt to cause to be operated any automatic vending machine, slot machine, coin-box telephone or other receptacle designed to receive lawful coin of the United States of America in connection with the sale, use or enjoyment of property or service, by means of a slug or any false, counterfeited, mutilated, sweated or foreign coin, or by any means, method, trick or device whatsoever not lawfully authorized by the owner, lessee or licensee, of such machine, coin-box telephone or receptable, or who shall take, obtain or receive from or in connection with any automatic vending machine, slot machine, coin-box telephone or other receptacle designed to receive lawful coin of the United States of America in connection with the sale, use or enjoyment of property or service, any goods, wares, merchandise, gas, electric current, article of value, or the use or enjoyment of any telephone or telegraph facilities or service, or of any musical instrument, phonograph or other property, without depositing in and surrendering to such machine, coin-box telephone or receptacle lawful coin of the United States of America to the amount required therefor by the owner, lessee or licensee of such machine, coin-box telephone or receptacle, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1927, c. 68, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

§ 14-109. Manufacture, sale, or gift of devices for cheating slot machines, etc.

Any person who, with intent to cheat or defraud the owner, lessee, licensee or other person entitled to the contents of any automatic vending machine, slot machine, coin-box telephone or other receptacle, depository or contrivance designed to receive lawful coin of the United States of America in connection with the sale, use or enjoyment of property or service, or who, knowing that the same is intended for unlawful use, shall manufacture for sale, or sell or give away any slug, device or substance whatsoever intended or calculated to be placed or deposited in any such automatic vending machine, slot machine, coin-box telephone or other such receptacle, depository or contrivance, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1927, c. 68, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

§ 14-110. Defrauding innkeeper.

No person shall, with intent to defraud, obtain food, lodging, or other accommodations at a hotel, inn, boardinghouse or eating house. Whoever violates this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. Obtaining such lodging, food, or other accommodation by false pretense, or by false or fictitious show of pretense of baggage or other property, or absconding without paying or offering to pay therefor, or surreptitiously removing or attempting to remove such baggage, shall be prima facie evidence of such fraudulent intent, but this section shall not apply where there has been an agreement in writing for delay in such payment. (1907, c. 816; C. S., s. 4284; 1969, c. 947; c. 1224, s. 3.)

Local Modification. — Buncombe, Franklin, Jackson: 1933, c. 531; Lee: 1937, c. 168; Martin: 1931, c. 9; Pitt: 1929, c. 103; Rockingham: 1939, c. 53; Wake, Watauga: 1931, c. 9.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The misdemeanor prescribed by this section expressly applies, when the contract has been made with a fraudulent intent, and this intent also exists in surreptitiously absconding and removing baggage without having paid the bill, and this statute is not inhibited by N.C. Const., Art. I, § 16 (now Art. I, § 28) as to imprisonment for the mere nonpayment of a debt, either in a civil action or by indictment. State v. Barbee, 187 N.C. 703, 122 S.E. 753 (1924).

Boardinghouse Defined. — One who has not been licensed to keep a boardinghouse, and who does not hold his place out as such, but who has received a boarder in his home, for pay, is not the keeper of a boardinghouse. State v. McRae, 170 N.C. 712, 86 S.E. 1039 (1915).

Prosecution of Guest for Refusing to Pay without Deduction for Unwarranted Charges. — Evidence tending to show that the general manager of a motel in complete charge of its operations had a car towed from its premises under the mistaken belief that the owner of the car was not a guest, and that when the guest refused to pay his bill without deducting the unwarranted towing charges, instituted a prosecution of the guest under this section, is held sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the issue of respondeat superior in an action against the motel for malicious prosecution, the acts of the manager having been performed in furtherance of the motel's business. Ross v. Dellinger, 262 N.C. 589, 138 S.E.2d 226 (1964).

Evidence Sufficient to Convict. — Where there is evidence that one having received accommodation at a hotel left with his baggage without notice to the proprietor, and without having paid his bill, it is sufficient to convict under this section, the question of intent being for the jury. State v. Hill, 166 N.C. 298, 81 S.E. 408 (1914).

Evidence Insufficient for Conviction. — In order to convict under the provisions of this section, it is necessary for the State to show the fraudulent intent of the one who has failed or refused to pay for his lodging or food at an inn, boardinghouse, etc., or the like intent as to his surreptitiously leaving with his baggage without having paid his bill; and evidence tending only to show his inability to pay, under the circumstances, but his arrangement with the keeper of the inn or boardinghouse to pay in a certain way and within a fixed period after leaving, and his payment in part, and that his wife, remaining longer than he, thereafter took away his baggage without his knowledge or participation therein, and in the separation following he received no benefit therefrom, is insufficient for a conviction of the statutory offense. State v. Barbee, 187 N.C. 703, 122 S.E. 753 (1924).

§ 14-111. Fraudulently obtaining credit at hospitals and sanatoriums.

Any person who obtains accommodation at any public or private hospital or sanatorium without paying therefor, with intent to defraud the said hospital or sanatorium, or who obtains credit at such hospital or sanatorium by the use of any false pretense, or who, after obtaining credit or accommodation at a hospital or sanatorium, absconds and surreptitiously removes his baggage therefrom without paying for the accommodation or credit, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1931, c. 214; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

§ 14-111.1. Obtaining ambulance services without intending to pay therefor — Buncombe, Haywood and Madison Counties.

Any person who with the intent to defraud shall obtain ambulance services for himself or other persons without intending at the time of obtaining such services to pay a reasonable charge therefor, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. If a person or persons obtaining such services willfully fails to pay for the services within a period of 90 days after request for payment, such failure shall raise a presumption that the services were obtained with the intention to defraud, and with the intention not to pay therefor.

This section shall apply only to the Counties of Buncombe, Haywood and Madison. (1965, c. 976, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 4.)

§ 14-111.2. Obtaining ambulance services without intending to pay therefor — certain named counties.

Any person who with intent to defraud shall obtain ambulance services without intending at the time of obtaining such services to pay, if financially able, any reasonable charges therefor shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. A determination by the court that the recipient of such services has willfully failed to pay for the services rendered for a period of 90 days after request for payment, and that the recipient is financially able to do so, shall raise a presumption that the recipient at the time of obtaining the services intended to defraud the provider of the services and did not intend to pay for the services.

The section shall apply to Anson, Ashe, Beaufort, Caldwell, Caswell, Catawba, Chatham, Cleveland, Cumberland, Davie, Duplin, Forsyth, Gaston, Guilford, Haywood, Henderson, Hyde, Iredell, Mecklenburg, Montgomery, Orange, Pasquotank, Person, Randolph, Rockingham, Scotland, Stanly, Surry, Transylvania, Union, Vance, Wilkes and Yadkin Counties only. (1967, c. 964; 1969, cc. 292, 753, 1224, s. 4; 1971, cc. 125, 203, 300, 496; 1973, c. 880, s. 2; 1977, cc. 63, 144.)

§ 14-111.3. Making false ambulance request in Ashe, Buncombe, Duplin, Haywood and Madison Counties.

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to willfully obtain or attempt to obtain ambulance service that is not needed, or to make a false request or report that an ambulance is needed. Every person convicted of violating this section shall upon conviction be punished by a fine of fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment not to exceed 30 days or both such fine and imprisonment.

This section shall apply only to the Counties of Ashe, Buncombe, Duplin, Haywood and Madison. (1965, c. 976, s. 2; 1971, c. 496; 1977, c. 96.)

§ 14-112. Obtaining merchandise on approval.

If any person, with intent to cheat and defraud, shall solicit and obtain from any merchant any article of merchandise on approval, and shall thereafter, upon demand, refuse or fail to return the same to such merchant in an unused and undamaged condition, or to pay for the same, such person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. Evidence that a person has solicited a merchant to deliver to him any article of merchandise for examination or approval and has obtained the same upon such solicitation, and thereafter, upon demand, has refused or failed to return the same to such merchant in an unused and undamaged condition, or to pay for the same, shall constitute prima facie evidence of the intent of such person to cheat and defraud, within the meaning of this section: Provided, this section shall not apply to merchandise sold upon a written contract which is signed by the purchaser. (1911, c. 185; C. S., s. 4285; 1941, c. 242; 1969, c. 1224, s. 2.)

§ 14-113. Obtaining money by false representation of physical defect.

It shall be unlawful for any person to falsely represent himself or herself in any manner whatsoever as blind, deaf, dumb, or crippled or otherwise physically defective for the purpose of obtaining money or other thing of value or of making sales of any character of personal property. Any person so falsely representing himself or herself as blind, deaf, dumb, crippled or otherwise physically defective, and securing aid or assistance on account of such representation, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1919, c. 104; C. S., s. 4286; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 19A.

Obtaining Property or Services by False or Fraudulent Use of Credit Device or Other Means.

§ 14-113.1. Use of false or counterfeit credit device; unauthorized use of another's credit device; use after notice of revocation.

It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to obtain or attempt to obtain credit, or to purchase or attempt to purchase any goods, property or service, by the use of any false, fictitious, or counterfeit telephone number, credit number or other credit device, or by the use of any telephone number, credit number or other credit device of another without the authority of the person to whom such number or device was issued, or by the use of any telephone number, credit number or other credit device in any case where such number or device has been revoked and notice of revocation has been given to the person to whom issued or he has knowledge or reason to believe that such revocation has occurred. (1961, c. 223, s. 1; 1965, c. 1147; 1967, c. 1244, s. 1; 1971, c. 1213, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Franks, 20 N.C. App. 160, 200 S.E.2d 828 (1973).

§ 14-113.2. Notice defined; prima facie evidence of receipt of notice.

The word "notice" as used in G.S. 14-113.1 shall be construed to include either notice given in person or notice given in writing to the person to whom the number or device was issued. The sending of a notice in writing by registered or certified mail in the United States mail, duly stamped and addressed to such person at his last address known to the issuer, shall be prima facie evidence that such notice was duly received after five days from the date of the deposit in the mail. (1961, c. 223, s. 3; 1965, c. 1147; 1967, c. 1244, s. 1.)

§ 14-113.3. Use of credit device as prima facie evidence of knowledge.

The presentation or use of a revoked, false, fictitious or counterfeit telephone number, credit number, or other credit device for the purpose of obtaining credit or the privilege of making a deferred payment for the article or service purchased shall be prima facie evidence of knowledge that the said credit device is revoked, false, fictitious or counterfeit; and the unauthorized use of any telephone number, credit number or other credit device of another shall be prima facie evidence of knowledge that such use was without the authority of the person to whom such number or device was issued. (1961, c. 223, s. 4; 1965, c. 1147; 1967, c. 1244, s. 1.)

§ 14-113.4. Avoiding or attempting to avoid payment for telecommunication services.

It shall be unlawful for any person to avoid or attempt to avoid, or to cause another to avoid, the lawful charges, in whole or in part, for any telephone or telegraph service or for the transmission of a message, signal or other communication by telephone or telegraph, or over telephone or telegraph facilities by the use of any fraudulent scheme, device, means or method. (1961, c. 223, s. 2; 1965, c. 1147.)

§ 14-113.5. Making, possessing or transferring device for theft of telecommunication service; publication of information regarding schemes, devices, means, or methods for such theft; concealment of existence, origin or destination of any telecommunication.

It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to:

(1) Make or possess any instrument, apparatus, equipment, or device designed, adapted, or which is used

a. For commission of a theft of telecommunication service in violation of this Article, or

b. To conceal, or assist another to conceal, from any supplier of telecommunication service or from any lawful authority the existence or place of origin or of destination of any telecommunication, or

(2) Sell, give, transport, or otherwise transfer to another or offer or advertise for sale, any instrument, apparatus, equipment, or device described in (1) above, or plans or instructions for making or assembling the same under circumstances evincing an intent to use or employ such apparatus, equipment, or device, or to allow the same to be used or employed, for a purpose described in (1)a or (1)b above, or knowing or having reason to believe that the same is intended to be so used, or that the aforesaid plans or instructions are intended to be used for making or assembling such apparatus, equipment or device.

(3) Publish plans or instructions for making or assembling or using any apparatus, equipment or device described in (1) above, or

(4) Publish the number or code of an existing, cancelled, revoked or nonexistent telephone number, credit number or other credit device, or method of numbering or coding which is employed in the issuance of telephone numbers, credit numbers or other credit devices with knowledge or reason to believe that it may be used to avoid the payment of any lawful telephone or telegraph toll charge under circumstances evincing an intent to have such telephone number, credit number, credit device or method of numbering or coding so used. As used in this section, "publish" means the communication or dissemination of information to any one or more persons, either orally, in person or by telephone, radio or television, or in a writing of any kind, including without limitation a letter or memorandum, circular or handbill, newspaper or magazine article, or book.

(5) Any instrument, apparatus, device, plans or instructions or publications described in this section may be seized under warrant or incident to a lawful arrest for a violation of this section, and, upon the conviction of a person for a violation of this section, such instrument, apparatus, device, plans, instructions or publication may be destroyed as contraband by the sheriff of the county in which such person was convicted or turned over to the person providing telephone or telegraph service in the territory in which the same was seized. (1965, c. 1147; 1971, c. 1213, s. 2.)

§ 14-113.6. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person violating any of the provisions of this Article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1961, c. 223, s. 5; 1965, c. 1147; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6.)

§ 14-113.6A. Venue of offenses.

(a) Any of the offenses described in Article 19A which involve the placement of telephone calls may be deemed to have been committed at either the place at which the telephone call or calls were made or at the place where the telephone call or calls were received.

(b) An offense under G.S. 14-113.5(3) or 14-113.5(4) may be deemed to have been committed at either the place at which the publication was initiated or at which the publication was received or at which the information so published was utilized to avoid or attempt to avoid the payment of any lawful telephone or telegraph toll charge. (1971, c. 1213, s. 3.)

§ 14-113.7. Article not construed as repealing § 14-100.

This Article shall not be construed as repealing G.S. 14-100. (1961, c. 223, s. 6; 1065, c. 1147.)

§ 14-113.7A. Application of Article to credit cards.

This Article shall not be construed as being applicable to any credit card as the term is defined in G.S. 14-113.8. (1967, c. 1244, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 19B.

Financial Transaction Card Crime Act.

§ 14-113.8. Definitions.

The following words and phrases as used in this Chapter, unless a different meaning is plainly required by the context, shall have the following meanings:

(1) Automated Banking Device. — "Automated banking device" means any machine which when properly activated by a financial transaction card and/or personal identification code may be used for any of the purposes for which a financial transaction card may be used.

(2) Cardholder. — "Cardholder" means the person or organization named on the face of a financial transaction card to whom or for whose benefit the financial transaction card is issued by an issuer.

(3) Expired Financial Transaction Card. — "Expired financial transaction card" means a financial transaction card which is no longer valid because the term shown on it has elapsed.

(4) Financial Transaction Card. — "Financial transaction card" or "FTC" means any instrument or device whether known as a credit card, credit plate, bank services card, banking card, check guarantee card, debit card, or by any other name, issued with or without fee by an issuer for the use of the cardholder:

a. In obtaining money, goods, services, or anything else of value on credit; or

b. In certifying or guaranteeing to a person or business the availability to the cardholder of funds on deposit that are equal to or greater than the amount necessary to honor a draft or check payable to the order of such person or business; or

c. In providing the cardholder access to a demand deposit account or time deposit account for the purpose of:

1. Making deposits of money or checks therein; or
2. Withdrawing funds in the form of money, money orders, or traveler's checks therefrom; or
3. Transferring funds from any demand deposit account or time deposit account to any other demand deposit account or time deposit account; or
4. Transferring funds from any demand deposit account or time deposit account to any credit card accounts, overdraft privilege accounts, loan accounts, or any other credit accounts in full or partial satisfaction of any outstanding balance owed existing therein; or
5. For the purchase of goods, services or anything else of value; or
6. Obtaining information pertaining to any demand deposit account or time deposit account;

d. But shall not include a telephone number, credit number, or other credit device which is covered by the provisions of Article 19A of this Chapter.

(5) Issuer. — "Issuer" means the business organization or financial institution or its duly authorized agent which issues a financial transaction card.

(6) Personal Identification Code. — "Personal identification code" means a numeric and/or alphabetical code assigned to the cardholder of a financial transaction card by the issuer to permit authorized electronic use of that FTC.

(7) Presenting. — "Presenting" means, as used herein, those actions taken by a cardholder or any person to introduce a financial transaction card into an automated banking device, including utilization of a personal identification code, or merely displaying or showing a financial transaction card to the issuer, or to any person or organization providing money, goods, services, or anything else of value, or any other entity with intent to defraud.

(8) Receives. — "Receives" or "receiving" means acquiring possession or control or accepting a financial transaction card as security for a loan.

(9) Revoked Financial Transaction Card. — "Revoked financial transaction card" means a financial transaction card which is no longer valid because permission to use it has been suspended or terminated by the issuer. (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1971, c. 1213, s. 4; 1979, c. 741, s. 1.)

§ 14-113.9. Financial transaction card theft.

(a) A person is guilty of financial transaction card theft when:

(1) He takes, obtains or withholds a financial transaction card from the person, possession, custody or control of another without the cardholder's consent and with the intent to use it; or who, with knowledge that it has been so taken, obtained or withheld, receives the financial transaction card with intent to use it or to sell it, or to transfer it to a person other than the issuer or the cardholder; or

(2) He receives a financial transaction card that he knows to have been lost, mislaid, or delivered under a mistake as to the identity or address of the cardholder, and who retains possession with intent to use it or to sell it or to transfer it to a person other than the issuer or the cardholder; or

(3) He, not being the issuer, sells a financial transaction card or buys a financial transaction card from a person other than the issuer; or

(4) He, not being the issuer, during any 12-month period, receives financial transaction cards issued in the names of two or more persons which he has reason to know were taken or retained under circumstances which constitute a violation of G.S. 14-113.13(a)(3) and subdivision (3) of subsection (a) of this section.

(b) Credit card theft is punishable as provided by G.S. 14-113.17(b). (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1; c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The second 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote subsection (b) to read as set out above. Subsection (b) as amended by the first 1979 amendment read as follows:

"(b) Taking, obtaining or withholding a financial transaction card without consent is included in conduct defined in G.S. 14-75 as larceny.

"Conviction of financial transaction card theft is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(b)."

The second 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Sufficiency of Description of Credit Card. — No defect appears on the face of an indictment for violation of this section where the credit card allegedly withheld is sufficiently described to inform the accused with certainty as to the crime he allegedly committed. State v. Springer, 283 N.C. 627, 197 S.E.2d 530 (1973).

The date upon which an allegedly stolen credit card was issued is not necessary to describe the card, is not an essential element of the offense charged, and therefore is not a material fact which the State must allege and prove. State v. Springer, 283 N.C. 627, 197 S.E.2d 530 (1973).

§ 14-113.10. Prima facie evidence of theft.

When a person has in his possession or under his control financial transaction cards issued in the names of two or more other persons other than members of his immediate family, such possession shall be prima facie evidence that such financial transaction cards have been obtained in violation of G.S. 14-113.9(a). (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Evidence of Possession of Other Credit Cards. — The admission of evidence, over objection, that defendant had three other credit cards in his possession which had been issued in the names of persons other than defendant or members of his immediate family was competent (1) to make out a prima facie case as provided in this section that defendant had obtained all credit cards in his possession in violation of § 14-113.9(a); (2) to establish a common plan or scheme to commit credit-card crimes so related to each other that proof of one or more tends to prove the crime charged and to connect defendant with its commission; and (3) to show criminal intent and guilty knowledge. State v. Springer, 283 N.C. 627, 197 S.E.2d 530 (1973).

Necessity for Instruction. — In light of the provisions of this section, it is the duty of the court to instruct the jury regarding the legal significance of the State's evidence tending to show that defendant had in his possession or under his control credit cards issued in the name of two or more persons other than defendant and members of his immediate family. State v. Springer, 283 N.C. 627, 197 S.E.2d 530 (1973).

§ 14-113.11. Forgery of financial transaction card.

(a) A person is guilty of financial transaction card forgery when:

(1) With intent to defraud a purported issuer, a person or organization providing money, goods, services or anything else of value, or any other person, he falsely makes or falsely embosses a purported financial transaction card or utters such a financial transaction card; or

(2) With intent to defraud a purported issuer, a person or organization providing money, goods, services or anything else of value, or any other person, he falsely encodes, duplicates or alters existing encoded information on a financial transaction card or utters such a financial transaction card; or

(3) He, not being the cardholder or a person authorized by him, with intent to defraud the issuer, or a person or organization providing money, goods, services or anything else of value, or any other person, signs a financial transaction card.

(b) A person falsely makes a financial transaction card when he makes or draws, in whole or in part, a device or instrument which purports to be the financial transaction card of a named issuer but which is not such a financial transaction card because the issuer did not authorize the making or drawing, or alters a financial transaction card which was validly issued.

(c) A person falsely embosses a financial transaction card when, without authorization of the named issuer, he completes a financial transaction card by adding any of the matter, other than the signature of the cardholder, which an issuer requires to appear on the financial transaction card before it can be used by a cardholder.

(d) A person falsely encodes a financial transaction card when, without authorization of the purported issuer, he records magnetically, electronically, electro-magnetically or by any other means whatsoever, information on a financial transaction card which will permit acceptance of that card by any automated banking device. Conviction of financial transaction card forgery shall be punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(b). (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Hudson, 11 N.C. App. 712, 182 S.E.2d 198 (1971).

§ 14-113.12. Prima facie evidence of forgery.

(a) When a person, other than the purported issuer, possesses two or more financial transaction cards which are falsely made or falsely embossed, such possession shall be prima facie evidence that said cards were obtained in violation of G.S. 14-113.11(a)(1) or 14-113.11(a)(2).

(b) When a person, other than the cardholder or a person authorized by him possesses two or more financial transaction cards which are signed, such possession shall be prima facie evidence that said cards were obtained in violation of G.S. 14-113.11(a)(3). (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1.)

§ 14-113.13. Financial transaction card fraud.

(a) A person is guilty of financial transaction card fraud when, with intent to defraud the issuer, a person or organization providing money, goods, services or anything else of value, or any other person, he

(1) Uses for the purpose of obtaining money, goods, services or anything else of value a financial transaction card obtained or retained, or which was received with knowledge that it was obtained or retained, in violation of G.S. 14-113.9 or 14-113.11 or a financial transaction card which he knows is forged, altered, expired, revoked or was obtained as a result of a fraudulent application in violation of G.S. 14-113.13(c); or

(2) Obtains money, goods, services, or anything else of value by:

a. Representing without the consent of the cardholder that he is the holder of a specified card; or
b. Presenting the financial transaction card without the authorization or permission of the cardholder; or
c. Representing that he is the holder of a card and such card has not in fact been issued; or
d. Using a financial transaction card to knowingly and willfully exceed:
1. The actual balance of a demand deposit account or time deposit account; or
2. An authorized credit line in an amount which exceeds such authorized credit line in the amount of five hundred dollars ($500.00), or fifty percent (50%) of such authorized credit line, whichever is greater; or

(3) Obtains control over a financial transaction card as security for debt; or

(4) Deposits into his account or any account, by means of an automated banking device, a false, fictitious, forged, altered or counterfeit check, draft, money order, or any other such document not his lawful or legal property; or

(5) Receives money, goods, services or anything else of value as a result of a false, fictitious, forged, altered, or counterfeit check, draft, money order or any other such document having been deposited into an account via an automated banking device, knowing at the time of receipt of the money, goods, services, or item of value that the document so deposited was false, fictitious, forged, altered or counterfeit or that the above deposited item was not his lawful or legal property.

(b) A person who is authorized by an issuer to furnish money, goods, services or anything else of value upon presentation of a financial transaction card by the cardholder, or any agent or employee of such person is guilty of a financial transaction card fraud when, with intent to defraud the issuer or the cardholder, he

(1) Furnishes money, goods, services or anything else of value upon presentation of a financial transaction card obtained or retained in violation of G.S. 14-113.9, or a financial transaction card which he knows is forged, expired or revoked; or

(2) Fails to furnish money, goods, services or anything else of value which he represents in writing to the issuer that he has furnished.

Conviction of financial transaction card fraud as provided in subsection (a) or (b) of this section is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(a) if the value of all money, goods, services and other things of value furnished in violation of this section, or if the difference between the value actually furnished and the value represented to the issuer to have been furnished in violation of this section, does not exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) in any six-month period. Conviction of financial transaction card fraud as provided in subsection (a) or (b) of this section is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(b) if such value exceeds five hundred dollars ($500.00) in any six-month period.

(c) A person is guilty of financial transaction card fraud when, upon application for a financial transaction card to an issuer, he knowingly makes or causes to be made a false statement or report relative to his name, occupation, financial condition, assets, or liabilities; or willfully and substantially overvalues any assets, or willfully omits or substantially undervalues any indebtedness for the purpose of influencing the issuer to issue a financial transaction card.

Conviction of financial transaction card fraud as provided in this subsection is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(a).

(d) A cardholder is guilty of financial transaction card fraud when he willfully, knowingly, and with an intent to defraud the issuer, a person or organization providing money, goods, services, or anything else of value, or any other person, submits, verbally or in writing, to the issuer or any other person, any false notice or report of the theft, loss, disappearance, or nonreceipt of his financial transaction card.

Conviction of financial transaction card fraud as provided in this subsection is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(a).

(e) In any prosecution for violation of G.S. 14-113.13, the State is not required to establish and it is no defense that some of the acts constituting the crime did not occur in this State or within one city, county, or local jurisdiction.

(f) For purposes of this section, revocation shall be construed to include either notice given in person or notice given in writing to the person to whom the financial transaction card and/or personal identification code was issued. Notice of revocation shall be immediate when notice is given in person. The sending of a notice in writing by registered or certified mail in the United States mail, duly stamped and addressed to such person at his last address known to the issuer, shall be prima facie evidence that such notice was duly received after seven days from the date of the deposit in the mail. If the address is located outside the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the Canal Zone and Canada, notice shall be presumed to have been received 10 days after mailing by registered or certified mail. (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1.)

§ 14-113.14. Criminal possession of financial transaction card forgery devices.

(a) A person is guilty of criminal possession of financial transaction card forgery devices when:

(1) He is a person other than the cardholder and possesses two or more incomplete financial transaction cards, with intent to complete them without the consent of the issuer; or

(2) He possesses, with knowledge of its character, machinery, plates, or any other contrivance designed to reproduce instruments purporting to be financial transaction cards of an issuer who has not consented to the preparation of such financial transaction cards.

(b) A financial transaction card is incomplete if part of the matter other than the signature of the cardholder, which an issuer requires to appear on the financial transaction card before it can be used by a cardholder, has not yet been stamped, embossed, imprinted, encoded or written upon it.

Conviction of criminal possession of financial transaction card forgery devices is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(b). (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1.)

§ 14-113.15. Criminal receipt of goods and services fraudulently obtained.

A person is guilty of criminally receiving goods and services fraudulently obtained when he receives money, goods, services or anything else of value obtained in violation of G.S. 14-113.13(a) with the knowledge or belief that the same were obtained in violation of G.S. 14-113.13(a). Conviction of criminal receipt of goods and services fraudulently obtained is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(a) if the value of all the money, goods, services and anything else of value, obtained in violation of this section, does not exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) in any six-month period; conviction of criminal receipt of goods and services fraudulently obtained is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-113.17(b) if such value exceeds five hundred dollars ($500.00) in any six-month period. (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1.)

§ 14-113.16. Presumption of criminal receipt of goods and services fraudulently obtained.

A person who obtains at a discount price a ticket issued by an airline, railroad, steamship or other transportation company from other than an authorized agent of such company which was acquired in violation of G.S. 14-113.13(a) without reasonable inquiry to ascertain that the person from whom it was obtained had a legal right to possess it shall be presumed to know that such ticket was acquired under circumstances constituting a violation of G.S. 14-113.13(a). (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1.)

§ 14-113.17. Punishment and penalties.

(a) A person who is subject to the punishment and penalties of this subsection [Article] shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars ($1,000) or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

(b) A crime punishable under this subsection [Article] is punishable as a Class J felony. (1967, c. 1244, s. 2; 1979, c. 741, s. 1; c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The second 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punishable as a Class J felony" for "a felony and shall be punishable by a fine of not more than three thousand dollars ($3,000) or imprisonment for not more than three years, or both" at the end of subsection (b). The second 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

ARTICLE 20.

Frauds.

§ 14-114. Fraudulent disposal of personal property on which there is a security interest.

If any person, after executing a security agreement on personal property for a lawful purpose, shall make any disposition of any property embraced in such security agreement, with intent to hinder, delay or defeat the rights of the secured party, every person so offending and every person with a knowledge of the security interest buying any property embraced in which security agreement, and every person assisting, aiding or abetting the unlawful disposition of such property, with intent to hinder, delay or defeat the rights of any secured party in such security agreement, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. In all indictments for violations of the provisions of this section it shall not be necessary to allege or prove the person to whom any sale or disposition of the property was made, but proof of the possession of the property embraced in such security agreement by the grantor thereof, after the execution of said security agreement, and while it is in force, the further proof of the fact that the sheriff or other officer charged with the execution of process cannot after due diligence find such property under process directed to him for its seizure, for the satisfaction of such security agreement, or that the secured party demanded the possession thereof of the grantor for the purpose of sale to foreclose said security agreement, after the right to such foreclosure had accrued, and that the grantor failed to produce, deliver or surrender the same to the secured party for that purpose, shall be prima facie proof of the fact of the disposition or sale of such property, by the grantor, with the intent to hinder, delay or defeat the rights of the secured party. (1873-4, c. 31; 1874-5, c. 215; 1883, c. 61; Code, s. 1089; 1887, c. 14; Rev., s. 3435; C.S., s. 4287; 1969, c. 984, s. 2; c. 1224, s. 4.)

Cross References. — As to fraudulent conveyances, see § 39-15 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under this section as it stood prior to the 1969 amendments when it referred to chattel mortgages, deeds of trust or other liens rather than to security agreements.

Three Classes of Offenders. — The statute is directed against three classes of offenders: (1) The maker of the lien who shall dispose of the property with the unlawful intent; (2) those who buy with a knowledge of the lien, and (3) those who aid or abet either the maker or purchaser in the unlawful acts. State v. Woods, 104 N.C. 898, 10 S.E. 555 (1889).

Intent Necessary. — Under this section the forbidden act must, in order to be indictable, be accomplished with a specific intent, and the courts cannot disregard this clearly expressed purpose of the legislature. State v. Manning, 107 N.C. 910, 12 S.E. 248 (1890). The actual sale of mortgaged crops raises a presumption of fraudulent intent. State v. Holmes, 120 N.C. 573, 26 S.E. 692 (1897). In a trial under this section the burden is upon the defendant to disprove the criminal intent. State v. Surles, 117 N.C. 720, 23 S.E. 324 (1895); State v. Holmes, 120 N.C. 573, 26 S.E. 692 (1897).

Result of Sale Must Injure. — If the property included in the mortgage (other than that disposed of), was abundantly sufficient and available to pay the indebtedness, there could be no such prejudical result as is contemplated by the statute. State v. Manning, 107 N.C. 910, 12 S.E. 248 (1890).

Infant's Liability. — An indictment under this section for disposing of crops under mortgage could not be sustained, where it appeared that the defendant was an infant. The alleged disposition was a disaffirmance of the contract and rendered it void. State v. Howard, 88 N.C. 651 (1883).

Indictment Must Charge Maker, Buyer or Assistant. — If the indictment does not charge the defendant as the maker of the lien nor the buyer of the property with knowledge of it, nor as assisting, aiding or abetting in the unlawful disposition of the property no offense is charged. State v. Woods, 104 N.C. 898, 10 S.E. 555 (1889).

Indictment Must Charge Lien and Manner of Sale. — An indictment for disposing of mortgaged property is fatally defective, if it fails to set forth that the lien was in force at the time of sale, the party to whom sold, and the manner of disposition. State v. Pickens, 79 N.C. 652 (1878); State v. Burns, 80 N.C. 376 (1879).

Indictment Must Identify Transaction and Point to Offense Charged. — In a prosecution under this section, the bill of indictment must allege the facts and circumstances so as to identify the transaction and point with reasonable certainty to the offense charged. State v. Helms, 247 N.C. 740, 102 S.E.2d 241 (1958).

Indictment in Two Counts. — Where an indictment for disposing of mortgaged property contained two counts, one alleging a disposal with intent to defraud G., "business manager" of an association, and the other a disposal with intent to defraud G., "business manager and agent" of such association, the counts are not repugnant to each other, since they relate to one transaction, varied only to meet the probable proof, and the court will neither quash the bill nor force the State to elect on which count it will proceed. State v. Surles, 117 N.C. 720, 23 S.E. 324 (1895).

Prior Lien as Defense. — It is competent for the defendant, in an indictment for unlawfully disposing of mortgaged property — a crop of tobacco — to show that he, in good faith, applied the entire crop to the discharge of his landlord's lien. State v. Ellington, 98 N.C. 749, 4 S.E. 534 (1887).

Evidence of Other Sales Inadmissable. — On a trial of one charged with unlawfully disposing of an article of personal property covered by a chattel mortgage, with intent to defeat the right of the mortgagee, evidence that, five months after the offense was committed, the defendant offered to dispose of another article covered by the same mortgage is inadmissible to prove the intent with which the offense was committed. State v. Jeffries, 117 N.C. 727, 23 S.E. 163 (1895).

Applied in State v. Dunn, 264 N.C. 391, 141 S.E.2d 630 (1965).

Cited in State v. Torrence, 127 N.C. 550, 37 S.E. 268 (1900); State v. Barrett, 138 N.C. 630, 50 S.E. 506 (1905).

§ 14-115. Secreting property to hinder enforcement of lien or security interest.

Any person removing, exchanging or secreting any personal property on which a lien or security interest exists, with intent to prevent or hinder the enforcement of the lien or security interest, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1887, c. 14; Rev., s. 3436; C. S., s. 4288; 1969, c. 984, s. 3; c. 1224, s. 1.)

Local Modification. — Pitt: 1941, c. 284.

§ 14-116. Fraudulent entry of horses at fairs.

If any person shall knowingly enter or cause to be entered in competition for any purse, prize, premium, stake or sweepstake offered or given by any agricultural or other society, association or person in this State, any horse, mare, gelding, colt or filly under an assumed name or out of its proper class, he shall be punished by a fine not less than one hundred ($100.00) nor more than one thousand dollars ($1,000), or by imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than one nor more than five years, or by both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court. (1893, c. 387; Rev., s. 3429; C. S., s. 4289.)

§ 14-117. Fraudulent and deceptive advertising.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association, with intent to sell or in anywise to dispose of merchandise, securities, service or any other thing offered by such person, firm, corporation or association, directly or indirectly, to the public for sale or distribution, or with intent to increase the consumption thereof, or to induce the public in any manner to enter into any obligation relating thereto, or to acquire title thereto, or an interest therein, to make public, disseminate, circulate or place before the public or cause directly or indirectly to be made, published, disseminated, circulated or placed before the public in this State, in a newspaper or other publication, or in the form of a book, notice, handbill, poster, bill, circular, pamphlet or letter, or in any other way, an advertisement of any sort regarding merchandise, securities, service or any other thing so offered to the public, which advertisement contains any assertion, representation or statement of fact which is untrue, deceptive or misleading: Provided, that such advertising shall be done willfully and with intent to mislead. Any person who shall violate the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. (1915, c. 218; C. S., s. 4290.)

§ 14-117.1. Use of words "army" or "navy" in name of mercantile establishment.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation, to use the words "army" or "navy" or either, or both, in the name or as a part of the name of any mercantile establishment in this State which is not in fact operated by the United States government or a duly authorized agency thereof.

Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars ($25.00) nor more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) for the first offense, and not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than one thousand dollars ($1,000) for each subsequent such offense. Local Modification. — Beaufort: 1949, c. 857.

§ 14-117.2. Gasoline price advertisements.

(a) Advertisements by any person or firm of the price of any grade of motor fuel must clearly so indicate if such price is dependent upon purchaser himself drawing or pumping the fuel.

(b) Any person or firm violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a separate misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment of not more than 30 days or both such fine and imprisonment, for each day that such violation continues. (1971, c. 324, ss. 1, 2.)

§ 14-118. Blackmailing.

If any person shall knowingly send or deliver any letter or writing demanding of any other person, with menaces and without any reasonable or probable cause, any chattel, money or valuable security; or if any person shall accuse, or threaten to accuse, or shall knowingly send or deliver any letter or writing accusing or threatening to accuse any other person of any crime punishable by law with death or by imprisonment in the State's prison, with the intent to extort or gain from such person any chattel, money or valuable security, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (R. C., c. 34, s. 110; Code, s. 989; Rev., s. 3428; C. S., s. 4291.)

CASE NOTES

Indictment Sufficient. — Where the offense charged was the sending of a letter, under this section, and the letter was set out in the indictment, from which it is deducible by necessary implication that the defendant threatened to indict the prosecutor for an offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, with a view and intent to extort money a criminal offense is sufficiently charged. State v. Harper, 94 N.C. 936 (1886).

Circumstantial Evidence Sufficient to Sustain Conviction. — Letters demanding a sum of money from the prosecutor, the first requiring that he drop the amount along the road at a certain place at a designated time and at a certain signal, followed by the burning of the prosecutor's barn on his failing to comply; and the second one referring to this fact and making the same demand, and the apprehension of the defendant at the place at the time appointed, as he appeared after the signals were given, though circumstantial evidence, is adjudged sufficient under an indictment for blackmailing to sustain a conviction. State v. Frady, 172 N.C. 978, 90 S.E. 802 (1916).

Circumstantial evidence held to sustain conviction of blackmail. State v. Strickland, 229 N.C. 201, 49 S.E.2d 469 (1948).

§ 14-118.1. Simulation of court process in connection with collection of claim, demand or account.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, association, agent or employee in any manner to coerce, intimidate, or attempt to coerce or intimidate any person in connection with any claim, demand or account, by the issuance, utterance or delivery of any matter, printed, typed or written, which (i) simulates or resembles a summons, warrant, writ or other court process or pleading; or (ii) by its form, wording, use of the name of North Carolina or any officer, agency or subdivision thereof, use of seals or insignia, or general appearance has a tendency to create in the mind of the ordinary person the false impression that it has judicial or other official authorization, sanction or approval. Any violation of the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by a fine of not more than two hundred dollars ($200.00) or by imprisonment of not more than six months, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. (1961, c. 1188; 1979, c. 263.)

§ 14-118.2. Assisting, etc., in obtaining academic credit by fraudulent means.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association to assist any student, or advertise, offer or attempt to assist any student, in obtaining or in attempting to obtain, by fraudulent means, any academic credit, or any diploma, certificate or other instrument purporting to confer any literary, scientific, professional, technical or other degree in any course of study in any university, college, academy or other educational institution. The activity prohibited by this subsection includes, but is not limited to, preparing or advertising, offering, or attempting to prepare a term paper, thesis, or dissertation for another and impersonating or advertising, offering or attempting to impersonate another in taking or attempting to take an examination.

(b) Any person, firm, corporation or association violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. Provided, however, the provisions of this section shall not apply to the acts of one student in assisting another student as herein defined if the former is duly registered in an educational institution and is subject to the disciplinary authority thereof. (1963, c. 781; 1969, c. 1224, s. 7.)

§ 14-118.3. Acquisition and use of information obtained from patients in hospitals for fraudulent purposes.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or any officer, agent or other representative of any person, firm or corporation to obtain or seek to obtain from any person while a patient in any hospital information concerning any illness, injury or disease of such patient, other than information concerning the illness, injury or disease for which such patient is then hospitalized and being treated, for a fraudulent purpose, or to use any information so obtained in regard to such other illness, injury or disease for a fraudulent purpose.

Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1967, c. 974; 1969, c. 1224, s. 5.)

§ 14-118.4. Extortion.

Any person who threatens or communicates a threat or threats to another with the intention thereby wrongfully to obtain anything of value or any acquittance, advantage, or immunity is guilty of extortion and such person shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1973, c. 1032; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "be punished as a Class H felon" for "upon conviction be guilty of a felony" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

§ 14-118.5. Theft of cable television service.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to intentionally defraud or to aid and abet another to defraud any person or corporation of the lawful charge, in whole or in part, for any cable television service.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to intentionally avoid or attempt to avoid or cause or assist another to avoid or attempt to avoid any charge for such service by rearranging, tampering with, or making connection with any facilities or equipment of a cable television company, whether physically, inductively, acoustically, or electrically.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to advertise or promote the sale of any instrument, apparatus, equipment, or device, or plans or instruction for making or assembling the same, which instrument, apparatus, equipment, or device is designed or adapted to fraudulently avoid the lawful charge for any cable television service in violation of subsection (a) or (b) of this section.

(d) Any person, firm, or corporation that violates the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed three hundred dollars ($300.00) or by imprisonment for not more than 60 days, or both, in the discretion of the court.

(e) Provided, however, subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall not apply to natural persons receiving cable television service pursuant to contract. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1185, s. 1.)

Article 21.

Forgery.

§ 14-119. Forgery of bank notes, checks and other securities.

If any person shall falsely make, forge or counterfeit, or cause or procure the same to be done, or willingly aid or assist therein, any bill or note in imitation of, or purporting to be, a bill or note of any incorporated bank in this State, or in any of the United States, or in any of the territories of the United States; or any order or check on any such bank or corporation, or on the cashier thereof; or any of the securities purporting to be issued by or on behalf of the State, or by or on behalf of any corporation, with intent to injure or defraud any person, bank or corporation, or the State, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1819, c. 994, s. 1, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 60; Code, s. 1030; Rev., s. 3419; C. S., s. 4293; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1; as to alleging intent in the indictment, see § 15-151.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison or county jail for not less than four months nor more than ten years, or by a fine in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided prior to the effective date (July 1, 1981) of the 1979 amendment.

Definitions. — The common-law definition of forgery obtains in this State, the statute not attempting to define it. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Forgery, at common law, denotes a false making, a making malo animo, of any written instrument for the purpose of fraud and deceit. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Forgery may generally be defined as the false making or materially altering, with intent to defraud, of any writing, which, if genuine, might apparently be of legal efficacy, or the foundation of a legal liability. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Uttering Distinct from Forgery. — By virtue of § 14-120, uttering is an offense distinct from that of forgery which is defined in this section. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968); State v. Treadway, 27 N.C. App. 78, 217 S.E.2d 743 (1975).

Forgery of Money Order and Forgery of Endorsement Are Separate Offenses. — To convict of the felony of forging endorsements under the second sentence of § 14-120, it was not necessary to allege or to prove forgery of the face of money orders, which would have been separate felonies under this section. State v. Sutton, 14 N.C. App. 422, 188 S.E.2d 596 (1972).

Elements of Offense. — To constitute an indictable forgery, it is not alone sufficient that there be a writing, and that the writing be false; it must also be such as, if true, would be of some legal efficacy, real or apparent, since otherwise it has no legal tendancy to defraud. Barnes v. Crawford, 115 N.C. 76, 20 S.E.2d 386 (1894). While an intent to defraud is an essential element of forgery, it is not essential that any person be actually defrauded, or that any act be done other than the fraudulent making or altering of the instrument. State v. White, 101 N.C. 770, 7 S.E. 715 (1888), aff'd, 132 U.S. 131, 10 S. Ct. 47, 33 L. Ed. 287 (1889); State v. Hall, 108 N.C. 776, 13 S.E. 189 (1891).

The essentials to the completion of the offense of forgery are: (a) The falsification of a paper, or the making of a false paper, of legal efficacy "apparently capable of effecting a fraud;" (b) the fraudulent intent. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Three elements are necessary to constitute the offense of forgery: (1) There must be a false making or alteration of some instrument in writing; (2) there must be a fraudulent intent; and (3) the instrument must be apparently capable of effecting a fraud. State v. Phillips, 256 N.C. 445, 124 S.E.2d 146 (1962); State v. Bauguess, 13 N.C. App. 457, 186 S.E.2d 185 (1972); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

The three essential elements necessary to constitute the crime of forgery are: (1) a false making of a check, (2) a fraudulent intent on the part of the person who knowingly participated in the false making of the check, and (3) the check was apparently capable of effecting a fraud. State v. Keller, 268 N.C. 522, 151 S.E.2d 56 (1968).

The three essential elements necessary to constitute the crime of forgery are (1) a false writing of the check; (2) an intent to defraud on the part of defendant who falsely made the said check; and (3) the check as made was apparently capable of defrauding. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968).

Evidence sufficient to permit a jury to find (1) a false writing of the checks described; (2) an intent to defraud on the part of defendant who falsely made the checks; and (3) an apparent capability of the checks to defraud constitutes the three essential elements necessary to constitute the crime of forgery. State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975).

Two essential elements of forgery are the false making of an instrument and the appearance of the instrument as genuine. State v. Prince, 49 N.C. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

Same — Intent to defraud is an essential element of the crime of forgery. State v. Greene, 12 N.C. App. 687, 184 S.E.2d 523 (1971), appeal dismissed, 280 N.C. 303, 186 S.E.2d 177 (1972).

An intent to defraud is an essential element of forgery. However, it is not essential that any person be actually defrauded or that any act be done other than the fraudulent making or altering of the instrument. State v. Williams, 291 N.C. 442, 230 S.E.2d 515 (1976).

Time is not of the essence in the crimes of forgery and uttering a forged check. State v. Prince, 49 N.C. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

Same — The word "falsely" as applied to the making of a check, in order to constitute forgery, implies that the check is not genuine, that in itself it is false. State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975).

The fact that the drawer of a check lacks authority is one characteristic which renders an instrument false. State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Forging Signature of Another. — An instrument may be a forgery even though in itself it is not false in any particular, if there is a fraudulent intent that the signature should pass or be received as the genuine act of another person whose signing, only, could make the paper valid and effectual. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

A person without a bank account who signs his name to checks and presents them to the bank with intent that the signature should be taken as that of another of the same or similar name who has funds on deposit, and cashes the checks fraudulently and with knowledge that he was withdrawing from the bank the funds of such other person, is guilty of forgery. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Same — Real and Forged Signatures Need Not Be Identical. — An instrument is nonetheless a forgery because the signature is not identical with that of the person whose signature it is intended to simulate if they are sufficiently similar for the doctrine of idem sonans to apply, and the insertion of a middle initial not in the signature simulated is not a fatal variance. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Same — Presumption of Authority. — Where defendant signs the name of another person to an instrument, there is no presumption of want of authority; on the contrary, where it appears that accused signed the name of another to an instrument, it is presumed that he did so with authority. State v. Phillips, 256 N.C. 445, 124 S.E.2d 146 (1962).

Same — State Must Show Want of Authority. — If the purported maker is a real person and actually exists, the State is required to show not only that the signature in question is not genuine, but was made by defendant without authority. State v. Phillips, 256 N.C. 445, 124 S.E.2d 146 (1962); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Signing Fictitious Name. — If the name signed to a negotiable instrument, or other instrument requiring a signature is fictitious, of necessity, the name must have been affixed by one without authority, and if a person signs a fictitious name to such instrument with the purpose and intent to defraud — the instrument being sufficient in form to import legal liability — an indictable forgery is committed. State v. Phillips, 256 N.C. 445, 124 S.E.2d 146 (1962); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Proof of Fictitious Name. — In a prosecution for forgery it was not necessary for the State to prove that the name "B. Hansely" signed by defendant to three checks was that of a fictitious person or a real person, since the evidence showed that the instrument was executed without authority, as neither "B. Hansely" nor the name of defendant appeared on the signature card of the S & M Paint Company account, upon which the checks in question were written; moreover, proof that no person bearing the name signed to a check has any right to draw on the party to whom it is directed is prima facie evidence that the name is fictitious. State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Indictment. — Even though the offense of forgery is charged in statutory language in the bill of indictment, in order to be a valid bill of indictment, it is necessary that the statutory words be supplemented by other allegations which so plainly, intelligibly and explicitly set forth every essential element of the offense as to leave no doubt in the mind of the accused and the court as to the offense intended to be charged. State v. Cross, 5 N.C. App. 217, 167 S.E.2d 868 (1969).

Where the alteration of a genuine instrument is charged, an indictment for forgery must clearly set forth the alteration alleged, with the proper allegations showing alteration of a material part of the instrument. Thus, in an indictment for forgery effected by interpolating words in a genuine instrument, as by raising the amount of a note, the added words should be quoted and their position in the instrument shown, so that it may appear how they affect its meaning. State v. Cross, 5 N.C. App. 217, 167 S.E.2d 868 (1969).

The false instrument must be such as does, or may, tend to prejudice the right of another, and such tendency must be apparent to the court, either from the face of the writing itself, or from it, accompanied by the averment of extraneous facts, that show the tendency to injure. If the forged writing itself shows such tendency, then it will be sufficient to set it forth in the indictment, alleging the false and fraudulent intent; but where such tendency does not so appear, the extraneous facts, necessary to make it apparent, must be averred. This is essential, so as to enable the court to see in the record, that the indictment charges a complete offense. State v. Treadway, 27 N.C. App. 78, 217 S.E.2d 743 (1975).

Same — Must Allege Existence of Bank. — In an indictment under this section to punish the making, passing, etc., of counterfeit bank notes, if the note alleged to have been passed be of a bank not within the State, the indictment should aver that such a bank exists as that by which the counterfeit note purports to have been issued. State v. Twitty, 9 N.C. 248 (1822).

Evidence of Former Acts Admissible. — Upon an indictment for uttering forged money, knowing it to be forged, evidence may be received of former acts and transactions which tend to bring home the scienter to the defendant, notwithstanding such evidence may fix upon him other charges beside that on which he is tried. State v. Twitty, 9 N.C. 248 (1822).

In a prosecution for forgery and issuing a forged instrument under this section and § 14-120, evidence that defendant had theretofore forged checks other than those specified in the indictment may be competent on the question of intent. State v. Painter, 265 N.C. 277, 144 S.E.2d 6 (1965).

Identification of Defendant Admissible. — In a prosecution of defendant for uttering a forged check, the trial court properly admitted a bank teller's identification of defendant from a photographic display, since the procedure was not so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. State v. McCullough, 50 N.C. App. 184, 272 S.E.2d 613 (1980).

Evidence of Related Offenses Admissible. — In a prosecution of defendant for conspiracy to commit forgery, and conspiracy to utter forged instruments, the trial court did not err in admitting testimony by a State's witness that defendant had been involved in the commission of an offense other than the ones for which he was being tried, since the other offense was a break-in during which a check writer and checks were taken from a cabinet shop, and this was a part of the overall scheme which embraced the related offenses for which defendant was being tried and tended to connect him with those offenses; therefore, defendant himself opened the door to such testimony by inquiring further into charges pending against the State's witness. State v. Pruitt, 301 N.C. 683, 273 S.E.2d 264 (1981).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence that defendant signed the name of another in endorsing a check payable to such other person, and negotiating it, that such other person had not authorized anyone to sign his name on the check, and that such person was not owed the amount of the check, is held sufficient to overrule nonsuit in a prosecution for violation of this section and § 14-120. State v. Coleman, 253 N.C. 799, 117 S.E.2d 742 (1961).

Evidence that two checks had been forged and that defendant cashed them was sufficient circumstantial evidence for the jury to find that defendant forged the checks, even without eyewitness testimony that defendant wrote the checks and without expert testimony that it was his handwriting on the checks. State v. Prince, 49 N.C. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

An instruction including the requirement that there be a false making encompasses the requirement that the instrument be drawn by one who lacks authority. State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

An instruction to the jury that executing a check on a bank account by signing a name not authorized by the signature card would be a false making of a check is a proper charge on the element that the instrument be false. State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

The sentence "the check appeared to be genuine" in a jury instruction adequately states the third element of forgery that the check as made was apparently capable of defrauding." State v. Monds, 36 N.C. App. 510, 245 S.E.2d 369, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 556, 248 S.E.2d 733 (1978).

Punishment. — Where the sentences imposed on defendant's plea of guilty, understandingly and voluntarily made, are within the limits prescribed by this section and § 14-120, such sentences cannot be considered cruel or unusual in the constitutional sense. State v. Newell, 268 N.C. 300, 150 S.E.2d 405 (1966).

A contention that the punishment for forging and uttering a check in violation of this section and § 14-120, by analogy to § 14-72, should be limited to the punishment imposed for a misdemeanor is untenable since a violation of each section is a felony and the court has no power to amend an act of the General Assembly. State v. Davis, 267 N.C. 126, 147 S.E.2d 570 (1966).

A sentence of five years' imprisonment imposed upon defendant's plea of guilty to the charge of forging a check in the amount of $45.00 is within the maximum authorized by this section. State v. Bolder, 8 N.C. App. 343, 174 S.E.2d 139 (1970).

Applied in State v. Cranfield, 238 N.C. 110, 76 S.E.2d 353 (1953); State v. Ayscue, 240 N.C. 196, 81 S.E.2d 403 (1954); State v. Shepard, 261 N.C. 402, 134 S.E.2d 696 (1964); State v. Bailey, 261 N.C. 783, 136 S.E.2d 37 (1964); State v. Gibbs, 266 N.C. 647, 146 S.E.2d 676 (1966); State v. Miller, 271 N.C. 611, 157 S.E.2d 211 (1967); Singletary v. United States, 514 F.2d 617 (4th Cir. 1975); State v. Edwards, 24 N.C. App. 393, 210 S.E.2d 458, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 546, 212 S.E.2d 168 (1975); State v. Freeman, 28 N.C. App. 346, 220 S.E.2d 844 (1976).

Stated in State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296 (1972).

§ 14-120. Uttering forged paper or instrument containing a forged endorsement.

If any person, directly or indirectly, whether for the sake of gain or with intent to defraud or injure any other person, shall utter or publish any such false, forged or counterfeited bill, note, order, check or security as is mentioned in the preceding section [G.S. 14-119], or shall pass or deliver, or attempt to pass or deliver, any of them to another person (knowing the same to be falsely forged or counterfeited) the person so offending shall be punished as a Class I felon. If any person, directly or indirectly, whether for the sake of gain or with intent to defraud or injure any other person, shall falsely make, forge or counterfeit any endorsement on any instrument described in the preceding section, whether such instrument be genuine or false, or shall knowingly utter or publish any such instrument containing a false, forged or counterfeited endorsement or, knowing the same to be falsely endorsed, shall pass or deliver or attempt to pass or deliver any such instrument containing a forged endorsement to another person, the person so offending shall be guilty of a felony and punishable by the same punishment provided in the preceding sentence. (1819, c. 994, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 61; Code, s. 1031; Rev., s. 3427; 1909, c. 666; C. S., s. 4294; 1961, c. 94; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "as a Class I felon" for "by imprisonment in the county jail or State's prison not less than four months nor more than ten years" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific langauage of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided prior to the effective date (July 1, 1981) of the 1979 amendment.

Elements of the Offense. — The mere offer of the false instrument with fraudulent intent constitutes an uttering or publishing, the essence of the offense being, as in the case of forgery, the fraudulent intent regardless of its successful consummation. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968).

Uttering a forged instrument consists in offering to another the forged instrument with the knowledge of the falsity of the writing and with intent to defraud. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968); State v. Jackson, 19 N.C. App. 749, 200 S.E.2d 199 (1973).

The essential elements of the crime of uttering a forged check are (1) the offer of a forged check to another, (2) with knowledge that the check is false, and (3) with the intent to defraud or injure another. State v. Hill, 31 N.C. App. 248, 229 S.E.2d 810 (1976).

Time is not of the essence in the crimes of forgery and uttering a forged check. State v. Prince, 49 N.C. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

"Directly or Indirectly." — A check filled out by the payee at the direction of the drawer falls within the meaning of the words "directly or indirectly" as used in this section. State v. Cranfield, 238 N.C. 110, 76 S.E.2d 353 (1953).

Delivering to Agent. — It is putting spurious paper into circulation, and not defrauding the individual who takes it, that the state has in view. Hence, upon a similar statute, it was held that delivering a forged note to an agent, that he might dispose of it in buying goods, was a passing within the act. State v. Harris, 27 N.C. 287 (1844).

Uttering Distinct from Forgery. — By virtue of this section, uttering is an offense distinct from that of forgery which is defined in § 14-119. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968); State v. Treadway, 27 N.C. App. 78, 217 S.E.2d 743 (1975).

Forgery of Money Order and Forgery of Endorsement Are Separate Offenses. — To convict of the felony of forging endorsements under the second sentence of this section, it was not necessary to allege or prove forgery of the face of money orders, which would have been separate felonies under § 14-119. State v. Sutton, 14 N.C. App. 422, 188 S.E.2d 596 (1972).

Evidence of Former Acts. — In a prosecution for forgery and issuing a forged instrument under this section and § 14-119, evidence that defendant had theretofore forged checks other than those specified in the indictment may be competent on the question of intent. State v. Painter, 265 N.C. 277, 144 S.E.2d 6 (1965).

Evidence of Related Offenses. — In a prosecution of defendant for conspiracy to commit forgery, and conspiracy to utter forged instruments, the trial court did not err in admitting testimony by a State's witness that defendant had been involved in the commission of an offense other than the ones for which he was being tried, since the other offense was a break-in during which a check writer and checks were taken from a cabinet shop, and this was a part of the overall scheme which embraced the related offenses for which defendant was being tried and tended to connect him with those offenses; therefore, defendant himself opened the door to such testimony by inquiring further into charges pending against the State's witness. State v. Pruitt, 301 N.C. 683, 273 S.E.2d 264 (1981).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — See note under § 14-119.

Punishment. — Where the sentences imposed on defendant's plea of guilty, understandingly and voluntarily made, are within the limits prescribed by this section and § 14-119, such sentences cannot be considered cruel or unusual in the constitutional sense. State v. Newell, 268 N.C. 300, 150 S.E.2d 405 (1966).

A contention that the punishment for forging and uttering a check in violation of this section and § 14-119, by analogy to § 14-72, should be limited to the punishment imposed for a misdemeanor is untenable since a violation of each section is a felony and the court has no power to amend an act of the General Assembly. State v. Davis, 267 N.C. 126, 147 S.E.2d 570 (1966).

Applied in State v. Ayscue, 240 N.C. 196, 81 S.E.2d 403 (1954); State v. Shepard, 261 N.C. 402, 134 S.E.2d 696 (1964); State v. Bailey, 261 N.C. 783, 136 S.E.2d 37 (1964); State v. Gibbs, 266 N.C. 647, 146 S.E.2d 676 (1966); State v. Keller, 268 N.C. 422, 151 S.E.2d 56 (1966); State v. Miller, 271 N.C. 611, 157 S.E.2d 211 (1967); State v. Mosteller, 3 N.C. § 14-121. Selling of certain forged securities.

If any person shall sell, by delivery, endorsement or otherwise, to any other person, any judgment for the recovery of money purporting to have been rendered by a magistrate, or any bond, promissory note, bill of exchange, order, draft or liquidated account purporting to be signed by the debtor (knowing the same to be forged), the person so offending shall be punished as a Class I felon. (R. C., c. 34, s. 63; Code, s. 1033; Rev., s. 3425; C. S., s. 4295; 1973, c. 108, s. 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "as a Class I felon" for "by imprisonment in the State's prison or county jail for not less than four months nor more than 10 years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-122. Forgery of deeds, wills and certain other instruments.

If any person, of his own head and imagination, or by false conspiracy or fraud with others, shall wittingly and falsely forge and make, or shall cause or wittingly assent to the forging or making of, or shall show forth in evidence, knowing the same to be forged, any deed, lease or will, or any bond, writing obligatory, bill of exchange, promissory note, endorsement or assignment thereof; or any acquittance or receipt for money or goods; or any receipt or release for any bond, note, bill or any other security for the payment of money; or any order for the payment of money or delivery of goods, with intent, in any of said instances, to defraud any person or corporation, and thereof shall be duly convicted, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class I felon. (5 Eliz., c. 14, ss. 2, 3; 21 James I, c. 26; 1801, c. 572, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 59; Code, s. 1029; Rev., s. 3424; C. S., s. 4296; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "as a Class I felon" for "by imprisonment in the State's prison or county jail not less than four months nor more than ten years, or fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

General Consideration. — Differing from false pretenses, it is not an element of this offense that the forgery was "calculated to deceive and did deceive"; intent alone suffices to constitute the crime. State v. Hall, 108 N.C. 776, 13 S.E. 189 (1891); State v. Collins, 115 N.C. 716, 20 S.E. 452 (1894). It is immaterial to whom the advantages of the forgery would accrue. State v. White, 101 N.C. 770, 7 S.E. 715 (1888), aff'd, 132 U.S. 131, 10 S. Ct. 47, 33 L. Ed. 287 (1889).

An instrument in writing on which forgery can be predicated is one which, if genuine, could operate as the foundation of another man's liability, or the evidence of his rights, such as a letter of recommendation of a person as a man of property and pecuniary responsibility, an order for the delivery of goods, a receipt, or a railroad pass, as well as a bill of exchange, or other express contract. Barnes v. Crawford, 115 N.C. 76, 20 S.E. 386 (1894).

To constitute an "order for the delivery of goods," a forgery within the meaning of this section, there must appear to be a drawer, a person drawn upon, who is under obligation to obey, and there must appear to be a person to whom the goods are to be delivered, and if the paper writing set forth in the indictment as a forgery does not contain these requisites, there cannot be a conviction for forgery under this section, State v. Lamb, 65 N.C. 419 (1871); but in such case a conviction will be sustained for the offense at common law. State v. Leak, 80 N.C. 403 (1879).

Falsely putting a witness' name to a bond not required to be attested by a subscribing witness does not affect the validity of the bond, and is not forgery. State v. Gherkin, 29 N.C. 206 (1847).

Erasure of Obliteration Not a Forgery. — Obliterating by erasure, or otherwise, a release or acquittance on the back of a bond or elsewhere, with the intent to defraud any person thereby, is not according to the law of North Carolina, a forgery. State v. Thornburg, 28 N.C. 79 (1845).

Forgery of One of Two Names. — Where the alleged forged instrument has the names of two or more persons affixed, it is sufficient if one of them is proved to have been forged. State v. White, 101 N.C. 770, 7 S.E. 715 (1888), aff'd on other grounds, 132 U.S. 131, 10 S. Ct. 47, 33 L. Ed. 287 (1889).

Misspelled Signature. — An indictment lies for forgery of an order for the payment of money, although the signature is misspelled, State v. Covington, 94 N.C. 913 (1886), or the names of a firm are in reverse order if it is clear who the parties intended to be designated are. State v. Lane, 80 N.C. 407 (1879).

Possession Raises Presumption of Guilt. — In State v. Britt, 14 N.C. 122 (1831), Ruffin, J., says: "That the order was not in the handwriting of the defendant did not rebut the legal presumption of his guilt. Being in possession of the forged order, drawn in his own favor, were facts constituting complete proof that, either by himself or by false conspiracy with others, he forged or assented to the forgery of the instrument; that he either did the act or caused it to be done until he showed the actual perpetrator and that he himself was not privy." To the same effect is State v. Morgan, 19 N.C. 348 (1837). It is wholly immaterial whether the defendant himself forged the order or procured and caused it to be done. In either case his guilt is the same. State v. Lane, 80 N.C. 407 (1879).

One possessing a forged instrument is presumed to have either forged it or consented to the forgery, and nothing else appearing such holder will be presumed guilty. State v. Peterson, 129 N.C. 556, 40 S.E. 9 (1901).

Where defendant signs the name of another person to an instrument, there is no presumption of want of authority. State v. Martin, 30 N.C. App. 512, 227 S.E.2d 172 (1976).

Proof of Signature of Another Name to Instrument without Authority Required. — To show that the defendant signed the name of some other person to an instrument, and that he passed such instrument as genuine, is not sufficient to establish the commission of a crime. It must still be shown that it was a false instrument, and this is not established until it is shown that the person who signed another's name did so without authority. State v. Martin, 30 N.C. App. 512, 227 S.E.2d 172 (1976).

Indictment — Lost Instruments. — If the forged instrument is lost it is not necessary to set it out in the indictment, and the substance of the forged instrument is all that need be charged, though in such case it would be better practice to aver the loss. State v. Peterson, 129 N.C. 556, 40 S.E. 9 (1901).

Same — Instrument Partly Printed and Partly in Writing. — An indictment for forging "a certain instrument in writing" is supported by proof of the forgery of an instrument partly printed and party in writing. State v. Ridge, 125 N.C. 655, 34 S.E. 439 (1899).

Same — Description Insufficient. — A description of the forged instrument as a "railroad pass" merely, is insufficient. The circumstances showing authority of the officer whose name is forged, and the obligation of the company to honor it, must be set out in the indictment. State v. Weaver, 94 N.C. 836 (1886).

§ 14-122.1. Forgery of transcripts and diplomas.

It is a misdemeanor for any person either to:

(1) Make a false or altered transcript or diploma from any secondary school, technical or community college, State Board of Community Colleges, college or university; or

(2) Use such a document with intent to defraud. (1981, c. 146, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 146, s. 2, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1981.

§ 14-123. Forging names to petitions and uttering forged petitions.

If any person shall willfully sign, or cause to be signed, or willfully assent to the signing of the name of any person without his consent, or of any deceased or fictitious person, to any petition or recommendation with the intent of procuring any commutation of sentence, pardon or reprieve of any person convicted of any crime or offense, or for the purpose of procuring such pardon, reprieve or commutation to be refused or delayed by any public officer, or with the intent of procuring from any person whatsoever, either for himself or another, any appointment to office, or to any position of honor or trust, or with the intent to influence the official action of any public officer in the management, conduct or decision of any matter affecting the public, he shall be punished as a Class I felon; and if any person shall willfully use any such paper for any of the purposes or intents above recited, knowing that any part of the signatures to such petition or recommendation has been signed thereto without the consent of the alleged signers, or that names of any dead or fictitious persons are signed thereto, he shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished in like manner. (1883, c. 275; Code, s. 1034; Rev., s. 3426; C. S., s. 4297; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail or State's prison not exceeding five years, or both, at the discretion of the court" near the middle of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-124. Forging certificate of corporate stock and uttering forged certificates.

If any officer or agent of a corporation shall, falsely and with a fraudulent purpose, make, with the intent that the same shall be issued and delivered to any other person by name or as holder or bearer thereof, any certificate or other writing, whereby it is certified or declared that such person, holder or bearer is entitled to or has an interest in the stock of such corporation, when in fact such person, holder or bearer is not so entitled, or is not entitled to the amount of stock in such certificate or writing specified; or if any officer or agent of such corporation, or other person, knowing such certificate or other writing to be false or untrue, shall transfer, assign or deliver the same to another person, for the sake of gain, or with the intent to defraud the corporation, or any member thereof, or such person to whom the same shall be transferred, assigned or delivered, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class I felon. (R. C., c. 34, s. 62; Code, s. 1032; Rev., s. 3421; C. S., s. 4298; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "imprisoned in the county jail or State's prison not less than four months nor more than ten years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-125. Forgery of bank notes and other instruments by connecting genuine parts.

If any person shall fraudulently connect together different parts of two or more bank notes, or other genuine instruments, in such a manner as to produce another note or instrument, with intent to pass all of them as genuine, the same shall be deemed a forgery, and the instrument so produced a forged note, or forged instrument, in like manner as if each of them had been falsely made or forged. (R. C., c. 34, s. 66; Code, s. 1037; Rev., s. 3420; C. S., s. 4299.)

SUBCHAPTER VI. CRIMINAL TRESPASS.

ARTICLE 22.

Trespasses to Land and Fixtures.

§ 14-126. Forcible entry and detainer.

No one shall make entry into any lands and tenements, or term for years, but in case where entry is given by law; and in such case, not with strong hand nor with multitude of people, but only in a peaceable and easy manner; and if any man do the contrary, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — See note to § 14-134.

Construed with § 14-134. — This section and § 14-134 place no limitation on the right of the person in possession to object to a disturbance of his actual or constructive possession. The possessor may accept or reject whomsoever he pleases and for whatsoever whim suits his fancy. When that possession is wrongfully disturbed it is a misdemeanor. The extent of punishment is dependent upon the character of the possession, actual or constructive, and the manner in which the trespass is committed. State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958).

The word "entry" as used in this section and § 14-134, is synonymous with the word "trespass." It means an occupancy or possession contrary to the wishes and in derogation of the rights of the person having actual or constructive possession. State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958).

Elements of the Offense Generally. — The gist of the offense of forcible trespass is the high-handed invasion of the actual possession of another, he being present forbidding, and the other need not be put in fear; it is only necessary that the force be such that the party in possession must yield to avoid a breach of the peace. State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314 (1980).

Force. Actual force or appearances tending to inspire a just apprehension of violence is necessary to constitute the offense. A forcible entry is not proved by evidence of a mere trespass; there must be proof of such force, or at least such show of force, as is calculated to prevent resistance. State v. Leary, 136 N.C. 578, 48 S.E. 570 (1904); State v. Davenport, 156 N.C. 596, 72 S.E. 7 (1911). So riding into the yard of a house occupied by a woman and remaining there cursing her constitutes force. State v. Davenport, supra. But where a person, in the absence of the prosecutor, merely unlocked and took off the lock put on by the prosecutor and put his own lock on, without breaking anything or doing any violence, and committed no violence upon the return of the prosecutor, he is not guilty of forcible entry and detainer. State v. Leary, 136 N.C. 578, 48 S.E. 570 (1904).

To convict one of the crime of forcible trespass, it is essential for the State to establish an entry with such force as to be "apt to strike terror" to the prosecutor whose possession was disturbed. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

The fact that there had been an altercation between the occupant and the defendant earlier in the evening together with all the circumstances including the fact that the occupant was frightened enough to have his shotgun ready, was evidence from which the jury could conclude the entry was likely to cause a breach of the peace which would make it with force and violence. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

To constitute the offense of forcible trespass, there must be a demonstration of force, as with weapons or multitude of people, so as to make a breach of the peace or directly tend to it, or be calculated to intimidate or put in fear. State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314 (1980).

Same — Assault on Occupant Not Required. — Forcible trespass requires an assault on the occupant of the premises while forcible entry and detainer does not require an assault on a person, but only an entry with a "strong hand," that is, something that could cause a breach of the peace. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Actual Possession Necessary. — The essential element of the offense of forcible entry is that the lands, etc., must be in the actual possession of him whose possession is charged to have been interferred with. To constitute actual possession, there must be an actual exercise of authority and control over the land, either in person or by the family or servants of the person alleged to be in possession. He need not at all times be personally present on the premises. State v. Bryant, 103 N.C. 436, 9 S.E. 1 (1889).

This section is designed to protect actual possession only, and it is no defense that the accused has title to the locus in quo if the prosecutor be in actual possession of it. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

It is necessary to allege and establish actual possession in the prosecutor. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

Same — Indictment. — The element of actual possession must be charged in the indictment. State v. Bryant, 103 N.C. 436, 9 S.E. 1 (1889). It is a sufficient compliance with this rule to allege that the owner was "then and there in peaceable possession." State v. Eason, 70 N.C. 88 (1874).

Same — Right of Tenant as Sufferance. — Where the possession of the prosecutor in forcible entry and detainer is only by sufferance, the prosecution cannot be sustained. State v. Leary, 136 N.C. 578, 48 S.E. 570 (1904).

Same — Title Not Involved. — The right or title to land cannot be vindicated with the bludgeon, but the party who claims the better title must, if it be denied or the actual possession of the land be refused, upon a lawful demand made for the same, resort to the peaceful methods and processes of the law for his redress and the recovery of his property. If, instead of pursuing this course, he elects to use violence, the law holds him criminally responsible for his act. State v. Webster, 121 N.C. 586, 28 S.E. 254 (1897), where it is said: "As forcible trespass is essentially an offense against the possession of another and does not depend upon the title, it is proper to exclude evidence of title in defendants on trial under an indictment for such offense." State v. Davenport, 156 N.C. 596, 72 S.E. 7 (1911).

The offense of forcible trespass under this section, does not involve title to the premises, but is directed against the possession, and when the possession is in the prosecuting witness, and the entry is made in such a manner with such show of force, after being prohibited by the prosecuting witness, as tends to a breach of the peace, it is sufficient for conviction. State v. Earp, 196 N.C. 164, 145 S.E. 23 (1928).

Same — Extent of Liability of Title Holder. — The court quoting from Reeder v. Purdy, 41 Ill. 279, says: "The reasoning upon which we rest our conclusion lies in the briefest compass, and is hardly more than a simple syllogism. The statute of forcible entry and detainer, not in terms, but by necessary construction, forbids a forcible entry, even by the owner, upon the actual possession of another. Such entry is, therefore, unlawful. If unlawful, it is a trespass, and an action for the trespass must necessarily lie . . . . Although the occupant may maintain trespass against the owner for a forcible entry, yet he can only recover such damages as have directly accrued to him from injuries done to his person or property through the wrongful invasion of his possession, and such exemplary damages as the jury may (under proper instructions) think proper to give. But a person having no title to the premises clearly cannot recover damages for any injury done to them by him who has the title." Mosseller v. Deaver, 106 N.C. 494, 11 S.E. 529 (1890).

The principal distinctions between forcible trespass and forcible entry and detainer are that forcible trespass requires that the complaining party be an occupant of the premises while forcible entry and detainer requires occupancy plus some type of estate in the land. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Entry after being forbidden does not involve an assault or entry with a strong hand as does forcible entry and detainer, and it does not require actual occupancy of the land by the complaining party, but it does require the complaining party to have legal title to the land.

State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

A peaceful entry negatives liability under this section. State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958).

But One Who Remains after Being Directed to Leave Is Guilty of Wrongful Entry. — In applying this section, one who remains after being directed to leave is guilty of a wrongful entry even though the original entrance was peaceful and authorized. State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958). But see State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314 (1980).

Where persons of the negro race entered that part of the premises of a private enterprise reserved for white clientele, and refused to leave upon order of the proprietor, they were guilty of a wrongful entry within the meaning of this section, even though their original entrance was peaceful. State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958).

One who remains in a home after being directed to leave is guilty of a wrongful entry and becomes a trespasser, even though the original entry was peaceful and authorized, and a householder may use such force as is reasonably necessary to eject him. State v. Kelly, 24 N.C. App. 670, 211 S.E.2d 854 (1975).

The Supreme Court's statement in State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958), intimating that a mere refusal to leave by a single individual would sustain a conviction under this section was mere dictum, since the court was faced with convictions under § 14-134, and the case law requires a greater demonstration of force than the technical trespass. State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314 (1980).

As Are Those Who Abuse Possessor.—In order to convict of a misdemeanor under the provisions of this section it is not necessary that the act of going on the lands be unlawful, if the accused thereafter have in overpowering numbers cursed and abused the one in lawful possession, using threatening and abusive language. State v. Fleming, 194 N.C. 42, 138 S.E. 342 (1927).

The unlatching and opening of the screen and the attempt to open the door as shown by the State's evidence is enough to constitute entry. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Staging Sit-In. — Where defendants acted in concert with approximately 20 other persons in staging a sit-in, their number was of such a magnitude that only by yielding to their continued presence could a breach of the peace be avoided, once they have refused to leave as requested. In such a situation, the original entry, though peaceful, becomes unlawful, though no other force is used. State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314 (1980).

In a prosecution of defendants under this section for forcible entry, the multitude of persons entering the property would be sufficient to constitute the required force and the only force required was the force ncessary to remain on the premises after having been requested to leave, where defendants acted in concert with approximately 20 other persons in staging a sit-in at the premises of a utility company. State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314 (1980).

Entry under Void Warrant. — Where four or more men enter upon premises in the actual possession of another by virtue of a warrant and proceedings before a magistrate, which are a nullity, and eject such person and his family from the house they were occupying, they are guilty of a forcible trespass. State v. Yarborough, 70 N.C. 250 (1874); Atlantic T. & O.R.R. v. Johnston, 70 N.C. 348 (1874).

No Accessories. — In misdemeanors there are no accessories, and those who were present in numbers, some armed with axes and others with guns, while one of their number caused the prosecutor's agents to abandon the locus in quo, were his aiders and abettors and equally guilty of forcible trespass. State v. Davenport, 156 N.C. 596, 72 S.E. 7 (1911).

Alleging Expulsion of Possession. — While expulsion of possession must be alleged where actual ouster has occurred, such an allegation is not essential when the basis for charging defendants with violation of this section is because of a refusal to leave, thus distinguishing the decision in State v. Bryant, 103 N.C. 436, 9 S.E. 1 (1889). State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314 (1980).

Sufficiency of Warrant. — A warrant charging an offense under this section was sufficient even though it did not charge occupany at the time of entry where the warrant cited the section and charged that with "force and violence" the defendant trespassed upon the property of the occupant. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

§ 14-127. Willful and wanton injury to real property.

If any person shall willfully and wantonly damage, injure or destroy any real property whatsoever, either of a public or private nature, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by fine or imprisonment or both, in the discretion of the court. § 14-128. Injury to trees, crops, lands, etc., of another.

Any person, not being on his own lands, who shall without the consent of the owner thereof, willfully commit any damage, injury, or spoliation to or upon any tree, wood, underwood, timber, garden, crops, vegetables, plants, lands, springs, or any other matter or thing growing or being thereon, or who cuts, breaks, injures, or removes any tree, plant, or flower, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisoned not exceeding six months, or both in the discretion of the court: Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to the officers, agents, and employees of the Department of Transportation while in the discharge of their duties within the right-of-way or easement of the Department of Transportation. (Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 54; 1957, c. 65, s. 11; c. 754; 1965, c. 300, s. 1; 1969, c. 22, s. 1; 1973, c. 507, s. 5; 1977, c. 464, s. 34.)

§ 14-129. Taking, etc., of certain wild plants from land of another.

No person, firm or corporation shall dig up, pull up or take from the land of another or from any public domain, the whole or any part of any Venus flytrap (Dionaea muscipula), trailing arbutus, Aaron's Rod (Thermopsis caroliniana), Bird-foot Violet (Viola pedata), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria canadensis), Blue Dogbane (Amsonia tabernaemontana), Cardinal-flower (Lobelia cardinalis), Columbine (Aquilegia canadenis), Dutchman's Breeches (Dicentra cucullaria), Maidenhair Fern (Adiantum pedatum), Walking Fern (Camptosorus rhizophyllus), Gentians (Gentiana), Ginseng (Panax quinquefolium), Ground Cedar, Running Cedar, Hepatica (Hepatica americana and acutiloba), Jack-in-the-Pulpit (Arisaema triphyllum), Lily (Lilium), Lupine (Lupinus), Monkshood (Aconitum uncinatum and reclinatum), May Apple (Podophyllum peltatum), Orchids (all species), Pitcher Plant (Sarracenia), Sea Oats (Uniola paniculata), Shooting Star (Dodecantheon meadia), Oconee Bells (Shortia galacifolia), Solomon's Seal (Polygonatum), Trailing Christmas (Greens-Lycopodium), Trillium (Trillium), Virginia Bluebells (Mertensia virginica), and Fringe Tree (Chionanthus virginicus), American holly, white pine, red cedar, hemlock or other coniferous trees, or any flowering dogwood, any mountain laurel, any rhododendron, or any ground pine, or any Christmas greens, or any Judas tree, or any leucothea, or any azalea, without having in his possession a permit to dig up, pull up or take such plants, signed by the owner of such land, or by his duly authorized agent. Any person convicted of violating the provisions of this section shall be fined not less than ten dollars ($10.00) nor more than fifty dollars ($50.00) for each offense. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the Counties of Cabarrus, Carteret, Catawba, Cherokee, Chowan, Cumberland, Currituck, Dare, Duplin, Edgecombe, Franklin, Gaston, Granville, Hertford, McDowell, Pamlico, Pender, Person, Richmond, Rockingham, Rowan and Swain. (1941, c. 253; 1951, c. 367, s. 1; 1955, cc. 251, 962; 1961, c. 1021; 1967, c. 355; 1971, c. 951.)

§ 14-129.1: Repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 964, s. 2, effective July 1, 1980.

§ 14-130. Trespass on public lands.

If any person shall erect a building on any state-owned lands, or cultivate or remove timber from any such lands, without the permission of the State, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Moreover, the State can recover from any person cutting timber on its land three times the value of the timber which is cut. (1823, c. 1190, P. R.; 1842, c. 36, s. 4; R. C., c. 34, s. 42; Code, s. 1121; Rev., s. 3746; 1909, c. 891; C. S., s. 4302; 1979, c. 15.)

§ 14-131. Trespass on land under option by the federal government.

On lands under option which have formally or informally been offered to and accepted by the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development by the acquiring federal agency and tentatively accepted by said Department for administration as State forests, State parks, State game refuges or for other public purposes, it shall be unlawful to cut, dig, break, injure or remove any timber, lumber, firewood, trees, shrubs or other plants; or any fence, house, barn or other structure; or to pursue, trap, hunt or kill any bird or other wild animals or take fish from streams or lakes within the boundaries of such areas without the written consent of the local official of the United States having charge of the acquisition of such lands.

Any person, firm or corporation convicted of the violation of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be subject to a fine of not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or to imprisonment for not to exceed 30 days, or to both such fine and imprisonment.

The Department of Natural Resources and Community Development through its legally appointed forestry, fish and game wardens is hereby authorized and empowered to assist the county law-enforcement officers in the enforcement of this section. (1935, c. 317; 1973, c. 1262, s. 86; 1977, c. 771, s. 4.)

§ 14-132. Disorderly conduct in and injuries to public buildings and facilities.

(a) It is a misdemeanor if any person shall:

(1) Make any rude or riotous noise, or be guilty of any disorderly conduct, in or near any public building or facility; or

(2) Unlawfully write or scribble on, mark, deface, besmear, or injure the walls of any public building or facility, or any statue or monument situated in any public place; or

(3) Commit any nuisance in or near any public building or facility.

(b) Any person in charge of any public building or facility owned or controlled by the State, any subdivision of the State, or any other public agency shall have authority to arrest summarily and without warrant for a violation of this section.

(c) The term "public building or facility" as used in this section includes any building or facility which is:

(1) One to which the public or a portion of the public has access and is owned or controlled by the State, any subdivision of the State, any other public agency, or any private institution or agency of a charitable, educational, or eleemosynary nature; or

(2) Dedicated to the use of the general public for a purpose which is primarily concerned with public recreation, cultural activities, and other events of a public nature or character.

(3) Designated by the Attorney General in accordance with G.S. 114-20.1.

The term "building or facility" as used in this section also includes the surrounding grounds and premises of any building or facility used in connection with the operation or functioning of such building or facility.

(d) Any person who violates any provision of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1829, c. 29, ss. 1, 2; 1842, c. 47; R. C., c. 103, ss. 7, 8; Code, s. 2308; Rev., s. 3742; 1915, c. 269; C. S., s. 4303; 1969, c. 869, s. 7½; c. 1224, s. 2; 1981, c. 499, s. 2.)

§ 14-132.1. Demonstrations or assemblies of persons kneeling or lying down in public buildings.

If any person, persons, group or assembly of persons, after being forbidden to do so by the supervisor, keeper, custodian or person in charge of any public building of the State or of any county or municipality shall go or enter into such public building so owned by the State, county or municipality or shall enter upon the lands in or near any such public building and shall engage in sitting, kneeling, lying down or inclining so as to obstruct the ingress or egress of members of the public in the use of said building for normal business affairs or who shall congregate, assemble or by groups or formations, whether organized or unorganized, or by any method or manner whatsoever, so as to block or interfere with the customary, normal use of said building or the land or grounds in, around and adjacent to said building, such person or persons shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, plea of guilty or nolo contendere, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment of not more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1965, c. 1183; 1969, c. 740.)

§ 14-132.2. Willfully trespassing upon or damaging a public school bus.

(a) Any person who shall unlawfully and willfully demolish, destroy, deface, injure, burn or damage any public school bus or public school activity bus shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than two years, or both.

(b) Any person who shall enter a public school bus or public school activity bus after being forbidden to do so by the authorized school bus driver in charge thereof, or the school principal to whom the public school bus or public school activity bus is assigned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars ($100.00), imprisonment for not more than 30 days, or both.

(c) Any occupant of a public school bus or public school activity bus who shall refuse to leave said bus upon demand of the authorized driver in charge thereof, or upon demand of the principal of the school to which said bus is assigned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars ($100.00), imprisonment for not more than 30 days, or both.

(d) Subsections (b) and (c) of this section shall not apply to a child less than 12 years of age, or authorized professional school personnel. (1975, c. 191, s. 1.)

§ 14-133. Erecting artificial islands and lumps in public waters.

If any person shall erect artificial islands or lumps in any of the waters of the State east of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad running from Wilmington to Weldon by way of Burgaw, Warsaw, Goldsboro, Wilson, Rocky Mount, and Halifax (formerly the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad) and running from Weldon to the North Carolina-Virginia State boundary by way of Garysburg and Pleasant Hill (formerly the Petersburg and Weldon Railroad), he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1883, c. 109; Code, s. 986; Rev., s. 3543; C. S., s. 4304; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

§ 14-134. Trespass on land after being forbidden; license to look for estrays.

If any person after being forbidden to do so, shall go or enter upon the lands of another, without a license therefor, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both: Provided, that if any person shall make a written affidavit before a magistrate of the county that any of his cattle or other livestock (which shall be specially described in such affidavit) have strayed away, and that he has good reason to believe that they are on the lands of a certain other person, then the magistrate may, in his discretion, allow the affiant to enter on the premises of such person with one or more servants, without firearms, in the daytime (Sunday excepted), between the hours of sunrise and sunset, and make search for his estrays for such limited time as to the magistrate shall appear reasonable. The only effect of such license shall be to protect the persons entering from indictment therefor, and the license shall have this effect only where it is made bona fide and the entry is effected without any damage except such as may be necessary to conduct the search. (1866, c. 60; Code, s. 1120; Rev., s. 3688; C. S., s. 4305; 1963, c. 1106; 1969, c. 1224, s. 12; 1973, c. 108, s. 3.)

Purpose. — This section is designed to protect possession regardless whether it be actual or constructive. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

The law does not look to the motive of a proprietor but to the wrongful invasion of his property and to the disturbance of his right to undisputed possession. State v. Cobb, 262 N.C. 262, 136 S.E.2d 674 (1964).

Essential Ingredients of Offense. — To constitute trespass on the land of another after notice or warning under this section, three essential ingredients must coexist: (1) The land must be the land of the prosecutor in the sense that it is in either his actual or constructive possession; (2) the accused must enter upon the land intentionally; and (3) the accused must do this after being forbidden to do so by the prosecutor. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

To constitute the offense forbidden by this section and with which defendants are charged there must be an entry on land after being forbidden; and such entry must be wilful, and not from ignorance, accident, or under a bona fide claim of right or license. State v. Cobb, 262 N.C. 262, 136 S.E.2d 674 (1964).

Entering the property "without a license therefor" is not a necessary element of this crime. State v. Edgerton, 25 N.C. App. 45, 212 S.E.2d 398 (1975).

Possession is an essential element of the crime. If the State fails to establish that prosecutor has possession (actual or constructive) no crime has been established. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

The principal distinctions between forcible trespass and forcible entry and detainer are that forcible trespass requires that the complaining party be an occupant of the premises while forcible entry and detainer requires occupancy plus some type of estate in the land. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Entry under Claim of Right. — One who enters upon the land of another under a bona fide claim of right is guilty of no criminal offense. State v. Crosset, 81 N.C. 579 (1879). Mere belief of the claim is not sufficient, there must be proof of title or evidence of a reasonable belief of the existence of the right of entry. State v. Fisher, 109 N.C. 817, 13 S.E. 878 (1891); State v. Durham, 121 N.C. 546, 28 S.E. 22 (1897). This bona fide claim of right must be passed on by a jury before defendant can be convicted. State v. Wells, 142 N.C. 590, 55 S.E. 210 (1906). But the question will not be submitted as a mere abstraction; there must be evidence of a claim or of facts giving rise to a reasonable and bona fide claim. State v. Faggart, 170 N.C. 737, 87 S.E. 31 (1915).

It must be noted that entry under a claim of right is a defense only in a criminal action, as ignorance of a trespasser will not exonerate him from civil liability. State v. Whitener, 93 N.C. 590 (1885).

In a prosecution under this section, even though the State establishes that defendant intentionally entered upon land in the actual or constructive possession of prosecutor after being forbidden to do so by the prosecutor, and thus establishes as an ultimate fact that defendant entered the locus in quo without legal right, defendant may still escape conviction by showing as an affirmative defense that he entered under a bona fide claim of right, i.e., that he believed he had a right to enter, and that he had reasonable grounds for such belief. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

Good faith in making the entry is a defense. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

An entry under a bona fide claim of right avoids criminal responsibility under this section though civil liability may remain. State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958).

As a defense to a charge under this section, it is sufficient for defendants to establish that they entered under a bona fide belief of a right to so enter, which belief had a reasonable foundation in fact, but the burden is on the defendant to establish facts sufficient to excuse his wrongful conduct. State v. Cooke, 248 N.C. 485, 103 S.E.2d 846 (1958), appeal dismissed, 359 U.S. 951, 79 S. Ct. 737, 3 L. Ed. 2d 759 (1959), 364 U.S. 177, 80 S. Ct. 1482, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1650 (1960).

A mere belief on the part of a trespasser that he had a claim of right or license will not protect him; he must satisfy the jury that he had reasonable grounds for such belief. State v. Cobb, 262 N.C. 262, 136 S.E.2d 674 (1964).

Land Sought to Be Condemned. — An indictment for willful trespass under this section will lie against an employee of a railroad company for an entry after being forbidden on land which the company is seeking to condemn, the entry being for the purpose of constructing the road and before an appraisement has been made, although a restraining order against such a trespass would be refused. State v. Wells, 142 N.C. 590, 55 S.E. 210 (1906).

Entry by Husband on Wife's Property. — A husband is not subject to the rule of this section, in regard to property of his wife, and although she may forbid him to enter he may enter nevertheless. State v. Jones, 132 N.C. 1043, 43 S.E. 939 (1903).

Entry As Servant. — One who enters upon the land of another, after being forbidden, as the servant, and at the command of a bona fide claimant, is not guilty of any criminal offense. State v. Winslow, 95 N.C. 649 (1886).

Upon the trial under an indictment for trespass on lands after being forbidden, it is no defense to show that defendant acted under the instructions of his superior officer of a railroad company in entering upon the lands to construct a railroad. Evidence that such superior officer therein acted by the advice of counsel learned in the law is incompetent. State v. Mallard, 143 N.C. 666, 57 S.E. 351 (1907).

Entry by Former Tenant to Gather Crops. — For a conviction under the provisions of this section for unlawful trespass on lands after being forbidden, it is not alone sufficient to show that the trespass had been forbidden, when there is evidence tending to show that the trespasser peacefully entered upon a claim of title, founded upon a reasonable belief that he had the right to go upon the lands; and a peremptory instruction to find the prisoner guilty upon the evidence is held as error, there being evidence that the trespasser had been a tenant upon the lands of the prosecutor, and had entered upon the lands to gather the crops he had sown and cultivated, after he had moved to another place with the intention to return for this purpose, believing he had the right, though forbidden to do so by the prosecutor. State v. Faggart, 170 N.C. 737, 87 S.E. 31 (1915).

Entry as Guest of Tenant. — One forbidden by the landlord to enter his land is not guilty under this section if he enters a part of the land in the possession of a tenant and as a guest of the tenant. State v. Lawson, 101 N.C. 717, 7 S.E. 905 (1888).

Entry When Sober after Entry While Intoxicated Forbidden. — Where defendant's evidence in a prosecution for trespass was to the effect that the prosecutrix had forbidden him the premises only when he was intoxicated and that on the occasion in question he was sober, his testimony, if the jury found it to be true, would entitle him to an acquittal, and he is entitled to an instruction on the legal effect of his evidence. State v. Keziah, 269 N.C. 681, 153 S.E.2d 365 (1967).

Abatement of Pending Convictions by Civil Rights Act. — Since the Civil Rights Act of 1964 forbids discrimination in places of public accommodation and removes peaceful attempts to be served on an equal basis from the category of punishable activities, pending convictions for violation of this section are abated by passage of the act, even though the conduct involved occurred prior to its enactment. Blow v. North Carolina, 379 U.S. 684, 85 S. Ct. 635, 13 L. Ed. 2d 603 (1965).

What Constitutes State Action Preventing Owner From Practicing Discrimination. — The removal of a trespasser, whether he be white or negro, from an owner's premises by the police does not constitute State action to enforce segregation and is not prohibited by the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution. State v. Cobb, 262 N.C. 262, 136 S.E.2d 674 (1964).

An inspection report form, promulgated by the State Board of Health under §§ 72-46 through 72-49, making provisions for toilet facilities "for each sex and race" was held sufficient to constitute State action depriving the operator of a restaurant of a freedom of choice with respect to the patrons he could serve. State v. Fox, 263 N.C. 233, 139 S.E.2d 233 (1964), reversing trespass convictions of "sit-in" demonstrators.

In accordance with mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States, conviction of the defendant of trespass in wilfully refusing to leave a restaurant after being requested to do so by the management, was reversed on the ground that the inspection form of the State Board of Health providing for toilet facilities separate for each race constituted State action depriving the operator of the restaurant of freedom of choice as to patrons he could serve. State v. Fox, 263 N.C. 233, 139 S.E.2d 233 (1964).

Evidence Not Establishing Prosecutor's Possession. — Where, in a prosecution under this section the only evidence offered by the State as to title of prosecutor is oral testimony that prosecutor had purchased the property, and the only evidence of possession was that prosecutor had warned defendant to stay off the land and had entered upon the land temporarily on a single occasion to erect a barbed wire fence thereon, held, defendant's motion to nonsuit should have been granted, since the evidence is insufficient to establish prosecutor's possession of the land within the meaning of this section. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

Indictment — License to Enter Must Be Negatived. — In an indictment for entering on the land of another and taking therefrom turpentine, etc., it is necessary that a "license so to enter" should be distinctly negatived as an essential part of the description of the offense. State v. Bullard, 72 N.C. 445 (1875).

An indictment is fatally defective if it does not charge that the entry was "without a license therefor." State v. Smith, 263 N.C. 788, 140 S.E.2d 404 (1965).

Same — Same — Indictment Sufficient. — An indictment in which it is charged that the defendant did unlawfully enter upon the premises of the prosecutors, he, the said defendant, having been forbidden to enter on said premises, and not having a license so to enter, etc., is sufficient. State v. Whitehurst, 70 N.C. 85 (1874).

Same — Ownership or Possession Must Be Alleged and the Proof Must Correspond. — It is necessary to allege in the warrant or bill of indictment the rightful owner or possessor of the property, and the proof must correspond with the charge. If the rightful possession is in one other than the person named in the warrant or bill, there is a fatal variance. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

Same — Amendment as to Possession Constitutes Fatal Variance. — On appeal to the superior court from conviction on a warrant charging trespass on the property of one person after being forbidden, the allowance of an amendment to charge the property was in the possesison of a different person results in the charge of an entirely different crime and constitutes a fatal variance. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

Warrant May Be Amended. — The superior court has power to amend, after verdict, a warrant brought by appeal of defendant charging defendant with going upon the land of another, after being forbidden to do so, so as to charge that the entry was "willful and unlawful," and to make the charge conclude, "against the peace and dignity of the State." State v. Smith, 103 N.C. 410, 9 S.E. 200 (1889).

Warrant with Affidavit Attached. — A warrant for trespass will not be quashed because it does not contain the necessary descriptive words of the illegal offense, when it refers to an "annexed affidavit" in which all the essential averments are made, as the reference to the affidavit makes it a part of the warrant. State v. Winslow, 95 N.C. 649 (1886).

Applied in State v. Marsh, 225 N.C. 648, 36 S.E.2d 244 (1945); State v. Dove, 261 N.C. 366, 134 S.E.2d 683 (1964).

§ 14-134.2. Operating motor vehicle upon utility easements after being forbidden to do so.

If any person, without permission, shall ride, drive or operate a minibike, motorbike, motorcycle, jeep, dune buggy, automobile, truck or any other motor vehicle upon a utility easement upon which the owner or holder of the easement or agent of the owner or holder of the easement has posted on the easement a "no trespassing" sign or has otherwise given oral or written notice to the person not to so ride, drive or operate such a vehicle upon the said easement, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months or both, provided, however, neither the owner of the property nor the holder of the easement or their agents, employees, guests, invitees or permittees shall be guilty of a violation under this section. (1975, c. 636, s. 1.)

§ 14-134.3. Domestic criminal trespass.

Any person who enters after being forbidden to do so or remains after being ordered to leave by the lawful occupant, upon the premises occupied by a present or former spouse or by a person with whom the person charged has lived as if married, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor if the complainant and the person charged are living apart; provided, however, that no person shall be guilty if said person enters upon the premises pursuant to a judicial order or written separation agreement which gives the person the right to enter upon said premises for the purpose of visiting with minor children. Evidence that the parties are living apart shall include but is not necessarily limited to:

(1) A judicial order of separation;
(2) A court order directing the person charged to stay away from the premises occupied by the complainant;
(3) An agreement, whether verbal or written, between the complainant and the person charged that they shall live separate and apart, and such parties are in fact living separate and apart; or
(4) Separate places of residence for the complainant and the person charged.

On conviction, said person may be punished by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1979, c. 561, s. 2.)

§ 14-135. Cutting, injuring, or removing another's timber.

If any person not being the bona fide owner thereof, shall knowingly and willfully cut down, injure or remove any standing, growing or fallen tree or log, the property of another, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court. CASE NOTES

Prosecutor's Ownership of Land Essential. — The crime of unlawfully cutting, injuring or removing another's timber as defined by this section is an offense against the freehold rather than the possession, and ownership of the property by the prosecutor is a sine qua non to conviction. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

Cited in State v. Edgerton, 25 N.C. App. 45, 212 S.E.2d 398 (1975).

§ 14-136. Setting fire to grass and brushlands and woodlands.

If any person shall intentionally set fire to any grassland, brushland or woodland, except it be his own property, or in that case without first giving notice to all persons owning or in charge of lands adjoining the land intended to be fired, and without also taking care to watch such fire while burning and to extinguish it before it shall reach any lands near to or adjoining the lands so fired, he shall for every such offense be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than five hundred dollars ($500.00), or imprisoned for a period of not less than 60 days nor more than four months for the first offense, and for a second or any subsequent similar offense shall be imprisoned not less than four months nor more than one year. If intent to damage the property of another shall be shown, said person shall, for a first offense, be punished as a Class I felon; and for a second and subsequent offenses said person shall be punished as a Class H felon. This section shall not prevent an action for the damages sustained by the owner of any property from such fires. For the purposes of this section, the term "woodland" is to be taken to include all forest areas, both timber and cutover land, and all second-growth stands on areas that have at one time been cultivated. Any person who shall furnish to the State, evidence sufficient for the conviction of a violation of this section shall receive the sum of five hundred dollars ($500.00) to be paid from the State Fire Suppression Fund. (1777, c. 123, ss. 1, 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 16, ss. 1, 2; Code, ss. 52, 53; Rev., s. 3346; 1915, c. 243, ss. 8, 11; 1919, c. 318; C. S., s. 4309; 1925, c. 61, s. 1; 1943, c. 661; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1981, c. 892.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than one nor more than five years" in the second sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, deleted "willful or malicious" preceding "intent" near the beginning of the second sentence, and inserted "for a first offense," and added "and for a second and subsequent offenses said person shall be punished as a Class H felon" in that sentence. In the last sentence, the amendment substituted "five hundred dollars ($500.00) to be paid from the State Fire Suppression Fund" for "$50.00, to be taxed as part of the court costs."

CASE NOTES

The primary purpose of this section is to protect property from fire damage. But the enactment is broad enough to include setting fire to a grass-covered field. Benton v. Montague, 253 N.C. 695, 117 S.E.2d 771 (1961).

The primary purpose of this section is to protect property. Pickard v. Burlington Belt Corp., 2 N.C. App. 97, 162 S.E.2d 601 (1968).

This section defines the standard of care imposed upon a person who undertakes to burn brush, grass, etc., and a violation of its provisions constitutes negligence. Pickard v. Burlington Belt Corp., 2 N.C. App. 97, 162 S.E.2d 601 (1968).

Care No Defense Where Notice Not Given. — If one firing woods fails to give the statutory notice to adjoining owners and damages ensue, the cause of action is complete, no matter what degree of care may have been shown. Lamb v. Sloan, 94 N.C. 534 (1886); Benton v. Montague, 253 N.C. 695, 117 S.E.2d 771 (1961).

Waiver of Notice Bars Damages. — A waiver of notice is a sufficient answer to an action for damages caused to woodland by fire. Roberson v. Kirby, 52 N.C. 477 (1860); Lamb v. Sloan, 94 N.C. 534 (1886). Waiver when made by a tenant in common while in possession is also a sufficient defense. See Stanland v. Rourk, 168 N.C. 568, 84 S.E. 845 (1915).

Waiver by Adjoining Owner No Bar to Penalty. — When an adjoining owner waives notice of the intended fire such waiver does not waive the penalty of this section, but is only a waiver of the landowner's right of action for damages to his land caused by the spreading of the fire. Lamb v. Sloan, 94 N.C. 534 (1886).

Liability to One Not an Adjoining Owner. — The notice required by this section applies only to adjoining owners and one is not subject to the penalty for failure to give notice to one who is not an adjoining owner, but by the express terms of the statute there is a liability in damages for damages to "any property." See Roberson v. Morgan, 118 N.C. 991, 24 S.E. 667 (1896).

No Evidence to Show Fire Started by Defendant. — Where the evidence tended only to show that the fire started on defendant's land and spread to the plaintiff's land, but that the defendant had ordered his employees not to set out a fire on account of the dry conditions, and there was neither direct nor circumstantial evidence tending to show the fire had been started either by the defendant or his employees under his authority, a judgment of nonsuit was proper. Sutton v. Herrin, 202 N.C. 599, 163 S.E. 578 (1932).

Burning Off Railroad Rights-of-Way. — In case of Mizzell v. Branning Mfg. Co., 158 N.C. 265, 73 S.E. 802 (1912), it was held under a prior statute, similar in some respects to this except that it did not provide against burning grassland and brushland, that the statute did not apply to railroads burning off their rights-of-way that were covered with grass and tree tops.

§ 14-137. Willfully or negligently setting fire to woods and fields.

If any person, firm or corporation shall willfully or negligently set on fire, or cause to be set on fire, any woods, lands or fields, whatsoever, every such offender, upon conviction, shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court. This section shall apply only in those counties under the protection of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development in its work of forest fire control. It shall not apply in the case of a landowner firing, or causing to be fired, his own open, nonwooded lands, or fields in connection with farming or building operations at the time and in the manner now provided by law: Provided, he shall have confined the fire at his own expense to said open lands or fields. (1907, c. 320, ss. 4, 5; C. S., s. 4310; 1925, c. 61, s. 2; 1941, c. 258; 1973, c. 1262, s. 86; 1977, c. 771, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Evidence that the county in which defendant negligently or willfully started forest fires was in charge of the State forest service and that this section was applicable to the county, defendant having offered no evidence to the contrary, was sufficient to show a violation of the section. State v. Patton, 221 N.C. 117, 19 S.E.2d 142 (1942).

§ 14-138. Setting fire to woodlands and grasslands with campfires.

Any wagoner, hunter, camper or other person who shall kindle a campfire or shall authorize another to kindle such fire, unless all combustible material for the space of ten feet surrounding the place where such fire is kindled has been removed, or shall leave a campfire without fully extinguishing it, or who shall accidentally or negligently by the use of any torch, gun, match or other instrumentality, or in any manner whatever, start any fire upon any grassland, brushland or woodland without fully extinguishing the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars ($10.00) nor more than fifty dollars ($50.00), or by imprisonment not exceeding 30 days. For the purposes of this section the term "woodland" is to be taken to include all forest areas, both timber and cutover land, and all second-growth stands on areas that have at one time been cultivated. (Code, s. 54; 1885, c. 126; Rev., s. 3347; 1913, c. 8; 1915, c. 243, ss. 9, 11; C. S., s. 4311.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Powell, 254 N.C. 231, 118 S.E.2d 617 (1961).

§ 14-139. Setting fires in certain areas.

repealed 10/10/81 by 1981, c. 1100

(a) Statement of Purpose. — It is the intent and purpose of this section to enact fire control provisions that are adopted to the needs and circumstances of the respective areas of North Carolina. The General Assembly hereby finds that, in certain counties designated in subsection (b) of this section and which have organic soils associated with large expanses of forests with highly flammable fuel types, forest fires are likely to result from the unusual hazard which exists during land clearance operations, and the General Assembly hereby classifies said counties as subject to the provisions of subsection (b). The General Assembly further finds that, in the remaining counties designated in subsection (c) of this section, forest fires are not as likely to result from unusual hazards that exist during land clearance operations, and the General Assembly hereby classifies said counties as subject to the provisions of subsection (c).

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to willfully start, or cause to be started, any fire, in any of the areas of woodlands under the protection of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development or within 500 feet of any such protected area without first having obtained from the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, or his duly authorized agent, a permit to start and burn such fire in the above mentioned protected areas.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to willfully burn any debris, stumps, brush or other inflammable material accumulated as a result of ground clearance activities without having first received a special burning permit from the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, or his duly authorized agent, and such special permit shall be granted by the Secretary or his duly authorized agent, only if he has personally inspected the site of the proposed burning, and has assessed the conditions which might endanger protected woodlands as a result of such burning. The Secretary, or his duly authorized agent, shall be empowered to prohibit all brush burning and burning of other debris capable of spreading fire to protected woodlands regardless of the distance such burning operation may be from the said woodlands, when it is determined that hazardous fire conditions exist.

If a fire is discovered burning in any area subject to this subsection under any conditions which are considered by the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, or his duly authorized agent, to be hazardous to the protected forest in the vicinity, the Secretary, or any duly authorized agent, is hereby empowered to enter upon the lands where such burning is occurring and, at their option, to extinguish such fires constituting a danger to adjoining woodlands.

The provisions of this subsection shall apply only to the Counties of Dare, Hyde, Tyrrell and Washington.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to start or cause to be started any fire or ignite any material in any of the areas of woodland under the protection of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development or within 500 feet of any such protected area, during the hours starting at midnight and ending at 4:00 P.M. without first obtaining from the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, or his duly authorized agent, a permit to start or cause to be started any fire or ignite any material in such above mentioned protected areas.

The provisions of this subsection shall not apply to the Counties of Dare, Hyde, Tyrrell and Washington.

(d) During periods of hazardous forest fire conditions or during air pollution episodes declared by competent authority pursuant to Article 21B of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development is authorized to cancel all permits and special burning permits covered by this section and to prohibit all brush pile burning, the burning of other debris and the starting of any fires in any of the woodlands under the protection of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development or capable of spreading to any such protected area, without regard to the distance from such fires to such woodlands.

The Secretary, or his duly authorized agent, may refuse to issue a permit when the burning to be conducted under this section is in violation of rules and regulations governing the control of air pollution adopted by competent authority under Article 21B of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes of North Carolina. If a fire is discovered burning in any area subject to this section under any conditions which are considered by the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, or his duly authorized agent, to be in violation of rules and regulations governing the control of air pollution adopted by competent authority under Article 21B of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the Secretary, or any duly authorized agent, is hereby empowered to enter upon the lands where such burning is occurring and, at their option, to extinguish such fires which are in violation of said rules and regulations.

This section shall not apply to any fires started, or caused to be started, within 100 feet of an occupied dwelling house, if such fire shall be confined within an enclosure from which burning material may not escape, or within a protected area upon which a watch is being maintained and which is provided with adequate fire protection equipment.

No charge shall be made for the granting of any permit or special burning permit required by this section.

(e) Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned for a period of not more than 30 days, or both, in the discretion of the court. The penalties imposed by this section shall be separate and apart and not in lieu of any civil or criminal penalties which may be imposed by G.S. 143-215.114 of Article 21B of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes. Compliance with this section does not relieve permittee from the need to comply with rules and regulations adopted pursuant to Article 21B of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes of North Carolina. § 14-140. Certain fires to be guarded by watchman.

All persons, firms or corporations who shall burn any tar kiln or pit of charcoal, or set fire to or burn any brush, grass or other material, whereby any property may be endangered or destroyed, shall keep and maintain a careful and competent watchman in charge of such kiln, pit, brush or other material while burning. Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be punishable by a fine of not less than ten dollars ($10.00) nor more than fifty dollars ($50.00), or by imprisonment for not exceeding 30 days. Fire escaping from such kiln, pit, brush or other material while burning shall be prima facie evidence of neglect of these provisions. (1915, c. 243, s. 10; C. S., s. 4312.)

Local Modification. — Graham: Pub. Loc. 1933, c. 301.

CASE NOTES

The primary purpose of this section is to protect property. Pickard v. Burlington Belt Corp., 2 N.C. App. 97, 162 S.E.2d 601 (1968).

This section defines the standard of care imposed upon a person who undertakes to burn brush, grass, etc., and a violation of its provisions constitutes negligence. Pickard v. Burlington Belt Corp., 2 N.C. App. 97, 162 S.E.2d 601 (1968).

Cited in State v. Swanson, 233 N.C. 442, 27 S.E.2d 122 (1943).

§ 14-141. Burning or otherwise destroying crops in the field.

If any person shall willfully burn or destroy any other person's corn, cotton, wheat, barley, rye, oats, buckwheat, rice, tobacco, hay, straw, fodder, shucks or other provender in a stack, hill, rick or pen, or secured in any other way out of doors, or grass or sedge standing on the land, he shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1874-5, c. 133; Code, s. 985, subsec. 2; 1885, c. 42; Rev., s. 3339; C. S., s. 4313; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1; as to arson, see § 14-58 et seq.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail or State's prison for not less than four months nor more than five years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Out of Doors Defined. — One who burns cotton in a railroad car cannot be convicted under this section as the cotton is not out of doors. State v. Avery, 109 N.C. 798, 13 S.E. 931 (1891).

Indictment. — An indictment should charge a statutory crime in the words of the statute. Therefore an indictment charging setting fire to a lot of fodder without charging the burning, is defective. State v. Hall, 93 N.C. 571 (1885).

It is not necessary under this section to aver in the indictment that the stack burned was "out of doors." State v Huskins, 126 N.C. 1070, 35 S.E. 608 (1900).

§ 14-142. Injuries to dams and water channels of mills and factories.

If any person shall cut away, destroy or otherwise injure any dam, or part thereof, or shall obstruct or damage any race, canal or other water channel erected, opened, used or constructed for the purpose of furnishing water for the operation of any mill, factory or machine works, or for the escape of water therefrom, he shall, upon conviction, be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1866, c. 48; Code, s. 1087; Rev., s. 3678; C. S., s. 4315; 1969, c. 1224, s. 13.)

CASE NOTES

Obstruction below Dam or Channel. — This section only applies to obstructions and damages to the dam or channel and an indictment cannot be had for obstructions below the dam or channel. State v. Tomlinson, 77 N.C. 528 (1877).

§ 14-143. Taking unlawful possession of another's house.

If any person shall enter upon the lands of another and take possession of any house or other building thereon, without permission of the owner or his agent and without a bona fide claim of right or title so to enter and take possession, and shall fail or refuse to vacate such premises within ten days after being notified personally in writing to do so, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined or imprisoned at the discretion of the court punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1893, c. 347; Rev., s. 3685; C. S., s. 4316; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to trespass, see § 14-134; as to taking possession of house without consent, see § 14-159.

§ 14-144. Injuring houses, churches, fences and walls.

If any person shall, by any other means than burning or attempting to burn, unlawfully and willfully demolish, destroy, deface, injure or damage any of the houses or other buildings mentioned in this Chapter in the Article entitled Arson and Other Burnings; or shall by any other means than burning or attempting to burn unlawfully and willfully demolish, pull down, destroy, deface, damage or injure any church, uninhabitated house, outhouse or other house or building not mentioned in such article; or shall unlawfully and willfully burn, destroy, pull down, injure or remove any fence, wall or other inclosure, or any part thereof, surrounding or about any yard, garden, cultivated field or pasture, or about any church or graveyard, or about any factory or other house in which machinery is used, every person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (R. C., c. 34, s. 103; Code, s. 1062; Rev., s. 3673; C. S., s. 4317; 1957, c. 250, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. Houses and Other Buildings.
II. Fences and Walls.

I. HOUSES AND OTHER BUILDINGS.

Trespass Necessary Part of Offense. — It is held, to constitute a criminal offense under this section, there must be a trespass. State v. Williams, 44 N.C. 197 (1853); State v. Watson, 86 N.C. 626 (1882); State v. McCracken, 118 N.C. 1240, 24 S.E. 530 (1896). And a party in lawful possession cannot commit a trespass upon the property of which he is in possession. Dobbs v. Gullidge, 20 N.C. 197 (1838); State v. Reynolds, 95 N.C. 616 (1886); State v. Howell, 107 N.C. 835, 12 S.E. 569 (1890). Therefore, according to the logic of these decisions, if a defendant is shown to have been in the actual possession of the house at the time he tore it down, he committed no criminal offense under this section. We say the lawful possession, to distinguish his possession from that of a mere trespasser, which would not protect him from the penalty of the statute. State v. Jones, 129 N.C. 508, 39 S.E. 795 (1901).

Tenant's and Landlord's Liability to One Another. — A tenant is not subject under this section for damage done to property in his possession, but the owner of the reversion would be subject to prosecution for damage to property in the possession of a tenant, as the statute covers offenses against possession. State v. Mason, 35 N.C. 341 (1852); State v. Whitener, 92 N.C. 798 (1885).

A tenant cannot divest the possession of his landlord by an attempted attornment to another, and if the person to whom the attempted attornment is made enters the land and damages buildings he is liable under this section, in spite of proof of good faith and claim of title. State v. Howell, 107 N.C. 835, 12 S.E. 569 (1890).

Same — Tenant at Sufferance. — If a building is torn down by a landlord while it is in the possession of a tenant at sufferance an indictment under this section cannot be supported, for this section was intended to protect property which the tenant at sufferance has no interest in. State v. Mace, 65 N.C. 344 (1871).

Houses Erected through Mistake. — One who peaceably enters upon lands believing at the time that he had the right to do so, and erects houses thereon, but, being still in possession, tears them down and removes them upon discovering that he was upon the lands of another, is not such a trespasser as will subject him to a conviction under this section. State v. Reynolds, 95 N.C. 616 (1886).

Schoolhouses Held by Adverse Possession. — If defendants are in the adverse possession of the schoolhouse and bona fide claiming it as their own, it is not a crime in them to pull it down. State v. Roseman, 66 N.C. 634 (1872).

"Other Houses". — It is manifest that the words "other house or building" embrace a jail, a jailhouse or building. State v. Bryan, 89 N.C. 531 (1883).

An "uninhabited house" within the purview of this section is a house fit for human habitation, but which is uninhabited at the time. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956).

Where the evidence disclosed that the structure was not fit for human habitation at the time of the alleged offense, the evidence was insufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution for burning an uninhabited house in violation of this section. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956).

Dynamiting a Crib. — An indictment will lie under this section for injury to a crib by an explosion of dynamite. See State v. Martin, 173 N.C. 808, 92 S.E. 597 (1917).

An indictment which charged that the defendant unlawfully, willfully and feloniously set fire to and burned the dwelling house of named person, the same being unoccupied at the time of the burning, charged the burning of an "uninhabited house" in violation of this section, and not a violation of § 14-67. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956).

Proof of defacement by either bullets or paint would be sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section. State v. Dawson, 272 N.C. 535, 159 S.E.2d 1 (1968).

II. FENCES AND WALLS.

Cultivated Field Defined. — Where a piece or tract of land has been cleared and fenced, and cultivated, or proposed to be cultivated and is kept and used for cultivation according to the ordinary course of husbandry, although nothing may be growing within the enclosure at the time of the trespass, it is a "cultivated field" within the description of the statute. State v. Allen, 35 N.C. 36 (1851); State v. McMinn, 81 N.C. 585 (1879).

The ruling in State v. Allen, 35 N.C. 36 (1851), was cited and approved in State v. McMinn, 81 N.C. 585 (1879), in which case it was also held that the smallness of the tract made no difference; that a town lot, if inclosed and cultivated, could be described as a "field" under this statute, unless it was used as a "garden," in which case it should be so described. State v. Campbell, 133 N.C. 640, 45 S.E. 344 1903).

Fence Must Enclose Something. — It is necessary under this section that the fence destroyed or injured surround or enclose something and a fence along a road to prevent passersby from turning into the field to avoid mud in the road, when not connected with any other fence is not within the meaning of this section. See State v. Roberts, 101 N.C. 744, 7 S.E. 714 (1888).

Title to Land No Defense. — It is well settled that where the State, in an indictment under this section, for unlawfully and willfully removing a fence, shows actual possession in the prosecutor, the defendant cannot excuse himself by showing title to the land upon which the fence was situated. State v. Graham, 53 N.C. 397 (1861); State v. Hovis, 76 N.C. 117 (1877); State v. Marsh, 91 N.C. 632 (1884); State v. Howell, 107 N.C. 835, 12 S.E. 569 (1890); State v. Fender, 125 N.C. 649, 34 S.E. 448 (1899); State v. Campbell, 133 N.C. 640, 45 S.E. 344 (1903); State v. Taylor, 172 N.C. 892, 90 S.E. 294 (1916).

Question of Title Cannot Be Raised. — Where a party has neither possession, nor a right of possession to land, he cannot, upon an indictment for unlawfully removing a fence therefrom, raise a question as to a right of entry, nor is it any defense to him that he did the act to bring on a civil suit in order to try the title. State v. Graham, 53 N.C. 397 (1861).

Agency No defense. — Under an indictment for tearing down a fence the defendant cannot avoid liability by showing that he acted as agent for another. State v. Campbell, 133 N.C. 640, 45 S.E. 344 (1903).

Destroying Fence When Line Is in Dispute. — Although a defendant cannot plead his title as a defense to an indictment for destroying fences, etc., on the land in possession of another, he can plead his title if the land is not in the possession of the prosecutor. In case of a disputed line if the prosecutor erects a fence on land in possession of the defendant, the defendant is not liable under this section for pulling it down. State v. Watson, 86 N.C. 626 (1882); State v. Fender, 125 N.C. 649, 34 S.E. 448 (1899). Nor is a quasi tenant occupying by the consent of the owner subject to prosecution under this section for the removal of a fence. State v. Wil'iams, 44 N.C. 197 (1853).

Right to Reclaim Fence. — Although rails of which a fence around an enclosure is made were taken from the land of another, no right to go on the land and remove the fence exists in favor of the person from whom the rails were taken as the fence is a part of the realty, and such a trespass comes within the meaning of this section. State v. McMinn, 81 N.C. 585 (1879).

Applicable to Wire Fences. — An indictment for cutting and destroying a wire fence may be maintained under this section if it charges that the wire fence was an enclosure. State v. Biggers, 108 N.C. 760, 12 S.E. 1024 (1891).

Fences across a Street Removed by Officer. — A fence erected across a public street is a public nuisance, and a city marshal will not be liable for abating the nuisance by pulling it down. State v. Godwin, 145 N.C. 461, 59 S.E. 132 (1907).

Defective Bill of Indictment. — A motion in arrest of judgment after conviction for a removal of fences on the ground that the bill of indictment is defective, will not be granted, unless it appears that the bill is so defective that judgment cannot be pronounced upon it. State v. Taylor, 172 N.C. 892, 90 S.E. 294 (1916).

Instruction That Pasture Is a Field. — Where in a criminal prosecution for the violation of this section providing that a person removing a fence surrounding "any yard, garden, cultivated field, or pasture" should be guilty of a misdemeanor, the indictment charges the defendant with having removed a fence surrounding a cultivated field, and the evidence is that the fence surrounded a pasture, the word "pasture" and "cultivated field" are not synonymous and are distinguished in the statute by a disjunctive, and an instruction which charges that a pasture is a cultivated field within the meaning of the statute is erroneous. State v. Cornett, 199 N.C. 634, 155 S.E. 451 (1930).

§ 14-145. Unlawful posting of advertisements.

Any person who in any manner paints, prints, places, or affixes, or causes to be painted, printed, placed, or affixed, any business or commercial advertisement on or to any stone, tree, fence, stump, pole, automobile, building, or other object, which is the property of another without first obtaining the written consent of such owner thereof, or who in any manner paints, prints, places, puts, or affixes, or causes to be painted, printed, placed, or affixed, such an advertisement on or to any stone, tree, fence, stump, pole, mile-board, milestone, danger-sign, danger-signal, guide-sign, guide-post, automobile, building or other object within the limits of a public highway, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. (Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 109.)

Cross References. — As to injuring, defacing, or destroying notices and advertisements, see §§ 14-384 and 14-385.

§ 14-146. Injuring bridges.

If any person shall unlawfully and willfully demolish, destroy, break, tear down, injure or damage any bridge across any of the creeks or rivers or other streams in the State, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined or imprisoned, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1883, c. 271; Code, s. 993; Rev., s. 3771; C. S., s. 4318.)

§ 14-147. Removing, altering or defacing landmarks.

If any person, firm or corporation shall knowingly remove, alter or deface any landmark in anywise whatsoever, or shall knowingly cause such removal, alteration or defacement to be done, such person, firm or corporation shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. This section shall not apply to landmarks, such as creeks and other small streams, which the interest of agriculture may require to be altered or turned from their channels, nor to such persons, firms or corporations as own the fee simple in the lands on both sides of the lines designated by the landmarks removed, altered or defaced. Nor shall this section apply to those adjoining landowners who may by agreement remove, alter or deface landmarks in which they alone are interested. (1858-9, c. 17; Code, s. 1063; Rev., s. 3674; 1915, c. 248; C. S., s. 4319.)

CASE NOTES

Removal of Stakes. — As between the parties stakes are evidence of a definite location of land, as also is the planting of a stone, and a removal of such stakes comes within the meaning of this section. State v. Jenkins, 164 N.C. 527, 80 S.E. 231 (1913).

Indictment. — An indictment charging that one A. B., with force and arms, etc., willfully and unlawfully did alter, and deface and remove a corner tree, the property of C., against the form of the statute, is good without a negative averment of the matter contained in the proviso to the act creating the offense. State v. Bryant, 111 N.C. 693, 16 S.E. 326 (1892).

§ 14-148. Defacing or desecrating grave sites.

(a) It is unlawful to willfully:

(1) Throw, place or put any refuse, garbage or trash in or on any cemetery;

(2) Take away, disturb, vandalize, destroy or change the location of any stone, brick, iron or other material or fence enclosing a cemetery without authorization of law or consent of the surviving spouse or next of kin of the deceased thereby causing damage of less than one thousand dollars ($1,000); or

(3) Take away, disturb, vandalize, destroy, tamper with or deface any tombstone, headstone, monument, grave marker, grave ornamentation, grave artifacts, shrubbery, flowers, plants or other articles within any cemetery erected or placed to designate where a body is interred or to preserve and perpetuate the memory and name of any person, without authorization of law or the consent of the surviving spouse or next of kin, thereby causing damage of less than one thousand dollars ($1,000).

(b) The provisions of this section shall not apply to a professional archaeologist as defined in G.S. 70-28(4) acting pursuant to the provisions of Article 3 of Chapter 70 of the General Statutes.

(c) Violation of this section is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not less than 60 days nor more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. In passing sentence, the court shall consider the appropriateness of restitution or reparation as a condition of probation under G.S. 15A-1343(b)(6) as an alternative to actual imposition of a fine, jail term, or both. (1840, c. 6; R. C., c. 34, s. 102; Code, s. 1088; Rev., s. 3680; C. S., s. 4320; 1969, c. 987; 1981, c. 752, s. 1; c. 853, s. 4.)

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, rewrote this section, which formerly related only to removing, breaking or defacing, monuments and tombstones.

The second 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added subsection (b).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under this section as it stood prior to the 1981 amendment.

This section creates a misdemeanor not defined as larceny. State v. Jackson, 218 N.C. 373, 11 S.E.2d 149 (1940).

Right of Landowner to Remove. — Where the owner of land consents, either expressly or by implication to the interment of dead bodies on his land, he has no right to afterwards remove the bodies or to deface or pull down the gravestones and monuments erected to perpetuate their memory. State v. Wilson, 94 N.C. 1015 (1886).

Indictment. — It is not necessary, to charge in the indictment that the monument removed was intended to designate the spot where the dead body of a particular person named, or a person unknown, was interred. State v. Wilson, 94 N.C. 1015 (1886).

Applied in State v. Schultz, 294 N.C. 381, 240 S.E.2d 451 (1978).

Cited in Mills v. Carolina Cem. Park Corp., 242 N.C. 20, 86 S.E.2d 893 (1955).

§ 14-149. Desecrating, plowing over or covering up graves.

(a) It is a Class I felony, without authorization of law or the consent of the surviving spouse or next of kin of the deceased, to knowingly and willfully:

(1) Open, disturb, destroy, remove, vandalize or desecrate any casket, human remains or any portion thereof or the repository of any such remains, by any means including plowing under, tearing up, covering over or otherwise obliterating or removing any grave;

(2) Take away, vandalize or destroy any stone, brick, iron or other material or fence enclosing a cemetery, causing damage of more than one thousand dollars ($1,000); or

(3) Take away, vandalize, destroy or deface any tombstone, headstone, monument, grave marker, grave ornamentation, grave artifacts, shrubbery, flowers, plants or other articles within any cemetery erected or placed to designate the place where any dead body is interred or to preserve and perpetuate the memory and the name of any person, causing damage of more than one thousand dollars ($1,000).

(b) The provisions of this section shall not apply to a professional archaeologist as defined in G.S. 70-28(4) acting pursuant to the provisions of Article 3 of Chapter 70 of the General Statutes. (1889, c. 130; Rev., s. 3681; 1919, c. 218; C. S., s. 4321; 1981, c. 752, s. 2; c. 853, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, rewrote this section.

The second 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, designated the provisions of this section as rewritten by the first 1981 amendment as subsection (a) and added subsection (b).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following section were decided under former § 14-150 which, prior to its repeal and prior to the 1981 amendment to this section, governed the felony of disturbing graves.

Intent. — The intent to open a grave and remove the dead body is sufficient criminal intent, and proof of the intent to disturb the grave is conclusive. State v. McLean, 121 N.C. 589, 28 S.E. 140 (1897).

Persons Liable. — The mayor or other town officers counseling their subordinates to remove bodies are liable under this section although they were honestly mistaken as to the scope of their official power. State v. McLean, 121 N.C. 589, 28 S.E. 140 (1897).

When Lot Is Not Paid For. — The fact that the lot has not been paid for will not excuse the disturbance of a body only for the purpose of moving it to a pauper section. State v. McLean, 121 N.C. 589, 28 S.E. 140 (1897).

§§ 14-150, 14-150.1: Repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 752, s. 3, effective October 1, 1981.

Cross References. — As to defacing or desecrating grave sites, see § 14-148. As to desecrating, plowing over or covering up graves, see § 14-149.

§ 14-151. Interfering with gas, electric and steam appliances.

If any person shall willfully, with intent to injure or defraud, commit any of the acts set forth in the following subdivisions, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor:

(1) Connect a tube, pipe, wire or other instrument or contrivance with a pipe or wire used for conducting or supplying illuminating gas, fuel, natural gas or electricity in such a manner as to supply such gas or electricity to any burner, orifice, lamp or motor where the same is or can be burned or used without passing through the meter or other instrument provided for registering the quantity consumed; or,

(2) Obstruct, alter, injure or prevent the action of a meter or other instrument used to measure or register the quantity of illuminating fuel, natural gas or electricity consumed in a house or apartment, or at an orifice or burner, lamp or motor, or by a consumer or other person other than an employee of the company owning any gas or electric meter, who willfully shall detach or disconnect such meter, or make or report any test of, or examine for the purpose of testing any meter so detached or disconnected; or,

(3) In any manner whatever change, extend or alter any service or other pipe, wire or attachment of any kind, connecting with or through which natural or artificial gas or electricity is furnished from the gas mains or pipes of any person, without first procuring from said person written permission to make such change, extension or alterations; or,

(4) Make any connection or reconnection with the gas mains, service pipes or wires of any person, furnishing to consumers natural or artificial gas or electricity, or turn on or off or in any manner interfere with any valve or stopcock or other appliance belonging to such person, and connected with his service or other pipes or wires, or enlarge the orifices of mixers, or use natural gas for heating purposes except through mixers, or electricity for any purpose without first procuring from such person a written permit to turn on or off such stopcock or valve, or to make such connection or reconnections, or to enlarge the orifice of mixers, or to use for heating purposes without mixers, or to interfere with the valves, stopcocks, wires or other appliances of such, as the case may be; or,

(5) Retain possesison of or refuse to deliver any mixer, meter, lamp or other appliance which may be leased or rented by any person, for the purpose of furnishing gas, electricity or power through the same, or sell, lend or in any other manner dispose of the same to any person other than such person entitled to the possession of the same; or,

(6) Set on fire any gas escaping from wells, broken or leaking mains, pipes, valves or other appliances used by any person in conveying gas to consumers, or interfere in any manner with the wells, pipes, mains, gateboxes, valves, stopcocks, wires, cables, conduits or any other appliances, machinery or property of any person engaged in furnishing gas to consumers unless employed by or acting under the authority and direction of such person; or,

(7) Open or cause to be opened, or reconnect or cause to be reconnected any valve lawfully closed or disconnected by a district steam corporation; or

(8) Turn on steam or cause it to be turned on or to reenter any premises when the same has been lawfully stopped from entering such premises. (1901, c. 735; Rev., s. 3666; C. S., s. 4323.)

§ 14-151.1. Interfering with electric, gas or water meters; prima facie evidence of intent to alter, tamper with or bypass electric, gas or water meters; civil liability.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any unauthorized person to alter, tamper with or bypass a meter which has been installed for the purpose of measuring the use of electricity, gas or water or knowingly to use electricity, gas or water passing through any such tampered meter or use electricity, gas or water bypassing a meter provided by an electric, gas or water supplier for the purpose of measuring and registering the quantity of electricity, gas or water consumed.

(b) Any meter or service entrance facility found to have been altered, tampered with, or bypassed in a manner that would cause such meter to inaccurately measure and register the electricity, gas or water consumed or which would cause the electricity, gas or water to be diverted from the recording apparatus of the meter shall be prima facie evidence of intent to violate and of the violation of this section by the person in whose name such meter is installed or the person or persons so using or receiving the benefits of such unmetered, unregistered or diverted electricity, gas or water.

(c) Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisoned not longer than two years, or both fined and imprisoned, in the discretion of the court.

(d) Whoever is found in a civil action to have violated any provion hereof shall be liable to the electric, gas or water supplier in triple the amount of losses and damages sustained or five hundred dollars ($500.00), whichever is greater.

(e) Nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to licensed contractors while performing usual and ordinary services in accordance with recognized customs and standards. (1977, c. 735, s. 1.)

§ 14-152. Injuring fixtures and other property of gas companies; civil liability.

If any person shall willfully, wantonly or maliciously remove, obstruct, injure or destroy any part of the plant, machinery, fixtures, structures or buildings, or anything appertaining to the works of any gas company, or shall use, tamper or interfere with the same, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not more than 30 days for such offense. Such person shall also forfeit and pay to the company so injured, to be sued for and recovered in a civil action, double the amount of the damages sustained by any such injury. (1889 (Pr.), c. 35, s. 3; Rev., s. 3671; C. S., s. 4324.)

§ 14-153. Tampering with engines and boilers.

If any person shall willfully turn out water from any boiler or turn the bolts of any engine or boiler, or meddle or tamper with such boiler or engine, or any other machinery in connection with any boiler or engine, causing loss, damage, danger or delay to the owner in the prosecution of his work, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1901, c. 733; Rev., s. 3667; C. S., s. 4325.)

§ 14-154. Injuring wires and other fixtures of telephone, telegraph and electirc-power companies.

If any person shall willfully injure, destroy or pull down any telegraph, telephone or elctric-power-transmission pole, wire, insulator or any other fixture or apparatus attached to a telegraph, telephone or electric-power-transmission line, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined and imprisoned at the discretion of the court. (1881, c. 4; 1883, c. 103; Code, s. 1118; Rev., s. 3847; 1907, c. 827, s. 1; C. S., s. 4326.)

§ 14-155. Unauthorized connections with telephone or telegraph.

It shall be unlawful for any person to tap or make any connection with any wire or apparatus of any telephone or telegraph company operating in this State, except such connection as may be authorized by the person or corporation operating such wire or apparatus. Any person violating this section shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than ten dollars ($10.00) or imprisoned not more than 10 days for each offense. Each day's continuance of such unlawful connection shall be a separate offense. No connection approved by the Federal Communications Commission or the North Carolina Utilities Commission shall be a violation of this section. (1911, c. 113; C.S., s. 4327; 1973, c. 648; 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1185, s. 2.)

§ 14-156. Injuring fixtures and other property of electric-power companies.

It shall be unlawful for any person willfully and wantonly, and without the consent of the owner, to take down, remove, injure, obstruct, displace or destroy any line erected or constructed for the transmission of electrical current, or any poles, towers, wires, conduits, cables, insulators or any support upon which wires or cables may be suspended, or any part of any such line or appurtenances or apparatus connected therewith, or to sever any wire or cable thereof, or in any manner to interrupt the transmission of electrical current over and along any such line, or to take down, remove, injure or destroy any house, shop, building or other structure or machinery connected with or necessary to the use of any line erected or constructed for the transmission of electrical current, or to wantonly or willfully cause injury to any of the property

mentioned in this section by means of fire. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisoned not longer than one year, or both fined and imprisoned, in the discretion of the court. (1907, c. 919; C. S., s. 4328.)

§ 14-157. Felling trees on telephone and electric-power wires.

If any person shall negligently and carelessly cut or fell any tree, or any limb or branch therefrom, in such a manner as to cause the same to fall upon and across any telephone, electric light or electric-power-transmission wire, from which any injury to such wire shall be occasioned, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall also be liable to penalty of fifty dollars ($50.00) for each and every offense. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1903, c. 616; Rev., s. 3849; 1907, c. 827, s. 2; C. S., s. 4329; 1969, c. 1224, s. 9.)

§ 14-158. Interfering with telephone lines.

If any person shall unnecessarily disconnect the wire or in any other way render any telephone line, or any part of such line, unfit for use in transmitting messages, or shall unnecessarily cut, tear down, destroy or in any way render unfit for the transmission of messages any part of the wire of a telephone line, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1901, c. 318; Rev., s. 3845; C. S., s. 4330; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Civil Action for Damages. — The willful cutting of a telephone wire in public use for hire is made a misdemeanor by this section, and where such act has caused damages to another the action sounds in tort, making the tort-feasor liable for any injuries naturally following and flowing from the wrongful act, independent of any contractual relations between the parties. Hodges v. Virginia-Carolina Ry., 179 N.C. 566, 103 S.E. 145 (1920).

§ 14-159. Injuring buildings or fences; taking possession of house without consent.

If any person shall deface, injure or damage any house, uninhabited house or other building belonging to another; or deface, damage, pull down, injure, remove or destroy any fence or wall enclosing, in whole or in part, the premises belonging to another; or shall move into, take possession of and/or occupy any house, uninhabited house or other building situated on the premises belonging to another, without having first obtained authority so to do and consent of the owner or agent thereof, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00), or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. (1929, c. 192, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 22A.

Trespassing upon "Posted" Property to Hunt, Fish or Trap.

§ 14-159.6. Trespass for purposes of hunting, etc., without written consent a misdemeanor.

Any person who willfully goes on the land, waters, ponds, or a legally established waterfowl blind of another upon which notices, signs or posters, described in G.S. 14-159.7, prohibiting hunting, fishing or trapping, or upon which "posted" notices have been placed, to hunt, fish or trap without the written consent of the owner or his agent shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00), or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment. Provided, further, that no arrests under authority of this section shall be made without the consent of the owner or owners of said land, or their duly authorized agents in the following counties: Halifax, Onslow, Warren. (1949, c. 887, s. 1; 1953, c. 1226; 1965, c. 1134; 1975, c. 280, s. 1; 1979, c. 830, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 113-120.1. It was transferred to its present location by Session Laws 1979, c. 830, s. 11, effective July 1, 1980.

§ 14-159.7. Regulations as to posting of property.

The notices, signs or posters described in G.S. 14-159.6 shall measure not less than 120 square inches and shall be conspicuously posted on private lands not more than 200 yards apart close to and along the boundaries. At least one such notice, sign, or poster shall be posted on each side of such land, and one at each corner thereof, provided that said corner can be reasonably ascertained. For the purpose of prohibiting fishing, or the taking of fish by any means, in any stream, lake, or pond, it shall only be necessary that the signs, notices, or posters be posted along the stream or shoreline of a pond or lake at intervals of not more than 200 yards apart. (1949, c. 887, s. 2; 1953, c. 1226; 1965, c. 923; 1975, c. 280, ss. 2, 3; 1979, c. 830, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 113-120.2. It was transferred to its present location by Session Laws 1979, c. 830, s. 11, effective July 1, 1980.

§ 14-159.8. Mutilation, etc., of "posted" signs; posting signs without consent of owner or agent.

Any person who shall mutilate, destroy or take down any "posted," "no hunting" or similar notice, sign or poster on the lands, waters, or legally established waterfowl blind of another, or who shall post such sign or poster on the lands, waters or legally established waterfowl blind of another, without the consent of the owner or his agent, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00). (1949, c. 887, s. 3; 1953, c. 1226; 1969, c. 51; 1979, c. 830, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 113-120.3. It was transferred to its present location by Session Laws 1979, c. 830, s. 11, effective July 1, 1980.

§ 14-159.9. Entrance on navigable waters, etc., for purpose of fishing, hunting or trapping not prohibited.

Nothing in this Article shall be construed to prohibit the entrance of any person upon navigable waters and the bays and sounds adjoining such waters for the purpose of fishing, hunting or trapping. (1949, c. 887, s. 4; 1953, c. 1226; 1979, c. 830, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 113-120.4. It was transferred to its present location by Session Laws 1979, c. 830, s. 11, effective July 1, 1980.

§ 14-159.10. Enforcement of Article by peace officers; wildlife protectors authorized to execute process.

This Article may be enforced by deputy sheriffs and other peace officers with general subject matter jurisdiction. Law-enforcement officers of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission may execute process issued by the court for violations of this Article. (1979, c. 830, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 830, s. 17, makes this section effective July 1, 1980.

ARTICLE 23.

Trespasses to Personal Property.

§ 14-160. Willful and wanton injury to personal property; punishments.

(a) If any person shall wantonly and willfully injure the personal property of another he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months or both.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a), if any person shall wantonly and willfully injure the personal property of another, causing damage in an amount in excess of two hundred dollars ($200.00), he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in G.S. 14-3(a).

(c) This section applies to injuries to personal property without regard to whether the property is destroyed or not. (1876-7, c. 18; Code, s. 1082; 1885, c. 53; Rev., s. 3676; C. S., s. 4331; 1969, c. 1224, s. 14.)

Cross References. — As to definition of personal property, see § 12-3, subdivision (6). As to prosecution for perjury based upon acquittal in former prosecution under this section, see note to § 14-209.

CASE NOTES

This section was designed to avoid the element of malicious ill will required by the common-law crime of malicious mischief. State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973), aff'd, 22 N.C. App. 53, 205 S.E.2d 358 (1974).

Thus, Common-Law Malicious Mischief Not Superseded. — This section was not intended to supersede the common law as to malicious mischief, and though malice must be charged at common law it is not necessary under this section. State v. Martin, 141 N.C. 832, 53 S.E. 874 (1906).

And Malice Not Necessary. — It is not necessary to allege or prove any malice to the owner of personal property on the part of one who wantonly and willfully injures it nor is it material whether the property was destroyed or not. State v. Sneed, 121 N.C. 614, 28 S.E. 365 (1897).

Injury Must Be Wanton and Willful. — Destruction of personal property is not a crime. It becomes so only when the injury is wanton and willful under this section. State v. Sims, 247 N.C. 751, 102 S.E.2d 143 (1958).

Elements Differ from Discharging Firearm into Occupied Vehicle. — The elements of willful damage to property by shooting out the automobile window are not the same as discharging a firearm into an occupied vehicle. The element of damages which must be shown in a charge of willful damage to property is not an element in a charge of discharging a firearm into an occupied vehicle. Therefore, the two charges are not the same in fact or in law. State v. Tanner, 25 N.C. App. 251, 212 S.E.2d 695 (1975).

Offense May Be Committed Jointly. — The offense under this section may be committed jointly by several persons, one doing the act, the others aiding and abetting or participating. State v. Martin, 141 N.C. 832, 53 S.E. 874 (1906); State v. Parrish, 251 N.C. 274, 111 S.E.2d 314 (1959).

What Constitutes Personal Property — Promissory Note. — A promissory note or due bill being an "evidence of debt" is personal property within the meaning of this section and § 12-3, subdivision (6). State v. Sneed, 121 N.C. 614, 28 S.E. 365 (1897).

Same — Electric Streetcar. — An electric streetcar is personalty and not a fixture. State v. Sneed, 121 N.C. 614, 28 S.E. 365 (1897).

Same — Fence. — Proof of the destruction of a fence erected upon land was held to be insufficient to sustain a conviction upon an indictment charging wanton and willful injury to personal property, since a fence is a part of the realty and there was a fatal variance between allegation of ownership of the realty and proof. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

Destruction of Whiskey by Revenue Officer. — The mere possession of whiskey gives no title; and a revenue officer who seizes a barrel concealed on private premises, and in good faith destoys it, is not guilty of a misdemeanor under this section. North Carolina v. Vanderford, 35 F. 282 (W.D.N.C. 1888).

"Unlawfully" Not Necessary Allegation. — An indictment for injury to personal property, under this section, which charged that the act was "wantonly and willfully" done, was not defective because it did not aver the act to have been unlawfully perpetrated. Lawful acts are not done wantonly and willfully. State v. Martin, 107 N.C. 904, 12 S.E. 194 (1890).

But "Willfully and Wantonly" Necessary. — An indictment cannot be sustained under this section if there is neither an allegation nor finding that the injury was "willfully and wantonly" done. The words "unlawfully and on purpose" will not supply in their place. State v. Tweedy, 115 N.C. 704, 20 S.E. 183 (1894).

And the words "unlawfully and on purpose" will not supply in their place. State v. Tweedy, 115 N.C. 704, 20 S.E. 183 (1894).

Effect of Erroneous Conviction under This Section Instead of § 14-165. — Where there is an erroneous conviction under this section, when the indictment should have been drawn under § 14-165, et seq., the prisoner should be discharged with permission to the solicitor (now district attorney) to send another bill, if so advised. State v. Reed, 196 N.C. 357, 145 S.E. 691 (1928).

In the absence of any proof that damage was greater than $200, defendant should be sentenced pursuant to subsection (a). State v. Tanner, 25 N.C. App. 251, 212 S.E.2d 695 (1975).

Applied in State v. Fisher, 270 N.C. 315, 154 S.E.2d 333 (1967); State v. Locklear, 7 N.C. App. 375, 172 S.E.2d 267 (1970); In re Ingram, 8 N.C. App. 266, 174 S.E.2d 89 (1970).

Stated in State v. Stinson, 263 N.C. 283, 139 S.E.2d 558 (1965).

Cited in State v. Hicks, 233 N.C. 511, 64 S.E.2d 871 (1951); State v. Clayton, 251 N.C. 261, 111 S.E.2d 299 (1959).

§ 14-160.1. Alteration, destruction or removal of permanent identification marks from personal property.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to alter, deface, destroy or remove the permanent serial number, manufacturer's identification plate or other permanent, distinguishing number or identification mark from any item of personal property with the intent thereby to conceal or misrepresent the identity of said item.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to sell, buy or be in possession of any item of personal property, not his own, on which the permanent serial number, manufacturer's identification plate or other permanent, distinguishing number or identification mark has been altered, defaced, destroyed or removed for the purpose of concealing or misrepresenting the identity of said item.

(c) A violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor, punishable on conviction thereof by imprisonment not to exceed two years or by a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000) or both, in the discretion of the court.

(d) This section shall not in any way affect the provisions of G.S. 20-108, 20-109(a) or 20-109(b). (1977, c. 767, s. 1.)

§ 14-161. Malicious removal of packing from railway coaches and other rolling stock.

If any person shall willfully and maliciously take or remove the waste or packing from the journal box of any locomotive, engine, tender, carriage, coach, car, caboose or truck used or operated upon any railroad whether the same be operated by steam or electricity, he shall upon conviction thereof be fined or imprisoned in the jail or State's prison, in the discretion of the court. (1905, c. 335; Rev., s. 3759; C. S., s. 4332.)

§ 14-162. Removing boats.

If any person shall loose, unmoor, or turn adrift from any landing or other place wherever the same shall be, any boat, canoe, or other marine vessel, or if any person shall direct the same to be done without the consent of the owner, or the person having the lawful custody or possession of such vessel, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months or both. The owner may also have his action for such injury. The penalties aforesaid shall not extend to any person who shall press any such property by public authority. (R.C., c. 14, ss. 1, 3; Code, s. 2288; 1889, c. 378; Rev., s. 3544; C. S., s. 4333; 1977, c. 729.)

§ 14-163. Poisoning livestock.

If any person shall willfully and unlawfully poison any horse, mule, hog, sheep or other livestock, the property of another, such person shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1898-9, c. 253; Code, s. 1003; Rev., s. 3313; C. S., s. 4334; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1973, c. 1388; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — As to molesting or injuring livestock generally, see § 14-366. For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, effective July 1, 1980, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than five years or by a fine in the discretion of the court, or both" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-164. Taking away or injuring exhibits at fairs.

If any person, without the license of the owner, or any agricultural or other society, shall unlawfully carry away, remove, destroy, mar, deface or injure anything, animate or inanimate, while on exhibition on the grounds of any such society, or going to or returning from the same, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. It shall be sufficient in any indictment for any such offense, or for the larceny of any such thing, animate or inanimate as aforesaid, to charge that the thing so carried away, destroyed, marred, injured or feloniously stolen is the property of the society to which the said thing shall be forwarded for exhibition. (1870-1, c. 184, s. 4; Code, s. 2796; Rev., s. 3668; C. S., s. 4335; 1969, c. 1224, s. 2.)

Article 24.

Vehicles and Draft Animals—Protection of Bailor against Acts of Bailee.

§ 14-165. Malicious or willful injury to hired personal property.

Any person who shall rent or hire from any person, firm or corporation, any horse, mule or like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile, or other like vehicle, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value, who shall maliciously or willfully injure or damage the same by in any way using or driving the same in violation of any statute of the State of North Carolina, or who shall permit any other person so to do, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to punishment as hereinafter provided. (1927, c. 61, s. 1; 1965, c. 1073, s. 1.)

Cross References. — See note under § 14-160.

§ 14-166. Subletting of hired property.

Any person who shall rent or hire, any horse, mule, or other like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile, or other like vehicle, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value, who shall, without the permission of the person, firm or corporation from whom such property is rented or hired, sublet or rent the same to any other person, firm or corporation, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more that six months, or both. (1927, c. 61, s. 2; 1965, c. 1073, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 15.)

§ 14-167. Failure to return hired property.

Any person who shall rent or hire, any horse, mule or other like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile, or other vehicle, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value, and who shall willfully fail to return the same to the possession of the person, firm or corporation from whom such property has been rented or hired at the expiration of the time for which such property has been rented or hired, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1927, c. 61, s. 3; 1965, c. 1073, s. 3; 1969, c. 1224, s. 15.)

§ 14-168. Hiring with intent to defraud.

Any person who shall, with intent to cheat and defraud the owner thereof of the rental price therefor, hire or rent any horse or mule or any other like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile or other like vehicle, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value, or who shall obtain the possession of the same by false and fraudulent statements made with intent to deceive, which are calculated to deceive, and which do deceive, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1927, c. 61, s. 4; 1965, c. 1073, s. 4; 1969, c. 1224, s. 15.)

§ 14-168.1. Conversion by bailee, lessee, tenant or attorney-in-fact.

Every person entrusted with any property as bailee, lessee, tenant or lodger, or with any power of attorney for the sale or transfer thereof, who fraudulently converts the same, or the proceeds thereof, to his own use, or secretes it with a fraudulent intent to convert it to his own use, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

If, however, the value of the property converted or secreted, or the proceeds thereof, is in excess of four hundred dollars ($400.00), every person so converting or secreting it is guilty of a Class H felony. In all cases of doubt the jury shall, in the verdict, fix the value of the property converted or secreted. (1965, c. 1073, s. 5; 1979, c. 468; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 13.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective Jan. 1, 1980, added the second paragraph.

The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, inserted "Class H" near the end of the first sentence in the second paragraph. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Embezzlement and fraudulent conversion are not necessarily and strictly synonymous. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Section 14-90 Compared. — This section is more limited in its scope with regard to bailees than § 14-90; it appears to embrace a bailee "who fraudulently converts the same" to his own use, while § 14-90 covers the bailee who "shall embezzle or fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapply or convert to his own use." State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

There is no irreconcilable conflict between § 14-90 and this section as they relate to bailees. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

This section does not remove bailees from § 14-90 or make embezzlement by a bailee a misdemeanor. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Quoted in State v. Bailey, 25 N.C. App. 412, 213 S.E.2d 400 (1975).

§ 14-168.2. Definitions.

For the purposes of this Article, the terms "rent," "hire" and "lease" are used to designate the letting for hire of any horse, mule or other like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value by lease, bailment, or rental agreement. (1965, c. 1073, s. 5.)

§ 14-168.3. Prima facie evidence of intent to convert property.

It shall be prima facie evidence of intent to commit a crime as set forth in G.S. 14-167, 14-168, and 14-168.1 when one who has, by written instrument, leased or rented the personal property of another:

(1) Failed or refused to return such property to its owner after the lease, bailment, or rental agreement has expired,
   a. Within 10 days, and
   b. Within 48 hours after written demand for return thereof is personally served or given by registered mail delivered to the last known address provided in such lease or rental agreement, or
(2) When the leasing or rental of such personal property is obtained by presentation of identification to the lessor or rentor thereof which is false, fictitious, or knowingly not current as to name, address, place of employment, or other identification. (1965, c. 1118.)

§ 14-169. Violation made misdemeanor.

Except as otherwise provided, any person violating the provisions of this Article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished at the discretion of the court. (1927, c. 61, s. 5; 1929, c. 38, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 15.)

Article 25.

Regulating the Leasing of Storage Batteries.

§ 14-170. "Rental battery" defined; identification of rental storage batteries.

As used in this Article the words "rental battery" are defined as an electric storage battery loaned, rented or furnished for temporary use by any person, firm or corporation engaged in the business of buying, selling, repairing or recharging electric storage batteries. All such persons, firms or corporations may mark any such rental batteries belonging to them with the word "rental," or any other word of similar meaning, printed or stamped upon or attached to such battery together with such words as shall identify such batteries as the property of the person, firm or corporation so marking the same. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to so mark any such batteries which are not the property of such person, firm or corporation. (1933, c. 185, s.1.)

§ 14-171. Defacing word "rental" prohibited.

It is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to remove, deface, alter or destroy the word "rental" on any rental battery or any other word, mark or character printed, painted or stamped upon or attached to any rental battery to identify the same as belonging to or being the property of any person, firm or corporation. (1933, c. 185, s. 2.)

§ 14-172. Sale, etc., of rental battery prohibited.

It is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation other than the owner thereof to sell, dispose of, deliver, rent or give to any other person, firm or corporation any rental battery marked by the owner as provided by G.S. 14-170. (1933, c. 185, s. 3.)

§ 14-173. Repairing another's rental battery prohibited.

It is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation engaged in the business of buying, selling, repairing or recharging electric storage batteries to recharge or repair any rental battery not owned by such person, firm or corporation marked by the owner thereof as provided by G.S. 14-170. (1933, c. 185, s. 4.)

§ 14-174. Time limit on possession of rental battery without written consent.

It is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to retain in his, their or its possession for a longer period than 10 days, without the written consent of the owner, any rental battery marked as such by the owner as provided by G.S. 14-170. Demand must be made on any person who so retains a rental battery in his possession at least five days before a prosecution can be instituted: Provided, however, that proof of a registered letter having been sent to the person so offending at his last known address shall be accepted as conclusive evidence of such demand. (1933, c. 185, s. 5.)

§ 14-175. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person, firm or corporation, and the officers, agents, employees, and members of any firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of G.S. 14-170 to 14-174 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or be imprisoned for a term of not exceeding 30 days in the discretion of the court. (1933, c. 185, s. 6.)

§ 14-176. Rebuilding storage batteries out of old parts and sale of, regulated.

Any person, firm or corporation who assembles or rebuilds an electric storage battery for use on automobiles, in whole or in part, out of secondhand or used material such as containers, separators, plates, groups or other battery parts, and sells same or offers same for sale in the State of North Carolina without the word "rebuilt" placed in the side of the container, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars ($250.00) or imprisoned for a term not exceeding six months or both. (1933, c. 535.)

SUBCHAPTER VII. OFFENSES AGAINST PUBLIC MORALITY AND DECENCY.

ARTICLE 26.

Offenses against Public Morality and Decency.

§ 14-177. Crime against nature.

If any person shall commit the crime against nature, with mankind or beast, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (5 Eliz., c. 17; 25 Hen. VIII, c. 6; R. C., c. 34, s. 6; 1868-9, c. 167, s. 6; Code, s. 1010; Rev., s. 3349; C. S., s. 4336; 1965, c. 621, s. 4; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1. As to the crime of loitering for the purpose of violating this section, see § 14-204.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

This section is constitutional. State v. Enslin, 25 N.C. App. 662, 214 S.E.2d 318, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 245, 217 S.E.2d 669 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 1492, 48 L. Ed. 2d 810 (1976). See State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

This section is constitutional, and a defendant is not entitled to quash the bill of indictment against him on grounds that it is unconstitutional because of its vagueness and overbreadth. State v. Moles, 17 N.C. App. 664, 195 S.E.2d 352 (1973); State v. Crouse, 22 N.C. App. 47, 205 S.E.2d 361 (1974).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979).

Persons of ordinary intelligence would conclude a fellatio between a man and a woman would be classified as a crime against nature and forbidden by this section. This keeps it from being unconstitutionally vague. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979).

The right of privacy does not prohibit the prosecution of unmarried persons for concensual fellatio done in private. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 253 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979).

The State, consistent with the Fourteenth Amendment, can classify unmarried persons so as to prohibit fellatio between males and females without forbidding the same acts between married couples. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979).

No authority prohibits a state on constitutional grounds from punishing under a statute such as this section individuals who commit the proscribed act in a public restroom. State v. Jarrell, 24 N.C. App. 610, 211 S.E.2d 837, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 725, 213 S.E.2d 724 (1975).

Purpose. — The legislative intent and purpose of this section is to punish persons who undertake by unnatural and indecent methods to gratify a perverted and depraved sexual instinct which is an offense against public decency and morality. State v. Stubbs, 266 N.C. 295, 145 S.E.2d 899 (1966); State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

Definition. — The crime against nature is sexual intercourse contrary to the order of nature. It includes acts with animals and acts between humans per anum and per os. State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969); State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971); State v. Wright, 27 N.C. App. 263, 218 S.E.2d 511, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 733, 220 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

Conduct declared criminal by this section is sexual intercourse contrary to the order of nature. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961); State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

Scope of Section. — This section includes all kindred acts of bestial character whereby degraded and perverted sexual desires are sought to be gratified. State v. Griffin, 175 N.C. 767, 94 S.E. 678 (1917); State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

This section includes unnatural intercourse between male and male. State v. Fenner, 166 N.C. 247, 80 S.E. 970 (1914).

This section includes acts with animals and acts between humans per anum and per os. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965); State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

This section is broad enough to include in the crime against nature other forms of the offense than sodomy and buggery. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

This section is broad enough to include in the crime against nature other forms of the offense than sodomy and buggery. It includes all kindred acts of a bestial character whereby degraded and perverted sexual desires are sought to be gratified. State v. Wright, 27 N.C. App. 263, 218 S.E.2d 511, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 733, 220 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

The crime against nature includes a concensual fellatio between a man and a woman. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979).

In this jurisdiction crime against nature embraces sodomy, buggery and bestiality as those offenses were known and defined at common law. State v. O'Keefe, 263 N.C. 53, 138 S.E.2d 767 (1964), cert. denied, 380 U.S. 985, 85 S. Ct. 1355, 14 L. Ed. 2d 277 (1965); State v. Stokes, 1 N.C. App. 245, 161 S.E.2d 53, rev'd on other grounds, 274 N.C. 409, 163 S.E.2d 770 (1968).

Though penetration by or of a sexual organ is an essential element of the crime, the crime against nature is not limited to penetration by the male sexual organ. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

This section condemns crimes against nature whether committed against adults or children. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

This section and § 14-202.1 are complementary rather than repugnant or inconsistent. Section 14-202.1, of course, condemns other acts against children than unnatural sexual acts. The two statutes can be reconciled, and both declared to be operative without repugnance. State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969).

Section 14-202.1 is not repugnant to this section so as to work a repeal in part of this section, intentionally or otherwise. The two sections are complementary rather than repugnant or inconsistent. State v. Lance, 244 N.C. 455, 94 S.E.2d 335 (1956).

Section 14-202.1 supplements this section. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961).

Section 14-202.1 condemns other acts against children than unnatural sexual acts. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

This section and § 14-202.1 can be reconciled and both declared to be operative without repugnance. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

And § 14-202.1 Not Lesser Included Offense. — Because the two offenses are separate and distinct and the constituent elements are not identical, a violation of § 14-202.1 is not a lesser included offense of the crime against nature described in this section. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

There was no merit to defendant's contention that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to try him under the indecent liberties with children statute, § 14-202.1, because the criminal act he committed was a crime against nature prohibited by § 14-177, since the crime against nature statute and the indecent liberties with children statute are complementary but not mutually exclusive. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

Proof of penetration of or by the sexual organ is essential to conviction under this section. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961); State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965); State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969); State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971); State v. Wright, 27 N.C. App. 263, 218 S.E.2d 511, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 733, 220 S.E.2d 622 (1975); State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

Where evidence showed that the defendant penetrated the victim's female sexual organ with his tongue, there was sufficient evidence to overrule defendant's motion for nonsuit. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Assault with intent to commit rape and committing a crime against nature are not essentially the same offense since the elements of each offense are distinct and different. State v. Webb, 26 N.C. App. 526, 216 S.E.2d 382, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 251, 217 S.E.2d 676 (1975).

An assault upon a woman is not a lesser degree of the crime of sodomy. State v. Jernigan, 255 N.C. 732, 122 S.E.2d 711 (1961).

Conviction for Attempt. — Upon the trial of an indictment for the crime against nature the prisoner may be convicted of the crime charged therein, or of an attempt to commit a less degree of the same crime. State v. Savage, 161 N.C. 245, 76 S.E. 238 (1912); State v. Harward, 265 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

A valid warrant or indictment is an essential of jurisdiction in a prosecution under this section. State v. Jernigan, 255 N.C. 732, 122 S.E.2d 711 (1961).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment under this section which charges that defendant did unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously commit the infamous crime against nature with a particular man, woman, or beast is sufficient. State v. O'Keefe, 263 N.C. 53, 138 S.E.2d 767 (1964), cert. denied, 380 U.S. 985, 85 S. Ct. 1355, 14 L. Ed. 2d 277 (1965); State v. Stubbs, 266 N.C. 295, 145 S.E.2d 899 (1966).

It is essential to a valid indictment in this jurisdiction that the indictment must allege that the defendant did unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously commit the infamous crime against nature with a particular man, woman, or beast. State v. Stokes, 274 N.C. 409, 163 S.E.2d 770 (1968).

It is necessary to the legal sufficiency of an indictment charging the commission of a crime against nature to state with exactitude, inter alia, the name of the person with or against whom the offense was committed, in order that there can be certitude in the statement of the accusation as will identify the offense with which the accused is sought to be charged and to protect the accused from being twice put in jeopardy for the same offense. State v. Stokes, 274 N.C. 409, 163 S.E.2d 770 (1968).

The sole testimony of an accomplice will support a conviction in a prosecution for crime against nature. State v. Moles, 17 N.C. App. 664, 195 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

Instruction Defining Unnatural Sexual Intercourse. — In a prosecution of defendant for crime against nature, cunnilingus, the trial court's definition of "unnatural sexual intercourse" in the jury charge was proper and could not have caused the jury to confuse cunnilingus with sexual intercourse. State v. Thacker, 301 N.C. 348, 271 S.E.2d 252 (1980).

Applied in State v. Callett, 211 N.C. 563, 191 S.E. 27 (1937); State v. Spivey, 213 N.C. 45, 195 S.E. 1 (1938); State v. Mintz, 242 N.C. 761, 89 S.E.2d 463 (1955); State v. Williams, 247 N.C. 272, 100 S.E.2d 500 (1957); State v. King, 256 N.C. 236, 123 S.E.2d 486 (1962); State v. Walston, 259 N.C. 385, 130 S.E.2d 636 (1963); State v. Hayes, 261 N.C. 648, 135 S.E.2d 653 (1964); State v. Ward, 263 N.C. 93, 138 S.E.2d 779 (1964); State v. Wright, 263 N.C. 129, 139 S.E.2d 10 (1964); State v. Stubbs, 265 N.C. 420, 144 S.E.2d 262 (1965); State v. Cox, 272 N.C. 140, 157 S.E.2d 717 (1967); State v. Best, 13 N.C. App. 204, 184 S.E.2d 905 (1971); State v. Mitchell, 283 N.C. 462, 196 S.E.2d 736 (1973); State v. Gray, 21 N.C. App. 63, 203 S.E.2d 88 (1974); State v. Middleton, 25 N.C. App. 632, 214 S.E.2d 248 (1975); State v. Speight, 28 N.C. § 14-178. Incest between certain near relatives.

The parties shall be guilty of a felony in all cases of carnal intercourse between (i) grandparent and grandchild, (ii) parent and child or stepchild or legally adopted child, or (iii) brother and sister of the half or whole blood. Every such offense is punishable as a Class G felony. (1879, c. 16, s. 1; Code, s. 1060; Rev., s. 3351; 1911, c. 16; C. S., s. 4337; 1965, c. 132; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote the second sentence, which formerly provided for punishment by imprisonment in the State prison for a term of not more than fifteen years, in the discretion of the court. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

The crime of incest is purely statutory. State v. Rogers, 260 N.C. 406, 133 S.E.2d 1 (1963).

Incest was not indictable at common law. State v. Sauls, 190 N.C. 810, 130 S.E. 848 (1925). State v. Broadway, 157 N.C. 598, 72 S.E. 987 (1911).

Incest, although punished by the ecclesiastical courts of England as an offense against good morals, is not at common law an indictable offense. State v. Rogers, 260 N.C. 406, 133 S.E.2d 1 (1963).

Intercourse with Daughter. — A father violates this section and by reason thereof is guilty of the statutory felony of incest if he has sexual intercourse, either habitual or in a single instance, with a woman or girl whom he knows to be his daughter in fact, regardless of whether she is his legitimate or his illegitimate child. State v. Wood, 235 N.C. 636, 70 S.E.2d 665 (1952); State v. Rogers, 260 N.C. 406, 133 S.E.2d 1 (1963); State v. Vincent, 278 N.C. 63, 178 S.E.2d 608 (1971); State v. Harvell, 45 N.C. App. 243, 262 S.E.2d 850, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 200, 269 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

Carnal intercourse by the father with his illegitimate daughter constitutes the offense. State v. Lawrence, 95 N.C. 659 (1886). Strider v. Lewey, 176 N.C. 448, 97 S.E. 398 (1918).

Both parties are not necessarily guilty. Strider v. Lewey, 176 N.C. 448, 97 S.E. 398 (1918).

Failure to Charge "Carnal" Knowledge. — The mere fact that indictment failed to charge "carnal" knowledge is not a fatal defect that would sustain the defendant's motion to quash the indictment. State v. Sauls, 190 N.C. 810, 130 S.E. 848 (1925).

Corroboration of Prosecutrix' Testimony Not Required. — There is no statute providing that the testimony of the prosecutrix must be corroborated by the evidence of others in a prosecution for incest. In consequence, a conviction for incest may be had against a father upon the uncorroborated testimony of the daughter if such testimony suffices to establish all of the elements of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Wood, 235 N.C. 636, 70 S.E.2d 665 (1952); State v. Vincent, 278 N.C. 63, 178 S.E.2d 608 (1971).

Evidence of Acts Other Than Those Charged in Indictment. — In a prosecution for incest, evidence of acts of incestuous intercourse between the prosecuting witness and defendant other than those charged in the indictment, whether prior or subsequent thereto, is admissible to corroborate the proof of the act relied upon for conviction. State v. Austin, 285 N.C. 364, 204 S.E.2d 675 (1974).

Proof of other similar acts is competent in corroboration. State v. Broadway, 157 N.C. 598, 72 S.E. 987 (1911).

Confessions of the wife to the husband are not admissible in a trial for incest. State v. Brittain, 117 N.C. 783, 23 S.E. 433 (1895).

Testimony of Other Daughter as to Similar Acts. — In a prosecution under this section for an offense allegedly committed upon defendant's daughter, testimony of an older daughter, that within the past three years defendant several times had made to her improper advances of a similar nature, was competent solely for the purpose of showing intent or guilty knowledge. State v. Edwards, 224 N.C. 527, 31 S.E.2d 516 (1944).

Statements Made by Prosecutrix to Witnesses. — The trial court in an incest prosecution did not err in permitting repeated testimony by other witnesses of statements allegedly made to them by the prosecuting witness regarding defendant's acts toward her since the trial judge has wide discretion in allowing corroborative testimony. State v. Pollock, 50 N.C. App. 169, 273 S.E.2d 501 (1980).

Prosecutrix May Not Be Bastardized by Mother. — In a prosecution under this section, the married mother of the prosecutrix may not testify that defendant, a person not her husband, is the natural father of the prosecutrix, since a mother will not be permitted to bastardize her own issue and testify to illicit relations, except in an action which directly involves the parentage of the child, and, the prosecutrix having been born in wedlock, the law will conclusively presume legitimacy in the absence of evidence that the father was impotent or could not have had access. State v. Rogers, 260 N.C. 406, 133 S.E.2d 1 (1963).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — Where defendant was charged with incest in violation of this section, and the State's evidence established that defendant had sexual intercourse with his stepchild, and that defendant knew the person was related to him, the three elements of the crime of incest were sufficiently established as a matter of law and this is sufficient evidence of a violation of this section to take to a jury. State v. Collins, 44 N.C. App. 27, 259 S.E.2d 802 (1979).

Applied in State v. Rhodes, 290 N.C. 16, 224 S.E.2d 631 (1976).

§ 14-179. Incest between uncle and niece and nephew and aunt.

In all cases of carnal intercourse between uncle and niece, and nephew and aunt, the parties shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine or imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. (1879, c. 16, s. 2; Code, s. 1061; Rev., s. 3352; C. S., s. 4338.)

CASE NOTES

With Daughter of Half Sister. — It has been held under this section that carnal intercourse of a man with the daughter of his half sister is incest. State v. Harris, 149 N.C. 513, 62 S.E. 1090 (1908).

§ 14-180: Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 402.

§§ 14-181, 14-182: Repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 108, s. 4.

§ 14-183. Bigamy.

If any person, being married, shall marry any other person during the life of the former husband or wife, every such offender, and every person counseling, aiding or abetting such offender, shall be punished as a Class H felon. Any such offense may be dealt with, tried, determined and punished in the county where the offender shall be apprehended, or be in custody, as if the offense had been actually committed in that county. If any person, being married, shall contract a marriage with any other person outside of this State, which marriage would be punishable as bigamous if contracted within this State, and shall thereafter cohabit with such person in this State, he shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished as in cases of bigamy. Nothing contained in this section shall extend to any person marrying a second time, whose husband or wife shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years then last past, and shall not have been known by such person to have been living within that time; nor to any person who at the time of such second marriage shall have been lawfully divorced from the bond of the first marriage; nor to any person whose former marriage shall have been declared void by the sentence of any court of competent jurisdiction. (See 9 Geo. IV, c. 31, s. 22; 1790, c. 323, P. R.; 1809, c. 783, P. R.; 1829, c. 9; R. C., c. 34, s. 15; Code, s. 988; Rev., s. 3361; 1913, c. 26; C. S., s. 4342; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned in the State's prison or county jail for any term not less than four months nor more than ten years" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

Legal Periodicals. — For note as to consequences of a voidable divorce decree, see 35 N.C.L. Rev. 409 (1957).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section, making bigamous cohabitation in this State a felony is valid and offends neither the federal nor State Constitutions. State v. Williams, 224 N.C. 183, 29 S.E.2d 744 (1944), aff'd, Williams v. State, 325 U.S. 226, 65 S. Ct. 1092, 89 L. Ed. 1577, 157 A.L.R. 1366 (1945).

The 1913 amendment to this section, which added the words "shall thereafter cohabit with such person in this State," which qualify and constitute a requisite to the jurisdiction when the second marriage is not in North Carolina is constitutional and does not confer extraterritorial jurisdiction upon the courts. See State v. Herron, 175 N.C. 754, 94 S.E. 698 (1917); State v. Moon, 178 N.C. 715, 100 S.E. 614 (1919).

Offense against Society. — At common law and under this section bigamy is an offense against society rather than against the lawful spouse of the offender. State v. Williams, 220 N.C. 445, 17 S.E.2d 769 (1941), rev'd on other grounds, Williams v. North Carolina, 317 U.S. 287, 63 S. Ct. 207, 87 L. Ed. 279 (1942).

Validity of First Marriage. — That the first marriage was celebrated without procurement of a license, while subjecting the parties to punishment, will not so invalidate the marriage that bigamy cannot be predicated thereon. State v. Robbins, 28 N.C. 23 (1845).

In a trial for bigamy, an instruction that defendant could not be convicted, unless the jury was satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the magistrate who solemnized the first marriage was a "duly appointed, qualified, and acting justice of the peace," was properly refused, it being sufficient if such justice was a de facto officer. State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891).

The evidence showing that there were a number of eyewitnesses to the marriage, and a certified copy of the license with return endorsed being produced, it was not error to charge the jury that it would be presumed the ceremony was valid. State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891).

A ceremony solemnized by a Roman Catholic layman, who bought for $10.00 a mail order certificate giving him "credentials of minister" in the Universal Life Church, Inc., was not a ceremony of marriage to be recognized for purposes of a bigamy prosecution in this State. State v. Lynch, 301 N.C. 479, 272 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

Burden on Defendant to Show Absence of Wife. — The burden is on the defendant to show as a matter of defense that his wife had absented herself for the space of seven years next before the second marriage, and that he was ignorant all that time that she was living. State v. Goulden, 134 N.C. 743, 47 S.E. 450 (1904).

Absence for Less Than Seven Years. — A belief by the defendant that his first wife is dead or his ignorance of her being alive, she having been away for less than seven years, is no defense in a prosecution for bigamy. State v. Goulden, 134 N.C. 743, 47 S.E. 450 (1904).

Indictment — First Marriage. — An indictment for bigamy which charges that defendant "willfully, unlawfully and feloniously, being a married man, did marry one W. during the life of his first wife," sufficiently avers the first marriage. State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891).

Same — Name of First Wife. — It is not necessary, in an indictment for bigamy, to set out the name of the first wife. State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891).

Same — Defendant Not Divorced from Wife. — It was not necessary that an indictment for bigamy should contain an averment that the defendant had not been divorced from his wife. State v. Norman, 13 N.C. 222 (1829); State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891); State v. Melton, 120 N.C. 591, 26 S.E. 933 (1897).

Same — Time and Place of Marriage. — This section does not by its language make it necessary for the indictment to state the dates of the marriages, and § 15-155 expressly enacts that such a statement shall not be necessary. State v. Long, 143 N.C. 670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ray, 151 N.C. 710, 66 S.E.2d 204 (1909).

Under this section it is unnecessary to state where the second marriage took place, and it is not necessary that the offense should be committed in the county where the bill is found to confer jurisdiction. State v. Long, 143 N.C. 670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ray, 151 N.C. 710, 66 S.E. 204 (1909).

Venue. — Defendant may be prosecuted for bigamy in the county in which he is apprehended, and it is not required that the prosecution be instituted in the county in which the bigamous cohabitation takes place. State v. Williams, 220 N.C. 445, 17 S.E.2d 769 (1941), rev'd on other grounds, Williams v. North Carolina, 317 U.S. 287, 63 S. Ct. 207, 87 L. Ed. 279 (1942).

Where the bigamous cohabitation took place in one county and the parties were apprehended in another county, the prosecution may be instituted in the county of their apprehension. State v. Williams, 224 N.C. 183, 29 S.E.2d 744 (1944), aff'd, Williams v. State, 325 U.S. 226, 65 S. Ct. 1092, 89 L. Ed. 1577, 157 A.L.R. 1366 (1945).

Admissions as to Prior Marriage. — In a prosecution for bigamy an admission of the defendant is competent to prove the first marriage. State v. Goulden, 134 N.C. 743, 47 S.E. 450 (1904).

Where a defendant charged with bigamy, upon the preliminary examination before a justice of peace, and after being cautioned that his statements could be used against him, stated that he had been married to his former wife while a slave in South Carolina, had children by her and was subsequently married in North Carolina to his present wife, such admissions were competent to go to the jury, on his trial in the superior court, as to his guilt. State v. Melton, 120 N.C. 591, 26 S.E. 933 (1897).

Testimony of First Wife. — In an indictment for bigamy the first wife of the defendant is a competent witness to prove the marriage. State v. Melton, 120 N.C. 591, 26 S.E. 933 (1897).

By the express provisions of § 8-57, defendant's legal wife was a competent witness before the grand jury, which was considering an indictment against defendant charging him with a violation of the provisions of this section. State v. Vandiver, 265 N.C. 325, 144 S.E.2d 54 (1965).

The record book of marriage for the county or the original marriage license signed by the justice solemnizing the marriage is admissible to prove a marriage. State v. Melton, 120 N.C. 591, 26 S.E. 933 (1897).

Proof of Second Marriage Out of State. — If the defendant wishes to rely upon the fact that the offense of bigamy was committed outside the State, he cannot more to quash or in arrest, but must prove the fact in defense under his plea of not guilty. State v. Mitchell, 83 N.C. 674 (1880); State v. Burton, 138 N.C. 575, 50 S.E. 214 (1905); State v. Barrington, 141 N.C. 820, 53 S.E. 663 (1906); State v. Long, 143 N.C. 670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907).

In a prosecution for bigamous cohabitation based upon a second marriage in another state, the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt, each of the essential elements of the offense. State v. Setzer, 226 N.C. 216, 37 S.E.2d 513 (1946).

Proof of Foreign Divorces. — Where a decree of divorce in another state, which is attacked by the prosecution for insufficient residence in such other state, is relied upon as the only defense on a trial for bigamy, the defendant must satisfy the jury, but not beyond a reasonable doubt, of the bona fides of his residence in the other state. State v. Herron, 175 N.C. 754, 94 S.E. 698 (1917).

While decrees of divorce granted citizens of this State by the courts of another state, standing alone, are taken as prima facie valid, they are not conclusive; and, when challenged in a prosecution under this section for bigamous cohabitation, the burden is on defendants to show to the satisfaction of the jury that they had acquired bona fide domiciles in the state granting their divorces and that such divorces are valid. State v. Williams, 224 N.C. 183, 29 S.E.2d 744 (1944), aff'd, Williams v. State, 325 U.S. 226, 65 S. Ct. 1092, 89 L. Ed. 1577, 157 A.L.R. 1366 (1945).

Proof of a divorce granted in another state, upon a trial for bigamy, in our own courts is only evidence which should be submitted to the jury under proper instructions. State v. Herron, 175 N.C. 754, 94 S.E. 698 (1917).

Applied in State v. Hill, 241 N.C. 409, 85 S.E.2d 411 (1955).

§ 14-184. Fornication and adultery.

If any man and woman, not being married to each other, shall lewdly and lasciviously associate, bed and cohabit together, they shall be guilty of a misdemeanor: Provided, that the admissions or confessions of one shall not be received in evidence against the other. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1805, c. 684, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 45; Code, s. 1041; Rev., s. 3350; C. S., s. 4343; 1969, c. 1224, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — See State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

Offense Is Statutory. — The offense of fornication and adultery is statutory. State v. Ivey, 230 N.C. 172, 52 S.E.2d 346 (1949).

Protected Sexual . Relationship. — Because this section makes fornication and adultery a misdemeanor in this State, the only sexual relationship the law protects is that between married partners. Nicholson v. Hugh Chatham Mem. Hosp., 300 N.C. 295, 266 S.E.2d 818 (1980).

Adultery is an aggravated species of fornication. State v. Crowell, 26 N.C. 231 (1844).

"Lewdly and lasciviously cohabit" implies habitual intercourse in the manner of husband and wife, and together with the fact of not being married to each other, constitutes the offense, and in plain words draws the distinction between single or nonhabitual intercourse and the offense the statute means to denounce. State v. Davenport, 225 N.C. 13, 33 S.E.2d 136 (1945); State v. Ivey, 230 N.C. 172, 52 S.E.2d 346 (1949); State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

A single act of illicit sexual intercourse is not fornication and adultery as defined by this section. "Lewdly and lasciviously cohabit" plainly implies habitual intercourse, in the manner of husband and wife, and together with the fact of not being married to each other, constitutes the offense, and in plain words draws the distinction between single or nonhabitual intercourse and the offense the statute means to denounce. State v. Robinson, 9 N.C. App. 433, 176 S.E.2d 253 (1970).

Thus a single act of illicit sexual intercourse does not constitute fornication and adultery as defined by this section, the offense being habitual sexual intercourse in the manner of husband and wife by a man and woman not married to each other. However, the duration of the association is immaterial if the requisite habitual intercourse is established and it has been held that a period of two weeks is sufficient to constitute the offense. State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

However, the duration of the association is immaterial if the requisite habitual intercourse is established and it has been held that a period of two weeks is sufficient to constitute the offense. State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

State Need Not Prove That Male Defendant and Wife Were Separated. — In a prosecution under this section, it is not required that the State prove that the male defendant and his wife were separated. State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

Acquittal as to One Party. — Where only one party is convicted and the other acquitted, there can be no judgment against the one convicted. State v. Mainor, 28 N.C. 340 (1846). This holding was followed in the case of State v. Lyerly, 52 N.C. 158 (1859), and was held as law in this State until doubted in State v. Rhinehart, 106 N.C. 787, 11 S.E. 512 (1890). The question came before the court again in State v. Cutshall, 109 N.C. 764, 14 S.E. 107 (1891), when it was held that an acquittal of one defendant did not work the same result as to the other, or prevent the court from rendering judgment. This seems to be the present status of the law on this point. It was followed in State v. Simpson, 133 N.C. 676, 45 S.E. 567 (1903).

Both defendants need not be convicted of mutual intent to violate the law before conviction of one of them can be sustained. State v. Davenport, 225 N.C. 13, 33 S.E.2d 136 (1945).

New Trial as to One Defendant. — If both defendants are convicted, a new trial may be granted as to one party without disturbing the verdict as to the other. State v. Parham, 50 N.C. 416 (1858).

Indictment — "Adulterously". — The use of the word "adulterously" dispenses with the necessity of alleging that the parties were not married and were of different sex. (State v. McDuffie, 107 N.C. 885, 12 S.E. 83 (1890)).

Same — "Lewdly and Lasciviously". — The words "lewdly and lasciviously" need not be used. State v. Britt, 150 N.C. 811, 63 S.E. 1056 (1909).

Same — Criminal Intent. — The State is not called upon to allege or prove the criminal intent. State v. Cutshall, 109 N.C. 764, 14 S.E. 107 (1891).

Same — "Spinster". — The fact that the female is erroneously alleged to be a "spinster" is not ground of arrest of judgment. State v. Guest, 100 N.C. 410, 6 S.E. 253 (1888).

When Declarations of Codefendant Admissible. — While the admissions or confessions of one party are not to be received against the codefendant, it has been held that under certain circumstances such declarations are admissible when made by the female defendant in the presence of the male. See State v. Roberts, 188 N.C. 460, 124 S.E. 833 (1924).

Testimony of an admission made by defendant that "he was guilty" of another charge based upon sexual relations with the other party, is competent as an admission of acts which with other similar acts tend to prove the offense of fornication and adultery. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

But the proviso in this section relates to extra-judicial declarations, and does not prevent a woman jointly charged with the offense from testifying as a witness at the trial of her paramour to facts, otherwise competent, which are within her personal knowledge, where at the time she testifies her plea of nolo contendere has been accepted by the State, and she is no longer on trial. The prohibition of the proviso is directed not to the person testifying but against the use in evidence of such person's previous admissions or confessions. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948), discussed in 27 N.C.L. Rev. 365.

Where, in a prosecution for fornication and adultery, the person jointly charged has testified as to the facts forming the basis of the prosecution, testimony that she had made substantially the same statements to another upon the investigation is competent for the purpose of corroboration. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

Circumstantial Evidence. — It is never essential to conviction of fornication and adultery that even a single act of illicit sexual intercourse be proven by direct testimony. While necessary to a conviction that such acts must have occurred, it is, nevertheless, competent to infer them from the circumstances presented in the evidence. State v. Robinson, 9 N.C. App. 433, 176 S.E.2d 253 (1970).

The guilt of defendants or of a defendant, in a prosecution for fornication and adultery, must be established in almost every case by circumstantial evidence. It is never essential to conviction that a single act of intercourse be shown by direct testimony. State v. Davenport, 225 N.C. 13, 33 S.E.2d 136 (1945).

The acts of illicit intercourse may be proved by circumstantial evidence, and it is not required that even one such act be directly proven. State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

It is competent to prove that either defendant had a living spouse. State v. Manly, 95 N.C. 661 (1886).

Statements and conduct prior to the offense charged are admissible. State v. Austin, 108 N.C. 780, 13 S.E. 219 (1891).

Testimony as to conduct of the parties after indictment is admissible. State v. Stubbs, 108 N.C. 774, 13 S.E. 90 (1891).

Improper Advances Made by Defendant to Another Woman. — Where defendant was charged with fornication and adultery with one of the orphanage girls under his supervision, testimony of another orphanage girl that defendant made improper advances to her is competent for the purpose of showing attitude, animus and purpose of defendant, and as corroborative of the State's case. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

Applied in State v. Miller, 214 N.C. 317, 199 S.E. 89 (1938).

Cited in Wilson v. Swing, 463 F. Supp. 555 (M.D.N.C. 1978); State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843 (1979).

§ 14-185: Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 402.

§ 14-186. Opposite sexes occupying same bedroom at hotel for immoral purposes; falsely registering as husband and wife.

Any man and woman found occupying the same bedroom in any hotel, public inn or boardinghouse for any immoral purpose, or any man and woman falsely registering as, or otherwise representing themselves to be, husband and wife in any hotel, public inn or boardinghouse, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1917, c. 158, s. 2; C. S., s. 4345; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The portion of this section making it a misdemeanor to occupy a bedroom with a member of the opposite sex for immoral purposes is too vague and indefinite to comply with constitutional due process standards. Such opinion does not apply to statutes which refer to "immoral purposes" but which also contain phrases which, by the doctrine of ejusdem generis, may be used to define "immoral purposes." The phrase "any immoral purposes" within this section is not preceded by any phrases from which could be determined the meaning of "immoral purposes." State v. Sanders, 37 N.C. App. 53, 245 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

This section fails to define with sufficient precision exactly what the term "any immoral purpose" may encompass. The word immoral is not equivalent to the word illegal; hence, enforcement of this section may involve legal acts which, nevertheless, are immoral in the view of many citizens. One must necessarily speculate, therefore, as to what acts are immoral. If the legislative intent of this section is to proscribe illicit sexual intercourse the statute could have specifically so provided. State v. Sanders, 37 N.C. App. 53, 245 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

§ 14-187: Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 402.

§ 14-188. Certain evidence relative to keeping disorderly houses admissible; keepers of such houses defined; punishment.

(a) On a prosecution in any court for keeping a disorderly house or bawdy house, or permitting a house to be used as a bawdy house, or used in such a way as to make it disorderly, or a common nuisance, evidence of the general reputation or character of the house shall be admissible and competent; and evidence of the lewd, dissolute and boisterous conversation of the inmates and frequenters, while in and around such house, shall be prima facie evidence of the bad character of the inmates and frequenters, and of the disorderly character of the house. The manager or person having the care, superintendency or government of a disorderly house or bawdy house is the "keeper" thereof, and one who employs another to manage and conduct a disorderly house or bawdy house is also "keeper" thereof.

(b) On a prosecution in any court for keeping a disorderly house or a bawdy house, or permitting a house to be used as a bawdy house or used in such a way to make it disorderly or a common nuisance, the offense shall constitute a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1907, c. 779; C. S., s. 4347; 1969, c. 1224, s. 22.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is constitutional. State v. Price, 175 N.C. 804, 95 S.E. 478 (1918).

Disorderly House Defined. — A disorderly house is kept in such a way as to disturb or scandalize the public generally, or the inhabitants of a particular neighborhood, or the passersby. State v. Wilson, 93 N.C. 608 (1885).

Persons Leasing Premises as a "Keeper". — A person who leases a house knowing that it is to be used for disorderly and unlawful purposes is treated as a direct offender. State v. Boyd, 175 N.C. 791, 95 S.E. 161 (1918).

Powers of City Authorities. — The extent of the powers of the authorities of a municipality to enact ordinances concerning houses of ill fame is discussed in State v. Webber, 107 N.C. 962, 12 S.E. 598 (1890).

Illustrative Cases. — The following have been held to constitute disorderly houses: a shop in which disorderly crowds assemble. State v. Robertson, 86 N.C. 628 (1882); a store in which persons collect and disturb the neighborhood. State v. Thornton, 44 N.C. 252 (1853).

The following have been held not to constitute disorderly houses: a private dwelling wherein an uproar was frequently raised but which disturbed few people. State v. Wright, 51 N.C. 25 (1858); the residence of an unchaste woman. State v. Evans, 27 N.C. 603 (1845).

§ 14-190.1. Obscene literature and exhibitions.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to intentionally disseminate obscenity in any public place. A person, firm or corporation disseminates obscenity within the meaning of this Article if he or it:

(1) Sells, delivers or provides or offers or agrees to sell, deliver or provide any obscene writing, picture, record or other representation or embodiment of the obscene; or

(2) Presents or directs an obscene play, dance or other performance or participates directly in that portion thereof which makes it obscene; or

(3) Publishes, exhibits or otherwise makes available anything obscene; or

(4) Exhibits, presents, rents, sells, delivers or provides; or offers or agrees to exhibit, present, rent or to provide: any obscene still or motion picture, film, filmstrip, or projection slide, or sound recording, sound tape, or sound track, or any matter or material of whatever form which is a respresentation, embodiment, performance, or publication of the obscene.

(b) For purposes of this Article any material is obscene if:

(1) The material depicts or describes in a patently offensive way sexual conduct specifically defined by subsection (c) of this section; and

(2) The average person applying contemporary statewide community standards relating to the depiction or representation of sexual matters would find that the material taken as a whole appeals to the prurient interest in sex; and

(3) The material lacks serious literary, artistic, political, educational or scientific value; and

(4) The material as used is not protected or privileged under the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of North Carolina.

(c) Sexual conduct shall be defined as:

(1) Patently offensive representations or descriptions of actual sexual intercourse, normal or perverted, anal or oral;

(2) Patently offensive representations or descriptions of excretion in the context of sexual activity or a lewd exhibition of uncovered genitals, in the context of masturbation or other sexual activity.

(d) Obscenity shall be judged with reference to ordinary adults except that it shall be judged with reference to children or other especially susceptible audiences if it appears from the character of the material or the circumstances of its dissemination to be especially designed for or directed to such children or audiences. In any prosecution for an offense involving dissemination of obscenity under this Article, evidence shall be admissible to show:

(1) The character of the audience for which the material was designed or to which it was directed;

(2) Whether the material is published in such a manner that an unwilling adult could not escape it;

(3) Whether the material is exploited so as to amount to pandering;

(4) What the predominant appeal of the material would be for ordinary adults or a special audience, and what effect, if any, it would probably have on the behavior of such people;

(5) Literary, artistic, political, educational, scientific, or other social value, if any, of the material;

(6) The degree of public acceptance of the material throughout the State of North Carolina;

(7) Appeal to prurient interest, or absence thereof, in advertising or in the promotion of the material.

Expert testimony and testimony of the author, creator or publisher relating to factors entering into the determination of the issue of obscenity shall also be admissible.

(e) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to knowingly and intentionally create, buy, procure or possess obscene material with the purpose and intent of disseminating it unlawfully.

(f) It shall be unlawful for a person, firm or corporation to advertise or otherwise promote the sale of material represented or held out by said person, firm or corporation as obscene.

(g) Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, unless a greater penalty is expressly provided for in this Article, shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court. (1971, c. 405, s. 1; 1973, c. 1434, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — See State v. Bryant, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1974).

Section Is Constitutional. — This section specifically defines the elements of obscenity and hence is not unconstitutional on grounds of vagueness or overbreadth. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

This section is constitutional. State v. Johnson, 20 N.C. App. 699, 202 S.E.2d 479 (1974).

The dissemination of obscenity is not protected by the State and federal constitutions; thus, this section by its terms does not infringe upon the rights to disseminate protected material. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Motion to quash the warrant grounded on the alleged unconstitutionality of this section will be denied. State v. Horn, 18 N.C. App. 377, 197 S.E.2d 274 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 82, 203 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Sections 14-190.1 to 14-190.8 made material and substantial changes in North Carolina law prohibiting the dissemination of obscenity. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

And Section 14-189.1 Not Continued in Effect. — Session Laws 1971, c. 405, which repealed § 14-189.1, did not substantially reenact it, therefore it was not continued in effect. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

There is nothing in Session Laws 1971, c. 405, which repealed § 14-189.1 outright and enacted this section, to indicate an intent to leave the old law unrepealed, or to reaffirm it. On the contrary, the clear implication is that the legislature intended to get rid of a law of dubious constitutionality. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

The changes made in the 1971 Act evidence the legislature's apprehension that § 14-189.1 did not meet the requirements of the federal Constitution. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

The enactment of this section was an obvious attempt to provide a new law which would meet the latest tests enunciated by the United States Supreme Court in order that State law-enforcement officers might proceed with assurance against public dissemination and pandering of obscenity. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

Application of 1973 amendment to defendants arrested prior to the amendment violated neither due process nor the ex post facto doctrine as the materials had to be found obscene under the doctrines of both Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 (1973), which precipitated the 1973 amendment and a book named "John Cleland's Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure" v. Attorney Gen., 383 U.S. 413, 86 S. Ct. 975, 16 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1966), the pre-1973 obscenity test in order to convict. State v. Hart, 287 N.C. 76, 213 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

County or Municipal Ordinance Relating to Obscenity. — Nothing in §§ 14-190.1 to 14.190.9, statewide laws relating to obscene literature and exhibitions and to indecent exposure, expresses or indicates an intent by the General Assembly to preclude cities and towns or counties from enacting and enforcing ordinances requiring a higher standard of conduct or condition within their respective jurisdictions. State v. Tenore, 280 N.C. 238, 185 S.E.2d 644 (1972), wherein the Supreme Court declined to express any opinion as to whether a county or municipal ordinance, otherwise valid, may constitutionally prohibit and make punishable an exhibition or the dissemination of materials found to be "obscene" under the standards of the community in which such ordinance applies, though not "obscene" as judged by the "contemporary national community standards."

This section specifically defines the elements of obscenity. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036, aff'd 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Effect of U.S. Supreme Court Decisions. — The United States Supreme Court, in the interest of strengthening powers to regulate pornography, did not elect to eliminate constitutionally valid law that would otherwise be available in prosecuting pending obscenity cases. State v. Bryant, 20 N.C. App. 223, 201 S.E.2d 211, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Definitions in U.S. Supreme Court Cases to Be Considered. — In appellate review, the court shall consider both definitions of obscenity in Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 (1973), and a book named "John Cleland's Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure" v. Attorney Gen., 383 U.S. 413, 86 S. Ct. 975, 16 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1966). If the film is not obscene under both of these standards the charges must be dismissed. State v. Bryant, 20 N.C. App. 223, 201 S.E.2d 211, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Construction of Section to Conform to Guidelines Set by U.S. Supreme Court. — The broad terms in which obscene material was defined in subsection (b) of this section before the 1973 amendment fall far short of the United States Supreme Court's requirement that the sexual conduct which may be deemed obscene and patently offensive must be specifically defined. However, in Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 (1973), the United States Supreme Court held that where state obscenity statutes as written do not define what sexual conduct may be deemed obscene and patently offensive with sufficient specificity to comply with the guidelines set forth in that case, the state courts should be afforded and opportunity by construction to confine the obscene matter prohibited by their statutes to "hard-core" pornography. Thus this section as it stood before the 1973 amendment would be construed to prohibit as obsence only material consisting of the following: (a) patently offensive representations or descriptions of ultimate sexual acts, normal or perverted, actual or simulated and (b) patently offensive representations or descriptions of masturbation, excretory functions, and lewd exhibition of the genitals. State v. Bryant, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Films which are stark portrayals of sex acts without a suggested theme or purpose other than to protray the acts in the most blatant manner, and which exhibit a morbid interest in nudity and portray sex acts far beyond customary limits of candor in description or representation of such matters, are patently offensive "hard-core" portrayals of sexual conduct proscribed by this section which regulates dissemination of obscene materials in a public place. State v. Bryant, 20 N.C. App. 223, 201 S.E.2d 211, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Photographs can be so obscene — it is conceivably possible that they be so obscene — that the fact is incontrovertible. State v. Horn, 18 N.C. App. 377, 197 S.E.2d 274 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 82, 203 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Application of More Stringent Criteria Than Constitutionally Required. — Where there was ample evidence to support the jury finding that films were "utterly without redeeming social value," more stringent criteria than the present test of "lacking serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value," the fact that the prosecution in these cases was required to meet the more difficult test gives these defendants no ground for complaint. State v. Bryant, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1974).

Although whether material alleged to be obscene is patently offensive may now be determined by "contemporary community standards" rather than by "contemporary national community standards," the fact that the prosecution was required to establish and did establish that films were patently offensive when tested by "contemporary national community standards" affords defendant no ground of complaint, since the prosecution was required to meet a more difficult test. State v. Bryant, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1974).

Positive and Negative Findings Required. — This section, in addition to requiring positive findings on the questions of offensive display of sexual conduct patently offensive to the average person, requires an additional negative finding that the material lacks serious literary, artistic, political, educational or scientific value. State ex rel. Yeager v. Neal, 26 N.C. App. 741, 217 S.E.2d 576 (1975).

Finding of Intent and Guilty Knowledge Required for Conviction. — This section requires a finding of intent and guilty knowledge before a defendant may be convicted for dissemination of obscenity in a public place. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036 (1973).

Notice of Nature of Material and Protection against Exposure to Juveniles. — In dissemination of obscenity case, court properly denied request for an instruction to the jury that if the jury found the defendant provided notice to the public of the nature of the magazines involved in the case, and if they found the defendant provided reasonable protection against the exposure of the magazines to juveniles, then the jury would have to find that the defendant's conduct was protected under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and that it would be the duty of the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. State v. Horn, 18 N.C. App. 377, 197 S.E.2d 274 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 82, 203 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Case Properly Submitted to Jury. — Films shown in defendants' place of business which had no plot, no real motive and no objectives other than to appeal to the prurient interest in sex were uncontrovertibly obsence and exhibition of such films was not protected by the First and Fourteenth Amendments; therefore, the trial court did not err in submitting the case to the jury in an action under this section. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036 (1973).

Applied in State v. Horn, 285 N.C. 82, 203 S.E.2d 36 (1974).

§ 14-190.2. Adversary hearing prior to seizure or criminal prosecution.

(a) The purpose of this section is to provide an adversary determination of the question of whether books, magazines, motion pictures, or other materials are obscene prior to their seizure or prior to a criminal prosecution relating to such materials.

(b) The public policy of this State requires that all proceedings prescribed in this section shall be examined, heard and disposed of with the maximum promptness and dispatch commensurate with the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of North Carolina.

(c) Whenever any law-enforcement officer has reasonable cause to believe that any person, firm or corporation is engaged in the sale, display, distribution or dissemination in a public place of any books, magazines, motion pictures or other materials which are obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1, he shall, without seizing such material, notify the district attorney for the judicial district in which such material is so believed to be offered. Upon receiving such notification the district attorney for said judicial district shall submit a written complaint to any resident judge of the Superior Court Division of the General Court of Justice or any judge of the District Court Division of the General Court of Justice, to which shall be attached, if available without purchase or seizure, a true copy of the allegedly obscene material. The complaint shall:

(1) Be directed against the person, firm or corporation believed to be engaged in the sale, display, distribution or dissemination in a public place of the material alleged to be obscene and against such material by name, description, volume and issue as appropriate;
(2) Allege that such material is obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1;
(3) Designate as respondent the person, firm or corporation believed to be engaged in the sale, display, distribution or dissemination in a public place of the material alleged to be obscene within the said judicial district;
(4) Seek an adjudication that said material is obscene;
(5) Seek a temporary restraining order prohibiting the respondent from removing, causing, or permitting to be removed the material alleged to be obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1; and,
(6) Seek a warrant to search for and seize said material as obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1.

(d) Upon receipt of such complaint from the district attorney, the judge shall:
(1) Issue a summons to be served upon the respondent which shall be in the same form prescribed for warrants in G.S. 15-20, except that it shall summon the respondent to appear before the said judge at a stated time not less than two days, including the day of service, and not more than four days, including the day of service, after service of the summons, and to show cause why the said material should not be declared obscene and a warrant issued authorizing a search for and seizure of said material;
(2) Issue a subpoena as provided for under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 45 of the Rules of Civil Procedure commanding the respondent to produce copies of all items of said material not attached to the complaint in order that a complete adversary hearing may be held on the question of whether said material should be declared obscene and a warrant issued authorizing a search for and seizure of said material;
(3) Issue a temporary restraining order prohibiting the respondent from removing, causing, or permitting to be removed the material which is alleged to be obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1; provided, however, that such temporary restraining order shall not be construed as prohibting the respondent from conducting sales in the normal course of business only, so long as at least one copy of each item alleged in the complaint to be obscene is retained for evidentiary purposes at the said hearing;
(4) Insure that any and all hearings held pursuant to this section are designed to focus searchingly upon the issue of whether the said material is obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1, and that the rights of the respondent to counsel, to confrontation and cross-examination of witnesses for the State, to present witnesses including expert witnesses in his own behalf, and all other rights granted the respondent by the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of North Carolina are protected, and;
(5) Render a decision on the issue of whether said material is obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1 within two days, excluding the final day of said hearing, after the conclusion of any hearing held under the authority of this section.

(e) In the event that the judge fails to find the material involved is obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1, he shall enter judgment accordingly and dismiss the complaint. Should the respondent fail to appear or the judge find that said material is obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1, the judge involved shall enter judgment accordingly and issue a warrant to search for and seize said material. The warrant shall describe with reasonable certainty the person, premises or other place to be searched and the material for which the search is to be made and which is to be seized. The warrant must be signed by the issuing judge and bear the date and hour of its issuance above his signature.

(f) No judgment or subsequent order of enforcement thereof, entered pursuant to the provisions of this section, shall be of any force and effect outside the judicial district in which entered; and no such order or judgment shall be res judicata in any proceeding in any other judicial district. Further, evidence of any hearing held pursuant to this section shall not be competent or admissible in any criminal action for the violation of any other section of this Article; provided, however, that in any criminal action, charging the violation of any other section of this Article, against any person, firm or corporation that was a respondent in such hearing, and involving the same material declared to be obscene under the provisions of this section, then evidence of such hearing shall be competent and admissible as bearing on the issue of scienter only.

(g) Any respondent described in this section who shall violate any provision of this section or any order issued under any provision of this section shall be subject to punishment, by the court, as for contempt.

(h) No person, firm, or corporation shall be arrested or indicted for any violation of G.S. 14-190.1, 14-190.3, 14-190.4 or 14-190.5 until the material involved has first been the subject of an adversary determination under the provisions of this section, wherein such person, firm, or corporation is a respondent, and wherein such material has been declared by the court to be obscene and until such person, firm or corporation continues subsequent to such determination, to engage in the conduct prohibited by a provision of the sections hereinabove set forth.

Notwithstanding any provision of G.S. 14-190.2, an adversary determination to adjudge whether material is obscene shall not be required prior to the arrest or indictment of any person, firm or corporation for a violation of any provision of G.S. 14-190.6, 14-190.7, 14-190.8, or whether such material is sexually oriented pursuant to G.S. 14-190.10 or 14-190.11.

(i) Any person, firm or corporation which is given written notice by registered mail of the filing of the complaint and of the judgment of the court as provided for in this section shall be deemed a respondent and shall be bound by the judgment of the court.

(j) The State or any respondent may appeal from a judgment. Such appeal shall not stay the judgment. If any respondent engages in conduct prohibited by this Article subsequent to notice of the judgment, finding the material to be obscene he shall be subject to criminal prosecution notwithstanding the appeal from the judgment.

(k) Any person, firm or corporation which is disseminating or which may disseminate the material challenged in the civil proceeding provided for in this section may intervene in said proceeding as a matter of right. Said intervenor shall have all the rights of a respondent and shall be bound by the judgment. (1971, c. 405, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 1434, ss. 2-8; 1977, c. 440, s. 1; 1981, c. 682, ss. 3, 4.)

Editor's Note. — Section 15-20, referred to in subdivision (d)(1) of this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, s. 26, effective Sept. 1, 1975. For present provisions as to criminal process, see §§ 15A-301 to 15A-305.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "district attorney" for "solicitor" in two places in the introductory paragraph of subsection (c) and once in the introductory paragraph of subsection (d).

CASE NOTES

1973 Amendment Not Retroactive. — Since the General Assembly specifically provided that the 1973 amendment become effective July 1, 1974, this clearly demonstrates the manifest intent of the General Assembly that it should not be applied retroactively. State v. Hart, 287 N.C. 76, 213 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

There is in the 1973 amendment a manifest legislative intent that this section should be applied prospectively only and should not be applicable to pending prosecutions. State v. Hart, 287 N.C. 76, 213 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

Effect of 1973 Amendment. — The 1973 amendment to subsection (h) does not reduce the punishment or otherwise remove any burden imposed upon these defendants by prior law. To the contrary, that amendment places an additional procedural burden upon the State to obtain an adversary judicial determination that the material in question is obscene, and thereafter disseminated by the accused, before he may be arrested or indicted. State v. Hart, 287 N.C. 76, 213 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

The 1973 changes did not repeal the former anti-obscenity statutes but only amended them effective July 1, 1974. State v. Hart, 287 N.C. 76, 213 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

Subsection (a) of this section clearly evidences the legislative intent to prevent wholesale seizures prior to an adversary judicial determination that the materials to be seized are obscene. State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

Seizure of Single Copies for Evidentiary Purposes. — Subsection (h) as it stood before the 1973 amendment made it clear that this section did not prohibit a law-enforcement officer from seizing for evidentiary purposes single copies of printed material which he reasonably believed to be obscene within the meaning of § 14-190.1, when such seizure was made pursuant to a lawful arrest. State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

Applied in State ex rel. Yeager v. Neal, 26 N.C. App. 741, 217 S.E.2d 576 (1975).

§ 14-190.3. Exhibition of obscene pictures; posting of advertisements.

If any person, firm or corporation shall intentionally disseminate in any public place any motion picture which he or it knows or reasonably should know to be obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1; or, if any person, firm or corporation shall intentionally post any placard, writings, pictures, or drawings, which he or it knows or reasonably should know to be obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1, on walls, fences, billboards, or other public places; or, if any person, firm or corporation shall intentionally permit any exhibition or show, which he or it knows or reasonably should know to be obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1, to be conducted in any public placed owned or controlled by said person, firm or corporation; the person, firm or corporation performing either one or all of the said acts shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and unless a greater penalty is expressly provided for in this Article, shall be punishable in the discretion of the court. (1971, ch. 405, s. 1.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-190.1.

§ 14-190.4. Coercing acceptance of obscene articles or publications.

No person, firm or corporation shall, as a condition to any sale, allocation, consignment or delivery for resale of any paper, magazine, book, periodical or publication require that the purchaser or consignee receive for resale any other article, book, or publication which is obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1; nor shall any person, firm or corporation deny or threaten to deny any franchise or impose or threaten to impose any penalty, financial or otherwise, by reason of the failure or refusal of any person to accept such articles, books, or publications, or by reason of the return thereof. Any violation of this section shall be a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1971, c. 405, s. 1.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-190.1.

§ 14-190.5. Preparation of obscene photographs, slides and motion pictures.

Every person who knowingly:

(1) Photographs himself or any other person, for purposes of preparing an obscene film, photograph, negative, slide or motion picture for the purpose of dissemination in a public place; or

(2) Models, poses, acts, or otherwise assists in the preparation of any obscene film, photograph, negative, slide or motion picture for the purpose of dissemination in a public place, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1971, c. 405, s. 1.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-190.1.

§ 14-190.6. Employing or permitting minor to assist in offense under Article.

Every person 18 years of age or older who intentionally, in any manner, hires, employs, uses or permits any minor under the age of 16 years to do or assist in doing any act or thing constituting an offense under this Article and involving any material, act or thing he knows or reasonably should know to be obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and unless a greater penalty is expressly provided for in this Article, shall be punishable in the discretion of the court. (1971, c. 405, s. 1.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-190.1.

§ 14-190.7. Dissemination to minors under the age of 16 years.

Every person 18 years of age or older who knowingly disseminates to any minor under the age of 16 years any material which he knows or reasonably should know to be obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and unless a greater penalty is expressly provided for in this Article, shall be punishable in the discretion of the court, except this statute shall not apply to a teacher, a member of the clergy, priests, and rabbis, physician, nurse, or a librarian in the discharge of official responsibilities. (1971, c. 405, s. 1; 1977, c. 440, s. 2.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-190.1.

§ 14-190.8. Dissemination to minors 12 years of age or younger.

Every person 18 years of age or older who knowingly disseminates to any minor 12 years of age or younger any material which he knows or reasonably should know to be obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1 shall be punished as a Class I felon, except this statute shall not apply to a teacher, a member of the clergy, priests, and rabbis, physician, nurse, or a librarian in the discharge of official responsibilities. (1971, c. 405, s. 1; 1977, c. 440, s. 3; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-190.1.

For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be imprisoned in the State's prison for not more than five years and shall be fined at the discretion of the court" near the middle of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-190.9. Indecent exposure.

Any person who shall willfully expose the private parts of his or her person in any public place and in the presence of any other person or persons, of the opposite sex, or aids or abets in any such act, or who procures another to perform such act; or any person, who as owner, manager, lessee, director, promoter or agent, or in any other capacity knowingly hires, leases or permits the land, building, or premises of which he is owner, lessee or tenant, or over which he has control, to be used for purposes of any such act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1971, c. 591, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Section 2, c. 591, Session Laws 1971, provides: "Every word, clause, sentence, paragraph, section, or other part of this act shall be interpreted in such manner as to be as expansive as the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of North Carolina permit."

Section 3, c. 591, Session Laws 1971, contains a severability clause.

CASE NOTES

This section is not unconstitutional on its face. State v. King, 20 N.C. App. 505, 201 S.E.2d 724, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Nudity Is Conduct Subject to Regulation. — When nudity is employed as sales promotion in bars and restaurants, nudity is conduct. As conduct, the nudity of employees is as fit a subject for governmental regulation as is the licensing of the liquor dispensaries and the fixing of their closing hours. State v. King, 20 N.C. App. 505, 201 S.E.2d 724, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

This section is separate and apart from the general obscenity statutes, §§ 14-190.1 through 14-190.8, all of which deal with dissemination of obscenity. State v. King, 20 N.C. App. 505, 201 S.E.2d 724, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

This section was enacted by the 1971 General Assembly by passage of Chapter 591 of the 1971 Session Laws, and is separate and apart from those statutes dealing with the dissemination of obscenity (§§ 14-190.1 through 14-190.8) all of which were enacted by passage of Chapter 405 of the 1971 Session Laws. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Conduct Is Not Required to Be "Obscene" or "Indecent". — This section, like its predecessors, simply declares the act of exposing one's private parts in a public place in the presence of persons of the opposite sex, or permitting or aiding or abetting another in doing so, to be a misdemeanor. The statute does not use the term "obscene" and for that matter does not even require the act of exposing one's private parts in public to be "indecent." State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

And Court Is Not Concerned with Definitions of "Obscene" and "Obscenity". — Since this section does not involve the concept of "obscenity" — the definition of which has given both the federal and State courts so much difficulty — the North Carolina court is not concerned with the many and often conflicting decisions attempting to define "obscene" or "obscenity." State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Taking Part in Immoral Show, etc., Is Covered by Obscenity Statutes. — In 1971, the General Assembly amended the obscenity statutes and the indecent exposure statute. In amending the indecent exposure statute the prohibition against procuring or "taking part in any immoral show, exhibition or performance where indecent, immoral, or lewd dances are conducted in any booth, tent, room or other public or private place to which the public is invited . . ." was deleted. This proscription was placed in the obscenity statutes and is covered by § 14-190.1, particularly subdivision (2) of subsection (a) thereof. State v. King, 20 N.C. App. 505, 201 S.E.2d 724, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Viewers of Exposure Need Not Be Unwilling. — There is nothing whatsoever in the present or former indecent exposure statutes that in any way requires the viewers of the exposure of one's private parts to be unwilling observers. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Warrant Must Allege Exposure in Presence of Person of Opposite Sex. — When one of the essential elements of the offense created by this section is that the exposure of the private parts be "in the presence of any other person or persons, of the opposite sex," and the warrants fail to so charge, such omission is fatal, and the warrants must be quashed. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Aiding and Abetting. — Both former § 14-190 and this section clearly and expressly proscribe the conduct for which defendant was arrested, namely, aiding or abetting other persons in willfully exposing their private parts in the presence of other persons of the opposite sex and in a public place. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Conduct Constituting Violation of Section. — Where four females involved willfully exhibited their private parts to an audience of some seventy-five males in a public place, and that defendant aided and abetted in such exposure, such conduct constitutes a misdemeanor under this section. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

§ 14-190.10. Disseminating sexually oriented material to minors.

(a) Every person, firm or corporation who intentionally and knowingly disseminates sexually oriented material to any person under 18 years of age shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. A person, firm or corporation disseminates sexually oriented material within the meaning of this section if he, she or it:

(1) Sells, delivers or provides or offers or agrees to sell, deliver or provide any sexually oriented writing, picture, record or other representation or embodiment that is sexually oriented; or

(2) Presents or directs a sexually oriented play, dance or other performance or participates directly in that portion thereof which makes it sexually oriented; or

(3) Exhibits, presents, rents, sells, delivers or provides; or offers or agrees to exhibit, present, rent or to provide: any obscene still or motion picture, film, filmstrip, or projection slide, or sound recording, sound tape, or sound track, or any matter or material of whatever form which is a representation, embodiment, performance, or publication that is sexually oriented.

(b) For purposes of this section any material is sexually oriented if:

(1) The material is made up in whole or dominant part of representation or descriptions, actual or simulated, or human sexual intercourse, masturbation, sodomy, direct physical stimulation of unclothed gentials, or flagellation or torture in the context of a sexual relationship or which emphasizes the uncovered human genitals; and

(2) The material lacks serious literary, artistic, political, educational or scientific value for persons under 18 years of age; and

(3) The dominant theme of the material appeals to the prurient interests in sex of persons under 18 years of age.

(c) It shall be an affirmative defense to a prosecution under this section for the defendant to show:

(1) That the dissemination was made with the consent of a parent or guardian of the recipient, that the defendant was misled as to the existence of parental consent by a misrepresentation of parental status by an individual purporting to be a parent of the recipient, or that the dissemination was made to the recipient by his teacher, clergyman or a librarian in the discharge of official responsibilities;

(2) That the recipient was married, or that the defendant was misled in this regard by a misrepresentation of marital status by the recipient;

(3) That the defendant was misled as to the age of the recipient by false proof of identification and age offered by the recipient.

(d) Any person under the age of 18 years who gains admission to any theater by falsely claiming to be 18 years of age or older shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars ($50.00). (1973, c. 1434, s. 9.)

§ 14-190.11. Public display of sexually oriented materials.

(a) Every person, firm or corporation who intentionally and knowingly places sexually oriented materials upon public display, or who knowingly and intentionally fails to take prompt action to remove such a display from property in his possession after learning of its existence shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(b) For purposes of this section any material is sexually oriented if the material is made up in whole or dominant part of representations or descriptions of actual or simulated human sexual intercourse, masturbation sodomy, direct physical stimulation of unclothed genitals or flagellation, or torture in the context of a sexual relationship or emphasizes the uncovered human genitals and the materials lacks serious literary, artistic, political, educational or scientific value and the dominant theme of the material appeals to the prurient interest in sex.

(c) A person, firm or corporation places sexually oriented material upon public display within the meaning of this Article if he, she or it places the material on or in a billboard, viewing screen, theater stage or marquee, newsstand, display rack, window, showcase, display case or similar place so that explicit sexually oriented material is easily visible from a public street, public road or sidewalk or from the normally occupied property of others.

(d) Nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to prohibit or make unlawful the dissemination or display of material, the external visible covers of which do not depict any of the acts embraced within the definition of "sexually oriented." (1973, c. 1434, s. 10.)

§ 14-191: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 591, s. 4.

§§ 14-192, 14-193: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 405, s. 4.

§ 14-194: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 591, s. 4.

§ 14-195. Using profane or indecent language on passenger trains.

It shall be unlawful for any person to curse or use profane or indecent language on any passenger train. Any person so offending shall upon conviction be fined not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not more than 30 days. (1907, c. 470, ss. 1, 2; C. S., s. 4350.)

§ 14-196. Using profane, indecent or threatening language to any person over telephone; annoying or harassing by repeated telephoning or making false statements over telephone.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person:

(1) To use in telephonic communications any words or language of a profane, vulgar, lewd, lascivious or indecent character, nature or connotation;

(2) To use in telephonic communications any words or language threatening to inflict bodily harm to any person or physical injury to the property of any person, or for the purpose of extorting money or other things of value from any person;

(3) To telephone another repeatedly, whether or not conversation ensues, for the purpose of abusing, annoying, threatening, terrifying, harassing or embarrassing any person at the called number;

(4) To make a telephone call and fail to hang up or disengage the connection with the intent to disrupt the service of another;

(5) To telephone another and to knowingly make any false statement concerning death, injury, illness, disfigurement, indecent conduct or criminal conduct of the person telephoned or of any member of his family or household with the intent to abuse, annoy, threaten, terrify, harass, or embarrass;

(6) To knowingly permit any telephone under his control to be used for any purpose prohibited by this section.

(b) Any of the above offenses may be deemed to have been committed at either the place at which the telephone call or calls were made or at the place where the telephone call or calls were received.

(c) Anyone violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be subject to a fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1913, c. 35; 1915, c. 41; C. S., s. 4351; 1967, c. 833, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Subsections (a)(1) and (a)(2) as drafted and construed are held unconstitutional as being overly broad. Radford v. Webb, 446 F. Supp. 608 (W.D.N.C. 1978), aff'd, 596 F.2d 1205 (4th Cir. 1979).

Subsection (a)(1) is constitutional. The language of this section is broad, but it is neither so vague as to be easily misunderstood nor so broad as to reach beyond the State's power to enact.

Use of one's telephone clearly involves substantial privacy interests which the State may recognize and protect. Subsection (a)(1) seeks to protect that interest from an invasion made in an essentially intolerable manner, and the means chosen by the legislature were both appropriate and sufficiently narrowed to achieving the legitimate ends sought to be attained. In re Simmons, 24 N.C. App. 28, 210 S.E.2d 84 (1974).

Threat to take one's life or to beat one falls within this section's proscription against using in telephonic communication language threatening to inflict bodily harm. State v. Jacobs, 25 N.C. App. 500, 214 S.E.2d 254, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 666, 216 S.E.2d 909 (1975).

An attempt to commit common-law robbery, a crime punishable as a felony by virtue of § 14-3(b), is an entirely different crime from the misdemeanor offense created by subdivision (a)(2) of this section. State v. Jacobs, 25 N.C. App. 500, 214 S.E.2d 254, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 666, 216 S.E.2d 909 (1975).

Consent by the victim is not an essential element bearing on the offense. State v. Coleman, 270 N.C. 357, 154 S.E.2d 485 (1967), decided under former § 14-196.1.

Failure of Court to Define "Annoy" and "Harass". — See State v. Godwin, 267 N.C. 216, 147 S.E.2d 890 (1966), decided under former § 14-196.1.

Tape recordings allegedly containing telephone conversations by the defendant with the prosecuting witness made by a recorder attached to the witness's telephone are not incompetent in prosecuting for annoying a female by repeated telephoning because they violate the North Carolina Wiretapping Statute (§ 14-155) and also §§ 14-372 and 15-27, these statutes were not enacted to prevent introduction of evidence obtained in such a case and are not relevant in such prosecution. State v. Godwin, 267 N.C. 216, 147 S.E.2d 890 (1966), decided under former § 14-196.1.

The State has laid the requisite foundation for the admissibility of tape recordings allegedly containing telephone conversations by the defendant with the prosecuting witness where the witness identified them as being the voice of the defendant, and stated that they were a fair and accurate representation of the conversations she had with the defendant. State v. Godwin, 267 N.C. 216, 147 S.E.2d 890 (1966), decided under former § 14-196.1.

Right to Counsel. — A warrant charging a violation of this section charges a serious offense, entitling defendant to the assistance of legal counsel. State v. Best, 5 N.C. App. 379, 168 S.E.2d 433 (1969).

Evidence of Intent. — It is competent for the purpose of showing the intent of the defendant and her attitude toward the prosecuting witness for the court to permit the witness to testify that the defendant had attempted to block her car in the parking lot of the supermarket, that she had frequently followed her to such places as the hospital, school, etc., and would cut her car in front of the witness's "at least once a week, sometimes more than that, and many times was very very close." Her conduct in blocking the witness's car and cutting in front of it showed the defendant's intent to harass, annoy, and molest her and is competent as interpreting the reasons for her frequent telephone calls which were alleged to be for the same purpose. State v. Godwin, 267 N.C. 216, 147 S.E.2d 890 (1966), decided under former § 14-196.1.

Entrapment. — Where police placed a want ad in the newspapers, similar to ads which had been placed by women who subsequently received obscene telephone calls, and used an electronic device to identify the telephone number of the caller, they merely set a trap to catch defendant in the execution of a crime which had its genesis in his own mind, and the defense of entrapment was not available to him in a prosecution for violating former § 14-196.1. State v. Coleman, 270 N.C. 357, 154 S.E.2d 485 (1967).

§ 14-197. Using profane or indecent language on public highways; counties exempt.

If any person shall, on any public road or highway and in the hearing of two or more persons, in a loud and boisterous manner, use indecent or profane language, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. The following counties shall be exempt from the provisions of this section: Pitt and Swain. (1913, c. 40; C. S., s. 4352; Pub. Loc. Ex. Sess., 1924, c. 65; 1933, c. 309; 1937, c. 9; 1939, c. 73; 1945, c. 398; 1947, cc. 144, 959; 1949, c. 845; 1957, c. 348; 1959, c. 733; 1963, cc. 39, 123; 1969, c. 300; 1971, c. 718; 1973, cc. 120, 233.)

CASE NOTES

Sufficiency of Warrant or Indictment. — A bill of indictment charging that defendant "unlawfully and willfully did appear in a public place in a rude and disorderly manner and did use profane and indecent language in the presence of two or more persons" is insufficient to charge a violation of this section in failing to charge that the indecent or profane language was spoken on a public road or highway and in a loud and boisterous manner. State v. Smith, 262 N.C. 472, 137 S.E.2d 819 (1964).

A warrant charging that defendant unlawfully and willfully violated the laws of North Carolina "by disorderly conduct by using profane and indecent language" is insufficient to charge the statutory crime proscribed by this section, since it fails to charge that defendant used the profane language (1) on a public road or highway, (2) in the hearing of two or more persons, or (3) in a loud and boisterous manner. State v. Thorne, 238 N.C. 392, 78 S.E.2d 140 (1953).

§ 14-199. Obstructing way to places of public worship.

If any person shall maliciously stop up or obstruct the way leading to any place of public worship, or to any spring or well commonly used by the congregation, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1785, c. 241, P. R.; R. C., c. 97, s. 5; Code, s. 3669; Rev., s. 3776; C. S., s. 4354; 1945, c. 635; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

§ 14-200. Disturbing religious assembly by certain exhibitions.

If any person shall bring within half a mile of any place where the people are assembled for divine worship, and stop for exhibition, any stallion or jack, or shall bring within that distance any natural or artificial curiosities and there exhibit them, he shall forfeit and pay to anyone who will sue therefor the sum of twenty dollars ($20.00) and shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor: Provided, that nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit such exhibitions at any time if made within the limits of any incorporated town, or without such limits if made before the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon or after three o'clock in the afternoon. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1809, c. 779, s. 1, P. R.; R. C., c. 97, s. 6; Code, s. 3670; Rev., s. 3705; 1907, c. 412; C. S., s. 4355; 1969, c. 1224, s. 9.)

Local Modification. — Dare, Hatteras township: C.S. 4355.

§ 14-201. Permitting stone-horses and stone-mules to run at large.

If any person shall let any stone-horse or stone-mule of two years old or upwards run at large, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. (R. C., c. 17, s. 6; Code, s. 2325; Rev., s. 3323; 1907, c. 412; C. S., s. 4356.)

Local Modification. — Dare, Hatteras township: C.S. 4356.

§ 14-202. Secretly peeping into room occupied by female person.

Any person who shall peep secretly into any room occupied by a female person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court. (1923, c. 78; C. S., s. 4356(a); 1957, c. 338.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is sufficiently narrowed by judicial interpretation to require that the act condemned must be a spying for the wrongful purpose of invading the privacy of the female occupant of the room, thereby omitting from its scope those persons who have a legitimate purpose upon another's property and those who only inadvertently glance in the window of another. Thus, the statute is not so overbroad as to proscribe legitimate conduct. Therefore, this section is not unconstitutional for overbreadth. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

This section is sufficiently definite to give an individual fair notice of the conduct prohibited, and to guide a judge in its application and a lawyer in defending one charged with its violation, and therefore, this statute violates neither N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, nor the Due Process Clause of the Federal Constitution by reason of vagueness and uncertainty. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

This section prohibits the wrongful spying into a room upon a female with the intent of violating the female's legitimate expectation of privacy. This is sufficient to inform a person of ordinary intelligence, with reasonable precision, of those acts the statute intends to prohibit, so that he may know what acts he should avoid in order that he may not bring himself within its provisions. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

This section apparently was derived from the common-law crimes of common nuisance and eavesdropping. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

"Peep". — The word "peep" means to look cautiously or slyly — as if through a crevice — out from chinks and knotholes. State v. Bivins, 262 N.C. 93, 136 S.E.2d 250 (1964).

The word "secretly" as used in this section conveys the definite idea of spying upon another with the intention of invading her privacy. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

Defendant is entitled to know identity of female person whose privacy he is charged with having invaded. State v. Banks, 263 N.C. 784, 140 S.E.2d 318 (1965).

Length of Blind Irrelevant. — The fact that a venetian blind lacks some six to ten inches of reaching the window sill is entirely irrelevant in a prosecution of defendant for peeping into a room occupied by a female. State v. Bivins, 262 N.C. 93, 136 S.E.2d 250 (1964).

Warrant Defective. — The warrant was defective in that it failed to name the victim of the peeping misdemeanant, and could not be cured by a bill of particulars supplying the name. State v. Banks, 263 N.C. 784, 140 S.E.2d 318 (1965).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence in prosecution of defendant for peeping secretly into a room occupied by a woman, was held sufficient to be submitted to the jury where a witness for the State testified that the room was usually occupied by a woman and he saw someone in the room immediately after defendant left the window. State v. Peterson, 232 N.C. 332, 59 S.E.2d 635 (1950).

Evidence Held Insufficient. — Evidence tending to show that shoeprints were found six or eight feet from the window of a house in which a woman lived alone, that shoeprints were also found in the edge of a field nearby, and that bloodhounds were put on the trail at the edge of the field and followed the scent to defendant's house, without evidence as to when or by whom the tracks were made, was insufficient evidence of the corpus delicti, aliunde the confession of the defendant, to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution under this section. State v. Bass, 253 N.C. 318, 116 S.E.2d 772 (1960).

§ 14-202.1. Taking indecent liberties with children.

(a) A person is guilty of taking indecent liberties with children if, being 16 years of age or more and at least five years older than the child in question, he either:

(1) Willfully takes or attempts to take any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex under the age of 16 years for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire; or

(2) Willfully commits or attempts to commit any lewd or lascivious act upon or with the body or any part or member of the body of any child of either sex under the age of 16 years.

(b) Taking indecent liberties with children is punishable as a Class H felony. (1955, c. 764; 1975, c. 779; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punishable as a Class H felony" for "a felony punishable by a fine, imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both" in subsection (b). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The use of language such as "immoral, improper, indecent liberties," and "lewd or lascivious act" in this section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Vehaun, 34 N.C. App. 700, 239 S.E.2d 705 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 846 (1978).

This section making it a crime to take indecent liberties with a female under the age of 16, the offender being over 16 years old and more than five years older than the female child, is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Maxwell, 47 N.C. App. 658, 267 S.E.2d 582 (1980).

This section is not unconstitutionally void for vagueness since it clearly prohibits sexual conduct with a minor child and describes with reasonable specificity the proscribed conduct. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

This section does not violate equal protection because it requires a five-year difference between the age of the defendant, who cannot himself be under 16, and the age of the victim, who must be under age 16, since the age classifications within the statute are reasonably related to the purpose of the statute, i.e., the protection of children from the sexual advances of adults. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

Same-Standing to Challenge. — Defendant held to lack standing to challenge constitutionality of section on equal protection grounds. See State v. Vehaun, 34 N.C. App. 700, 239 S.E.2d 705 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 846 (1978).

Defendant had no standing to attack this section on the ground that it is unconstitutionally overbroad in that it proscribes innocent displays of affection in violation of the First Amendment since the statute has never been so interpreted and was not so applied against defendant, and defendant had no First Amendment right to express himself through unlawful actions. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

Construed With § 14-177. — This section and § 14-177 are complementary rather than repugnant or inconsistent. State v. Lance, 244 N.C. 455, 94 S.E.2d 335 (1956). See note to § 14-177; State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

This section supplements § 14-177. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961).

It is clear that there was no legislative intent in enacting this section to repeal § 14-177 in any aspect; the intent was to supplement it and to give even broader protection to children. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

This section condemns those offenses of an unnatural sexual nature against children under 16 years of age by persons over 16 years of age which cannot be reached and punished under the provisions of § 14-177. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

This section and § 14-177 are complementary rather than repugnant or inconsistent. Section 14-177 condemns crimes against nature whether committed against adults or children. This section condemns those offenses of an unnatural sexual nature against children under 16 years of age by persons over 16 years of age which cannot be reached and punished under the provisions of § 14-177. This section, of course, condemns other acts against children than unnatural sexual acts. The two statutes can be reconciled, and both declared to be operative without repugnance. State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969).

Sections 14-177 and this section can be reconciled and both declared to be operative without repugnance. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

Section 14-177 condemns crimes against nature whether committed against adults or children while this section condemns other acts against children than unnatural sexual acts and condemns those offenses of an unnatural sexual nature against children under 16 years of age by persons over 16 years of age which cannot be reached and punished under the provisions of § 14-177. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

There was no merit to defendant's contention that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to try him under the indecent liberties with children statute, this section, because the criminal act he committed was a crime against nature prohibited by § 14-177, since the crime against nature statute and the indecent liberties with children statute are complementary but not mutually exclusive. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

Same — Not a Lesser Included Offense. — Because the two offenses are separate and distinct and the constituent elements are not identical, a violation of this section is not a lesser included offense of the crime against nature described in § 14-177. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

Intent to commit an unnatural sexual act is an essential element in this crime and must be proved by the State. State v. Richmond, 266 N.C. 357, 145 S.E.2d 915 (1966).

Evidence of Bias Properly Excluded. — In a prosecution of defendant for taking indecent liberties with a child, the trial court did not err in excluding testimony by defendant, his wife, and an employee of the county department of social services which was offered to show bias, interest, corruption, undue prejudice and influence on the part of the mother of the prosecuting witness, since the competency of the 10 year old victim was determined by the trial judge after a voir dire hearing; her credibility was tested by careful cross-examination by defendant; defendant was unable to show on cross-examination that the prosecuting witness was biased or prejudiced against him or that her testimony was in any way influenced by her mother. State v. Locklear, 50 N.C. App. 165, 272 S.E.2d 597 (1980).

Evidence of Prior Misconduct toward Prosecuting Witness Admissible. — In a prosecution for taking immoral, improper, and indecent liberties with a female under the age of 16, evidence of prior misconduct by the defendant toward the prosecuting witness was admissible as an exception to the rule that evidence of independent offenses is not admissible. State v. Jenkins, 35 N.C. App. 758, 242 S.E.2d 505, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 470, 246 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

The uncorroborated testimony of a victim under this section would be sufficient to convict a defendant if such testimony suffices to establish all the elements of the offense. State v. Vehaun, 34 N.C. App. 700, 239 S.E.2d 705 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 846 (1978).

Instructions — Failure to Charge on Willfulness. — In a prosecution of defendant for taking indecent liberties with a female under the age of 16, defendant being over 16 years old and more than five years older than the female child, the jury, by finding that defendant committed the crime, necessarily found that he acted willfully and accordingly the court's failure to charge on willfulness was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Maxwell, 47 N.C. App. 658, 267 S.E.2d 582 (1980).

Same — Failure to Define "Lewd or Lascivious Act." — The words "lewd or lascivious act" are ordinary words which the jury is presumed to understand. State v. Stell, 39 N.C. App. 75, 249 S.E.2d 480 (1978).

Since the words "lewd or lascivious act" are ordinary words which the jury is presumed to understand, there was no error in a prosecution under this section when the trial court failed to define the words in its charge to the jury. State v. Stell, 39 N.C. App. 75, 249 S.E.2d 480 (1978).

Applied in State v. Cox, 272 N.C. 140, 157 S.E.2d 717 (1967); State v. Wells, 31 N.C. App. 736, 230 S.E.2d 437 (1976).

Quoted in State v. Shaw, 293 N.C. 616, 239 S.E.2d 439 (1977).

Stated in Perkins v. North Carolina, 234 F. Supp. 333 (W.D.N.C. 1964).

Article 26A.

Adult Establishments.

§ 14-202.10. Definitions.

As used in this Article:

(1) "Adult bookstore" means a bookstore having as a preponderance of its publications books, magazines, and other periodicals which are distinguished or characterized by their emphasis on matter depicting, describing, or relating to specified sexual activities or specified anatomical areas, as defined in this section.

(2) "Adult establishment" means an adult bookstore, adult motion picture theater, adult mini motion picture theater, or a massage business as defined in this section.

(3) "Adult motion picture theater" means an enclosed building with a capacity of 50 or more persons used for presenting motion pictures, a preponderance of which are distinguished or characterized by an emphasis on matter depicting, describing, or relating to specified sexual activities or specified anatomical areas, as defined in this section, for observation by patrons therein.

(4) "Adult mini motion picture theater" means an enclosed building with a capacity for less than 50 persons used for presenting motion pictures, a preponderance of which are distinguished or characterized by an emphasis on matter depicting, describing, or relating to specified sexual activities or specified anatomical areas, as defined in this section, for observation by patrons therein.

(5) "Massage" means the manipulation of body muscle or tissue by rubbing, stroking, kneading, or tapping, by hand or mechanical device.

(6) "Massage business" means any establishment or business wherein massage is practiced, including establishments commonly known as health clubs, physical culture studios, massage studios, or massage parlors.
(7) "Sexually oriented devices" means without limitation any artificial or simulated specified anatomical area or other device or paraphenalia that is designed in whole or part for specified sexual activities.
(8) "Specified anatomical areas" means:
a. Less than completely and opaquely covered: (i) human genitals, pubic region, (ii) buttock, or (iii) female breast below a point immediately above the top of the areola; or
b. Human male genitals in a discernibly turgid state, even if completely and opaquely covered.
(9) "Specified sexual activities" means:
a. Human genitals in a state of sexual stimulation or arousal;
b. Acts of human masturbation, sexual intercourse or sodomy; or
c. Fondling or other erotic touchings of human genitals, pubic regions, buttocks or female breasts. (1977, c. 987, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Article. — This Article is aimed at prohibiting a "supermarket" marketing technique that offers for sale or exhibition at one business location a variety of sexual wares in addition to printed materials. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 1124 (1980).

The essential regulation implemented by this Article is of location. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Constitutionality. — No Equal Protection Violation. — This Article does not violate equal protection since the unequal treatment of commercial establishments involved in this Article is based most essentially on the different effects they are considered to have on their surroundings. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Same — First Amendment Not Violated. — Under this Article the incidental restriction on First Amendment interests is no greater than is essential to furtherance of the state's interest. The means chosen by North Carolina in its effort to eliminate the undesired secondary effects of adult establishments is one of the least burdensome means the state could have chosen. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

On its face this Article is a permissible regulation of the external costs of adult establishments that is unrelated to the overall suppression of any protected materials offered by them for public consumption. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

This Article is merely a regulation of the place and manner of expression, without proscription of that expression, of the type not forbidden by the First Amendment. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

While the First Amendment sets limits on the economic burdens that can be imposed upon the dissemination of protected materials, those limits are not exceeded by the relocation burden involved in this Article. ARTICLE 27.

Prostitution.

§ 14-203. Definition of terms.

The term "prostitution" shall be construed to include the offering or receiving of the body for sexual intercourse for hire, and shall also be construed to include the offering or receiving of the body fo. indiscriminate sexual intercourse without hire. The term "assignation" shall be construed to include the making of any appointment or engagement for prostitution or any act in furtherance of such appointment or engagement. (1919, c. 215, s. 2; C. S., s. 4357.)

§ 14-204. Prostitution and various acts abetting prostitution unlawful.

It shall be unlawful:

(1) To keep, set up, maintain, or operate any place, structure, building or conveyance for the purpose of prostitution or assignation.

(2) To occupy any place, structure, building, or conveyance for the purpose of prostitution or assignation; or for any person to permit any place, structure, building or conveyance owned by him or under his control to be used for the purpose of prostitution or assignation, with knowledge or reasonable cause to know that the same is, or is to be, used for such purpose.

(3) To receive, or to offer or agree to receive any person into any place, structure, building, or conveyance for the purpose of prostitution or assignation, or to permit any person to remain there for such purpose.

(4) To direct, take, or transport, or to offer or agree to take or transport, any person to any place, structure, or building or to any other person, with knowledge or reasonable cause to know that the purpose of such directing, taking, or transporting is prostitution or assignation.

(5) To procure, or to solicit, or to offer to procure or solicit for the purpose of prostitution or assignation.

(6) To reside in, enter, or remain in any place, structure, or building, or to enter or remain in any conveyance, for the purpose of prostitution or assignation.

(7) To engage in prostitution or assignation, or to aid or abet prostitution or assignation by any means whatsoever. (1919, c. 215, s. 1; C. S., s. 4358.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — The enterprise sought to be proscribed by this section, the offering of the body for hire, has been fragmented into multiple substantive offenses. This fragmentation serves the laudable purpose of not only punishing those who, at any state, engage in the promotion of the enterprise, but is an obvious prosecutorial aid to those whose responsibility it is to suppress the vice. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Each Step a Separate Crime. — The legislature, by making each step taken in furtherance of the vice of offering the body for sexual hire a separate crime, has made it possible to obtain convictions where, given the nature of the activity, they would otherwise be most difficult to obtain. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

The violation of subdivision (4) is complete when defendant directs and invites agent to her apartment for prostitution. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Same — Transporting. — Where defendants, taxi drivers, were apprehended in a clearing in the woods, each under the wheel of his taxi with motor running, and carrying soldiers, the evidence of the character of the scene and the other circumstantial evidence was sufficient to support the inference that defendants knew their destination and brought their passengers to the place for the purpose of engaging in prostitution. State v. Willis, 220 N.C. 712, 18 S.E.2d 118 (1942).

The violation of subdivision (6) is complete when defendant enters her appartment with a person for the stated purpose. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Anyone who has violated subdivision (7) has most likely, in the process of doing so, violated one or more of the other subdivisions of this section. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Aiding and Abetting. — It is to be noted that subdivision (7) does not merely say "to aid or abet prostitution or assignation," but there are added the descriptive words "by any means whatsoever," thereby covering a multitude of acts. Thus, it is manifest that the legislature intended that these supplemental words should be given a meaning, and catch all other acts of aiding and abetting prostitution or assignation. Therefore in order to determine whether any offense be committed, it is essential that for the words of the statute "by any means whatsoever" to be given force and effect, there must be stated in the warrant the acts and circumstances of the particular charge, so that the court can see as a matter of law that a crime is charged. State v. Cox, 244 N.C. 57, 92 S.E.2d 413 (1956).

A warrant which charged that defendant did "aid and abet in prostitution and assignation" was defective since it failed to state wherein the defendant aided and abetted, and defendant's motion in arrest of judgment should have been granted. State v. Cox, 244 N.C. 57, 92 S.E.2d 413 (1956).

This section punishes all who aid and abet prostitution by the means set out in the statute or by "any means whatsoever" to the same extent that it punishes those who offer their bodies for that purpose. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Allegations in warrants charging violations of subdivisions (2), (4) and (6) can be so cast that neither offense is made an essential element of any other. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Competency of Evidence. — Evidence of the reputation of the upstairs of a building owned by defendant, and of the persons frequenting it, is competent in a prosecution under this section. State v. Waggoner, 207 N.C. 306, 176 S.E. 566 (1934).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — In a criminal prosecution for permitting property to be used for prostitution where the State's evidence tended to show that defendant owned the property so used, which was across the road from his residence, that defendant's wife was one of the operators of the place of ill fame and that its general reputation was bad, motion for judgment as of nonsuit was held properly denied. State v. Herndon, 223 N.C. 208, 25 S.E.2d 611, cert. denied, 320 U.S. 759, 64 S. Ct. 67, 88 L. Ed. 452 (1943).

§ 14-204.1. Loitering for the purpose of engaging in prostitution offense.

(a) For the purposes of this section, "public place" means any street, sidewalk, bridge, alley or alleyway, plaza, park, driveway, parking lot or transportation facility, or the doorways and entrance ways to any building which fronts on any of those places, or a motor vehicle in or on any of those places.

(b) If a person remains or wanders about in a public place and

(1) Repeatedly beckons to, stops, or attempts to stop passers-by, or repeatedly attempts to engage passers-by in conversation; or

(2) Repeatedly stops or attempts to stop motor vehicles; or

(3) Repeatedly interferes with the free passage of other persons for the purpose of violating any subdivision of G.S. 14-204 or 14-177, that person is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be punished as for a violation of G.S. 14-204. (1979, c. 873, s. 2.)

§ 14-205. Prosecution; in what courts.

Prosecutions for the violation of any of the provisions of this Article shall be tried in the courts of this State wherein misdemeanors are triable except those courts the jurisdiction of which is so limited by the Constitution of this State that such jurisdiction cannot by statute be extended to include criminal actions of the character herein described. (1919, c. 215, s. 6; C. S., s. 4359.)

§ 14-206. Reputation and prior conviction admissible as evidence.

In the trial of any person charged with a violation of any of the provisions of this Article, testimony of a prior conviction, or testimony concerning the reputation of any place, structure, or building, and of the person or persons who reside in or frequent the same, and of the defendant, shall be admissible in evidence in support of the charge. (1919, c. 215, s. 3; C.S., s. 4360.)

CASE NOTES

Stated in State v. Harrill, 224 N.C. 477, 31 S.E.2d 353 (1944).

§ 14-207. Degrees of guilt.

Any person who shall be found to have committed two or more violations of any of the provisions of G.S. 14-204 of this Article within a period of one year next preceding the date named in an indictment, information, or charge of violating any of the provisions of such section, shall be deemed guilty in the first degree. Any person who shall be found to have committed a single violation of any of the provisions of such section shall be deemed guilty in the second degree. (1919, c. 215, s. 4; C.S., s. 4361.)

CASE NOTES

Province of Judge. — When the degree of guilt has been properly ascertained the judge doubtless has the right to hear testimony for the purpose of fixing the terms of imprisonment within the limits of the statute; but this right does not extend to or include the finding by the judge of the degree of the offender's guilt. State v. Barnes, 122 N.C. 1031, 29 S.E. 381 (1898); State v. Lee, 192 N.C. 225, 134 S.E. 458 (1926); State v. Brinkley, 193 N.C. 747, 138 S.E. 138 (1927).

§ 14-208. Punishment; probation; parole.

Any person who shall be deemed guilty in the first degree, as set forth in G.S. 14-207, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court, or may be committed to any penal or reformatory institution in this State: Provided, that in case of a commitment to a reformatory institution, the commitment shall be made for an indeterminate period of time of not less than one nor more than three years in duration, and the board of managers or directors of the reformatory institution shall have authority to discharge or to place on parole any person so committed after the service of the minimum term or any part thereof, and to require the return to said institution for the balance of the maximum term of any person who shall violate the terms or conditions of the parole.

Notwithstanding the previous paragraph, any person who shall be deemed guilty in the first degree, as set forth in G.S. 14-207, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be imprisoned for not less than 60 days nor more than two years, and may be fined in the discretion of the court. This paragraph applies only in cities with a population of 300,000 or over, according to the most recent decennial federal census, but shall only apply in a city within that class if the city has adopted an ordinance to that effect, which ordinance makes a finding that prostitution is a serious problem within the city.

Any person who shall be deemed guilty in the second degree, as set forth in G.S. 14-207, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined or imprisoned at the discretion of the court: Provided, that the defendant may be placed on probation in the care of a probation officer designated by law, or theretofore appointed by the court.

Probation or parole shall be granted or ordered in the case of a person infected with venereal disease only on such terms and conditions as shall insure medical treatment therefor and prevent the spread thereof, and the court may order any convicted defendant to be examined for venereal disease.

No girl or woman who shall be convicted under this Article shall be placed on probation or on parole in the care or charge of any person except a woman probation officer. (1919, c. 215, s. 5; C. S., s. 4362; 1921, c. 101; 1981, c. 969, ss. 1, 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, ratified July 10, 1981, and effective 10 days after ratification, added the second paragraph.

CASE NOTES

Admission of Guilt — Effect on Time Limitation. — A defendant sentenced for the crime of prostitution upon his own admission of guilt, may not successfully resist a sentence therefor upon the ground that the offense charged in the indictment did not come within the period of time prescribed by the statute. State v. Brinkley, 193 N.C. 747, 138 S.E. 138 (1927).

SUBCHAPTER VIII. OFFENSES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE.

ARTICLE 28.

Perjury.

§ 14-209. Punishment for perjury.

If any person shall willfully and corruptly commit perjury, on his oath or affirmation, in any suit, controversy, matter or cause, depending in any of the courts of the State, or in any deposition or affidavit taken pursuant to law, or in any oath or affirmation duly administered of or concerning any matter or thing whereof such person is lawfully required to be sworn or affirmed, every person so offending shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1791, c. 338, s. 1, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 49; Code, s. 1092; Rev., s. 3615; C. S., s. 4364; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1; as to swearing falsely to official reports, see § 14-232; as to form of bill for perjury, see § 15-145; as to false swearing by creditor in assignment for benefit of creditors, see § 23-9; as to making false affidavits in applications for motor vehicle licenses, see § 20-31; as to false swearing in an investigation before the Commissioner of Insurance, see § 69-3; as to false swearing in an investigation of trusts and combinations in restraint of trade, see § 75-12; as to perjury in application for oyster license, see § 113-203.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, and imprisoned in the county jail or State's prison not less than four months nor more than ten years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — Law of perjury was intended to afford defendant greater protection against the chance of unjust conviction than is ordinarily afforded in prosecuting for crime. State v. Horne, 28 N.C. App. 475, 221 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

Definition of Perjury. — Perjury, as defined by common law and enlarged by this section, is a false statement under oath, knowingly, willfully and designedly made, in a proceeding in a court of competent jurisdiction, or concerning a matter wherein the affiant is required by law to be sworn, as to some matter material to the issue or point in question. State v. Smith, 230 N.C. 198, 52 S.E.2d 348 (1949); State v. Sailor, 240 N.C. 113, 81 S.E.2d 191 (1954); State v. Lucas, 244 N.C. 53, 92 S.E.2d 401 (1956); State v. Arthur, 244 N.C. 582, 94 S.E.2d 646 (1956); State v. Wilson, 30 N.C. App. 149, 226 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

This section does not specifically define perjury or state all the elements essential to constitute the crime. It enlarges the scope of the criminality of a false oath, and prescribes punishment. The definition is derived from the common law. State v. Smith, 230 N.C. 198, 52 S.E.2d 348 (1949).

Essential Elements. — The administration of an oath is an essential element of perjury. State v. Glisson, 93 N.C. 506 (1885). Another is jurisdiction of the court. Governor ex rel. Halcombe v. Deaver, 3 N.C. 56 (1842); Boling v. Luther, 4 N.C. 635 (1816); State v. Alexander, 11 N.C. 182 (1825). The false testimony given must be material. State v. Cline, 146 N.C. 640, 61 S.E. 522 (1908); State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

Elements essential to constitute perjury are substantially these: A false statement under oath, knowingly, willfully and designedly made, in a proceeding in a court of competent jurisdiction, or concerning a matter wherein the affiant is required by law to be sworn, as to some matter material to the issue or point in question. To constitute materiality essential to sustain a charge of perjury the false testimony must be so connected with the fact directly in issue as to have a legitimate tendency to prove or disprove such fact. State v. Chaney, 256 N.C. 255, 123 S.E.2d 498 (1962).

Same — Offense Must Be Willfull and Corrupt. — Where the defendant swears to an answer in a civil action before one authorized to administer the oath and the answer contains a false statement of fact, in order to convict him of perjury under the provisions of this section it must be shown that he "willfully and corruptly" committed the offense. State v. Dowd, 201 N.C. 714, 161 S.E. 205 (1931).

Same — False Statement Must Be Material to Issue. — A false statement under oath must be so connected with the fact directly in issue as to have a legitimate tendency to prove or disprove such fact, in order to be material to the issue and constitute a basis for a prosecution for perjury. State v. Smith, 230 N.C. 198, 52 S.E.2d 348 (1949).

In a prosecution for willful failure of defendant to support his illegitimate child, defendant swore he had not had sexual intercourse with prosecutrix and was not the father of her child, and testified as to the number of times he had visited prosecutrix. In a subsequent prosecution for perjury it was made to appear that defendant had visited prosecutrix or had been seen with her more times than he had admitted under oath, but there was no evidence that he was the father of the child. It was held that the proof of false testimony did not relate to matters determinative of the issue in the first prosecution, and the evidence was insufficient to withstand nonsuit in the prosecution for perjury. State v. Smith, 230 N.C. 198, 52 S.E.2d 348 (1949).

One of the essential elements of the crime of perjury is that the false statement must be material to an issue or point in question. State v. Chaney, 256 N.C. 255, 123 S.E.2d 498 (1962).

Same — Materiality of False Testimony a Question of Law. — On a trial for perjury the question of the materiality of the alleged false testimony is in its nature a question of law for the court rather than of fact for the jury. State

v. Wilson, 30 N.C. App. 149, 226 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

Acquittal No Shield from Charge of Perjury. — To hold that a person could go into a court of justice and by perjured testimony secure an acquittal and by that acquittal be shielded from a charge of perjury would be a dangerous doctrine. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

A verdict of acquittal is not equivalent to an affirmative finding that all of defendant's testimony at a former trial was true. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

Former acquittal of malicious injury to personal property under § 14-160 would not support a plea of former jeopardy in a prosecution for perjury committed at the trial, since the crimes are not the same either in fact or in law and the charge of perjury was not based on the assumption that defendant was guilty of the charge of malicious injury, and his acquittal upon the latter charge did not necessarily establish the fact that all material evidence given by him in that case was true. State v. Leonard, 236 N.C. 126, 72 S.E.2d 1 (1952), cert. denied, 344 U.S. 916, 73 S. Ct. 339, 97 L. Ed. 706 (1953).

Civil Action Will Not Lie. — Aside from defamation and malicious prosecution, the courts refuse to recognize any injury from false testimony on which a civil action for damages can be maintained, and no action for damages lies for false testimony in a civil suit, whereby the plaintiff fails to recover a judgment, or a judgment is rendered against him. Brewer v. Carolina Coach Co., 253 N.C. 257, 116 S.E.2d 725 (1960).

It seems to be the general rule that a civil action in tort cannot be maintained upon the ground that a defendant gave false testimony or procured other persons to give false or perjured testimony. Brewer v. Carolina Coach Co., 253 N.C. 257, 116 S.E.2d 725 (1960).

Perjured testimony and the subornation of perjured testimony are criminal offenses, but neither are torts supporting a civil action for damages. Gillikin v. Springle, 254 N.C. 240, 118 S.E.2d 611 (1961).

Vacating Judgment Because of Perjured Testimony. — A judgment cannot be vacated because of perjured testimony unless the party charged with perjury has been indicted and convicted or he has passed beyond the jurisdiction of courts and is not amenable to criminal process. Gillikin v. Springle, 254 N.C. 240, 118 S.E.2d 611 (1961).

Irregularity of Warrant Immaterial. — When perjury is charged to have been committed by a witness in the trial of a criminal proceeding which was begun by warrant, if the court had jurisdiction to investigate the offense charged, it is no defense that the warrant was issued without complaint or affidavit. State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890).

Burden of Proof on State. — The burden is not on the defendant in perjury to show the truth of the matter at issue, but the burden is on the State to show that it is false. State v. Cline, 150 N.C. 854, 64 S.E. 591 (1909), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hawley, 186 N.C. 433, 119 S.E. 888 (1923).

Corroborative Evidence Required. — To prove the falsity of the oath, the evidence must not necessarily equal in weight the testimony of two witnesses. It is sufficient if there is the testimony of one witness and corroborative circumstances sufficient to turn the scale against the oath which is charged to have been false. State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890).

In a prosecution for perjury it is required that the falsity of the oath be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances sufficient to turn the scales against the defendant's oath. State v. Sailor, 240 N.C. 113, 81 S.E.2d 191 (1954). See State v. Arthur, 244 N.C. 582, 94 S.E.2d 646 (1956); State v. Allen, 260 N.C. 220, 132 S.E.2d 302 (1963).

To sustain a conviction for perjury, the falsity of the oath must be directly proved by one witness and there must be corroborating evidence of independent and supplemental character, sufficient to resolve "the dilemma of weighing [one] oath against [another]." State v. Horne, 28 N.C. App. 475, 221 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

In a prosecution for perjury it is required that the falsity of the oath be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances sufficient to turn the scales against the defendant's oath. State v. Wilson, 30 N.C. App. 149, 226 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

Circumstantial evidence of perjury alone is not sufficient. State v. Horne, 28 N.C. App. 475, 221 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

Evidence Must Relate to Statement upon Which Indictment Predicated. — Testimony of two or more witnesses as to conflicting statements made by defendant while under oath in courts of competent jurisdiction, but without evidence that the statement upon which the bill of indictment was predicated was the false testimony, is insufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution for perjury. State v. Allen, 260 N.C. 220, 132 S.E.2d 302 (1963).

Evidence Sufficient. — The direct oath of one witness and proof of declarations of the prisoner in an action for perjury are sufficient to convict. State v. Molier, 12 N.C. 263 (1827).

§ 14-210. Subornation of perjury.

If any person shall, by any means, procure another person to commit such willful and corrupt perjury as is mentioned in G.S. 14-209, the person so offending shall be punished in like manner as the person committing the perjury. (1791, c. 338, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 50; Code, s. 1093; Rev., s. 3616; C. S., s. 4365.)

CASE NOTES

Elements of Offense. — The crime of subornation of perjury consists of two elements — the commission of perjury by the person suborned, and willfully procuring or inducing him to do so by the suborner. The guilt of both the suborned and the suborner must be proved on the trial of the latter. The commission of the crime of perjury is the basic element in the crime of subornation of perjury. State v. Sailor, 240 N.C. 113, 81 S.E.2d 191 (1954); State v. Lucas, 244 N.C. 53, 92 S.E.2d 401 (1956); State v. McBride, 15 N.C. App. 742, 190 S.E.2d 658 (1972).

In a prosecution under this section, the State was required to establish, inter alia, that the alleged perjurer made the alleged false statement under oath in a court of competent jurisdiction and that such false statement was material to the matter then in issue. State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

The commission of the crime of perjury is the basic element in the crime of subornation of perjury. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

The crime of subornation of perjury consists of two elements, the commission of perjury by the person suborned, and willfully procuring or inducing him to do so by the suborner. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

The guilt of both the suborned and the suborner must be proved on the trial of the latter. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

The suborner of perjury and the perjurer stand on an equal footing, especially in respect of turpitude and punishment. State v. Cannon, 227 N.C. 338, 42 S.E.2d 344 (1947).

How Falsity of Alleged Perjurer's Oath Established. — In a prosecution for subornation of perjury, the falsity of the oath of the alleged perjurer must be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or one witness and corroborating circumstances. State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

In a prosecution for perjury or subornation of perjury, it is required that the falsity of the oath be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances, sometimes called adminicular circumstances. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966); State v. McBride, 15 N.C. App. 742, 190 S.E.2d 658 (1972).

The requirement of proving by independent circumstances the commission of perjury does not apply to the procurement element of the offense of subornation of perjury. State v. McBride, 15 N.C. App. 742, 190 S.E.2d 658 (1972).

Civil Action Will Not Lie. — See note to § 14-209.

Competency of Corroborative Evidence. — See State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

Instructions held erroneous for failure to instruct the jury that the alleged perjury must be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances and failure to instruct that the State was required to establish, inter alia, that the alleged perjurer testified as charged in the bill of indictment. State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

§ 14-211. Perjury before legislative committees.

If any person shall willfully and corruptly swear falsely to any fact material to the investigation of any matter before any committee or commission of either house of the General Assembly, he shall be subject to all the pains and penalties of willful and corrupt perjury, and, on conviction in the Superior Court of Wake County, shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1869-70, c. 5, s. 4; Code, s. 2857; Rev., s. 3611; C. S., s. 4366; 1977, c. 344, s. 4; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "confined in the State's prison for the time prescribed by law for perjury" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-212. Perjury in court-martial proceedings.

If any person shall willfully and corruptly swear falsely before any court-martial, touching and concerning any matter or thing cognizable before such court-martial, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1812, c. 828, s. 3, P. R.; R. C., c. 70, s. 73; Code, s. 3235; Rev., s. 3612; C. S., s. 4367; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "liable to the pains and penalties of perjury" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-213. False oath to statement of insurance company.

Any person who shall make oath to a willfully false statement in the annual report or other statement required by law from an insurance company shall be guilty of perjury. (1899, c. 54, s. 97; Rev., s. 3493; C. S., s. 4368.)

§ 14-214. False statement to procure benefit of insurance policy or certificate.

Any person who shall willfully and knowingly present or cause to be presented a false or fraudulent claim, or any proof in support of such claim, for the payment of a loss, or other benefits, upon any contract of insurance or certificate of insurance; or prepares, makes or subscribes to a false or fraudulent account, certificate, affidavit or proof of loss, or other documents or writing, with intent that the same may be presented or used in support of such claim, shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1899, c. 54, s. 60; Rev., s. 3487; 1913, c. 89, s. 28; C. S., s. 4369; 1937, c. 248; 1967, c. 1088, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than five years or by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars ($5,000), or by both such fine or imprisonment in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Meaning of "Willfully" and "Knowingly". — The word "willfully" as used in this section means something more than an intention to commit the offense. It implies committing the offense purposely and designedly in violation of law. The word "knowingly" as so used means that defendant knew what he was about to do, and with such knowledge, proceeded to do the act charged. These words combined in the phrase "willfully and knowingly" in reference to violation of the statute, mean intentionally and consciously. One does not "willfully and knowingly" violate a statute when he does that which he believes he has a bona fide right to do. State v. Fraylon, 240 N.C. 365, 82 S.E.2d 400 (1954).

The existence of unreported liens or other insurance upon the property is a civil matter governed by §§ 58-178 and 58-180, but does not tend to show criminal intent in connection with the filing of proofs of claim within the meaning of this section. State v. Fraylon, 240 N.C. 365, 82 S.E.2d 400 (1954).

The filing of an insurance claim based on an accident admittedly staged with the intent to defraud the insurance company is a violation of this section. State v. Walker, 22 N.C. App. 291, 206 S.E.2d 395 (1974).

Burden on the State. — The gravamen of the offense defined by this section is the willfully and knowingly presenting a false or fraudulent proof of claim for a loss upon a contract of insurance; and in the prosecution thereunder the burden is upon the State to prove that the claim for loss was false, that defendant knew it was false, and that, with such knowledge, he proceeded to make the claim for payment of insurance thereon. State v. Stephenson, 218 N.C. 258, 10 S.E.2d 819 (1940).

In a prosecution under this section, the burden is upon the State to prove that defendant "willfully and knowingly" presented a false and fraudulent claim and presented proof in support of such claim and when the evidence considered in the light most favorable to the State raises no more than a suspicion or conjecture of defendant's guilt of the charge under the statute, defendant's motion to nonsuit must be allowed. State v. Fraylon, 240 N.C. 365, 82 S.E.2d 400 (1954).

Broker Is Competent Witness. — It was not necessary that a broker have the authority to contract directly with the insurance company, vis a vis, the power to broker the policy in order to be a competent witness with regard to the contract of insurance in a prosecution under this section where his testimony relating to the insurance contract did not extend beyond his personal knowledge and observation of the facts so as to render his testimony incompetent or hearsay. State v. Moose, 36 N.C. App. 202, 243 S.E.2d 425 (1978).

Evidence Sufficient to Show Conspiracy to Procure Insurance by Means of False Claim. — Evidence held sufficient to be submitted to jury in prosecution for conspiracy to procure insurance benefits by means of false claim. State v. Hedrick, 236 N.C. 727, 73 S.E.2d 904 (1953).

Evidence held insufficient to show that defendant willfully and knowingly presented fraudulent claim for insurance loss and proofs in support thereof. State v. Fraylon, 240 N.C. 365, 82 S.E.2d 400 (1954).

Applied in State v. Martin, 30 N.C. App. 512, 227 S.E.2d 172 (1976); State v. Downing, 31 N.C. App. 743, 230 S.E.2d 581 (1976).

§ 14-215. False oath to statement required of fraternal benefit societies.

Any person who shall willfully make any false statement in any verified report or declaration under oath, required or authorized by law from fraternal benefit societies, shall be guilty of perjury. (1913, c. 89, s. 28; C. S., s. 4370.)

§ 14-216. False oath to certificate of mutual fire insurance company.

Any person taking a false oath in respect to the certificate required by law before issuing policies in a mutual fire insurance company, that every subscription for insurance is genuine and made with an agreement that every subscriber will take the policies subscribed for by him within 30 days after granting a license to such company, shall be guilty of perjury. (1899, c. 54, s. 32; 1901, c. 391, ss. 3, 4; 1903, c. 438, s. 4; Rev., ss. 4738, 4834; C. S., s. 4371.)

ARTICLE 29.

Bribery.

§ 14-217. Bribery of officials.

If any person holding office under the laws of this State who, except in payment of his legal salary, fees or perquisites, shall receive, or consent to receive, directly or indirectly, anything of value or personal advantage, or the promise thereof, for performing or omitting to perform any official act, or with the express or implied understanding that his official action, or omission to act, is to be in any degree influenced thereby, he shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1868-9, c. 176, s. 2; Code, s. 991; Rev., s. 3568; C. S., s. 4372; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for a term not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding five thousand dollars, or both, in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Bribery Defined. — Bribery is the voluntary offering, giving, receiving or soliciting of any sum of money or thing of value with the corrupt intent to influence the recepient's action as a public officer or official in the discharge of a public legal duty. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

The distinction between bribery and extortion seems to be that the former offense consists in offering a present or receiving one, the latter in demanding a fee or present by color of office. State v. Pritchard, 107 N.C. 921, 12 S.E. 50 (1890).

Necessity of Proving Corrupt Intent. — On the trial of an officer for bribery in taking unlawful fees, it is necessary to prove a corrupt intent. State v. Pritchard, 107 N.C. 921, 12 S.E. 50 (1890).

And Receipt of Anything of Value Influencing Official Acts. — This section has an essential element of the offense of bribery of officials the receipt of anything of value with the express or implied understanding that his official acts are to be in any degree influenced thereby. State v. Smith, 237 N.C. 1, 74 S.E.2d 291 (1953).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An allegation in an indictment against a public officer for unlawfully receiving compensation for the performance of his duty, that defendant "did receive and consent to receive" such compensation, is sufficient and is not defective because of the use of "and" instead of "or" as used in the statute. State v. Wynne, 118 N.C. 1206, 24 S.E. 216 (1896).

Evidence Sufficient for Submission to Jury. — Evidence in this case of one defendant's guilt of paying or delivering money or merchandise, directly and through agents, to each of defendant policemen to influence them in the performance of their duties, and of the acceptance by each defendant policeman of such payments or delivering with intent and understanding that his actions as a police officer would be influenced thereby, was held sufficient to be submitted to the jury as to each defendant. State v. Smith, 237 N.C. 1, 74 S.E.2d 291 (1953).

Applied in State v. Cofer, 205 N.C. 653, 172 S.E. 176 (1934).

§ 14-218. Offering bribes.

If any person shall offer a bribe, whether it be accepted or not, he shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1870-1, c. 232; Code, s. 992; Rev., s. 3569; C. S., s. 4373; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not less than one year nor more than five years in the State's prison or county jail, in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Indictment. — The general rule that an indictment for a statutory offense is sufficient, if the offense is charged in the words of the statute, either literally or substantially, or in equivalent words, does not apply where the words of the statute, as in this section, do not set forth all the essential elements necessary to constitute the offense sought to be charged. In such a situation the statutory words must be supplemented in the indictment by other allegations which explicitly and accurately set forth every essential element of the offense with such exactitude as to leave no doubt in the minds of the accused and the court as to the specific offense intended to be charged. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

An indictment for offering a bribe or bribery must allege by definite and particular statement, and not as a mere conclusion, that the acts were done to influence the performance of some public legal duty, and it must further appear, at least as a reasonable inference, that defendant had knowledge of the official character of him to whom the bribe was offered. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

Where an indictment for bribing or offering a bribe to a State highway patrolman fails to allege the official act the accused intended to influence, defendant's motion to quash should be allowed. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

Same — Not Necessary That Bribed Juror Received Fee. — In a prosecution under this section it is not necessary that the indictment should charge that the juror received any fee or other compensation, the statutes making a distinction between bribery and an offer to bribe. State v. Noland, 204 N.C. 329, 168 S.E. 412 (1933). As to venue, see note to § 15-134.

Competency of Evidence. — Evidence is competent which shows the quo animo, intent, design, guilty knowledge or scienter with which the defendant charged under this section gave money or other things of value to an official. State v. Smith, 237 N.C. 1, 74 S.E.2d 291 (1953).

Cited in State v. Barkley, 198 N.C. 349, 151 S.E. 733 (1930); State v. Stonestreet, 243 N.C. 28, 89 S.E.2d 724 (1955).

§ 14-219. Bribery of legislators.

If any person shall directly or indirectly promise, offer or give, or cause or procure to be promised, offered or given, any money, bribe, present or reward, or any promise, contract, undertaking, obligation or security for the payment or delivery of any money, goods, right of action, bribe, present or reward, or any other valuable thing whatever, to any member of the Senate or House of Representatives of this State after his election as such member, and either before or after he shall have qualified and taken his seat, with intent to influence his vote or decision on any question, matter, cause or proceeding which may then be pending before the General Assembly, or which may come before him for action in his capacity as a member of the General Assembly, such person so offering, promising or giving, or causing or procuring to be promised, offered or given any such money, goods, bribe, present or reward, or any bond, contract, undertaking, obligation or security for the payment or delivery of any money, goods, bribe, present or reward, or other valuable thing whatever, and the member-elect who shall in anywise accept or receive the same or any part thereof, shall be punished as a Class I felon, and the person convicted of so accepting or receiving the same, or any part thereof, shall forfeit his seat in the General Assembly and shall be forever disqualified to hold any office of honor, trust or profit under this State. (1868-9, c. 176, s. 5; Code, s. 2852; Rev., s. 3570; C. S., s. 4374; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be fined not exceeding double the amount so offered, promised or given, and imprisoned in the State's prison not exceeding five years" near the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-220. Bribery of jurors.

If any juror, either directly or indirectly, shall take anything from the plaintiff or defendant in a civil suit, or from any defendant in a State prosecution, or from any other person, to give his verdict, every such juror, and the person who shall give such juror any fee or reward to influence his verdict, or induce or procure him to make any gain or profit by his verdict, shall be punished as a Class H felon. (5 Edw. III, c. 10; 34 Edw. III, c. 8; 38 Edw. III, c. 12; R. C., c. 34, s. 34; Code, s. 990; Rev., s. 3697; C. S., s. 4375; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned in the State's prison or county jail not less than four months nor more than ten years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides:

"This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

ARTICLE 30.

Obstructing Justice.

§ 14-221. Breaking or entering jails with intent to injure prisoners.

If any person shall conspire to break or enter any jail or other place of confinement of prisoners charged with crime or under sentence, for the purpose of killing or otherwise injuring any prisoner confined therein; or if any person shall engage in breaking or entering any such jail or other place of confinement of such prisoners with intent to kill or injure any prisoner, he shall be punished as a Class G felon. (1893, c. 461, s. 1; Rev., s. 3698; C. S., s. 4376; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1; as to investigation of lynchings, see § 114-15; as to sheriff's duty to protect prisoner, see § 162-23.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class G felon" for "guilty of a felony, and upon conviction, or upon a plea of guilty, shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars, and imprisoned in the State's prison or the county jail not less than two nor more than fifteen years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Conviction of Attempt. — On an indictment under this section as construed with §§ 15-128 (repealed) and 15-170, the defendant may be found guilty of an attempt. State v. Rumple, 178 N.C. 717, 100 S.E. 622 (1919).

Indictment Need Not Charge Accomplices. — It was error to quash a bill of indictment under this section which charged the defendant with conspiring "with others" to commit the crime of lynching, because it did not name the others or charge that they were unknown. State v. Lewis, 142 N.C. 626, 55 S.E. 600 (1906).

Indictment in Adjoining County. — In an indictment for lynching it was error to quash the bill on the ground that it appeared on the face of the bill that the offense charged was not committed in the county in which the bill was found, but in an adjoining county. State v. Lewis, 142 N.C. 626, 55 S.E. 600 (1906).

§ 14-221.1. Altering, destroying, or stealing evidence of criminal conduct.

Any person who breaks or enters any building, structure, compartment, vehicle, file, cabinet, drawer, or any other enclosure wherein evidence relevant to any criminal offense or court proceeding is kept or stored with the purpose of altering, destroying or stealing such evidence; or any person who alters, destroys, or steals any evidence relevant to any criminal offense or court proceeding shall be punished as a Class I felon.

As used in this section, the word evidence shall mean any article or document in the possession of a law-enforcement officer or officer of the General Court of Justice being retained for the purpose of being introduced in evidence or having been introduced in evidence or being preserved as evidence. (1975, c. 806, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable by a fine not to exceed five thousand dollars, or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both" at the end of the first paragraph. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Illegal to Destroy Any Relevant Evidence. — This section makes it illegal to destroy evidence no matter what that evidence is (a green vegetable material or actually marijuana) so long as it is "evidence relevant to any criminal offense." State v. Tate, 300 N.C. 180, 265 S.E.2d 223 (1980).

§ 14-221.2. Altering court documents or entering unauthorized judgments.

Any person who without lawful authority intentionally enters a judgment upon or materially alters or changes any criminal or civil process, criminal or civil pleading, or other official case record is guilty of a Class H felony. (1979, c. 526; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 14.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, inserted "Class H" near the end of the section. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-222. Refusal of witness to appear or to testify in investigations of lynchings.

If any person summoned as a witness in the investigation of a charge of lynching shall willfully fail to attend as a witness in obedience to the process served on him, or if, after being sworn, he shall refuse to answer questions pertinent to the matter being investigated before any tribunal, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined or imprisoned, or both, at the discretion of the court. (1893, c. 461, s. 3; Rev., s. 3699; C. S., s. 4377.)

§ 14-223. Resisting officers.

If any person shall willfully and unlawfully resist, delay or obstruct a public officer in discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1889, c. 51, s. 1; Rev., s. 3700; C. S., s. 4378; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. What Constitutes the Offense.
III. Practice and Procedure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Purpose. — The purpose of this section is to enforce orderly conduct in the important mission of preserving the peace, carrying out the judgments and orders of the court, and upholding the dignity of the law and the provisions of this section provide for safeguards that are essential to the welfare of the public. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Constitution Does Not Preclude Prosecution for Violation of Criminal Statute. — The First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution do not preclude prosecution and conviction of a defendant for violation of the provisions of a criminal statute enacted in the public interest. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Persons Aiding and Abetting. — See State v. Morris, 10 N.C. 388 (1824).

"Resist, Delay or Obstruct." — The words "delay" and "obstruct" appear to be synonymous as used in this section. And perhaps the word "resist" would infer more direct and forceful action. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Same — This section will apply to cases falling within any one of the descriptive words, since the words describing the act are joined by the disjunctive (or). State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

In order to convict a person of a violation of this section, the State does not have to show that a defendant resisted, delayed and obstructed an officer. It is sufficient if a defendant unlawfully and willfully resists, or delays, or obstructs an officer. State v. Leigh, 10 N.C. App. 202, 178 S.E.2d 85 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

"Public officer" — An alcoholic beverage control officer is a "public officer" within the meaning of this section. State v. Taft, 256 N.C. 441, 124 S.E.2d 169 (1962).

Same — Collector of Back Tax. — See State v. Alston, 127 N.C. 518, 37 S.E. 137 (1900).

Same — A State highway patrolman, when acting as such, is a public officer within the purview of this section. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

"Discharging a Duty of His Office." — A deputy sheriff is discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office when he begins an investigation of a crime reported to him by eyewitnesses, under circumstances which appear to threaten a further breach of the peace. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

A police officer attempting to preserve the peace by placing the defendant under arrest for disorderly conduct was performing a duty of his office when the defendant resisted arrest. State v. Cunningham, 34 N.C. App, 72, 237 S.E.2d 334 (1977).

"Arrest". — The term "arrest" has a technical meaning, applicable in legal proceedings. It implies that a person is thereby restrained of his liberty by some officer or agent of the law, armed with lawful process, authorizing and requiring the arrest to be made. It is intended to serve, and does serve, the end of bringing the person arrested personally within the custody and control of the law, for the purpose specified in, or contemplated by, the process. State v. Leak, 11 N.C. App. 344, 181 S.E.2d 224 (1971).

In criminal procedure an arrest consists in the taking into custody of another person under real or assumed authority for the purpose of holding or detaining him to answer a criminal charge or of preventing the commission of a criminal offense. State v. Leak, 11 N.C. App. 344, 181 S.E.2d 224 (1971).

An "arrest" does not necessarily terminate the instant a person is taken into custody; arrest also includes "bringing the person personally within the custody and control of the law." State v. Leak, 11 N.C. App. 344, 181 S.E.2d 224 (1971).

The defendant's contention that at the time he was in the magistrate's office his arrest had been consummated, and that the acts alleged to have occurred between the magistrate's office and the jail were not in connection with his arrest, and that, therefore, he was not guilty of resisting arrest, was rejected. State v. Leak, 11 N.C. App. 344, 181 S.E.2d 224 (1971).

Applied in State v. Wells, 259 N.C. 173, 130 S.E.2d 299 (1963); State v. Hollingsworth, 263 N.C. 158, 139 S.E.2d 235 (1964); State v. Maness, 264 N.C. 358, 141 S.E.2d 470 (1965); State v. Hollingsworth, 11 N.C. App. 674, 182 S.E.2d 26 (1971); State v. Speights, 12 N.C. App. 32, 182 S.E.2d 204 (1971); State v. Tilley, 18 N.C. App. 341, 196 S.E.2d 549 (1973); State v. Fuller, 24 N.C. App. 38, 209 S.E.2d 805 (1974); State v. Spellman, 40 N.C. App. 591, 253 S.E.2d 320 (1979); State v. Zigler, 42 N.C. App. 148, 256 S.E.2d 479 (1979); State v. Dudley, 45 N.C. App. 295, 265 S.E.2d 235 (1980).

Wray, 217 N.C. 167, 7 S.E.2d 468 (1940); State v. Waddell, 4 N.C. App. 517, 167 S.E.2d 6 (1969); State v. Speights, 280 N.C. 137, 185 S.E.2d 152 (1971); In re Jacobs, 33 N.C. App. 514, 253 S.E.2d 311 (1979).

II. WHAT CONSTITUTES THE OFFENSE.

Resisting Officer in Performance of Some Duty Is Primary Conduct Proscribed. — In the offense of resisting an officer, the resisting of the public officer in the performance of some duty is the primary conduct proscribed by this section, and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being resisted is of paramount importance and is very material to the preparation of the defense. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320 (1972), appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

There does not have to be an assault on or actual physical interference with the officer in order to constitute a crime under this section. Neither does the conduct of a defendant have to be so effective that it permanently prevents the officer from making his investigation. State v. Leigh, 10 N.C. App. 202, 178 S.E.2d 85 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

No actual assault or force or violence is necessary to complete the offense described by this section. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320 (1972), appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

Resisting Officer and Assaulting Officer Are Separate Offenses. — The charge of resisting an officer and the charge of assaulting a public officer while discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office are separate and distinct offenses and the trial judge did not err in failing to "merge" them. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320, appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

There is a distinction between the offenses of resisting an officer under § 14-223 and assault on an officer under § 14-33(b)(4). In the offense of resisting an officer, the resisting of the public officer in the performance of some duty is the primary conduct proscribed by that statute and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being resisted is of paramount importance and is very material to the preparation of the defendant's defense, while in the offense of assaulting a public officer in the performance of some duty, the assault on the officer is the primary conduct proscribed by the statute and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being assaulted is of secondary importance. State v. Waller, 37 N.C. App. 133, 245 S.E.2d 808 (1978).

Resisting Is Not Lesser Included Offense of Assaulting Officer Where Evidence the Same. — In a prosecution for resisting arrest and assaulting a police officer, the trial court erred in charging the jury that resisting arrest is a lesser included offense of assaulting a police officer where the evidence showed that if the defendant did resist it was by the same means as were charged in the assault case. State v. Hardy, 33 N.C. App. 722, 236 S.E.2d 709, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 363, 238 S.E.2d 150 (1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 298 N.C. 191, 257 S.E.2d 426 (1979).

The offense of unlawfully resisting, delaying or obstructing a public officer in the discharge of a duty of his office, is not a lesser degree of the offense of assaulting a law-enforcement officer while he is discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office. This does not eliminate the possibility that the facts in a given case might constitute a violation of both statutes. In such a case the defendant could not be punished twice for the same conduct. State v. Hardy, 298 N.C. 191, 257 S.E.2d 426 (1979).

Conviction of Both Resisting and Assaulting on Same Evidence Violates Double Jeopardy. — Where the record revealed that defendant was convicted of both resisting arrest and assault on an officer in the performance of his duties on the same evidence, the defendant was twice convicted and sentenced for the same criminal offense. The fact that defendant was given concurrent sentences did not make the duplication of punishment and sentences any less a violation of defendant's constitutional right not to be put in jeopardy twice for the same offense. State v.

Raynor, 33 N.C. App. 698, 236 S.E.2d 307 (1977).

Same — Where Warrants Based on This Section and Former § 14-33(c)(4) Included Same Elements of Offense. — Where a defendant had been tried under two warrants, one for violating this section and the other for violating former § 14-33(c)(4); and where each warrant included all the elements of the offense charged in the other, and each specified only acts of violence which defendant directed at the officer's person while he was attempting to hold defendant in custody; the defendant had been twice convicted and sentenced for the same criminal offense, and the constitutional guaranty against double jeopardy protected him from multiple punishments for the same offense. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972).

Thus State Must Elect between Duplicate Charges. — In a prosecution for resisting arrest and assaulting a police officer, where the warrants charge the same conduct and the evidence clearly shows that no line of demarcation between defendant's resistance of arrest and his assaults upon the officer could be drawn, the assaults being the means by which the resistance was accomplished, the State must elect between the duplicate charges. State v. Hardy, 33 N.C. App. 722, 236 S.E.2d 709, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 363, 238 S.E.2d 150 (1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 298 N.C. 191, 257 S.E.2d 426 (1979).

Duty to Submit Peaceably to Arrest. — When a person has been lawfully arrested by a lawful officer and understands that he is under arrest, it is his duty to submit peaceably to the arrest. State v. Summrell, 13 N.C. App. 1, 185 S.E.2d 241 (1971), aff'd, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972).

Right to Resist Unlawful Arrest. — The offense of resisting arrest presupposes a lawful arrest both a common law and under this section. And every person has the right to resist an unlawful arrest by the use of force. But such right to use force is not unlimited, and only such force may be used as reasonably appears to be necessary to prevent unlawful restraint of liberty. State v. Mobley, 240 N.C. 476, 83 S.E.2d 100 (1954).

When an officer attempts to make an arrest without a warrant and in so doing exceeds his lawful authority, he may be resisted as in self-defense and in such case the person resisting cannot be convicted under this section of the offense of resisting an officer engaged in the discharge of his duties. State v. Wright, 1 N.C. App. 479, 162 S.E.2d 56 (1968); aff'd, 274 N.C. 380, 163 S.E.2d 897 (1968).

Every person has the right to resist an unlawful arrest and he may use such force as reasonably appears to be necessary to prevent the unlawful arrest. State v. Allen, 14 N.C. App. 485, 188 S.E.2d 568 (1972).

The offense of resisting arrest, both at common law and under this section, presupposes a lawful arrest. Every person has the right to resist an unlawful arrest. In such case the person attempting the arrest stands in the position of a wrongdoer and may be resisted by the use of force, as in self-defense. State v. Jefferies, 17 N.C. App. 195, 193 S.E.2d 388 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 673, 194 S.E.2d 153 (1973).

Same — Authority of Officer and Notice to Party. — If the officer has no authority to make the arrest, or having the authority, is not known to be an officer and does not in some way notify the party that he is an officer and has authority, the party arrested may lawfully resist the arrest as if it were made by a private person. State v. Kirby, 24 N.C. 201, (1842); State v. Bryant, 65 N.C. 327 (1871); State v. Belk, 76 N.C. 10 (1877).

Same — Process Must Be Legal. — A person is not liable for resisting an unlawful arrest, as where the warrant lacked a seal and the officer did not state what he arrested him for. State v. Curtis, 2 N.C. 471 (1797).

Where police officers attempt an arrest under an invalid arrest warrant, the person sought to be arrested has a legal right to resist and that, in such instances, in prosecutions for resisting arrest, the defendant's motion for judgment as of nonsuit should be granted. State v. Carroll, 21 N.C. App. 530, 204 S.E.2d 908, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 759, 209 S.E.2d 283 (1974).

Same — Defective Process Sufficient on Its Face. — A person may not resist an arrest by an officer acting under authority of a court process which is sufficient on its face to show its purpose, even though the process may be defective or irregular in some respect. State v. Wright, 1 N.C. App. 479, 162 S.E.2d 56, aff'd, 274 N.C. 380, 163 S.E.2d 897 (1968).

Same — Where Arrestee Not Entitled to Invoke Self-Help. — Where a patrolman, while not engaged in any patrol of the highway for purposes of observing traffic or making random license checks, spontaneously decided to stop petitioner, not while petitioner was "on a public highway" nor while petitioner was operating a vehicle, but instead while petitioner was in a private driveway, although petitioner would have had a meritorious defense to any prosecution based on failure to display his license, he was not entitled to invoke self-help against what was, at the time, an arguably lawful arrest, and petitioner's conviction for assaulting the highway patrolman can survive despite the finding that the officer's initial stop and demand were illegal as an unreasonable search and seizure under the Fourth Amendment. Keziah v. Bostic, 452 F. Supp. 912 (W.D.N.C. 1978).

Right to Resist Illegal Entry. — Defendant is not liable for assault and battery for resisting an entry into her house by an officer armed with a warrant which had once been served and returned, though defendant had entered into a recognizance and failed to appear. State v. Queen, 66 N.C. 615 (1872).

Decisions of the Supreme Court recognize the right to resist illegal conduct of an officer and officers have no duty to make an illegal entry into a person's home. Hence, one who resists an illegal entry is not resisting an officer in the discharge of the duties of his office. These views are in accordance with the ancient rules of the common law and are predicated on the constitutional principle that a person's home is his castle. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970).

Conduct Not Constituting Obstruction of Officer. — Merely remonstrating with an officer in behalf of another, or criticizing or questioning an officer while he is performing his duty, when done in an orderly manner, does not amount to obstructing or delaying an officer in the performance of his duties. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Citizen may advise another of his constitutional rights in an orderly and peaceable manner while the officer is performing his duty without necessarily obstructing or delaying the officer in the performance of his duty. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Merely remonstrating with an officer in behalf of another, or criticizing an officer while he is performing his duty, does not amount to obstructing, hindering, or interfering with an officer. State v. Allen, 14 N.C. App. 485, 188 S.E.2d 568 (1972).

Vague, intemperate language used without apparent purpose is not sufficient to constitute the offense of resisting, delaying and obstructing an officer. State v. Allen, 14 N.C. App. 485, 188 S.E.2d 568 (1972).

Where defendant was merely arguing with the officer and protesting the confiscation of his property, he had committed no offense and the officer had no authority to arrest him. State v. Allen, 14 N.C. App. 485, 188 S.E.2d 568 (1972).

Preventing Road Overseer Cutting Ditch. — See State v. New, 130 N.C. 731, 41 S.E. 1033 (1902).

III. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Warrant or Indictment Allegations Required. — A warrant or bill of indictment charging a violation of this section must identify the officer by name and indicate the official duty he was discharging or attempting to discharge, and should point out, in a general way at least, the manner in which the defendant is charged with having resisted, delayed, or obstructed such officer. State v. Smith, 262 N.C. 472, 137 S.E.2d 819 (1964).

A warrant charging a violation of this section must, in addition to formal parts, the name of accused, the date of the offense, and the county or locality in which it was alleged to have been committed: (a) identify by name the person alleged to have been resisted, delayed or obstructed, and described his official character with sufficient certainty to show that he was a public officer within the purview of the statute; (b) indicate the official duty he was discharging or attempting to discharge; and (c) state in a general way the manner in which accused resisted or delayed or obstructed such officer. State v. Fenner, 263 N.C. 694, 140 S.E.2d 349 (1965); State v. Wiggs, 269 N.C. 507, 153 S.E.2d 84 (1967).

In charging a violation of this section, it is necessary that the warrant or indictment, in addition to other essentials, set forth the official duty the designated officer was discharging or attempting to discharge, and must point out, in a general way at least, the manner in which defendant is charged with having resisted or delayed or obstructed such public officer. It must also allege the identity of the officer alleged to have been resisted and describe his official character with sufficient certainty to show that he is a public officer. State v. White, 3 N.C. App. 443, 165 S.E.2d 19 (1969).

The prerequisites of the affidavit portion of a warrant properly charging the offense of resisting arrest are set forth in State v. Wiggs, 269 N.C. 507, 153 S.E.2d 84 (1967) and State v. Fenner, 263 N.C. 694, 140 S.E.2d 349 (1965). State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

One of the prerequisites of the affidavit portion of a warrant properly charging the offense of resisting arrest is that the affidavit upon which the order of arrest is based shall identify by name the person alleged to have been resisted, delayed or obstructed, and describe his official character with sufficient certainty to show that he was a public officer within the purview of the statute. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

In order to properly charge an assault, there must be a victim named, since by failing to name the particular person assaulted, the defendant would not be protected from a subsequent prosecution for assault upon a named person. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

For a warrant to charge a defendant with resisting, delaying, or obstructing an officer in discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office in violation of this section, the warrant must indicate the official duty the officer was discharging or attempting to discharge. State v. Waller, 37 N.C. App. 133, 245 S.E.2d 808 (1978).

Same — Held Sufficient. — Warrant charging that defendant did resist, delay, and obstruct named police officers in the making of a lawful arrest "by shoving said officers and refusing to go" is sufficient to charge a violation of this section. State v. White, 3 N.C. App. 443, 165 S.E.2d 19 (1969).

Same — Held Insufficient. — The charge that defendant "did resist arrest" neither charges the offense in the language of this section, nor specifically sets forth the facts constituting the offense created by the section. It is wholly insufficient to support the verdict and judgment rendered. State v. Raynor, 235 N.C. 184, 69 S.E.2d 155 (1952).

A warrant alleging that defendant unlawfully and willfully violated the laws of North Carolina by resisting arrest is insufficient to charge the offense proscribed by this section. State v. Raynor, 235 N.C. 184, 69 S.E.2d 155 (1952); State v. Thorne, 238 N.C. 392, 78 S.E.2d 140 (1953). This allegation and the additional allegation that the defendant interfered "with an officer while legally performing the duties of his office" do not suffice to impute to defendant a violation of the section. These allegations do not describe the official character of the person alleged to have been resisted with sufficient certainty to show that he was a public officer within the purview of the statute. State v. Jenkins, 238 N.C. 396, 77 S.E.2d 796 (1953).

An indictment charging that defendant did unlawfully "resist, delay and obstruct a public officer in discharge and attempting to discharge the duty of his office ..." is insufficient to charge the offense of resisting arrest. State v. Scott, 241 N.C. 178, 84 S.E.2d 654 (1954).

Indictment is fatally defective though it identifies public officer by name where it fails to indicate the official duty he was discharging or attempting to discharge and does not point out even in a general way the manner in which the defendant is charged with having resisted or delayed or obstructed such public officer. State v. Eason, 242 N.C. 59, 86 S.E.2d 774 (1955); State v. Harvey, 242 N.C. 111, 86 S.E.2d 793 (1955). See State v. Stonestreet, 243 N.C. 28, 89 S.E.2d 734 (1955).

An indictment charging defendant with resisting an officer in the language of this section is insufficient. State v. Barnes, 253 N.C. 711, 117 S.E.2d 849 (1961).

A bill of indictment is defective that does not charge the official duty the named officer was discharging or attempting to discharge. State v. Dunston, 256 N.C. 203, 123 S.E.2d 480 (1962).

Warrant held insufficient to charge a violation of this section. State v. White, 266 N.C. 361, 145 S.E.2d 872 (1966).

The warrant in the instant case was fatally defective and void because of the combination of failing to identify the assaulted officer by name in the affidavit and failing to order the defendant arrested in the order of arrest. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

An instrument setting forth the charge of assault by the use of the words "assault on an officer" to identify the person assaulted was not sufficient to charge the offense of assault. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

A "North Carolina Uniform Traffic Ticket" setting forth the charge of resisting arrest by using only the two words "resist arrest," was not sufficient to charge the offense. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Same — An order granting motion to amend warrant so as to charge the violation in the words of the statute cannot cure fatal defects in the warrant in failing to charge the offense when the amendment is not actually made, since neither the motion nor the order sets out the contemplated wording of the proposed amendment and therefore could not be self-executing. State v. Thorne, 238 N.C. 392, 78 S.E.2d 140 (1953); State v. Jenkins, 238 N.C. 396, 77 S.E.2d 796 (1953).

Same — Indictment in Two Counts. — An indictment having two counts, one against one person under this section, and the other against several persons under former § 14-224, was defective, but where not objected to before a verdict which convicted on one count and acquitted on the other, was not sufficient grounds for arrest of judgment, as the acquittal was equivalent to a nol. pros. State v. Perdue, 107 N.C. 853, 12 S.E. 253 (1890).

Same — Quashing Indictment if Sufficient to Convict of Assault. — Where an indictment for resisting an officer is defective, as such, it ought not to be quashed if the defendant may be convicted thereon for a simple assault. State v. Dunn, 109 N.C. 839, 13 S.E. 881 (1891).

Evidence — Presumption of Validity of Arrest. — Failure of State to introduce evidence tending to prove validity of warrant of arrest, in a prosecution for resisting arrest, does not justify nonsuit when defendant does not challenge the validity of the warrant, since, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the warrant and order of arrest were legally adequate. State v. Honeycutt, 237 N.C. 595, 75 S.E.2d 525 (1953).

Same — Sufficiency. — Where the evidence is sufficient for the jury to find that a defendant unlawfully and willfully, by loud and abusive language directed at an officer, delayed him in making his investigation, this requires the submission of the case to the jury. State v. Leigh, 10 N.C. App. 202, 178 S.E.2d 85 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Conceding that no actual violence or force was used by defendant, there was plenary evidence to support a jury finding that defendant did by his actions and language delay and obstruct the officer in the performance of his duties. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Instructions. — In prosecution charging resisting lawful arrest in violation of this section, statement of the trial court during the instructions that "the offense charged here was committed in violation of § 14-223" was held to constitute an expression of opinion. State v. Cooper, 4 N.C. App. 210, 166 S.E.2d 509 (1969).

Same — Right of Self-Defense. — While a defendant was not charged with assaulting an officer, where the actions which he contends he took in self-defense are those which the warrants charge constitute the unlawful interference and the resistance to arrest, the jury should have been properly charged on the principle of self-defense under this factual situation and if they were satisfied defendant was legitimately exercising a right of self-defense it would be their duty to acquit him, not simply to take it into consideration in arriving at their verdict as the court charged. State v. May, 8 N.C. App. 423, 174 S.E.2d 633 (1970).

Where, in a prosecution charging defendant with resisting arrest and with obstructing an officer in the performance of his duties, the defendant offered evidence that the officer had struck the first blow and that defendant was forced in self-defense to take the actions which resulted in the charges against him, the trial court should have instructed the jury to acquit defendant if they found that he was legitimately exercising a right of self-defense; the court's instruction merely that the jury "will take into consideration in arriving at your verdict" the defendant's lawful exercise of self-defense, is insufficient and is reversible error. State v. May, 8 N.C. App. 423, 174 S.E.2d 633 (1970).

Cross References. — See Editor's note following the analysis to Chapter 15. For present provisions as to assistance to law-enforcement officers by private persons, see § 15A-405.

§ 14-225. False, etc., reports to police radio broadcasting stations.

Any person who shall willfully make or cause to be made to a police radio broadcasting station any false, misleading or unfounded report, for the purpose of interfering with the operation thereof, or to hinder or obstruct any peace officer in the performance of his duty, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1941, c. 363; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on this enactment, see 19 N.C.L. Rev. 477.

§ 14-225.1. Picketing or parading.

Any person who, with intent to interfere with, obstruct, or impede the administration of justice, or with intent to influence any justice or judge of the General Court of Justice, juror, witness, district attorney, assistant district attorney, or court officer, in the discharge of his duty, pickets, parades, or uses any sound truck or similar device within 300 feet of an exit from any building housing any court of the General Court of Justice, or within 300 feet of any building or residence occupied or used by such justice, judge, juror, witness, district attorney, assistant district attorney, or court officer, shall upon plea or conviction be guilty of a misdemeanor and imprisoned for not more than two years or fined not more than one thousand dollars ($1000), or both. (1977, c. 266, s. 1.)

§ 14-225.2. Harassment of and communication with jurors.

(a) If a person, with intent to influence the official action of another as a juror, communicates with him other than as part of the proceedings in a case, or harasses or alarms him, he is guilty of a Class I felony. Conduct directed against the juror's spouse or other relative residing in the same household with the juror constitutes conduct directed against the juror.

(b) In this section "juror" means a grand juror or a petit juror and includes a person who has been drawn or summoned to attend as a prospective juror. (1977, c. 711, s. 16; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 15.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class I felony" for "felony punishable by fine, imprisonment up to five years, or both" at the end of the first sentence in subsection (a). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-226. Intimidating or interfering with witnesses.

If any person shall by threats, menaces or in any other manner intimidate or attempt to intimidate any person who is summoned or acting as a witness in any of the courts of this State, or prevent or deter, or attempt to prevent or deter any person summoned or acting as such witness from attendance upon such court, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court. (1891, c. 87; Rev., s. 3696; C. S., s. 4380; 1977, c. 711, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

In General. — This section is additional to and not a repeal of the inherent power of the court to protect itself from interference by bribery or intimidation of its jurors or witnesses in both civil and criminal cases. In re Young, 137 N.C. 552, 50 S.E. 220 (1905).

The gist of the offense under this section is the obstruction of justice. State v. Neely, 4 N.C. App. 475, 166 S.E.2d 878 (1969).

It is an offense, at common law, to dissuade or prevent, or to attempt to dissuade or prevent, a witness from attending or testifying on the trial of a cause, and such conduct may be made an offense by statute. The gist of the offense is the willful and corrupt attempt to interfere with and obstruct the administration of justice. State v. Neely, 4 N.C. App. 475, 166 S.E.2d 878 (1969).

It is immaterial that person procured to absent himself was not regularly summoned or legally bound to attend as a witness. State v. Neely, 4 N.C. App. 475, 166 S.E.2d 878 (1969).

Cited in State v. Hodge, 142 N.C. 665, 55 S.E. 626 (1906).

§ 14-226.1. Violating orders of court.

Any person who shall willfully disobey or violate any injunction, restraining order, or any order lawfully issued by any court for the purpose of maintaining or restoring public safety and public order, or to afford protection for lives or property during times of a public crisis, disaster, riot, catastrophe, or when such condition is imminent, or for the purpose of preventing and abating disorderly conduct as defined in G.S. 14-288.4 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined not more than two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00) or imprisoned for not more than 30 days, or both, in the discretion of the court. This section shall not in any manner affect the court's power to punish for contempt. (1969, c. 1128.)

§ 14-227. Failing to attend as witness before legislative committees.

If any person shall willfully fail or refuse to attend or produce papers, on summons of any committee of investigation of either house of the General Assembly, either select or committee of the whole, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction in the superior court of the county in which such witness may reside or be found, he shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars ($500.00) nor more than one thousand dollars ($1,000), and shall be subject to imprisonment at the discretion of the court. (1869-70, c. 5, s. 2; Code, s. 2854; Rev., s. 3692; C. S., s. 4381.)

Article 30A.

Secret Listening.

§ 14-227.1. Secret listening to conference between prisoner and his attorney.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person willfully to overhear, or procure any other person to overhear, or attempt to overhear any spoken words between a person who is in the physical custody of a law-enforcement agency or other public agency and such person's attorney, by using any electronic amplifying, transmitting, or recording device, or by any similar or other mechanical or electrical device or arrangement, without the consent or knowledge of all persons engaging in the conversation.

(b) No evidence procured in violation of this section shall be admissible over objection against any person participating in such conference in any court in this State. (1967, c. 187, s. 1.)

§ 14-227.2. Secret listening to deliberations of grand or petit jury.

It shall be unlawful for any person willfully to overhear, or procure any other person to overhear, or attempt to overhear the investigations and deliberations of, or the taking of votes by, a grand jury or a petit jury in a criminal case, by using any electronic amplifying, transmitting, or recording device, or by any similar or other mechanical or electrical device or arrangement, without the consent or knowledge of said grand jury or petit jury. (1967, c. 187, s. 1.)

§ 14-227.3. Violation made misdemeanor.

All persons violating the provisions of G.S. 14-227.1 or 14-227.2 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1967, c. 187, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6.)

ARTICLE 31.

Misconduct in Public Office.

§ 14-228. Buying and selling offices.

If any person shall bargain away or sell an office or deputation of an office, or any part or parcel thereof, or shall take money, reward or other profit, directly or indirectly, or shall take any promise, covenant, bond or assurance for money, reward or other profit, for an office or the deputation of an office, or any part thereof, which office, or any part thereof, shall touch or concern the administration or execution of justice, or the receipt, collection, control or disbursement of the public revenue, or shall concern or touch any clerkship in any court of record wherein justice is administered; or if any person shall give or pay money, reward or other profit, or shall make any promise, agreement, bond or assurance for any of such offices, or for the deputation of any of them, or for any part of them, the person so offending in any of the cases aforesaid shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall forfeit all his right, interest and estate in such office, and every part and parcel thereof, and shall be imprisoned and fined at the discretion of the court. (5, 6 Edw. VI, c. 16, ss. 1, 5; R. C., c. 34, s. 33; Code, s. 998; Rev., s. 3571; C. S., s. 4382.)

Cross References. — As to sheriff letting to farm his office, see § 162-24. As to validity of bargain to sell in office, see § 128-3.

§ 14-229. Acting as officer before qualifying as such.

If any officer shall enter on the duties of his office before he executes and delivers to the authority entitled to receive the same the bonds required by law, and qualifies by taking and subscribing and filing in the proper office the oath of office prescribed, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be ejected from his office. (Code, s. 79; Rev., s. 3565; C. S., s. 4383.)

§ 14-230. Willfully failing to discharge duties.

If any clerk of any court of record, sheriff, magistrate, county commissioner, county surveyor, coroner, treasurer, or official of any of the State institutions, or of any county, city or town, shall willfully omit, neglect or refuse to discharge any of the duties of his office, for default whereof it is not elsewhere provided that he shall be indicted, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. If it shall be proved that such officer, after his qualification, willfully and corruptly omitted, neglected or refused to discharge any of the duties of his office, or willfully and corruptly violated his oath of office according to the true intent and meaning thereof, such officer shall be guilty of misbehavior in office, and shall be punished by removal therefrom under the sentence of the court as a part of the punishment for the offense, and shall also be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court. (1901, c. 270, s. 2; Rev., s. 3592; C. S., s. 4384; 1943, c. 347; 1973, c. 108, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

In General. — The law will not countenance or condone any attempt to defy its mandates. The private citizen must obey the law, and the public officer is not exempt from this duty by any special privilege appertaining to his office. He is not wiser than the law, nor is he above it. The truth is, that if he willfully neglects or omits to perform a public duty, he is liable to indictment at common law. State v. Commissioners, 4 N.C. 419 (1816); State v. Williams, 34 N.C. 172 (1851); State v. Haywood 48 N.C. 399 (1856); State v. Furguson, 76 N.C. 197 (1877). If the neglect, omission, or refusal to discharge any of his official duties is willful and corrupt, it is criminal misbehavior, and subjects him to indictment for a misdemeanor and punishment by fine or imprisonment, and, as a part of the penalty, to removal from office. State ex rel. Battle v. City of Rocky Mount, 156 N.C. 329, 72 S.E. 354 (1911).

History of Section. — See State v. Hord, 264 N.C. 149, 141 S.E.2d 241 (1965).

Effect of Section on Common-Law Crime of Official Oppression. — It is futile to attempt to mark the extent, if any, the common-law crime of official oppression has been modified or superseded by this section, as there is no exact common-law definition of official oppression, and the possible acts which may constitute the crime are as many and varied as the forms of corruption that may exist in public office. State v. Lackey, 271 N.C. 171, 155 S.E.2d 465 (1967).

An essential difference between a public office and mere employment is the fact that the duties of the incumbent of an office shall involve the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power. State v. Hord, 264 N.C. 149, 141 S.E.2d 241 (1965).

Willful Neglect and Injury to Public Required. — It is to be observed that the essentials of the crime as prescribed are: first, a willful neglect in the discharge of official duty; and second, injury to the public. State v. Anderson, 196 N.C. 771, 147 S.E. 305 (1929).

Liability for Honest Errors. — It is so well settled that there is nothing to the contrary that an officer who has to exercise his judgment or discretion is not liable criminally for any error which he commits, provided he acts honestly. State v. Powers, 75 N.C. 281 (1876).

If the illegal act be done mala fide, then it becomes a crime, and the officer liable both civilly and criminally, but if free of any wicked intent, then he is civilly liable only. State v. Snuggs, 85 N.C. 541 (1881).

Accused Must Show Good Faith. — Where a public officer is indicted for failure to perform a duty required by law, the law raises a presumption that such failure is willful, and makes it incumbent upon him to rebut the presumption. State v. Heaton, 77 N.C. 505 (1877).

And Public Will Be Protected Against Carelessness. — However honest the defendants may be (and their honesty is not called in question) the public have a right to be protected against the wrongful conduct of their servants, if there is carelessness amounting to a willful want of care in the discharge of their official duties, which injuries the public. State v. Anderson, 196 N.C. 771, 147 S.E. 305 (1929).

A duly appointed policeman of a city is an officer of such city within the meaning of this section. State v. Fesperman, 264 N.C. 160, 141 S.E.2d 255 (1965); State v. Teeter, 264 N.C. 162, 141 S.E.2d 253 (1965); State v. Stogner, 264 N.C. 163, 141 S.E.2d 248 (1965); State v. Fesperman, 264 N.C. 168, 141 S.E.2d 252 (1965).

As Is Chief of Police. — A chief of police as well as a policeman is an officer of the municipality which engages his services, within the meaning of the provisions of this section. State v. Hord, 264 N.C. 149, 141 S.E.2d 241 (1965).

And Captain of Detectives. — A captain of detectives of a police department of a city is an officer of such city within the meaning of this section. State v. McCall, 264 N.C. 165, 141 S.E.2d 250 (1965).

Proceedings of Forfeiture under § 1-515. — Forfeiture cannot be enforced by judgment of a motion from office as a part of the punishment, where the clerk has been convicted of a misdemeanor, under this section in willfully neglecting to discharge the duties of his office, but proceedings of forfeiture must be under § 1-515. State v. Norman, 82 N.C. 687 (1880).

Sufficiency of Bill of Indictment. — See State v. Hord, 264 N.C. 149, 141 S.E.2d 241 (1965); State v. Teeter, 264 N.C. 162, 141 S.E.2d 253 (1965); State v. Stogner, 264 N.C. 163, 141 S.E.2d 248 (1965); State v. McCall, 264 N.C. 165, 141 S.E.2d 250 (1965).

It is required that the indictment under this section sufficiently charge the offense of which such officer is accused; and where the action is against the superintendent of a State hospital for the insane, and the indictment charges that he removed or caused to be removed patients to his private farm and caused them to be worked thereon, without allegation of injury to the public or to the patients, or of personal gain to the defendant, the indictment fails to charge facts sufficient to constitute an offense under the statute, and defendant's motion in arrest of judgment should be allowed. State v. Anderson, 196 N.C. 771, 147 S.E. 305 (1929).

Allegation of Corrupt Intent Not Necessary. — It is not necessary to allege corrupt intent in a bill of indictment against county commissioners for neglect of duty in providing a necessary courthouse, and it is sufficient if the words of the statute are followed. State v. Loeper, 146 N.C. 655, 61 S.E. 585 (1908).

Warrant Falling Short of Alleging Malfeasance in Office in Violation of Section. — See Hawkins v. Reynolds, 236 N.C. 422, 72 S.E.2d 874 (1952).

Applied in State v. Hucks, 264 N.C. 160, 141 S.E.2d 299 (1965).

§ 14-231. Failing to make reports and discharge other duties.

If any State or county officer shall fail, neglect or refuse to make, file or publish any report, statement or other paper, or to deliver to his successor all books and other property belonging to his office, or to pay over or deliver to the proper person all moneys which come into his hands by virtue or color of his office, or to discharge any duty devolving upon him by virtue of his office and required of him by law, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (Rev., s. 3576; C. S., s. 4385.)

CASE NOTES

Injurious Effect Not Necessary. — The crime exists although no injurious effects result to any individual because of the misconduct of the officer. State v. Glasgow, 1 N.C. 176 (1800).

Honesty of Purpose. — There may be neglect without corruption. Therefore honesty of purpose is not a full defense under this section. Turner v. McKee, 137 N.C. 251, 49 S.E. 330 (1904).

Enforcing Unconstitutional Law. — An officer is not liable for obeying the mandates of an unconstitutional statute. State v. Godwin, 123 N.C. 697, 31 S.E. 221 (1898).

Manager of Elections. — Any conduct of the manager of a primary election for county officials which interferes with the freedom or purity of the election is punishable at common law, and under this section. State v. Cole, 156 N.C. 618, 72 S.E. 221 (1911).

§ 14-232. Swearing falsely to official reports.

If any clerk, sheriff, register of deeds, county commissioner, county treasurer, magistrate or other county officer shall willfully swear falsely to any report or statement required by law to be made or filed, concerning or touching the county, State or school revenue, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1874-5, c. 151, s. 4; 1876-7, c. 276, s. 4; Code, s. 731; Rev., s. 3605; C. S., s. 4386; 1973, c. 108, s. 6.)

§ 14-233. Making of false report by bank examiners; accepting bribes.

If any bank examiner shall knowingly and willfully make any false or fraudulent report of the condition of any bank, which shall have been examined by him, with the intent to aid or abet the officers, owners, or agents of such bank in continuing to operate an insolvent bank, or if any such examiner shall keep or accept any bribe or gratuity given for the purpose of inducing him not to file any report of examination of any bank made by him, or shall neglect to make an examination of any bank by reason of having received or accepted any bribe or gratuity, he shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1903, c. 275, s. 24; Rev., s. 3324; 1921, c. 4, s. 79; C. S., s. 4387; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1; as to bank examiners making false reports, see also § 53-124.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be imprisoned in the State prison for not less than four months nor more than ten years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-234. Director of public trust contracting for his own benefit; participation in business transaction involving public funds; exemptions.

(a) If any person appointed or elected a commissioner or director to discharge any trust wherein the State or any county, city or town may be in any manner interested shall become an undertaker, or make any contract for his own benefit, under such authority, or be in any manner concerned or interested in making such contract, or in the profits thereof, either privately or openly, singly or jointly with another, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Provided, that this section shall not apply to public officials transacting business with banks or banking institutions or savings and loan associations or public utilities regulated under the provisions of Chapter 62 of the General Statutes in regular course of business: Provided further, that such undertaking or contracting shall be authorized by said governing board by specific resolution on which such public official shall not vote.

(b) Nothing in this section nor in any general principle of common law shall render unlawful the acceptance of remuneration from a governmental board, agency or commission for services, facilities, or supplies furnished directly to needy individuals by a member of said board, agency or commission under any program of direct public assistance being rendered under the laws of this State or the United States to needy persons administered in whole or in part by such board, agency or commission; provided, however, that such programs of public assistance to needy persons are open to general participation on a nondiscriminatory basis to the practitioners of any given profession, professions or occupation; and provided further that the board, agency or commission, nor any of its employees or agents, shall have no control over who, among licensed or qualified providers, shall be selected by the beneficiaries of the assistance, and that the remuneration for such services, facilities or supplies shall be in the same amount as would be paid to any other provider; and provided further that, although the board, agency or commission member may participate in making determinations of eligibility of needy persons to receive the assistance, he shall take no part in approving his own bill or claim for remuneration.

(c) No director, board member, commissioner, or employee of any State department, agency, or institution shall directly or indirectly enter into or otherwise participate in any business transaction involving public funds with any firm, corporation, partnership, person or association which at any time during the preceding two-year period employed or otherwise had a financial association with such director, board member, commissioner or employee.

(d) The provisions of subsection (c) shall not apply to any transactions meeting the requirements of Article 3, Chapter 143 of the General Statutes or any other transaction specifically authorized by the Advisory Budget Commission.

(d1) The first sentence of subsection (a) shall not apply to (i) any elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office of a village, town, or city having a population of no more than 7,500 according to the most recent official federal census, (ii) any elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office of a county within which there is located no village, town, or city with a population of more than 7,500 according to the most recent official federal census, (iii) any elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office on a city board of education in a city having a population of no more than 7,500 according to the most recent official federal census, (iv) any elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office as a member of a county board of education in a county within which there is located no village, town or city with a population of more than 7,500 according to the most recent official federal census, and (v) any physician, pharmacist, or dentist appointed to a county social services board, local health board, or area mental health board serving one or more counties within which there is located no village, town, or city with a population of more than 7,500 according to the most recent official federal census if:

(1) The undertaking or contract or series of undertakings or contracts between the village, town, city, county, county social services board, county or city board of education, local health board or area mental health, mental retardation, and substance abuse board and one of its officials is approved by specific resolution of the governing body adopted in an open and public meeting, and recorded in its minutes and the amount does not exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000) for medically related services and five thousand dollars ($5,000) for other goods or services within a 12-month period; and

(2) The official entering into the contract or undertaking with the unit or agency does not in his official capacity participate in any way or vote; and

(3) The total annual amount of undertakings or contracts with each official, shall be specifically noted in the audited annual financial statement of the village, town, city, or county; and

(4) The governing board of any village, town, city, county, county social services board, county or city board of education, local health board, or area mental health, mental retardation, and substance abuse board which undertakes or contracts with any of the officials of their governmental unit shall post in a conspicuous place in its village, town, or city hall, or courthouse, as the case may be, a list of all such officials with whom such undertakings or contracts have been made, briefly describing the subject matter of the undertakings or contracts and showing their total amounts; this list shall cover the preceding 12 months and shall be brought up-to-date at least quarterly.

(d2) The provision of subsection (d1) shall not apply to contracts required by Article 8 of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes, Public Building Contracts.

(e) Anyone violating this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1825, c. 1269, P. R.; 1826, c. 29; R. C., c. 34, s. 38; Code, s. 1011; Rev., s. 3572; C. S., s. 4388; 1929, c. 19, s. 1; 1969, c. 1027; 1975, c. 409; 1977, cc. 240, 761; 1979, c. 720; 1981, c. 103, ss. 1, 2, 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, in subdivision (d1) designated former clause (iii) of the introductory paragraph as clause (v) and added present clauses (iii) and (iv) and inserted "county or city board of education," near the beginning of subdivision (1) and near the beginning of subdivision (4). The amendment also added subdivision (d2).

CASE NOTES

Public Policy of State. — The General Assembly in adopting this section made the condemnation of the transactions embraced within its terms a part of the public policy of the State so as to remove from public officials the temptation to take advantage of their official positions to "feather their own nests" by letting to themselves or to firms or corporations in which they are interested contracts for services, materials, supplies, or the like. Lexington Insulation Co. v. Davidson County, 243 N.C. 252, 90 S.E.2d 496 (1955).

Effect of Special Validating Act. — Although municipal bonds were sold to a corporation controlled by the mayor, an act passed by the legislature expressly confirming and validating the sale removes all objections based upon the violation of the provisions of this section. Starmount Co. v. Ohio Sav. Bank & Trust Co., 55 F.2d 649 (4th Cir. 1932).

Denial of Recovery on Quantum Meruit Basis. — The courts not only will declare void and unenforceable any contract between a public official, or a board of which he is a member, and himself, or a company in which he is financially interested, whereby he stands to gain by the transaction, but it will also deny recovery on a quantum meruit basis. Lexington Insulation Co. v. Davidson County, 243 N.C. 252, 90 S.E.2d 496 (1955).

Officer of Both City and Corporation. — The prohibition of this section extends to an officer of a corporation in making contracts between the corporation and the city of which he is commissioner or alderman. State v. Williams, 153 N.C. 595, 68 S.E. 900 (1910); Lexington Insulation Co. v. Davidson County, 243 N.C. 252, 90 S.E.2d 496 (1955).

Contracts with city when an alderman is an employee of the other contracting party are not covered by the section. State v. Weddell, 153 N.C. 597, 68 S.E. 897 (1910).

Sale to Corporation Organized by Advisor to Municipality. — Under this statute a contract of sale does not become void because the purchasing corporation was organized through the efforts of a person who had a merely advisory relationship to a municipal corporation. Tonkins v. City of Greensboro, 276 F.2d 890 (4th Cir. 1960).

Contracts for Benefit of County. — A sheriff is not guilty of a misdemeanor where he purchases county claims at less than their value, but for the benefit of the county, at the instance of the county commissioners. State v. Garland, 134 N.C. 749, 47 S.E. 426 (1904).

Service to Body of Which Officer is a Member. — A member of the board of county commissioners cannot recover for services rendered the board in inspecting a bridge. Davidson v. Guilford County, 152 N.C. 436, 67 S.E. 918 (1910).

When County Commissioners Who Run Grocery Stores May Authorize Food Stamp Program. — County commissioners who run grocery stores may authorize food stamp program if the specifics from the exemption from this section for public assistance programs are complied with. Opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Clifford L. Moore, Jr., 41 N.C.A.G. 530 (1971).

Member of County Board of Elections May Not Serve as Executive Secretary of That Board. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Ed McKnight, N.C. House of Representatives, 41 N.C.A.G. 577 (1971).

Services Donated as County Employee Do Not Create a Conflict of Interest Where the Same Person Is a County Commissioner. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Charles H. Taylor, N.C. General Assembly, 41 N.C.A.G. 765 (1972).

When County Director of Social Services May Serve on Board of Nonprofit Corporation Administering CETA Funds. — A conflict of interest does not arise if a county director of social services serves as a member of the board of directors of a nonprofit corporation organized for the purpose of administering federal funds under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (29 USC, Ch. 17; Pub. L. 93-203 (1973); Pub. L. 95-524 (1978)), when: (a) The nonprofit corporation will administer federal funds through community programs to which the county department of social services may refer social services clients; (b) The county department of social services is a potential recipient, through the nonprofit corporation, of federal funds, of services by employees of the nonprofit corporation and of training of social service employees; (c) The director, as a member of the board of the nonprofit corporation, will approve, or establish policy for entering into, contracts, including contracts with the county department of social services; and (d) Neither the county director of social services nor any member of his immediate family will realize any direct or indirect benefits by reason of any contractual or other relationship between the county department of social services and the nonprofit corporation. See opinion of Attorney General to Robert H. Ward, Director, Division of Social Services, Dep't of Human Resources and William W. Ivey, County Att'y for Randolph County, 49 N.C.A.G. 102 (1980).

Or When Person May Be Member of Two Nonprofit Corporations. — A conflict of interest does not arise if an individual, who is not a public official, serves as a member of the board of directors of a nonprofit corporation organized for the purpose of administering federal funds under CETA and at the same time serves as a member of the board of directors of another nonprofit corporation organized for the purpose of administering programs for the aging (Ch. 143B, Art. 3, Part 14, N.C.G.S.; 42 USC, Ch. 35; Pub. L. 89-73, as amended), when the circumstances and relationships between the corporations will be similar to those required for directors of social services serving on board of nonprofit corporation administering CETA funds. See opinion of Attorney General to Robert H. Ward, Director, Div. of Social Services, Dep't of Human Resources and William W. Ivey, County Att'y for Randolph County, 49 N.C.A.G. 102 (1980).

This section does prohibit a person from serving both on the Hyde County Board of Health and the Hyde Rural Health Corporation Board of Directors. See opinion of Attorney General to Cliff Swindell, County Manager, Hyde County, 50 N.C.A.G. 12 (1980).

A prohibited conflict of interest may occur when a funeral home in which the chairman of the county board of social services holds a pecuniary interest enters into a contract with the county department of social services to provide funeral and burial services for a ward or juvenile under the jurisdiction or custody of the county department of social services. See opinion of Attorney General to Timothy W. Howard, Attorney for Sampson County Department of Social Services, 49 N.C.A.G. 108 (1980).

§ 14-235. Speculating in claims against towns, cities and the State.

If any clerk, sheriff, register of deeds, county treasurer or other county, city, town or State officer shall engage in the purchasing of any county, city, town or State claim, including teacher's salary voucher, at a less price than its full and true value or at any rate of discount thereon, or be interested in any speculation on any such claim, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1868-9, c. 260; Code, s. 1009; Rev., s. 3575; C. S., s. 4389; 1923, c. 136, s. 208; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6.)

§ 14-236. Acting as agent for those furnishing supplies for schools and other State institutions.

If any member of any board of directors, board of managers, board of trustees of any of the educational, charitable, eleemosynary or penal institutions of the State, or any member of any board of education, or any county or district superintendent or examiner of teachers, or any trustee of any school or other institution supported in whole or in part from any of the public funds of the State, or any officer, agent, manager, teacher or employee of such boards, shall have any pecuniary interest, either directly or indirectly, proximately or remotely in supplying any goods, wares or merchandise of any nature or kind whatsoever for any of said institutions or schools; or if any of such officers, agents, managers, teachers or employees of such institution or school or State or county officer shall act as agent for any manufacturer, merchant, dealer, publisher or author for any article of merchandise to be used by any of said institutions or schools; or shall receive, directly or indirectly, any gift, emolument, reward or promise of reward for his influence in recommending or procuring the use of any manufactured article, goods, wares or merchandise of any nature or kind whatsoever by any of such institutions or schools, he shall be forthwith removed from his position in the public service, and shall upon conviction be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) and be imprisoned, in the discretion of the court.

This section shall not apply to members of any board of education which is subject to and complies with the provisions of G.S. 14-234(d1). (1897, c. 543; 1899, c. 732, s. 73; Rev., s. 3833; C. S., s. 4390; 1981, c. 103, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment added the second paragraph.

CASE NOTES

Purchase of Property from Company Owned by Wife. — A member of the board of education of a county is not guilty under this section for voting as such member for the purchase of school buses from a company selling them owned by his wife, and in which he had no pecuniary interest and for which he worked upon a salary, when the sale was made by other agents of the company upon a commission basis. State v. Debnam, 196 N.C. 740, 146 S.E. 857 (1929).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Inapplicable When Company by which Local School Board Member Is Employed Contracts with State Board of Education. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Bobby R. Stott, 40 N.C.A.G. 217 (1970).

Applicable to County Board of Education Purchasing from Company of Which Member Is Partner. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Garrett Dixon Bailey, 42 N.C.A.G. 180 (1973).

§ 14-237. Buying school supplies from interested officer.

If any county board of education or school committee shall buy school supplies in which any member has a pecuniary interest, the members of such board shall be removed from their positions in the public service and shall, upon conviction, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

This section shall not apply to members of any board of education which is subject to and complies with the provisions of G.S. 14-234(d1). (1901, c. 4, s. 69; Rev., s. 3835; C. S., s. 4391; 1981, c. 103, s. 4.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment added the second paragraph.

§ 14-238. Soliciting during school hours without permission of school head.

No person, agent, representative or salesman shall solicit or attempt to sell or explain any article of property or proposition to any teacher or pupil of any public school on the school grounds or during the school day without having first secured the written permission and consent of the superintendent, principal or person actually in charge of the school and responsible for it.

Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1933, c. 220; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8.)

§ 14-239. Allowing prisoners to escape; burden of proof.

If any person charged with a crime or sentenced by the court upon conviction of any offense shall be legally committed to any sheriff, or jailer, or shall be arrested by any sheriff, deputy sheriff or coroner acting as sheriff, by virtue of any capias issuing on a bill of indictment, information or other criminal proceeding, and such sheriff, deputy sheriff, coroner, or jailer, willfully or negligently, shall suffer such person, so charged or sentenced and committed, to escape out of his custody, the sheriff, deputy sheriff, coroner, or jailer so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be removed from office, and shall be fined or imprisoned, or both, at the discretion of the court before whom the trial may be had; and in all such cases it shall be sufficient, in support of the indictment against such sheriff or other officer, to prove that the person so charged or sentenced was committed to his custody, and it shall lie upon the defendant to show that such escape was not by his consent or negligence, but that he had used all legal means to prevent the same, and acted with proper care and diligence: Provided, that such removal of a sheriff shall not affect his duty or power as a collector of the public revenue, but he shall proceed on such duty and be accountable as if such conviction and removal had not been had. (1791, c. 343, s. 1, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 35; Code, s. 1022; 1905, c. 350; Rev., s. 3577; C. S., s. 4393; 1973, c. 108, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

General Consideration. — This is a common-law offense. State v. Ritchie, 107 N.C. 857, 12 S.E. 251 (1890). The statute contemplates two offenses — negligently permitting or willfully promoting the escape — but charging negligence alone will suffice. State v. McLain, 104 N.C. 894, 10 S.E. 518 (1889). The section changes theordinary rule of the burden of proof by shifting such burden to the defendant. State v. Hunter, 94 N.C. 829 (1886); State v. Lewis, 113 N.C. 622, 18 S.E. 69 (1893). The question of good faith and diligence of the officer is for the jury. State v. Blackley, 131 N.C. 726, 42 S.E. 569 (1902).

Right to Kill to Prevent Escape. — The guard has no authority to kill one convicted of a misdemeanor while fleeing to escape, without his offering resistance or showing any menace or show of force in doing so, or, anything that would suggest danger to the person of the guard. Holloway v. Moser, 193 N.C. 185, 136 S.E. 375 (1927).

Where the escape is due to the negligence of an assistant the only question presented is whether the defendant has exercised due care in his selection. State v. Lewis, 113 N.C. 622, 18 S.E. 69 (1893).

Example of Specific Language Shifting Burden of Proof. — This section provides an example of specific language used by the legislature when it intended to shift the burden of proof to a defendant. State v. Cooke, 270 N.C. 644, 155 S.E.2d 165 (1967).

§ 14-240. District attorney to prosecute officer for escape.

It shall be the duty of district attorneys, when they shall be informed or have knowledge of any felon, or person otherwise charged with any crime or offense against the State, having within their respective districts escaped out of the custody of any sheriff, deputy sheriff, coroner, or jailer, to take the necessary measures to prosecute such sheriff or other officer so offending. (1791, c. 343, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 36; Code, s. 1023; Rev., s. 2822; C. S., s. 4394; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 108, s. 8.)

§ 14-241. Disposing of public documents or refusing to deliver them over to successor.

It shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court of each county, and every other person to whom the acts of the General Assembly, appellate division reports or other public documents are transmitted or deposited for the use of the county or the State, to keep the same safely in their respective offices; and if any such person having the custody of such books and documents, for the uses aforesaid, shall negligently and willfully dispose of the same, by sale or otherwise, or refuse to deliver over the same to his successor in office, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine or imprisonment, or both, at the discretion of the court. (1881, c. 151; Code, s. 1073; Rev., s. 3598; C. S., s. 4395; 1969, c. 44, s. 26.)

§ 14-242. Failing to return process or making false return.

If any sheriff, constable or other officer, whether State or municipal, or any person who shall presume to act as any such officer, not being by law authorized so to do, refuse or neglect to return any precept, notice or process, to him tendered or delivered, which it is his duty to execute, or make a false return thereon, he shall forfeit and pay to anyone who will sue for the same one hundred dollars ($100.00), and shall moreover be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1818, c. 980, s. 3, P. R.; 1827, c. 20, s. 4; R. C., c. 34, s. 118; Code, s. 1112; Rev., s. 3604; C. S., s. 4396.)

§ 14-243. Failing to surrender tax list for inspection and correction.

If any sheriff or tax collector shall refuse or fail to surrender his tax list for inspection or correction upon demand by the authorities imposing the tax, or their successors in office, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not more than five years, and fined not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1,000), at the discretion of the court. (1870-1, c. 177, s. 2; Code, s. 3823; Rev., s. 3788; C. S., s. 4397.)

§ 14-244. Failing to file report of fines or penalties.

If any officer who is by law required to file any report or statement of fines or penalties with the county board of education shall fail so to do at or before the time fixed by law for the filing of such report, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1901, c. 4, s. 62; Rev., s. 3579; C. S., s. 4398.)

§ 14-245: Repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 108, s. 9.

§ 14-246. Failure of ex-magistrate to turn over books, papers and money.

If any magistrate, on expiration of his term of office, or if any personal representative of a deceased magistrate shall, after demand upon him by the clerk of the superior court, willfully fail and refuse to deliver to the clerk of the superior court all dockets, all law and other books, all money, and all official papers which came into his hands by virtue or color of his office, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (Code, ss. 828, 829; 1885, c. 402; Rev., s. 3578; C. S., s. 4399; 1973, c. 108, s. 10.)

§ 14-247. Private use of publicly owned vehicle.

It shall be unlawful for any officer, agent or employee of the State of North Carolina, or of any county or of any institution or agency of the State, to use for any private purpose whatsoever any motor vehicle of any type or description whatsoever belonging to the State, or to any county, or to any institution or agency of the State. It is not a private purpose to drive a permanently assigned state-owned motor vehicle between one's official work station and one's home as provided in G.S. 143-341(8)i7a.

It shall be unlawful for any person to violate a rule or regulation adopted by the Department of Administration and approved by the Governor and the Advisory Budget Commission concerning the control of all state-owned passenger motor vehicles as provided in G.S. 143-341(8)i with the intent to defraud the State of North Carolina. (1925, c. 239, s. 1; 1981, c. 859, ss. 52, 53.)

Local Modification. — Mecklenburg: 1971, c. 302; city of Charlotte: 1971, c. 220.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, added the second sentence of the first paragraph, and added the second paragraph.

Session Laws 1981, c. 859, s. 97, contains a severability clause.

CASE NOTES

Elements of Offense. — The elements of the offense created by §§ 14-247 and 14-252 are (1) the use of a vehicle belonging to the State or one of the political subdivisions named in the statute (2) by a public official or employer answering to the statutory description (3) for a private purpose. A warrant which fails to charge that the use of a police car by a policeman of a municipality was for a private purpose, is insufficient to charge the offense. Hawkins v. Reynolds, 236 N.C. 422, 72 S.E.2d 874 (1952).

§ 14-248. Obtaining repairs and supplies for private vehicle at expense of State.

It shall be unlawful for any officer, agent or employee to have any privately owned motor vehicle repaired at any garage belonging to the State or to any county, or any institution or agency of the State, or to use any tires, oils, gasoline or other accessories purchased by the State, or any county, or any institution or agency of the State, in or on any such private car. (1925, c. 239, s. 2.)

§ 14-249: Repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 268, s. 1.

Cross References. — As to authority of the Secretary of Administration to make rules and regulations prescribing the manner in which passenger vehicles shall be purchased, see § 143-60, subdivision (6).

§ 14-250. Publicly owned vehicle to be marked.

It shall be the duty of the executive head of every department of the State government, and of any county, or of any institution or agency of the State, to have painted on every motor vehicle owned by the State, or by any county, or by any institution or agency of the State, a statement that such car belongs to the State or to some county, or institution or agency of the State. Provided, however, that no automobile used by any officer or official in any county in the State for the purpose of transporting, apprehending or arresting persons charged with violations of the laws of the State of North Carolina, shall be required to be lettered. Provided, further, that in lieu of the above method of marking motor vehicles owned by any agency or department of the State government, it shall be deemed a compliance with the law if such vehicles have imprinted on the license tags thereof, above the license number, the words "State Owned" and that such vehicles have affixed to the front thereof a plate with the statement "State Owned." Provided, further, the Council of State shall have authority to authorize exemptions from the provisions of this section with respect to any state-owned vehicle when they find that it is in the public interest to do so because of the use to be made of the vehicle. Such exemptions shall be perfected and effective upon the filing with the Secretary of State of a notice of exemption identifying the vehicle, stating the use to be made of it, the individual or department to which assigned, and the period of the exemption, which may not exceed 12 months. Provided, further, that in lieu of the above method of marking vehicles owned by any county, it shall be deemed a compliance with the law if such vehicles have painted or affixed on the side thereof a circle not less than eight inches in diameter showing a replica of the seal of such county. (1925, c. 239, s. 4; 1929, c. 303, s. 1; 1945, c. 866; 1957, c. 1249; 1961, c. 1195; 1965, c. 1186; 1971, c. 3.)

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Application of Section. — This section does not apply to vehicles owned by an area mental health, mental retardation and substance abuse authority. See opinion of Attorney General to Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, Secretary, Department of Human Resources, Oct. 10, 1979.

§ 14-251. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of G.S. 14-247 to 14-250 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars ($100.00) and not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both such fine and imprisonment. Nothing in G.S. 14-247 through 14-251 shall apply to the purchase, use or upkeep or expense account of the car for the executive mansion and the Governor. (1925, c. 239, s. 5; 1969, c. 1224, s. 16.)

§ 14-252. Five preceding sections applicable to cities and towns.

General Statutes 14-247 through 14-251 in every respect shall also apply to cities and incorporated towns. (1931, c. 31.)

Local Modification. — City of Charlotte: 1971, c. 220.

ARTICLE 32.

Misconduct in Private Office.

§ 14-253. Failure of certain railroad officers to account with successors.

If the president and directors of any railroad company, and any person acting under them, shall, upon demand, fail or refuse to account with the president and directors elected or appointed to succeed them, and to transfer to them forthwith all the money, books, papers, choses in action, property and effects of every kind and description belonging to such company, they shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for not less than one nor more than five years, and be fined at the discretion of the court. All persons conspiring with any such president, directors or their agents to defeat, delay or hinder the execution of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished in like manner. The Governor is hereby authorized, at the request of the president, directors and other officers of any railroad company, to make requisition upon the governor of any other state for the apprehension of any such president failing to comply with this section. (1870-1, c. 72, ss. 1-3; Code, ss. 2001, 2002; Rev., s. 3760; C. S., s. 4400.)

CASE NOTES

Not Applicable to Tax Bond. — As this section has reference only to money, books, choses, etc., an indictment cannot be sustained against a former president of a railroad, for refusing to transfer to his successor in office certain special tax bonds. State v. Jones, 67 N.C. 210 (1872).

§ 14-254. Malfeasance of corporation officers and agents.

(a) If any president, director, cashier, teller, clerk or agent of any corporation shall embezzle, abstract or willfully misapply any of the moneys, funds or credits of the corporation, or shall, without authority from the directors, issue or put forth any certificate of deposit, draw any order or bill of exchange, make any acceptance, assign any note, bond, draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment or decree, or make any false entry in any book, report or statement of the corporation with the intent in either case to injure or defraud or to deceive any person, or if any person shall aid and abet in the doing of any of these things, he shall be punished as a Class G felon.

(b) For purposes of this section, "person" means a natural person, association, consortium, corporation, body politic, partnership, or other group, entity, or organization. (1903, c. 275, s. 15; Rev., s. 3325; C. S., s. 4401; 1977, c. 809, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1; as to misapplication of funds by bank officers, see § 53-129.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class G felon" for "guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than four months nor more than 15 years, and likewise fined, at the discretion of the court" at the end of subsection (a). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Indictments Quashed. — Indictments charging the defendant with corporate malfeasance in violation of this section must be quashed where they allege an intent "to defraud or to deceive the said Housing Authority of the City of Lumberton, North Carolina," since this section requires that they allege an accompanying intent to injure, defraud, or deceive an officer of the corporation. State v. Hill, 45 N.C. App. 136, 263 S.E.2d 14 (1980).

Applied in State v. Chapman, 26 N.C. App. 66, 214 S.E.2d 789 (1975).

ARTICLE 33.

Prison Breach and Prisoners.

§ 14-255. Escape of hired prisoners from custody.

If any prisoner, who shall be removed from the prison of the respective counties, cities and towns under the law providing for the hiring out of prisoners by counties and towns, shall escape from the person or company having him in custody, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned at hard labor not more than 30 days, or fined not more than fifty dollars ($50.00). (1876-7, c. 196, s. 4; Code, s. 3455; Rev., s. 3658; C. S., s. 4403.)

Cross References. — As to power of counties, cities and towns to hire our prisoners, see §§ 153-191 through 153-193.

CASE NOTES

Two Classes of Escape. — There are two classes of escape from the State prison system. One is a felonious escape and the other is a misdemeanor. A defendant who has committed an escape is entitled to have his case submitted to the jury on question of whether he was imprisoned while serving a sentence imposed for a felony or for a misdemeanor. State v. Ledford, 9 N.C. App. 245, 175 S.E.2d 605 (1970).

No Evidence that Defendant Was Hired out under this Section. — A defendant's contention that he should have been tried for escape under this section rather than under § 148-45 was without merit where the evidence showed that, when he escaped, defendant was in the custody of the State Department of Correction and was under the supervision of a foreman for the State Highway Department, and there was no evidence that defendant was being hired out by a county, city or town under the provisions of this section. State v. Ledford, 9 N.C. App. 245, 175 S.E.2d 605 (1970).

§ 14-256. Prison breach and escape from county or municipal confinement facilities or officers.

If any person shall break any prison, jail or lockup maintained by any county or municipality in North Carolina, being lawfully confined therein, or shall escape from the lawful custody of any superintendent, guard or officer of such prison, jail or lockup, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1 Edw. II, st. 2d; R. C., c. 34, s. 19; Code, s. 1021; Rev., s. 3657; 1909, c. 872; C. S., s. 4404; 1955, c. 279, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to penalty for escaping or assisting in an escape from the State prison, see § 148-45.

Editor's Note. — The 1955 amendatory act provided in § 4: "The provisions of this act shall be construed to be mandatory rather than directive."

CASE NOTES

Common Law. — The offense of breaking jail was a felony at common law, but by this section, all cases, no matter what the person is confined for, are reduced to a misdemeanor. State v. Brown, 82 N.C. 585 (1880).

Escape from Officer Not Included. — This section applies only to breaking prison or escaping therefrom and does not, because of its wording, include escape from an officer before being confined to prison. State v. Brown, 82 N.C. 585 (1880).

A juvenile detention home or center is not a "prison, jail, or lockup" within the meaning of this section. State v. Puckett, 43 N.C. App. 596, 259 S.E.2d 310 (1979).

Cost of Recapture May Not Be Recovered from Prisoner. — The State may not recover of a prisoner moneys expended by it to recapture him after escape from custody, since the escape does not invade any property right of the State, but the expenditure of the sums is voluntary and made by it for the protection of the people of the State in preserving the integrity of a penal system. State Highway & Pub. Works Comm'n v. Cobb, 215 N.C. 556, 2 S.E.2d 565 (1939).

Applied in State v. Abernathy, 1 N.C. App. 625, 162 S.E.2d 114 (1968); State v. Whitt, 2 N.C. App. 601, 163 S.E.2d 531 (1968).

§ 14-257. Permitting escape of or maltreating hired convicts.

If any person charged in any way with the control or management of convicts, hired for service outside of the State's prison, shall negligently permit them to escape, or shall maltreat them, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; but this provision shall not be held to relieve any person from any other criminal liability. (1881, c. 127, s. 2; Code, s. 3450; Rev., s. 3659; C. S., s. 4405; 1947, c. 781.)

Cross References. — As to escape of prisoners from negligent officer's custody, see § 14-239.

CASE NOTES

Negligence Test of Guilt. — Officers and public agents will not be held to the rigorous common-law rule of responsibility for the custody of convicts employed in labors outside of the penitentiary, actual negligence being the test of guilt. State v. Johnson, 94 N.C. 924 (1886).

Negligence Implied. — It is not necessary to prove negligence of the person having lawful custody of prisoners, for it is implied, unless occasioned by the act of God, or irresistible adverse force. State v. Johnson, 94 N.C. 924 (1886).

Cited in State v. Sneed, 94 N.C. 806 (1886).

§ 14-258. Conveying messages and weapons to or trading with convicts and other prisoners.

If any person shall convey to or from any convict any letters or oral messages, or shall convey to any convict or person imprisoned, charged with crime and awaiting trial any weapon or instrument by which to effect an escape, or that will aid him in an assault or insurrection, or shall trade with a convict for his clothing or stolen goods, or shall sell to him any article forbidden him by prison rules, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor: Provided, that when a murder, an assault or an escape is effected with the means furnished, the person convicted of furnishing the means shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1873-4, c. 158; s. 12; Code, s. 3441; Rev., s. 3662; 1911, c. 11; C. S., s. 4406; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "sentenced to not less than four years hard labor in the State's prison" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-258.1. Furnishing poison, controlled substances, deadly weapons, cartridges, ammunition or alcoholic beverages to inmates of charitable, mental or penal institutions or local confinement facilities.

(a) If any person shall give or sell to any inmate of any charitable, mental or penal institution, or local confinement facility, or if any person shall combine, confederate, conspire, aid, abet, solicit, urge, investigate, counsel, advise, encourage, attempt to procure, or procure another or others to give or sell to any inmate of any charitable, mental or penal institution, or local confinement facility, any deadly weapon, or any cartridge or ammunition for firearms of any kind, or any controlled substances included in Schedules I through VI contained in Article 5 of Chapter 90 of the General Statutes except under the general supervision of a practitioner, poison or poisonous substance, except upon the prescription of a physician, he shall be punished as a Class H felon; and if he be an officer or employee of any institution of the State, or of any local confinement facility, he shall be dismissed from his position or office.

(b) Any person who shall knowingly give or sell any alcoholic beverages to any inmate of any State mental or penal institution, or to any inmate of any local confinement facility, except for medical purposes as prescribed by a duly licensed physician; or any person who shall combine, confederate, conspire, procure, or procure another or others to give or sell any alcoholic beverages to any inmate of any such State institution or local confinement facility, except for medical purposes as prescribed by a duly licensed physician; or any person who shall bring into the buildings, grounds or other facilities of such institution any alcoholic beverages, except for medical purposes as prescribed by a duly licensed physician, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined or imprisoned, in the discretion of the court. If such person is an officer or employee of any institution of the State, such person shall be dismissed from office. (1961, c. 394, s. 2; 1969, c. 970, s. 6; 1971, c. 929; 1973, c. 1093; 1975, c. 804, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1981, c. 412, s. 4; c. 747, s. 66.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall be fined or imprisoned in the State's prison for not more than 10 years in the discretion of the court" near the end of subsection (a). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

The 1981 amendments, effective Jan. 1, 1982, substituted "alcoholic beverages" for "intoxicating liquor" in three places in subsection (b).

§ 14-258.2. Possession of dangerous weapon by prisoner.

Any person while in the custody of the Division of Prisons, or any person under the custody of any local confinement facility as defined in G.S. 153A-217, who shall have in his possession without permission or authorization a weapon capable of inflicting serious bodily injuries or death, or who shall fabricate or create such a weapon from any source, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; and any person who commits any assault with such weapon and thereby inflicts bodily injury or by the use of said weapon effects an escape or rescue from imprisonment shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1975, c. 316, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable by a fine or imprisonment not to exceed 10 years" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-258.3. Taking of hostage, etc., by prisoner.

Any prisoner in the custody of the Department of Correction, including persons in the custody of the Department of Correction pending trial or appellate review or for presentence diagnostic evaluation, or any prisoner in the custody of any local confinement facility (as defined in G.S. 153A-217), or any person in the custody of any local confinement facility (as defined in G.S. 153A-217) pending trial or appellate review or for any lawful purpose, who by threats, coercion, intimidation or physical force takes, holds, or carries away any person, as hostage or otherwise, shall be punished as a Class I felon. The provisions of this section apply to: (i) violations committed by any prisoner in the custody of the Department of Correction, whether inside or outside of the facilities of the North Carolina Department of Correction; (ii) violations committed by any prisoner or by any other person lawfully under the custody of any local confinement facility (as defined in G.S. 153A-217), whether inside or outside the local confinement facilities (as defined in G.S. 153A-217). (1975, c. 315; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall be punished as provided in G.S. 14-2" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-259. Harboring or aiding escaped prisoners.

It shall be unlawful for any person knowing, or having reasonable cause to believe, that any other person has escaped from any prison, jail, reformatory, or from the criminal insane department of any State hospital, or from the custody of any peace officer who had such person in charge, or that such person is a convict or prisoner whose parole has been revoked, to conceal, hide, harbor, feed, clothe, or offer aid and comfort in any manner to any such person.

Every person who shall conceal, hide, harbor, feed, clothe, or offer aid and comfort to any other person in violation of this section shall be guilty of a felony, if such other person has been convicted of, or was in custody upon the charge of a felony, and shall be punished as a Class I felon; and shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, if such other person had been convicted of, or was in custody upon a charge of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished in the discretion of the court.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to members of the immediate family of such escapee. For the purposes of this section "immediate family" shall be defined to be the mother, father, brother, sister, wife, husband and child of said escapee. (1939, c. 72; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

Indictment Fatally Defective. — An indictment charging that the defendant unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously harbored an escapee who was serving a sentence of imprisonment when he escaped, is fatally defective in omitting the words "knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that said person was an escapee." State v. Kirkman, 272 N.C. 143, 157 S.E.2d 716 (1976).

Cited in State v. Dix, 282 N.C. 490, 193 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class I felon" for "and shall be punished by imprisonment in the State prison for not more than five years" near the middle of the second paragraph. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-260. Injury to prisoner by jailer.

If the keeper of a jail shall do, or cause to be done, any wrong or injury to the prisoners committed to his custody, contrary to law, he shall not only pay treble damages to the person injured, but shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1795, c. 433, s. 6, P. R.; R. C., c. 87, s. 8; Code, s. 3463; Rev., s. 3661; C. S., s. 4407.)

CASE NOTES

Evidence Sufficient for Jury. — Evidence that the plaintiff's thumb had inadvertently been placed against the door jamb when jailer started to close the door of a cell, and that when the plaintiff pushed against the door to release his thumb the jailer pushed the door shut with his shoulder, thereby cutting off plaintiff's thumb, is sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the issue of the jailer's negligent injury to the plaintiff. § 14-261. Confining prisoners to improper apartments.

If the sheriff or jailer shall wantonly or unnecessarily confine those committed to his custody in any apartment, other than that provided and designated by law for persons of the description of the prisoner, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1795, c. 433, s. 4; R. C., c. 87, s. 16; Code, s. 3471; Rev., s. 3660; C. S., s. 4408.)

§ 14-263: Repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 4, effective July 1, 1981.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47, amended Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, so as to postpone the effective date of the repeal to March 1, 1981.

§ 14-264. Record to be kept; items of record.

The superintendent or other person having charge of prisoners shall keep a record showing, the name, age, date of sentence, length of sentence, crime for which convicted, home address, next of kin, and the conduct of each prisoner received. (1927, c. 178, s. 2.)

§ 14-265: Repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 33.

ARTICLE 34.

Custodial Institutions.

§ 14-266. Persuading inmates to escape.

It shall be unlawful for any parent, guardian, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, or any person whatsoever to persuade or induce to leave, carry away, or accompany from any State institution, except with the permission of the superintendent or other person next in authority, any boy or girl, man or woman, who has been legally committed or admitted under suspended sentence to said institution by juvenile, recorder's, superior or any other court of competent jurisdiction. (1935, c. 307, s. 1; 1937, c. 189, s. 1.)

§ 14-267. Harboring fugitives.

It shall be unlawful for any person to harbor, conceal, or give succor to, any known fugitive from any institution whose inmates are committed by court or are admitted under suspended sentence. (1935, c. 307, s. 2; 1937, c. 189, s. 2.)

§ 14-268. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person violating the provisions of this Article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined or imprisoned, in the discretion of the court. (1935, c. 307, s. 3.)

SUBCHAPTER IX. OFFENSES AGAINST THE PUBLIC PEACE.

ARTICLE 35.

Offenses against the Public Peace.

§ 14-269. Carrying concealed weapons.

If anyone, except when on his own premises, shall willfully and intentionally carry concealed about his person any bowie knife, dirk, dagger, sling shot, loaded cane, brass, iron or metallic knuckles, razor, pistol, gun or other deadly weapon of like kind, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. This section shall not apply to the following persons: Officers and enlisted personnel of the armed forces of the United States when in discharge of their official duties as such and acting under orders requiring them to carry arms or weapons, civil officers of the United States while in the discharge of their official duties, officers and soldiers of the militia and the State guard when called into actual service, officers of the State, or of any county, city, or town, charged with the execution of the laws of the State, when acting in the discharge of their official duties, provided, however, full-time sworn law-enforcement officers may carry a concealed weapon when off-duty in jurisdiction where assigned if so authorized by written regulations of the law-enforcement unit, which must be filed with the clerk of court in the county where the law-enforcement unit is located, provided further, that no such regulation shall permit the carrying of a concealed weapon while the officer is consuming or under the influence of alcoholic beverages. (Code, s. 1005; Rev., s. 3708; 1917, c. 76; 1919, c. 197, s. 8; C. S., s. 4410; 1923, c. 57; Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 30; 1929, cc. 51, 224; 1947, c. 459; 1949, c. 1217; 1959, c. 1073, s. 1; 1965, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 7; 1977, c. 616; 1981, c. 412, s. 4; c. 747, s. 66.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendments, effective Jan. 1, 1982, substituted "alcoholic beverages" for "intoxicating liquor" at the end of the section.

IV. Illustrative Cases.
V. Practice and Procedure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Purpose. — The purpose of this section is to reduce the likelihood a concealed weapon may be resorted to in a fit of anger. State v. Gainey, 273 N.C. 620, 160 S.E.2d 685 (1968).

Applied in State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972); State v. Patton, 18 N.C. App. 266, 196 S.E.2d 560 (1973); State v. McZorn, 288 N.C. 417, 219 S.E.2d 201 (1975).

Stated in State v. Burgess, 2 N.C. App. 677, 163 S.E.2d 662 (1968).

Cited in State v. Divine, 98 N.C. 778, 4 S.E. 477 (1887); State v. Barrett, 138 N.C. 630, 50 S.E. 506 (1905); State v. Sauls, 199 N.C. 193, 154 S.E. 28 (1930); State v. Scoggin, 236 N.C. 19, 72 S.E.2d 54 (1952); State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

II. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

Elements Generally. — In order to be guilty of violating this section the accused must be off his own premises, carrying a deadly weapon, and the weapon must be concealed about his person. State v. Williamson, 238 N.C. 652, 78 S.E.2d 763 (1953).

Concealment Is Gist of Offense. — The mischief provided against is the practice of wearing weapons concealed about the person to be used upon any emergency. State v. Broadnax, 91 N.C. 543 (1884).

Concealment of the weapon must be shown. State v. Cobb, 18 N.C. App. 221, 196 S.E.2d 521 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 573, 201 S.E.2d 878 (1974).

If the weapon is carried openly the defendant could not be guilty under this section. State v. Brown, 125 N.C. 704, 34 S.E. 549 (1899).

And Is Question for Jury. — Whether, in a given case, the weapon is concealed from the public and such presumption of guilty intent is rebutted by the mode of carrying the weapon, are questions for the jury. State v. Reams, 121 N.C. 556, 27 S.E. 1004 (1897). See State v. Lilly, 116 N.C. 1049, 21 S.E. 563 (1895).

Prima Facie Evidence of Concealment. — The fact that defendant had a pistol about his person, off of his own premises, was prima facie evidence of concealment, which shifted the burden upon the defendant to rebut or disprove. State v. McManus, 89 N.C. 555 (1883); State v. Lilly, 116 N.C. 1049, 21 S.E. 563 (1895); State v. Reams, 121 N.C. 556, 27 S.E. 1004 (1897); State v. Hamby, 126 N.C. 1066, 35 S.E. 614 (1900).

The possession of a pistol by one on the premises of another is not alone sufficient to convict of carrying a concealed weapon in violation of this section, although the statute makes such possession prima facie evidence of the concealment thereof. State v. Vanderburg, 200 N.C. 713, 158 S.E. 248 (1931).

Affirmative Showing Required in Rebuttal. — To rebut the statutory presumption arising from the concealment, the absence of intent to conceal must be affirmatively found. State v. Gilbert, 87 N.C. 527 (1882); State v. Brown, 125 N.C. 704, 34 S.E. 549 (1899).

Intent Required. — The intent to carry, not the intent to use, determines the guilt. State v. Reams, 121 N.C. 556, 27 S.E. 1004 (1897).

To conceal a weapon means something more than the mere act of having it where it may not be seen. It implies an assent of the mind and a purpose to so carry it that in may not be seen. State v. Gilbert, 87 N.C. 527 (1882).

Defense of No Intent to Conceal. — The question is as to the manner of carrying, whether concealed or not, and it might be shown, in defense, that there was no intent to conceal it. State v. Brown, 125 N.C. 704, 34 S.E. 549 (1899).

When Intent Immaterial. — But if from defendant's own testimony it appears that he necessarily knew that he was carrying it concealed intent is immaterial. State v. Simmons, 143 N.C. 613, 56 S.E. 701 (1907).

"About His Person". — The language is not "concealed on his person," but "concealed about his person"; that is, concealed near, in close proximity to him, and within his convenient control and easy reach, so that he could promptly use it, if prompted to do so by any violent motive. It makes no difference how it is concealed, so it is on or near to and within the reach and control of the person charged. State v. Gainey, 273 N.C. 620, 160 S.E.2d 685 (1968).

The language of the statute is, not "concealed on his person," but "concealed about his person," and hence, if the weapon be within reach and control of the defendant, it is sufficient to bring the case within the meaning of the statute. State v. McManus, 89 N.C. 555 (1883).

To be criminal, the weapon must be concealed, not necessarily on the person of the accused, but in such position as gives him ready access to it. State v. Gainey, 273 N.C. 620, 160 S.E.2d 685 (1968).

Carrying on Own Premises. — That defendant was not on his own premises when discovered carrying a concealed weapon is an element of this section. State v. Stanfield, 19 N.C. App. 622, 199 S.E.2d 741 (1973), appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 622, 201 S.E.2d 692 (1974).

The use of the words, "on his own premises," and not being "on his own lands," in this section, shows an intention to restrict the right to carry concealed weapons to those who are in the privacy of their own premises and not likely to be thrown into contact with the public, nor tempted, on a sudden quarrel, to use the great advantage a concealed weapon gives. State v. Perry, 120 N.C. 580, 26 S.E.2d 915, 1008 (1897).

Time Not Essence of Offense. — Time is not the essence of the offense of carrying a concealed weapon, and it may be shown at a previous time to that alleged in the bill. State v. Spencer, 185 N.C. 765, 117 S.E. 803 (1923).

Apprehension of Assault No Defense. — Carrying concealed weapons in reasonable apprehension of deadly assaults is not justification of a violation of the statutory offense, but in aggravation thereof, and may be considered by the trial judge in imposing the sentence, according to the discretion given him therein by this section. State v. Woodlief, 172 N.C. 885, 90 S.E. 137 (1916).

Nor Is Acting upon Advice of Attorney. — A person acting in ignorance of the law in good faith and upon advice of the clerk of the court or of an attorney, but in violation of this section, is not excused. State v. Simmons, 143 N.C. 613, 56 S.E. 701 (1907).

III. PERSONS EXCEPTED.

Night Watchman. — A private night watchman is not guilty of carrying a concealed weapon, under this section, while on duty upon the premises he is employed to watch. State v. Anderson, 129 N.C. 521, 39 S.E. 824 (1901).

Officials of Transportation Companies. — The exception in this section does not apply to the officials of corporations, such as turnpikes, railroads and others, which invite the public to use their lines of travel. State v. Perry, 120 N.C. 580, 26 S.E. 915, 1008 (1897).

United States Mail Carrier. — A United States mail carrier is indictable under this section for carrying a concealed weapon while carrying the mail and while returning to his home after delivering the mail. State v. Boone, 132 N.C. 1107, 44 S.E. 595 (1903).

IV. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Butcher Knife. — This section making it indictable for one to carry concealed about his person any pistol, bowie knife, razor or other deadly weapon of like kind, embraces a butcher's knife. State v. Erwin, 91 N.C. 545 (1884).

Revolver in Bag in Back Seat. — Where police officers stopped defendant's car to make a routine driver's license check and defendant removed revolver from a bag in the back seat, the police properly arrested him without a warrant inasmuch as they had reasonable ground to believe defendant was committing a misdemeanor — carrying a concealed weapon in violation of this section — in their presence. State v. White, 18 N.C. App. 31, 195 S.E.2d 576 (1973), appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 587, 196 S.E.2d 811 (1973).

Pistol in Coat on Shoulder. — Upon evidence tending to show that the defendant had a pistol with the butt end projecting above his hip pocket, and with his coat off and carried upon his shoulder, it is sufficient for the determination of the jury, upon the issue of defendant's guilt in having carried a concealed weapon in violation of this section. State v. Mangum, 187 N.C. 477, 121 S.E. 765 (1924).

Carrying Pistol to Deliver to Another. — One is not guilty of a violation of this section where it appears that he had a pistol in his pocket for the purpose of delivering it to the owner who had sent him for it. State v. Broadnax, 91 N.C. 543 (1884).

Persons Not "On Premises". — A superintendent or overseer of a department of a cotton mill, is not, while therein, "on his premises," within the meaning of this section. State v. Bridgers, 169 N.C. 309, 84 S.E. 689 (1915).

A person in his own automobile on a public highway is not on his own premises within the meaning of this section. State v. Gainey, 273 N.C. 620, 160 S.E.2d 685 (1968).

A mere servant or hireling who carries concealed weapons on the premises of his employer is indictable. State v. Deyton, 119 N.C. 880, 26 S.E. 159 (1896).

V. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Warrant Must State Defendant Carried Weapon Off His Own Premises. — In prosecution for carrying a concealed weapon, the warrant is held fatally defective in failing to embrace in the charge the essential element of the offense that the weapon was carried cancealed by defendant off his own premises, the warrant itself excluding the charge that the weapon was carried off the premises by charging that defendant carried an unconcealed weapon off his premises. State v. Bradley, 210 N.C. 290, 186 S.E. 240 (1936).

Information Held Sufficient. — An information charging that defendant, on a specified date, unlawfully and willfully carried a concealed weapon, to wit, a pistol, about his person, the defendant not being at the time on his own premises, is an accurate and sufficient charge of violating this section. State v. Caldwell, 269 N.C. 521, 153 S.E.2d 34 (1967).

Former Conviction of Assault. — A conviction of assault with a deadly weapon will not sustain a plea of former conviction in a subsequent trial for carrying a concealed weapon. State v. Robinson, 116 N.C. 1046, 21 S.E. 701 (1895).

Punishment. — When the punishment does not exceed the limits fixed by this section, it cannot be considered cruel and unusual punishment in a constitutional sense. State v. Caldwell, 269 N.C. 521, 153 S.E.2d 34 (1967).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Possession of an Unconcealed Pistol in an Automobile Not Violation of Statute. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Albert Jackson, Sheriff of Henderson County, 41 N.C.A.G. 207 (1971).

§ 14-269.1. Confiscation and disposition of deadly weapons.

Upon conviction of any person for violation of G.S. 14-269 or any other offense involving the use of a deadly weapon of a type referred to in G.S. 14-269, the deadly weapon with reference to which the defendant shall have been convicted shall be ordered confiscated and disposed of by the presiding judge at the trial in one of the following ways in the discretion of the presiding judge.

(1) By ordering the weapon returned to its rightful owner, but only when such owner is a person other than the defendant and has filed a petition for the recovery of such weapon with the presiding judge at the time of the defendant's conviction, and upon a finding by the presiding judge that petitioner is entitled to possession of same and that he was unlawfully deprived of the same without his consent.

(2) By ordering the weapon turned over to a law-enforcement agency in the county of trial for the official use of such agency, but only upon the written request by the head or chief of such agency. The clerk of the superior court of such county shall maintain a record of such weapons and the law-enforcement agency receiving them.

(3) By ordering the weapon turned over to the sheriff of the county in which the trial is held to be sold as herein provided. Under the direction of the sheriff, the weapon shall be sold at public auction after one advertisement in a newspaper having general circulation in the county which advertisement shall be at least seven days prior to sale. The proceeds of such sale shall go to the general fund of the county in which such weapons are sold. The sheriff shall maintain a record and inventory of all such weapons received and sold by him. Sales of such weapons by the sheriff shall be held at least once each year.

(4) By ordering such weapon turned over to the sheriff of the county in which the trial is held or his duly authorized agent to be destroyed. The sheriff shall maintain a record of the destruction thereof. (1965, c. 954, s. 2; 1967, c. 24, s. 3.)

Certain Counties Governed by Former § 14-269 (b). — Harnett, Pamlico, Perquimans, Rockingham, Scotland and Warren Counties were excepted from the provisions of this section by Session Laws 1965, c. 954, s. 2½, as amended by Session Laws 1969, c. 30½, Session Laws 1973, c. 1399, and Session Laws 1981, c. 279. Session Laws 1969, c. 1117, amended the 1965 act by adding to s. 2½ the following sentence: "The provisions of G.S. 14-269 (b) prior to amendment by this Act shall be effective as to these counties." Former § 14-269 (b) provided:

"(b) If the deadly weapon with reference to which the defendant shall have been convicted is a bowie knife, dirk, dagger, slung shot, loaded cane, brass, iron or metallic knuckles, razor or weapon of like kind, the same shall be destroyed. However, pistols or guns may be confiscated and ordered turned over to the sheriff of the county in which the trial is held by the judge presiding at the trial. Under the direction of said sheriff the weapon shall be sold after one advertisement in a newspaper having a general circulation in the county, at public auction, which shall be held at least once a year. The proceeds of the sale of the weapon or weapons shall go to the general fund of the county in which the weapon or weapons were confiscated and sold. The sheriff shall keep a record and inventory of all weapons received by him and sold under his direction; provided, however, that in any case the presiding judge may, if the facts so justify, order any pistol or gun returned to the defendant."

In former § 14-269 (b) as set out above, the word "sheriff" was substituted for the words "clerk of the superior court" in three places by Session Laws 1959, c. 1073, the intent of the amendatory act being to transfer to the sheriffs the duties theretofore performed by the clerks of the superior court in disposing of confiscated weapons. Of the counties presently governed by former § 14-269 (b), the following are excepted from the application of the 1969 amendment: Perquimans, Rockingham and Warren. (Harnett and Pamlico, originally among those excepted, were brought under the 1959 act by Session Laws 1967, cc. 470 and 6, respectively.) As to the counties excepted from the 1969 act, the word "sheriff" in former § 14-469 (b) as set out above should be read "clerk of the superior court."

Former § 14-269 (b) was also modified, as to two of the counties in which it remains applicable, as follows: Rockingham: 1957, c. 939; Scotland: 1955, c. 569.

§ 14-269.2. Weapons on campus or other educational property.

It shall be unlawful for any person to possess, or carry, whether openly or concealed, any gun, rifle, pistol, dynamite cartridge, bomb, grenade, mine, powerful explosive as defined in G.S. 14-284.1, bowie knife, dirk, dagger, slungshot, leaded cane, switch-blade knife, blackjack, metallic knuckles or any other weapon of like kind, not used solely for instructional or school sanctioned ceremonial purposes, in any public or private school building or bus, on any public or private school campus, grounds, recreation area, athletic field, or other property owned, used or operated by any board of education, school, college, or university board of trustees or directors for the administration of any public or private educational institution. For the purpose of this section a self-opening or switch-blade knife is defined as a knife containing a blade or blades which open automatically by the release of a spring or a similar contrivance, and the above phrase "weapon of like kind" includes razors and razor blades (except solely for personal shaving) and any sharp pointed or edged instrument except unaltered nail files and clips and tools used solely for preparation of food, instruction and maintenance. This section shall not apply to the following persons: Officers and enlisted personnel of the armed forces of the United States when in discharge of their official duties as such and acting under orders requiring them to carry arms or weapons, civil officers of the United States while in the discharge of their official duties, officers and soldiers of the militia and the national guard when called into actual service, officers of the State, or of any county, city, or town, charged with the execution of the laws of the State, when acting in the discharge of their official duties, any pupils who are members of the Reserve Officer Training Corps and who are required to carry arms or weapons in the discharge of their official class duties, and any private police employed by the administration or board of trustees of any public or private institution of higher education when acting in the discharge of their duties.

Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished in the discretion of the court by fine or imprisonment or by both such fine and imprisonment, not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) fine or six months imprisonment. (1971, c. 241, ss. 1, 2; c. 1224.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in In re Johnson, 32 N.C. App. 492, 232 S.E.2d 486 (1977).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Faculty Member May Have Gun in Own Home Located on Campus. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Pritchard C. Smith, 41 N.C.A.G. 466 (1971).

§ 14-269.3. Carrying weapons into assemblies and establishments where alcoholic beverages are sold and consumed.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to carry any gun, rifle, or pistol into any assembly where a fee has been charged for admission thereto, or into any establishment in which alcoholic beverages are sold and consumed. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished in the discretion of the court by fine or imprisonment or by both.

(b) This section shall not apply to the following:

(1) A person exempted from the provisions of G.S. 14-269;

(2) The owner or lessee of the premises or business establishment;

(3) A person participating in the event, if he is carrying a gun, rifle, or pistol with the permission of the owner, lessee, or person or organization sponsoring the event; and

(4) A person registered or hired as a security guard by the owner, lessee, or person or organization sponsoring the event. (1977, c. 1016, s. 1; 1981, c. 412, s. 4; c. 747, s. 66.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendments, effective Jan. 1, 1982, substituted "alcoholic beverages" for "intoxicating liquors" in the first sentence of subsection (a).

§ 14-269.4. Weapons on State property.

It shall be unlawful for any person to possess, or carry, whether openly or concealed, any deadly weapon, not used solely for instructional or officially sanctioned ceremonial purposes in the State Capitol Building, the Executive Mansion, the Western Residence of the Governor, or on the grounds of any of these buildings.

This section shall not apply to:

(1) Officers and enlisted personnel of the armed forces when in the discharge of their official duties as such and acting under orders requiring them to carry arms and weapons,

(2) Civil officers of the United States while in the discharge of their official duties,

(3) Officers and soldiers of the militia and the State guard when on duty or called into service,

(4) Officers or employees of the State, or any county, city, or town charged with the execution of the laws of the State, when acting in the discharge of their official duties if authorized by law to carry weapons,

(5) State-owned rest areas, rest stops along the highways, and state-owned hunting and fishing reservations.

Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished in the discretion of the court by fine or imprisonment or by both such fine and imprisonment. (1981, c. 646.)

§ 14-270. Sending, accepting or bearing challenges to fight duels.

If any person shall send, accept or bear a challenge to fight a duel, though no death ensue, he, and all such as counsel, aid and abet him, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, moreover, be ineligible to any office of trust, honor or profit in the State, any pardon or reprieve notwithstanding. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1802, c. 608, s. 1, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 48; Code, s. 1012; Rev., s. 3628; C. S., s. 4411; 1969, c. 1224, s. 9.)

Cross References. — As to killing adversary in duel, see § 14-20.

CASE NOTES

Duel Defined. — Webster's International Dictionary defines "duel" to be a combate between two persons, fought with deadly weapons by agreement. State v. Fritz, 133 N.C. 725, 45 S.E. 957 (1903).

Common Law. — Dueling was an offense at common law, 4 Bl. Com., 145; State v. Fritz, 133 N.C. 725, 45 S.E. 957 (1903).

Use of Deadly Weapons. — In 2 Bishop New Criminal Law, § 313(2), it is doubted whether the use of deadly weapons is essential to a duel, but the fighting must at least be upon such mutual agreement as permits one combatant to take the life of the other. State v. Fritz, 133 N.C. 725, 45 S.E. 957 (1903).

Challenge to Fight with Fists and Hands. — A challenge to fight a fair fight with fists and hands, without the use of any deadly weapons, is not dueling within the statute. State v. Fritz, 133 N.C. 725, 45 S.E. 957 (1903).

Challenge to Fight Out of State. — A challenge to fight a duel out of State is indictable under this section. State v. Farrier, 8 N.C. 487 (1821).

Form of Indictment. — An indictment for sending a challenge, in the form of a letter, to fight a duel, need not set out the words of the letter, nor the substance thereof. State v. Farrier, 8 N.C. 487 (1821).

§ 14-271. Engaging in and betting on prize fights.

If any two or more persons engage in a prize fight, sparring match or glove or fist contest for money or other valuable prize or stake; or if any person bet or lay a wager on the result thereof or advise, aid or abet in any way whatever in promoting the same, he shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars ($500.00), or imprisoned in the State's prison or jail for not less than one year nor more than five years, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1895, c. 28, ss. 1-4; Rev., s. 3707; C. S., s. 4412.)

Local Modification. — Carteret: 1947, c. 174; Cumberland: 1977, c. 437; Durham: 1953, c. 1287; Pitt: 1977, c. 437; 1981, c. 813; Robeson: Pub. Loc. 1925, c. 270; Vance: Pub. Loc. 1927, c. 497; Wake: 1977, c. 437; 1981, c. 813; city of Asheville: 1981, c. 71; city of Greensboro: 1981, c. 62.

Cross References. — As to power of the Governor to prevent prizefights, see § 147-12, subdivision (6).

§ 14-272. Disturbing picnics, entertainments and other meetings.

If any person shall willfully interrupt or disturb any picnic, excursion party, school entertainment, political meeting, or any meeting or other organization whatsoever lawfully and peaceably held, either at, within or without the place where such picnic, excursion party, school entertainment, political meeting or other meeting or organization is held, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1897, c. 213; Rev., s. 3704; C. S., s. 4413; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Section applies to disturbing Sunday school. State v. Branner, 149 N.C. 559, 63 S.E. 169 (1908).

And to Disturbing Family Reunions. — See State v. Starnes, 151 N.C. 724, 66 S.E. 347 (1909).

§ 14-273. Disturbing schools and scientific and temperance meetings; injuring property of schools and temperance societies.

If any person shall willfully interrupt or disturb any public or private school or temperance society or organization or any meeting lawfully and peacefully held for the purpose of literary and scientic improvement, or for the discussion of temperance or question of moral reform, either within or without the place where such meeting or school is held, or injure any school building, or deface any school furniture, apparatus or other school property, or property of any temperance society or organization, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (Code, s. 2592; 1885, c. 140; 1901, c. 4, s. 28; Rev., s. 3838; C. S., s. 4414; 1959, c. 555, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Neither the enactment of this section nor its enforcement against certain defendants violated the law of the land clause of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 17. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

This section is not discriminatory upon its face. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

This section does not undertake censorship of speech or protest. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

This section does not have the objectionable quality of vagueness and overbreadth. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

This section is not susceptible of sweeping and improper application so as to prevent the advocacy of unpopular ideas and criticisms of public schools or public officials. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

Elements of Offense. — The elements of the offense punishable under this section are: (1) some act or course of conduct by the defendant, within or without the school; (2) an actual, material interference with, frustration of or confusion in, part or all of the program of a public or private school for the instruction or training of students enrolled therein and in attendance thereon, resulting from such act or conduct; and (3) the purpose of intent on the part of the defendant that his act or conduct have that effect. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968); State v. Midgett, 8 N.C. App. 230, 174 S.E.2d 124 (1970).

"Interrupt" means "to break the uniformity or continuity of; to break in upon an action." State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

"Disturb" means "to throw into disorder." State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

When the words "interrupt" and "disturb" are used in conjunction with the word "school," they mean to a person of ordinary intelligence a substantial interference with, disruption of, and confusion of the operation of the school in its program of instruction and training of students there enrolled. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

Motive No Defense. — Nothing else appearing, the defendant's motive for doing willfully an act forbidden by this section is no defense to the charge of violation of such section. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 285 (1968).

Preventing Use of School Building. — To take possession of a schoolhouse when there are no pupils present, and forbid the teacher to use the building, though the school is thereby prevented from assembling, is not a violation of this section. State v. Spray, 113 N.C. 686, 18 S.E. 700 (1893).

Evidence Sufficient for Jury. — In a prosecution charging that defendants unlawfully and willfully interrupted a public school in violation of this section, the issue of defendants' guilt was properly submitted to the jury, where the State's evidence tended to show that (1) the defendants entered the office of the secretary to the principal and told her that they were going to interrupt the school that day; (2) the defendants locked the secretary out of her office, moved furniture about, scattered papers, and dumped books on the floor; (3) the secretary and several teachers were kept away from their jobs or classes by these actions; (4) the defendants also occupied the principal's office and operated the bells that normally signalled the change of classes; and (5) the principal, as a result of the commotion, was forced to dismiss school prior to the regular closing hour. State v. Midgett, 8 N.C. App. 230, 174 S.E.2d 124 (1970).

Reduction of Sentence. — In a school disturbance prosecution the Court of Appeals, in the exercise of its supervisory powers, reduced the defendants' sentences of imprisonment from 12 months to six months, where the amendment to this section mitigating the punishment for the offense had become effective on the day defendants were sentenced. State v. Evans, 8 N.C. App. 469, 174 S.E.2d 680 (1970).

Applied in State v. Guthrie, 265 N.C. 659, 144 S.E.2d 891 (1965); In re Burrus, 275 N.C. 517, 169 S.E.2d 879 (1969); In re Johnson, 32 N.C. App. 492, 232 S.E.2d 486 (1977).

§ 14-274. Disturbing students at schools for women.

It shall be unlawful for any male person to willfully disturb, annoy or harass the students of any boarding school or college for women situated anywhere in North Carolina by rude conduct or by persistent unnecessary presence on or near the property of the school or college; or by the willful addressing or communicating orally or otherwise with said students while on school property, or while elsewhere when in charge of a teacher, officer or student of said school. The violation of this section shall be deemed a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not less than five dollars ($5.00) nor more than fifty dollars ($50.00), or by imprisonment not to exceed 30 days. (1925, c. 189, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For a criticism of the wisdom and necessity for this law, see 3 N.C.L. Rev. 143.

§ 14-275. Disturbing religious congregations.

If any person shall be intoxicated or shall be guilty of any rude and disorderly conduct at any place where people are accustomed to meet for divine worship, and while the people are there assembled for such worship, whether such worship should have begun or not, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1901, c. 738; Rev., s. 3706; C. S., s. 4415; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

People Must Be Collected. — In order to render indictable the disturbance of persons assembled for divine worship, the people, or some considerable number, must be collected at or about the time when worship is about to commence, and in the place where it is to be celebrated. State v. Bryson, 82 N.C. 576 (1880).

But the congregation need not be engaged in the act of worship. State v. Ramsey, 78 N.C. 448 (1878).

The indictment will not lie after the congregation has dispersed. State v. Davis, 126 N.C. 1059, 35 S.E. 600 (1900).

The act itself must disturb the congregation — information of the act, for example that a fight is in progress, will not suffice. State v. Kirby, 108 N.C. 772, 12 S.E. 1045 (1891).

Persistent speaking in church after remonstrance from the minister has been held sufficient to sustain a verdict under this section (see State v. Ramsey, 78 N.C. 448 (1878)).

Persistence in singing off the key where the intention is not to disturb is not sufficient to sustain a verdict under this section. State v. Linkhaw, 69 N.C. 214 (1873).

Disturbing Sunday School. — See note to § 14-272.

Disturbing Family Gathering. — See State v. Starnes, 151 N.C. 724, 66 S.E. 347 (1909).

Indictment. — The indictment should charge that the assembly had met "for divine worship," "divine service," "religious worship or service," or something of the same import. State v. Fisher, 25 N.C. 111 (1842).

Where the charge against the defendant is disturbing a congregation actually engaged in divine worship, it is variance to show merely the disturbance of parties assembled for such worship. State v. Bryson, 82 N.C. 576 (1880).

Stated in State v. Fenner, 263 N.C. 694, 140 S.E.2d 349 (1965).

§ 14-275.1. Disorderly conduct at bus or railroad station or airport.

Any person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment for not more than 30 days, in the discretion of the court, if such person while at, or upon the premises of,

(1) Any bus station, depot or terminal, or
(2) Any railroad passenger station, depot or terminal, or
(3) Any airport or air terminal used by any common carrier, or
(4) Any airport or air terminal owned or leased, in whole or in part, by any county, municipality or other political subdivision of the State, or privately owned airport shall

(1) Engage in disorderly conduct, or
(2) Use vulgar, obscene or profane language, or
(3) On any one occasion, without having necessary business there, loiter and loaf upon the premises after being requested to leave by any peace officer or by any person lawfully in charge of such premises. (1947, c. 310.)

Editor's Note. — The title of the act inserting this section refers only to airports and airport terminals.

§ 14-276: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 357.

§ 14-276.1. Impersonation of firemen or emergency medical services personnel.

It is a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment not to exceed 30 days, for any person, with intent to deceive, to impersonate a fireman or any emergency medical services personnel, whether paid or voluntary, by a false statement, display of insignia, emblem, or other identification on his person or property, or any other act, which indicates a false status of affiliation, membership, or level of training or proficiency, if:

(1) The impersonation is made with intent to impede the performance of the duties of a fireman or any emergency medical services personnel, or
(2) Any person reasonably relies on the impersonation and as a result suffers injury to person or property.

For purposes of this section, emergency medical services personnel means an ambulance attendant, emergency medical technician, emergency medical technician intermediates, emergency medical technician paramedics, or other member of a rescue squad or other emergency medical organization. (1981, c. 432, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 432, s. 2, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1981.

§ 14-277. Impersonation of peace officers.

It shall be unlawful for any person other than duly authorized peace officers or officers of the court to represent to any person that they are duly authorized peace officers, and acting upon such representation to arrest any person, search any building, or in any way impersonate a peace officer or act in accordance with the authority delegated to duly authorized peace officers. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit a private citizen in whose presence a felony has been committed from arresting such person or persons participating in the commission of said felony when such arrest is deemed necessary, or to prohibit any private citizen in whose presence an act, which would constitute a breach of the peace and for which an indictment would lie, is committed from arresting such person or persons committing said breach of the peace when such arrest is deemed necessary. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction may be fined or imprisoned at the discretion of the court. (1927, c. 229.)

CASE NOTES

Elements of the Offense. — The offense defined by this section consists of two material elements, both of which must be made to appear before the person charged can be convicted. He must have made a false representation that he is a duly authorized peace officer, and acting upon such representation he must have arrested some person, searched a building, or done some act in accordance with the authority delegated to duly authorized officers. State v. Church, 242 N.C. 230, 87 S.E.2d 256 (1955).

When Nonsuit Proper. — Where the defendant made no oral representation that he was a peace officer, but merely exhibited a courtesy card, which the witness examined, but was not misled, and the defendant used no words or action which would indicate he intended or attempted to arrest him, a motion for judgment as of nonsuit should have been allowed. State v. Church, 242 N.C. 230, 87 S.E.2d 256 (1955).

§ 14-277.1. Communicating threats.

(a) A person is guilty of a misdemeanor if without lawful authority:

(1) He willfully threatens to physically injure the person or damage the property of another;

(2) The threat is communicated to the other person, orally, in writing, or by any other means;

(3) The threat is made in a manner and under circumstances which would cause a reasonable person to believe that the threat is likely to be carried out; and

(4) The person threatened believes that the threat will be carried out.

(b) A violation of this section is punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment of not more than six months, or both. (1973, c. 1286, s. 11.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 criminal law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1350 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Conditional Threats. — A defendant may be held liable under this section for conditional threats where the condition is one which she had no right to impose. State v. Roberson, 37 N.C. App. 714, 247 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

Defendant's threat to hit the victim with a rock did not become lawful merely because defendant indicated she had no intention to strike if the victim did not "come any closer." While the threat gave the victim the power to avoid the threatened consequences by simply complying with the condition imposed by defendant, the condition was one which defendant had no right to impose. State v. Roberson, 37 N.C. App. 714, 247 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

Threatening language can amount to an offer to injure a person even though it is a conditional offer. State v. Roberson, 37 N.C. App. 714, 247 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

No Requirement that Threat Be Carried Out. — The conduct proscribed by this section is the making and communicating of the threat in the manner described in the statute, with no requirement that the threat be carried out. State v. Roberson, 37 N.C. App. 714, 247 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

Defendant Not Subjected to Double Jeopardy. — Where the defendant was charged with communicating threats and assault by pointing a gun, he was not subjected to double jeopardy, even though the charges arose out of the same incident, since the elements of the two offenses differed. State v. Evans, 40 N.C. App. 730, 253 S.E.2d 590, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 456, 256 S.E.2d 809 (1979).

Instructions. — In a prosecution for communicating a threat, the trial court did not err in instructing that the threat must be proven to have been communicated orally and in failing to instruct the jury that the threat could be communicated by any other means. State v. Evans, 40 N.C. App. 730, 253 S.E.2d 590, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 456, 256 S.E.2d 809 (1979).

Applied in State v. Zigler, 42 N.C. App. 148, 256 S.E.2d 479 (1979).

§ 14-277.2. Weapons at parades, etc., prohibited.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person participating in, affiliated with, or present as a spectator at any parade, funeral procession, picket line, or demonstration upon any public place owned or under the control of the State or any of its political subdivisions to willfully or intentionally possess or have immediate access to any dangerous weapon. Violation of this subsection shall be a misdemeanor. It shall be presumed that any rifle or gun carried on a rack in a pickup truck does not violate the terms of this act.

(b) For the purposes of this section the term "dangerous weapon" shall include those weapons specified in G.S. 14-269, 14-269.2, 14-284.1, or 14-288.8 or any other object capable of inflicting serious bodily injury or death when used as a weapon.

(c) The provisions of this section shall not apply to persons authorized by State or federal law to carry dangerous weapons in the performance of their duties or to any person who obtains a permit to carry a dangerous weapon at a parade, funeral procession, picket line, or demonstration from the sheriff or police chief, whichever is appropriate, of the locality where such parade, funeral procession, picket line, or demonstration is to take place. (1981, c. 684, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 684, s. 2, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1981.

SUBCHAPTER X. OFFENSES AGAINST THE PUBLIC SAFETY.

ARTICLE 36.

Offenses against the Public Safety.

§ 14-278. Willful injury to property of railroads.

If any person shall unlawfully and willfully, with intent to cause injury to any person passing over the railroad or damage to the equipment traveling on such road, put or place any matter or thing upon, over or near any railroad track, or destroy, injure, tamper with, or remove the roadbed, or any part thereof, or any rail, sill or other part of the fixtures appurtenant to or constituting or supporting any portion of the track of such railroad, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1838, c. 38; R. C., c. 34, ss. 99, 100; 1879, c. 255, s. 2; Code, s. 1098; Rev., s. 3754; 1911, c. 200; C. S., s. 4417; 1967, c. 1082, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall be imprisoned in the State's prison not less than four months nor more than 10 years, or fined, or both" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-279. Unlawful injury to property of railroads.

If any person shall unlawfully, but without intent to cause injury to any person or damage to equipment, commit any of the acts referred to in G.S. 14-278, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (R. C., c. 34, s. 101; Code, s. 1099; Rev., s. 3755; C. S., s. 4418; 1967, c. 1082, s. 2.)

§ 14-279.1. Unlawful impairment of operation of railroads.

Any person who, without authorization of the affected railroad company, shall willfully do or cause to be done any act to railroad engines, equipment, or rolling stock so as to impede or prevent movement of railroad trains or so as to impair the operation of railroad equipment shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1979, c. 387, s. 1.)

§ 14-280. Shooting or throwing at trains or passengers.

If any person shall willfully and unlawfully cast, throw or shoot any stone, rock, bullet, shot, pellet or other missile at, against, or into any railroad car, locomotive or train, or any person thereon, while such car or locomotive shall be in progress from one station to another, or while such car, locomotive or train shall be stopped for any purpose, the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by fine or imprisonment in the county jail or State's prison, at the discretion of the court. (1876-7, c. 4; Code, s. 1100; 1887, c. 19; Rev., s. 3763; 1911, c. 179; C. S., s. 4419.)

CASE NOTES

Intent a Question for Jury. — Where a defendant was indicted for shooting at a train with intent to injure it, and there was evidence tending to show that he was helplessly drunk at the time, the court properly left the question of intent to the jury, and it was for them to say whether the presumption had been rebutted. State v. Barbee, 92 N.C. 820 (1885).

Proof that Gun Was Unloaded. — If a gun be unloaded and this is relied on as a defense, in an action for shooting at a train, the fact must be shown by the defendant. State v. Hinson, 82 N.C. 597 (1880).

Proof of Conspiracy. — Upon trial for throwing stones at a train, it is not necessary to show a conspiracy, it appearing that the several defendants were not only present, but threw stones at different coaches of the same train. State v. Holder, 153 N.C. 606, 69 S.E. 66 (1910).

Indictment. — Upon a trial for throwing stones at a train, a charge in the bill that it was done "from one station to another" follows the form set out in the statute, and is not void vagueness and uncertainty. It is not necessary that the indictment contain the word "feloniously." State v. Holder, 153 N.C. 606, 69 S.E. 66 (1910).

But it must charge that the train was in actual motion or stopped for a temporary purpose. State v. Boyd, 86 N.C. 634 (1882).

§ 14-281. Operating trains and streetcars while intoxicated.

Any train dispatcher, telegraph operator, engineer, fireman, flagman, brakeman, switchman, conductor, motorman, or other employee of any steam, street, suburban or interurban railway company, who shall be intoxicated while engaged in running or operating, or assisting in running or operating, any railway train, shifting-engine, or street or other electric car, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 38; Code, s. 1972; 1891, c. 114; Rev., s. 3758; 1907, c. 330; C. S., s. 4420; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

§ 14-281.1. Throwing, dropping, etc., objects at sporting events.

It shall be unlawful for any person to throw, drop, pour, release, discharge, expose or place in an area where an athletic contest or sporting event is taking place any substance or object that shall be likely to cause injury to persons participating in or attending such contests or events or to cause damage to animals, vehicles, equipment, devices, or other things used in connection with such contests or events. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00) or imprisoned not more than 30 days, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1977, c. 772, s. 1.)

§ 14-282. Displaying false lights on seashore.

If any person shall make or display, or cause to be made or displayed, any false light or beacon on or near the seacoast, for the purpose of deceiving and misleading masters of vessels, and thereby putting them in danger of shipwreck, he shall be guilty of a Class H felony. (1831, c. 42; R. C., c. 34, s. 58; Code, s. 1024; Rev., s. 3430; C. S., s. 4421; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 16.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class H felony" for

"felony, and shall be imprisoned in the State's prison for not less than four months nor more more than ten years" at the end of the section. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-283. Exploding dynamite cartridges and bombs.

If any person shall fire off or explode, or cause to be fired off or exploded, except for mechanical purposes in a legitimate business, any dynamite cartridge, bomb or other explosive of a like nature, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1887, c. 364, s. 53; Rev., s. 3794; C. S., s. 4423.)

Cross References. — As to burglary with explosives, see § 14-57. As to willful injury with explosives, see § 14-49.

§ 14-284. Keeping for sale or selling explosives without a license.

If any dealer or other person shall sell or keep for sale any dynamite cartridges, bombs or other combustibles of a like kind, without first having obtained from the board of commissioners of the county where such person or dealer resides a license for that purpose, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1887, c. 364, ss. 1, 4; Rev., s. 3817; C. S., s. 4425.)

Local Modification. — Mecklenburg: 1981, c. 117, s. 1.

§ 14-284.1. Regulation of sale of explosives; reports; storage.

(a) No person shall sell or deliver any dynamite or other powerful explosives as hereinafter defined without being satisfied as to the identity of the purchaser or the one to receive such explosives and then only upon the written application signed by the person or agent of the person purchasing or receiving such explosive, which application must contain a statement of the purpose for which such explosive is to be used.

(b) All persons delivering or selling such explosives shall keep a complete record of all sales or deliveries made, including the amounts sold and delivered, the names of the purchasers or the one to whom the deliveries were made, the dates of all such sales or such deliveries and the use to be made of such explosive, and shall preserve such record and make the same available to any law-enforcement officer during business hours for a period of 12 months thereafter.

(c) All persons having dynamite or other powerful explosives in their possession or under their control shall at all times keep such explosives in a safe and secure manner, and when such explosives are not in the course of being used they shall be stored and protected against theft or other unauthorized possession.

(d) As used in this section, the term "powerful explosives" includes, but shall not be limited to, nitroglycerin, trinitrotoluene, and blasting caps, detonators and fuses for the explosion thereof.

(e) Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both.

(f) The provisions of this section are intended to apply only to sales to those who purchase for use. Nothing herein contained is intended to apply to a sale made by a manufacturer, jobber, or wholesaler to a retail merchant for resale by said merchant.

(g) Nothing herein contained shall be construed as repealing any law now prohibiting the sale of firecrackers or other explosives; nor shall this section be construed as authorizing the sale of explosives now prohibited by law. (1953, c. 877; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Applicability of Section to United States. — See Duvall v. United States, 312 F. Supp. 625 (E.D.N.C. 1970).

Only the highest degree of care is commensurate with the dangerous nature of dynamite. Tayloe v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 258 N.C. 766, 129 S.E.2d 512 (1963).

Such Care Is Required by Common Law and Statutes. — Both the common law and the statutes of North Carolina require persons having possession and control of dynamite to use the highest degree of care to keep the explosive safe and secure and to guard others against injury from it. Tayloe v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 258 N.C. 766, 129 S.E.2d 512 (1963).

Violation as Negligence. — A violation of a statute enacted for safety and protection of the general public, such as this section, is negligence per se. Duvall v. United States, 312 F. Supp. 625 (E.D.N.C. 1970).

A person in North Carolina who has explosives under his control or in his possession must take adequate precautions to insure that no person, and especially children, are able to gain possession of these dangerous devices. If the person fails to take such precautions, under North Carolina law he is negligent. Duvall v. United States, 312 F. Supp. 625 (E.D.N.C. 1970).

Discarding Dynamite Cap Is Negligence. — To discard or leave a dynamite cap where either a child or unversed adult might pick it up and cause it to explode is positive negligence. Tayloe v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 258 N.C. 766, 129 S.E.2d 512 (1963).

Dynamite Must Be Shown to Have Been Defendant's Property. — To hold a defendant liable for injury caused by dynamite there must be evidence, direct or circumstantial, sufficient to support a finding that it was his property, or property he had abandoned; otherwise, the verdict is a mere guess, which cannot be permitted. Tayloe v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 258 N.C. 766, 129 S.E.2d 512 (1963).

§ 14-284.2. Dumping of toxic substances.

(a) It shall be unlawful to deposit, place, dump, discharge, spill, release, burn, incinerate, or otherwise dispose of any toxic substances as defined in this section or radioactive material as defined in G.S. 104E-5 into the atmosphere, in the waters, or on land, except where such disposal is conducted pursuant to federal or State law, regulation, or permit. Any person who willfully violates the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class H felony. The fine authorized by G.S. 14-1.1(a)(8) for a conviction under this section may include a fine of up to one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) per day of violation.

(b) Within the meaning of this section, toxic substances are defined as the following heavy metals and halogenated hydrocarbons:

(1) Heavy metals: mercury, plutonium, selenium, thallium and uranium;

(2) Halogenated hydrocarbons: polychlorinated biphenyls, kepone.

(c) Within the meaning of this section, the phrase "law, regulation or permit" includes controls over equipment or machinery that emits substances into the atmosphere, in waters, or on land (such as federal or State controls over motor vehicle emissions) and controls over sources of substances that are publicly consumed (such as drinking water standards), as well as controls over substances directly released into the atmosphere, in waters, or on land (such as pesticide controls and water pollution controls).

(d) Within the meaning of this section the term "person" includes any individual, firm, partnership, limited partnership, corporation or association. (1979, c. 981, s. 2; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 17.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class H felony" for "felony, punishable upon conviction by a fine of not more than one hundred thousand dollars per day of violation, or by imprisonment, or by both, in the discretion of the court" at the end of the second sentence in subsection (a) and added the third sentence of subsection (a). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 administrative law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1185 (1980).

§ 14-285. Failing to enclose marl beds.

If any person shall open any marl bed without surrounding it with a lawful fence, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days: Provided, this shall not apply to any person whose marl bed is situated inside his own enclosure. (1887, cc. 235, 268; Rev., s. 3796; C. S., s. 4426.)

§ 14-286. Giving false fire alarms; molesting fire-alarm, fire-detection or fire-extinguishing system.

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to wantonly and willfully give or cause to be given, or to advise, counsel, or aid and abet anyone in giving, a false alarm of fire, or to break the glass key protector, or to pull the slide, arm, or lever of any station or signal box of any fire-alarm system, except in case of fire, or willfully misuse or damage a portable fire extinguisher, or in any way to willfully interfere with, damage, deface, molest, or injure any part or portion of any fire-alarm, fire-detection, smoke-detection or fire-extinguishing system. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1921, c. 46; C. S., s. 4426(a); 1961, c. 594; 1969, c. 1224, s. 5; 1975, c. 346.)

§ 14-286.1. Making false ambulance request.

It shall be unlawful for any person to willfully summon an ambulance or willfully report that an ambulance is needed when such person does not have good cause to believe that the services of an ambulance are needed. Every person convicted of willfully violating this section shall upon conviction be punished by a fine not to exceed fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment not to exceed 30 days or both such fine and imprisonment. (1967, c. 343, s. 6.)

§ 14-287. Leaving unused well open and exposed.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, after discontinuing the use of any well, to leave said well open and exposed; said well, after the use of same has been discontinued, shall be carefully and securely filled: Provided, that this shall not apply to wells on farms that are protected by curbing or board walls. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1923, c. 125; C. S., s. 4426(c); 1969, c. 1224, s. 5.)

§ 14-288. Unlawful to pollute any bottles used for beverages.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation having custody for the purpose of sale, distribution or manufacture of any beverage bottle, to place, cause or permit to be placed therein turpentine, varnish, wood alcohol, bleaching water, bluing, kerosene, oils, or any unclean or foul substance, or other offensive material, or to send, ship, return and deliver or cause or permit to be sent, shipped, returned or delivered to any producer of beverages, any bottle used as a container for beverages, and containing any turpentine, varnish, wood alcohol, bleaching water, bluing, kerosene, oils, or any unclean or foul substance, or other offensive material. Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined on the first offense, one dollar ($1.00) for each bottle so defiled, and for any subsequent offense not more than ten dollars ($10.00) for each bottle so defiled. (1929, c. 324, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 36A.

Riots and Civil Disorders.

§ 14-288.1. Definitions.

Unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the definitions in this section apply throughout this Article:

(1) "Chairman of the board of county commissioners": The chairman of the board of county commissioners or, in case of his absence or disability, the person authorized to act in his stead. Unless the governing body of the county has specified who is to act in lieu of the chairman with respect to a particular power or duty set out in this Article, the term "chairman of the board of county commissioners" shall apply to the person generally authorized to act in lieu of the chairman.

(2) "Dangerous weapon or substance": Any deadly weapon, ammunition, explosive, incendiary device, radioactive material or device, as defined in G.S. 14-288.8(c)(5), or any instrument or substance designed for a use that carriers a threat of serious bodily injury or destruction of property; or any instrument or substance that is capable of being used to inflict serious bodily injury, when the circumstances indicate a probability that such instrument or substance will be so used; or any part or ingredient in any instrument or substance included above, when the circumstances indicate a probability that such part or ingredient will be so used.

(3) "Declared state of emergency": A state of emergency found and proclaimed by the Governor under the authority of G.S. 14-288.15, by any mayor or other municipal official or officials under the authority of G.S. 14-288.12, by any chairman of the board of commissioners of any county or other county official or officials under the authority of

G.S. 14-288.13, by any chairman of the board of county commissioners acting under the authority of G.S. 14-288.14, by any chief executive official or acting chief executive official of any county or municipality acting under the authority of any other applicable statute or provision of the common law to preserve the public peace in a state of emergency, or by any executive official or military commanding officer of the United States or the State North Carolina who becomes primarily responsible under applicable law for the preservation of the public peace within any part of North Carolina.

(4) "Disorderly conduct": As defined in G.S. 14-288.4(a).

(5) "Law-enforcement officer": Any officer of the State of North Carolina or any of its political subdivisions authorized to make arrests; any other person authorized under the laws of North Carolina to make arrests and either acting within his territorial jurisdiction or in an area in which he has been lawfully called to duty by the Governor or any mayor or chairman of the board of county commissioners; any member of the armed forces of the United States, the North Carolina national guard, or the State defense militia called to duty in a state of emergency in North Carolina and made responsible for enforcing the laws of North Carolina or preserving the public peace; or any officer of the United States authorized to make arrests without warrant and assigned to duties that include preserving the public peace in North Carolina.

(6) "Mayor": The mayor or other chief executive official of a municipality or, in case of his absence or disability, the person authorized to act in his stead. Unless the governing body of the municipality has specified who is to act in lieu of the mayor with respect to a particular power or duty set out in this Article, the word "mayor" shall apply to the person generally authorized to act in lieu of the mayor.

(7) "Municipality": Any active incorporated city or town, but not including any sanitary district or other municipal corporation that is not a city or town. An "active" municipality is one which has conducted the most recent election required by its charter or the general law, whichever is applicable, and which has the authority to enact general police-power ordinances.

(8) "Public disturbance": Any annoying, disturbing, or alarming act or condition exceeding the bounds of social toleration normal for the time and place in question which occurs in a public place or which occurs in, affects persons in, or is likely to affect persons in a place to which the public or a substantial group has access. The places covered by this definition shall include, but not be limited to, highways, transport facilities, schools, prisons, apartment houses, places of business or amusement, or any neighborhood.

(9) "Riot": As defined in G.S. 14-288.2(a).

(10) "State of emergency": The condition that exists whenever, during times of public crisis, disaster, rioting, catastrophe, or similar public emergency, public safety authorities are unable to maintain public order or afford adequate protection for lives or property, or whenever the occurrence of any such condition is imminent. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1975, c. 718, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The statutory scheme of this Article is not unconstitutional in contravention of the First, Fourth, Ninth and Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19. State v. Dobbins, 9 N.C. App. 452, 176 S.E.2d 353 (1970), aff'd, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Action in Federal Court Attacking Constitutionality of Article. — The rule is that in addition to facial unconstitutionality of a statute, not susceptible of a limiting state court construction, involving fundamental constitutional rights, federal courts must abstain unless there is a showing of bad faith or harassment, and a showing that the enforcement of the statute will result in irreparable harm that is both great and immediate; a "chilling effect" on first amendment rights will not by itself justify intervention. Therefore, where there was no showing of a bad faith use of this article or that it had been used in a threatening or harassing manner against the plaintiffs or anyone else, and a voluntary dismissal was taken in the State court suit for injunctive relief, which relief had been granted pursuant to § 14-288.18, and there was no evidence that any of the plaintiffs had been arrested or threatened since they were charged with violating the article, an action attacking its constitutionality was dismissed. Fuller v. Scott, 328 F. Supp. 842 (M.D.N.C. 1971).

Subdivision (8) Not Essential Part of § 14-288.4(a)(4)a. — See State v. Strickland, 27 N.C. App. 40, 217 S.E.2d 758, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 512, 219 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

Applied in State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975); State v. Riddle, 45 N.C. App. 34, 262 S.E.2d 322 (1980).

§ 14-288.2. Riot; inciting to riot; punishments.

(a) A riot is a public disturbance involving an assemblage of three or more persons which by disorderly and violent conduct, or the imminent threat of disorderly and violent conduct, results in injury or damage to persons or property or creates a clear and present danger of injury or damage to persons or property.

(b) Any person who willfully engages in a riot is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in G.S. 14-3(a).

(c) Any person who willfully engages in a riot is guilty of a Class I felony, if:

(1) In the course and as a result of the riot there is property damage in excess of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) or serious bodily injury; or

(2) Such participant in the riot has in his possession any dangerous weapon or substance.

(d) Any person who willfully incites or urges another to engage in a riot, so that as a result of such inciting or urging a riot occurs or a clear and present danger of a riot is created, is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in G.S. 14-3(a).

(e) Any person who willfully incites or urges another to engage in a riot, and such inciting or urging is a contributing cause of a riot in which there is property damage in excess of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) or serious bodily injury, shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "Class I felony" for "felony punishable by a fine not to exceed ten thousand dollars or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both such fine and imprisonment" near the end of the introductory paragraph in subsection (c) and substituted "shall be punished as a Class H felon" for "is guilty of a felony punishable as provided in G.S. 14-2" at the end of subsection (e). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess.,

c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

This section is constitutionally valid. State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535, aff'd in part, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The scope of this section in no way infringes upon the freedom of nonviolent assemblage. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The reach of this section is not so pervasive as to include activity protected by the First Amendment. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The fact that correct application of this section requires a cross reference through interlocking statutory descriptions does not make this section so complex and imprecise as to be unconstitutional. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Riddle, 45 N.C. App. 34, 262 S.E.2d 322, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

There is no federal law restraining prosecutions for riot. Frinks v. North Carolina, 333 F. Supp. 169 (E.D.M.C. 1971), aff'd, 468 F.2d 639 (4th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 411 U.S. 920, 93 S. Ct. 1552, 36 L. Ed. 2d 314 (1973).

The 1964 Federal Civil Rights Act does not in any sense void the antiriot laws of North Carolina. Frinks v. North Carolina, 468 F.2d 639 (4th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 411 U.S. 920, 93 S. Ct. 1552, 36 L. Ed. 2d 314 (1973).

The key words of the statutory definition of riot are "three persons," "violent conduct," and "clear and present danger of injury or damage." State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The words of this section are not words so vague and imprecise that men of common intelligence and understanding must guess at their meanings. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

One purpose for codifying riot as an offense was to simplify the common law by setting out in concrete form the essential elements that constitute this crime. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The State has a paramount duty to maintain order not only in the streets but in schools, hospitals and other public places. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The advocacy of imminent lawless action is not protected by the First Amendment. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Advocacy of imminent lawless action is the only type of speech that can come within the purview of this section. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Damage or Injury or Threat Thereof. — A public disturbance involving three or more people, no matter how noisy or boisterous, cannot, under the statutory definition, be a riot unless violence or the threat of immediate violence which poses a clear and present danger to persons or property is present. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Under subsection (a) the capacity of members of the assemblage to inflict injury or damage to persons or property or to create the clear and present danger of such injury or damage is material to the crime of riot and is relevant to establish the proposition defendant was engaged in a riot. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The component elements that constitute the crime of riot are: (1) public disturbance; (2) assemblage; (3) three or more persons; (4) disorderly and violent conduct, or the imminent threat of such conduct; and (5) results in injury or damage to persons or property or creates a clear and present danger of injury or damage to persons or property. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975); State v. Riddle, 45 N.C. App. 34, 262 S.E.2d 322, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

The common-law crime of unlawful assembly, which is a component element of common-law riot, contains the following elements: (1) the participation of three or more persons; (2) a common intent to attain a purpose which will interfere with the rights of others by committing disorderly acts; and (3) a purpose to commit acts in such manner as would cause firm persons to apprehend a breach of peace. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Involuntariness Does Not Negate Fact of Assemblage. — While an assemblage of prison inmates is involuntary, the involuntariness does not negate the fact of an assemblage within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section. State v. Riddle, 45 N.C. App. 34, 262 S.E.2d 322, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

Warrant charging "engaging in a riot" states a proper cause of action. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Failure of Warrant to State Crime. — Warrant charging that defendant did unlawfully, willfully incite a riot by urging three or more persons to congregate at Prospect School, Robeson County, North Carolina, thereby creating a clear and present danger of a riot fails to state the commission of any criminal offense, much less the offense of inciting a riot. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Petition for Removal of Prosecution to Federal Court. — Where defendants, charged with inciting and/or engaging in a riot, alleged in their petition for removal to the United States District Court that they were peaceably exercising their rights to public accommodations, removal under 28 U.S.C. § 1443(1) was not required simply by reason of an artfully drafted petition. Nor was an evidentiary hearing required because the petition alleged a peaceful exercise of civil rights. Frinks v. North Carolina, 333 F. Supp. 169 (E.D.N.C. 1971), aff'd, 468 F.2d 639 (4th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 411 U.S. 920, 93 S. Ct. 1552, 36 L. Ed. 2d 314 (1973).

§ 14-288.3. Provisions of Article intended to supplement common law and other statutes.

The provisions of this Article are intended to supersede and extend the coverage of the common-law crimes of riot and inciting to riot. To the extent that such common-law offenses may embrace situations not covered under the provisions of this Article, however, criminal prosecutions may be brought for such crimes under the common law. All other provisions of the Article are intended to be supplementary and additional to the common law and other statutes of this State and, except as specifically indicated, shall not be construed to abrogate, abolish, or supplant other provisions of law. In particular, this Article shall not be deemed to abrogate, abolish, or supplant such common-law offenses as unlawful assembly, rout, conspiracy to commit riot or other criminal offenses, false imprisonment, and going about armed to the terror of the populace and other comparable public-nuisance offenses. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535 (1975).

§ 14-288.4. Disorderly conduct.

(a) Disorderly conduct is a public disturbance intentionally caused by any person who:

(1) Engages in fighting or other violent conduct or in conduct creating the threat of imminent fighting or other violence; or

(2) Makes or uses any utterance, gesture, display or abusive language which is intended and plainly likely to provoke violent retaliation and thereby cause a breach of the peace; or

(3) Takes possession of, exercises control over, or seizes any building or facility of any public or private educational institution without the specific authority of the chief administrative officer of the institution, or his authorized representative; or

(4) Refuses to vacate any building or facility of any public or private educational institution in obedience to:

a. An order of the chief administrative officer of the institution, or his authorized representative; or

b. An order given by any fireman or public health officer acting within the scope of his authority; or

c. If a state of emergency is occurring or is imminent within the institution, an order given by any law-enforcement officer acting within the scope of his authority; or

(5) Shall, after being forbidden to do so by the chief administrative officer, or his authorized representative, of any public or private educational institution;

a. Engage in any sitting, kneeling, lying down, or inclining so as to obstruct the ingress or egress of any person entitled to the use of any building or facility of the institution in its normal and intended use; or

b. Congregate, assembly, form groups or formations (whether organized or not), block, or in any manner otherwise interfere with the operation or functioning of any building or facility of the institution so as to interfere with the customary or normal use of the building or facility; or

(6) Disrupts, disturbs or interferes with the teaching of students at any public or private educational institution or engages in conduct which disturbs the peace, order or discipline at any public or private educational institution or on the grounds adjacent thereto.

As used in this section the term "building or facility" includes the surrounding grounds and premises of any building or facility used in connection with the operation or functioning of such building or facility.

(b) Any person who willfully engages in disorderly conduct is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment for not more than six months. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1971, c. 668, s. 1; 1973, c. 1347; 1975, c. 19, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Section 2, c. 668, Session Laws 1971, provides: "Every word, clause, sentence, paragraph, section, or other part of this act shall be interpreted in such manner as to be as expansive as the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of North Carolina permit."

CASE NOTES

Former Provisions Held Unconstitutional. — Former subdivision (a)(3) and a portion of subdivision (a)(2) as it stood before the 1971 amendment, which proscribed offensively coarse utterances and acts such as to alarm and disturb persons present, were unconstitutionally vague and overbroad. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972).

Fighting or Insulting Words May Constitutionally Be Prevented and Punished. — There are certain well defined and narrowly limited classes of speech, the prevention and punishment of which have never been though to raise any constitutional problem. These include the insulting or "fighting" words which by their very utterance tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972).

There can be no doubt that the General Assembly intended to prohibit "fighting words," words tending to cause an immediate breach of the peace willfully spoken in a public place, and that such an interpretation accurately expresses the legislative purpose. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972); State v. Orange, 22 N.C. App. 220, 206 S.E.2d 377, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 762, 208 S.E.2d 380 (1974), cert. denied, 420 U.S. 996, 95 S. Ct. 1431, 43 L. Ed. 2d 675 (1975).

Illustration — Words Not Protected by First Amendment. — When the defendant was informed that the black doctor, whom he had demended, was not immediately available he began shouting profanities, cursing all whites, and loudly voicing unfounded complaints. Such words and mode of communication in a hospital emergency room are not protected by the First Amendment. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972).

Behavior Not Rising to Disorderly Conduct. — The allegation that defendant created a "little bit of disturbance" earlier in a bar does not demonstrate sufficiently provocative behavior to rise to the level of disorderly conduct under this section. State v. Sanders, 295 N.C. 361, 245 S.E.2d 674 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 512, 259 S.E.2d 258 (1979).

Vague Language in Warrant Disregarded as Surplusage. — Unconstitutionally vague and overly broad language in a warrant for disorderly conduct could be disregarded as surplusage and the conviction under the warrant upheld where, absent the unconstitutional language, the warrant still alleged all the essential elements of subdivision (a)(2). State v. Cunningham, 34 N.C. App. 72, 237 S.E.2d 334 (1977).

Constitutionality of Subsection (a)(4)a. — Subsection (a)(4)a makes it clear that a violation of the statute occurs when a person intentionally refuses to vacate any building or facility of any public or private educational institution after having been ordered to do so by the chief administrative officer of the institution or his authorized representative, and the statute is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Strickland, 27 N.C. App. 40, 217 S.E.2d 758, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 512, 219 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

Legislative Guidelines Not Needed. — The validity of subsection (a)(4)a making it a misdemeanor to refuse to vacate an educational institution building after having been ordered to do so by the chief administrative officer of the institution or his representative does not depend upon the enactment by the legislature of detailed guidelines for the guidance of the specified school officials in the exercise of their responsibility to control the use of the buildings and facilities under their care. State v. Strickland, 27 N.C. App. 40, 217 S.E.2d 758, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 512, 219 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

Where the trial judge inadvertently failed to note the 1971 amendment to this section in his instructions to the jury and in so doing charged concerning disorderly conduct in the language of subdivisions (1) and (2) of subsection (a) as those subdivisions were originally enacted in 1969, the court's charge failed to limit the definition of disorderly conduct to embrace only actions and words likely to bring on an immediate breach of the peace, as would be required by the 1971 amendment. For this error in the charge, defendant is entitled to a new trial in the case charging him with failing to comply with a lawful order to disperse. State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535, aff'd in part, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Applied in State v. Carroll, 21 N.C. App. 530, 204 S.E.2d 908 (1974); State v. Clark, 22 N.C. App. 81, 206 S.E.2d 252 (1974); State v. Butts, 22 N.C. App. 504, 206 S.E.2d 806 (1974); State v. McLoud, 26 N.C. App. 297, 215 S.E.2d 872 (1975).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Applicability to Nonriot Situation. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. G. Patrick Hunter, Jr., Charlotte Police Attorney, 40 N.C.A.G. 166 (1970).

§ 14-288.5. Failure to disperse when commanded a misdemeanor; prima facie evidence.

(a) Any law-enforcement officer or public official responsible for keeping the peace may issue a command to disperse in accordance with this section if he reasonably believes that a riot, or disorderly conduct by an assemblage of three or more persons, is occurring. The command to disperse shall be given in a manner reasonably calculated to be communicated to the assemblage.

(b) Any person who fails to comply with a lawful command to disperse is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment for not more than six months.

(c) If any person remains at the scene of any riot, or disorderly conduct by an assemblage of three or more persons, following a command to disperse and after a reasonable time for dispersal has elapsed, it is prima facie evidence that the person so remaining is willfully engaging in the riot or disorderly conduct, as the case may be. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section is constitutional. State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535, aff'd in part, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Failure to Disperse Where No Disorderly Conduct was Occurring. — Under this section the failure to disperse when commanded by an officer would be an offense where no disorderly conduct was occurring so long as it is shown on trial that the officer had reasonable grounds to believe that disorderly conduct was occurring by an assemblage of three or more persons. State v. Orange, 22 N.C. App. 220, 206 S.E.2d 377, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 762, 208 S.E.2d 380 (1974), cert. denied, 420 U.S. 996, 95 S. Ct. 1431, 43 L. Ed. 2d 675 (1975).

Evidence Required. — It was necessary under this section for the State to present evidence of defendant's failure to disperse on command to do so and that the officer had reasonable ground to believe that disorderly conduct was occurring by an assemblage of three or more persons. State v. Thomas, 28 N.C. App. 495, 221 S.E.2d 749 (1976).

Evidence sufficient to support jury's finding that defendant was guilty of charge of failing to comply with lawful command to disperse. State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535, aff'd in part, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Applied in State v. Clark, 22 N.C. App. 81, 206 S.E.2d 252 (1974).

Cited in Fuller v. Scott, 328 F. Supp. 842 (M.D.N.C. 1971).

§ 14-288.6. Looting; trespass during emergency.

(a) Any person who enters upon the premises of another without legal justification when the usual security of property is not effective due to the occurrence or aftermath of riot, insurrection, invasion, storm, fire, explosion, flood, collapse, or other disaster or calamity is guilty of the misdemeanor of trespass during emergency and is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-3(a).

(b) Any person who commits the crime of trespass during emergency and, without legal justification, obtains or exerts control over, damages, ransacks, or destroys the property of another is guilty of the felony of looting and shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class I felon" for "is punishable by a fine not to exceed ten thousand dollars or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both such fine and imprisonment" at the end of subsection (b). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-288.7. Transporting dangerous weapon or substance during emergency; possessing off premises; exceptions.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, it is unlawful for any person to transport or possess off his own premises any dangerous weapon or substance in any area:

(1) In which a declared state of emergency exists; or

(2) Within the immediate vicinity of which a riot is occurring.

(b) This section does not apply to persons exempted from the provisions of G.S. 14-269 with respect to any activities lawfully engaged in while carrying out their duties.

(c) Any person who violates any provision of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in G.S. 14-3(a). (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Penalty Not Limited to that Prescribed by Ordinance. — Since this section itself makes the possession of a disassembled shotgun and the shotgun shells in the area in question a criminal offense and specifies the penalty therefor, and since the warrant relating to this offense was founded upon the statute, not the ordinance, the sentence imposable in this case was not limited to the penalty prescribed for such conduct by the ordinance. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Applied in State v. Dobbins, 9 N.C. App. 452, 176 S.E.2d 353 (1970).

§ 14-288.8. Manufacture, assembly, possession, storage, transportation, sale, purchase, delivery, or acquisition of weapon of mass death and destruction; exceptions.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, it is unlawful for any person to manufacture, assemble, possess, store, transport, sell, offer to sell, purchase, offer to purchase, deliver or give to another, or acquire any weapon of mass death and destruction.

(b) This section does not apply to:

(1) Persons exempted from the provisions of G.S. 14-269 with respect to any activities lawfully engaged in while carrying out their duties.

(2) Importers, manufacturers, dealers, and collectors of firearms, ammunition, or destructive devices validly licensed under the laws of the United States or the State of North Carolina, while lawfully engaged in activities authorized under their licenses.

(3) Persons under contract with the United States, the State of North Carolina, or any agency of either government, with respect to any activities lawfully engaged in under their contracts.

(4) Inventors, designers, ordnance consultants and researchers, chemists, physicists, and other persons lawfully engaged in pursuits designed to enlarge knowledge or to facilitate the creation, development, or manufacture of weapons of mass death and destruction intended for use in a manner consistent with the laws of the United States and the State of North Carolina.

(c) The term "weapon of mass death and destruction" includes:

(1) Any explosive, incendiary, poison gas or radioactive material:

a. Bomb; or

b. Grenade; or

c. Rocket having a propellant charge of more than four ounces; or

d. Missile having an explosive or incendiary charge of more than one-quarter ounce; or

e. Mine; or

f. Device similar to any of the devices described above; or

(2) Any type of weapon (other than a shotgun or a shotgun shell of a type particularly suitable for sporting purposes) which will, or which may be readily converted to, expel a projectile by the action of an explosive or other propellant, and which has any barrell with a bore of more than one-half inch in diameter; or

(3) Any semiautomatic firearm capable of firing 31 rounds or more without reloading, any firearm capable of fully automatic fire, any shotgun with a barrel of less than 18 inches in length or an overall length of less than 26 inches; or

(4) Any combination of parts either designed or intended for use in converting any device into any weapon described above and from which a weapon of mass death and destruction may readily be assembled;

(5) Radioactive material, which means any solid, liquid or gas which emits or may emit ionizing radiation spontaneously or which becomes capable of producing radiation or nuclear particles when controls or triggering mechanisms of any associated device are operable.

The term "weapon of mass death and destruction" does not include any device which is neither designed nor redesigned for use as a weapon; any device, although originally designed for use as a weapon, which is redesigned for use as a signaling, pyrotechnic, line-throwing, safety, or similar device; surplus ordnance sold, loaned, or given by the Secretary of the Army pursuant to the provisions of section 4684(2), 4685, or 4686 of Title 10 of the United States Code; or any other device which the Secretary of the Treasurer finds is not likely to be used as a weapon, is an antique, or is a rifle which the owner intends to use solely for sporting purposes, in accordance with Chapter 44 of Title 18 of the United States Code.

(d) Any person who violates any provision of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in G.S. 14-3(a). (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1975, c. 718, ss. 6, 7; 1977, c. 810.)

§ 14-288.9. Assault on emergency personnel; punishments.

(a) An assault upon emergency personnel is an assault upon any person coming within the definition of "emergency personnel" which is committed in an area:

(1) In which a declared state of emergency exists; or

(2) Within the immediate vicinity of which a riot is occurring or is imminent.

(b) The term "emergency personnel" includes law-enforcement officers, firemen, ambulance attendants, utility workers, doctors, nurses, and other persons lawfully engaged in providing essential services during the emergency.

(c) Any person who commits an assault upon emergency personnel is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in G.S. 14-3(a). Any person who commits an assault upon emergency personnel with or through the use of any dangerous weapon or substance shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class I felon" for "is guilty of a felony punishable by a fine not to exceed ten thousand dollars or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both such fine and imprisonment" at the end of subsection (c). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974).

§ 14-288.10. Frisk of persons during violent disorders; frisk of curfew violators.

(a) Any law-enforcement officer may frisk any person in order to discover any dangerous weapon or substance when he has reasonable grounds to believe that the person is or may become unlawfully involved in an existing riot and when the person is close enough to such riot that he could become immediately involved in the riot. The officer may also at that time inspect for the same purpose the contents of any personal belongings that the person has in his possession.

(b) Any law-enforcement officer may frisk any person he finds violating the provisions of a curfew proclaimed under the authority of G.S. 14-288.12, 14-288.13, 14-288.14, or 14-288.15 or any other applicable statutes or provisions of the common law in order to discover whether the person possesses any dangerous weapon or substance. The officer may also at that time inspect for the same purpose the contents of any personal belongings that the person has in his possession. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.11. Warrants to inspect vehicles in riot areas or approaching municipalities during emergencies.

(a) Notwithstanding the provisions of Article 4 of Chapter 15, any law-enforcement officer may, under the conditions specified in this section, obtain a warrant authorizing inspection of vehicles under the conditions and for the purpose specified in subsection (b).

(b) The inspection shall be for the purpose of discovering any dangerous weapon or substance likely to be used by one who is or may become unlawfully involved in a riot. The warrant may be sought to inspect:

(1) All vehicles entering or approaching a municipality in which a state of emergency exists; or

(2) All vehicles which might reasonably be regarded as being within or approaching the immediate vicinity of an existing riot.

(c) The warrant may be issued by any judge or justice of the General Court of Justice.

(d) The issuing official shall issue the warrant only when he has determined that the one seeking the warrant has been specifically authorized to do so by the head of the law-enforcement agency of which the affiant is a member, and:

(1) If the warrant is being sought for the inspection of vehicles entering or approaching a municipality, that a state of emergency exists within the municipality; or

(2) If the warrant being sought is for the inspection of vehicles within or approaching the immediate vicinity of a riot, that a riot is occurring within that area.

Facts indicating the basis of these determinations must be stated in an affidavit and signed by the affiant under oath or affirmation.

(e) The warrant must be signed by the issuing official and must bear the hour and date of its issuance.

(f) The warrant must indicate whether it is for the inspection of vehicles entering or approaching a municipality or whether it is for the inspection of vehicles within or approaching the immediate vicinity of a riot. In either case, it must also specify with reasonable precision the area within which it may be exercised.

(g) The warrant shall become invalid 24 hours following its issuance and must bear a notation to that effect.

(h) Warrants authorized under this section shall not be regarded as search warrants for the purposes of application of Article 4 of Chapter 15.

(i) Nothing in this section is intended to prevent warrantless frisks, searches, and inspections to the extent that they may be constitutional and consistent with common law and governing statutes. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Article 4 of Chapter 15, referred to in this section, has been repealed. See now § 15A-241 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Search of Automobile without Warrant is Reasonable. — Because of its mobility, a search of an automobile without a warrant is reasonable if it is based on probable cause. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.) cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Search May Be Conducted After Automobile Transported to Police Station. — If there is probable cause to search the automobile at the place where it was stopped, it matters not that the search is conducted sometime later after the automobile has been transported to the police station. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

§ 14-288.12. Powers of municipalities to enact ordinances to deal with states of emergency.

(a) The governing body of any municipality may enact ordinances designed to permit the imposition of prohibitions and restrictions during a state of emergency.

(b) The ordinances authorized by this section may permit prohibitions and restrictions:

(1) Of movements of people in public places;

(2) Of the operation of offices, business establishments, and other places to or from which people may travel or at which they may congregate;

(3) Upon the possession, transportation, sale, purchase, and consumption of intoxicating liquors;

(4) Upon the possession, transportation, sale, purchase, storage, and use of dangerous weapons and substances, and gasoline; and

(5) Upon other activities or conditions the control of which may be reasonably necessary to maintain order and protect lives or property during the state of emergency.

The ordinances may delegate to the mayor of the municipality the authority to determine and proclaim the existence of a state of emergency, and to impose those authorized prohibitions and restrictions appropriate at a particular time.

(c) This section is intended to supplement and confirm the powers conferred by G.S. 160-52, 160-200(7), and all other general and local laws authorizing municipalities to enact ordinances for the protection of the public health and safety in times of riot or other grave civil disturbance or emergency.

(d) Any ordinance of a type authorized by this section promulgated prior to June 19, 1969 shall, if otherwise valid, continue in full force and effect without reenactment.

(e) Any person who violates any provision of an ordinance or a proclamation enacted or proclaimed under the authority of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in G.S. 14-4. (1969, c. 869, s.1.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-288.13.

Editor's Note. — Sections 160-52 and 160-200, referred to in this section, have been repealed. For the general ordinance-making power of municipalities, see now § 160A-174.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The contention that this statute is unconstitutionally vague in that it fails to provide a standard for the exercise of the discretion conferred is clearly without merit State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Freedom of Travel May Be Limited. — The liberty of every American citizen freely to come and to go must frequently, in the face of sudden danger, be temporarily limited or suspended. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Freedom of travel like freedom of speech may be subject to reasonable limitations as to time and place. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Incidental Restriction on Freedom of Speech May Be No Greater than Essential to Government Interest. — The standard that has developed where regulation of conduct has an incidental effect on speech is that the incidental restriction of First Amendment freedoms can be no greater than is essential to the furtherance of the government interest which is being protected. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Control of Civil Disorders Is Within Police Power. — Control of civil disorders that may threaten the very existence of the State is certainly within the police power of government. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Section Delegates Portion of Police Power to Municipalities. — By this section, the State has delegated a portion of its police power to its municipalities. This statute authorizes the city to enact an ordinance prohibiting the movement of people in public places "during a state of emergency" as defined in § 14-288.1(10). State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

The "state of emergency" is the condition precedent to the exercise of this power by the city. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Only when local law-enforcement is no longer able to maintain order and and protect lives and property may the emergency powers be invoked. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Maintenance of Public Order Is Duty of Executive. — The responsibility for maintaining public peace on a day-to-day basis is lodged with the executive branch of government. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Public peace in our cities may be suddenly breached by massive civil disorder. Dealing with such an emergency situation requires an immediacy of action that is not possible for judges. It would be highly inappropriate for the court, removed from the primary responsibility for maintaining order and with the benefit of time for reflection not available to the mayor, to substitute its judgment of necessity for his. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Precise Definition Would Destroy Executive's Broad Discretion. — Attempting to precisely define under what specific conditions each of the authorized restrictions might be imposed would destroy the "broad discretion" necessary for the executive to deal with an emergency situation. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Mayor's Power Subject to Definite Standard. — The mayor's power to impose the restraints enumerated in this section and Asheville City Ordinance No. 613 is subject to a narrow, objective, and definite standard. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Standard Is that which Applies to Executive's Use of Military. — The standard is essentially the same as that which applies to the executive's inherent power to restore order through the use of the military. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.) cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Mayor's Actions Subject to Judicial Review. — The executive's decision that civil control has broken down to the point where emergency measures are necessary is not conclusive or free from judicial review, but the scope of review must be limited to a determination of whether the mayor's actions were taken in good faith and whether there is some factual basis for his decision that the restrictions he imposed were necessary to maintain order. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Where actual violence, good faith, and a relation between means and ends are shown, an executive's finding of necessity will be upheld in court. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Declaration of State of Emergency Must Be Necessary to Preserve Order. — The declaration of a state of emergency and the restrictions imposed pursuant to it must appear to have been reasonably necessary for the preservation of order. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Imposition of Curfew is Proper Exercise of Police Power. — Whatever the cause, given the fact of widespread riotous conditions and criminal activities, the restoration of "domestic tranquility" becomes, not alone a constitutional right, but a constitutional obligation. The temporary imposition of a curfew, limited in time and reasonably made necessary by conditions prevailing, is a legitimate and proper exercise of the police power of public authority. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Prohibiting Use of Public Parks at Night and Forbidding Transportation of Arms. — The restrictions imposed by a proclamation which only prohibited use of the public parks at night or forbade transportation of dangerous arms or substances were clearly among those authorized by subsection (b) of this section. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

Arrest without Warrant Lawful. — The presence of the defendant and his driver upon the streets, while the curfew was in effect, was a violation of the ordinance, declared thereby to be a misdemeanor, unless they were traveling for an excepted purpose. The arresting officer having at least reasonable ground to believe that the defendant had committed a misdemeanor in his presence, the arrest without a warrant was lawful. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Search Incident to Arrest. — The search of the defendant's person was incidental to such arrest and, consequently, the four shotgun shells found tucked in the tops of his boots were properly admitted in evidence. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Burden of Proof. — The defendant's contention that the burden was on the State to prove that his presence on the streets was for a purpose other than those excepted by the ordinance and by the curfew proclamation is without merit. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

A defendant, charged with the crime, who seeks protection by reason of the exception has the burden of proving that he comes within the same. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

§ 14-288.13. Powers of counties to enact ordinances to deal with states of emergency.

(a) The governing body of any county may enact ordinances designed to permit the imposition of prohibitions and restrictions during a state of emergency.

(b) The ordinances authorized by this section may permit the same prohibitions and restrictions to be imposed as enumerated in G.S. 14-288.12(b). The ordinances may delegate to the chairman of the board of county commissioners the authority to determine and proclaim the existence of a state of emergency, and to impose those authorized prohibitions and restrictions appropriate at a particular time.

(c) No ordinance enacted by a county under the authority of this section shall apply within the corporate limits of any municipality, or within any area of the county over which the municipality has jurisdiction to enact general police-power ordinances, unless the municipality by resolution consents to its application.

(d) Any person who violates any provision of an ordinance or a proclamation enacted or proclaimed under the authority of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in G.S. 14-4. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The limited delegation of the State's police power which the legislature deemed wise to grant by this Article to local governmental units in order to assist them in maintaining public peace and order during periods of emergency is constitutional. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

Responsibilities and Powers of Local Executive Officials. — This Article wisely provides for placing in local executive officials, whose first and primary duty it is to maintain public order, powers adequate to their responsibilities and the initial decision as to whether a "state of emergency" in fact exists must be made by those who bear primary responsibility and who are closest to the scene. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

The local official may not act arbitrarily or without some factual basis to support his determination that a state of emergency in fact exists, and the prohibitions and restrictions which he imposes must be among those authorized by this section. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

And His Decision Is Subject to Review. — The decision of the responsible local official as to whether a "state of emergency" in fact exists, while entitled to great respect, is not conclusive or entirely free from judicial review. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

The scope of judicial review. in cases reviewing the validity of of a proclamation is limited to the type of review which traditionally is for the judge, and not for the jury, to perform. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

Proclamation Need Not Make Reference to Section. — That a proclamation makes no reference to this section in no way affects its validity; the existence of the statute, not reference to it in the proclamation, is all that matters. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

Uniform Enforcement. — That the activities of an organization may have been a major factor in bringing on the conditions which prompted declaration of the state of emergency furnishes no valid support for the contention that that organization and its members were unfairly discriminated against, if once the proclamation was issued, it was uniformly enforced as to all. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

§ 14-288.14. Power of chairman of board of county commissioners to extend emergency restrictions imposed in municipality.

(a) The chairman of the board of commissioners of any county who has been requested to do so by a mayor may by proclamation extend the effect of any one or more of the prohibitions and restrictions imposed in that mayor's municipality pursuant to the authority granted in G.S. 14-288.12. The chairman may extend such prohibitions and restrictions to any area within his county in which he determines it to be necessary to assist in controlling the state of emergency within the municipality. No prohibition or restriction extended by proclamation by the chairman under the authority of this section shall apply within the limits of any other municipality, or within any area of the county over which the municipality has jurisdiction to enact general police-power ordinances, unless that other municipality by resolution consents to its application.

(b) Whenever any chairman of the board of county commissioners extends the effect of municipal prohibitions and restrictions under the authority of this section to any area of the county, it shall be deemed that a state of emergency has been validly found and declared with respect to such area of the county.

(c) Any chairman of a board of county commissioners extending prohibitions and restrictions under the authority of this section must take reasonable steps to give notice of its terms to those likely to be affected. The chairman of the board of commissioners shall proclaim the termination of any prohibitions and restrictions extended under the authority of this section upon:

(1) His determination that they no longer necessary; or

(2) The determination of the board of county commissioners that they are no longer necessary; or

(3) The termination of the prohibitions and restrictions within the municipality.

(d) The powers authorized under this section may be exercised whether or not the county has enacted ordinances under the authority of G.S. 14-288.13. Exercise of this authority shall not preclude the imposition of prohibitions and restrictions under any ordinances enacted by the county under the authority of G.S. 14-288.13.

(e) Any person who violates any provision of any prohibition or restriction extended by proclamation under the authority of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment for not more than 30 days. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.15. Authority of Governor to exercise control in emergencies.

(a) When the Governor determines that a state of emergency exists in any part of North Carolina, he may exercise the powers conferred by this section if he further finds that local control of the emergency is insufficient to assure adequate protection for lives and property.

(b) Local control shall be deemed insufficient only if:

(1) Needed control cannot be imposed locally because local authorities responsible for preservation of the public peace have not enacted appropriate ordinances or issued appropriate proclamations as authorized by G.S. 14-288.12, 14-288.13, or 14-288.14; or

(2) Local authorities have not taken implementing steps under such ordinances or proclamations, if enacted or proclaimed, for effectual control of the emergency that has arisen; or

(3) The area in which the state of emergency exists has spread across local jurisdictional boundaries and the legal control measures of the jurisdictions are conflicting or uncoordinated to the extent that efforts to protect life and property are, or unquestionably will be, severely hampered; or

(4) The scale of the emergency is so great that it exceeds the capability of local authorities to cope with it.

(c) The Governor when acting under the authority of this section may:

(1) By proclamation impose prohibitions and restrictions in all areas affected by the state of emergency; and

(2) Give to all participating State and local agencies and officers such directions as may be necessary to assure coordination among them. These directions may include the designation of the officer or agency responsible for directing and controlling the participation of all public agencies and officers in the emergency. The Governor may make this designation in any manner which, in his discretion, seems most likely to be effective. Any law-enforcement officer participating in the control of a state of emergency in which the Governor is exercising control under this section shall have the same power and authority as a sheriff throughout the territory to which he is assigned.

(d) The Governor in his discretion, as appropriate to deal with the emergency then occuring or likely to occur, may impose any one or more or all of the types of prohibitions and restrictions enumerated in G.S. 14-288.12(b), and may amend or rescind any prohibitions and restrictions imposed by local authorities.

(e) Any person who violates any provision of a proclamation of the Governor issued under the authority of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment for not more than six months. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.16. Effective time, publication, amendment, and recision of proclamations.

(a) This section applies to proclamations issued under the authority of G.S. 14-288.12, 14-288.13, 14-288.14, and 14-288.15, and any other applicable statutes and provisions of the common law.

(b) All prohibitions and restrictions imposed by proclamation shall take effect immediately upon publication of the proclamation in the area affected unless the proclamation sets a later time. For the purpose of requiring compliance, publication may consist of reports of the substance of the prohibitions and restrictions in the mass communications media serving the affected area or other effective methods of disseminating the necessary information quickly. As soon as practicable, however, appropriate distribution of the full text of any proclamation shall be made. This subsection shall not be governed by the provisions of G.S. 1-597.

(c) Prohibitions and restrictions may be extended as to time or area, amended, or rescinded by proclamation. Prohibitions and restrictions imposed by proclamation under the authority of G.S. 14-288.12, 14-288.13, and 14-288.14 shall expire five days after their last imposition unless sooner terminated under G.S. 14-288.14(c)(3), by proclamation, or by the governing body of the county or municipality in question. Prohibitions and restrictions imposed by proclamation of the Governor shall expire five days after their last imposition unless sooner terminated by proclamation of the Governor. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.17. Municipal and county ordinances may be made immediately effective if state of emergency exists or is imminent.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, whether general or special, relating to the promulgation or publication of ordinances by any municipality or county, this section shall control with respect to any ordinances authorized by G.S. 14-288.11 and 14-288.12.

(b) Upon proclamation by the mayor or chairman of the board of county commissioners that a state of emergency exists within the municipality or the county, or is imminent, any ordinance enacted under the authority of this article shall take effect immediately unless the ordinance sets a later time. If the effect of this section is to cause an ordinance to go into effect sooner than it otherwise could under the law applicable to the municipality or county, the mayor or chairman of the board of county commissioners, as the case may be, shall take steps to cause reports of the substance of any such ordinance to be disseminated in a fashion that such substance will likely be communicated to the public in general, or to those who may be particularly affected by the ordinance if it does not affect the public generally. As soon as practicable thereafter, appropriate distribution or publication of the full text of any such ordinance shall be made. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.18. Injunction to cope with emergencies at public and private educational institutions.

(a) The chief administrative officer, or his authorized representative, of any public or private educational institution may apply to any superior court judge for injunctive relief if a state of emergency exists or is imminent within his institution. For the purposes of this section, the superintendent of any city or county administrative school unit shall be deemed the chief administrative officer of any public elementary or secondary school within his unit.

(b) Upon a finding by a superior court judge, to whom application has been made under the provisions of this section, that a state of emergency exists or is imminent within a public or private educational institution by reason of riot, disorderly conduct by three or more persons, or the imminent threat of riot, the judge may issue an injunction containing provisions appropriate to cope with the emergency then occurring or threatening. The injunction may be addressed to named persons or named or described groups of persons as to whom there is satisfactory cause for believing that they are contributing to the existing or imminent state of emergency, and ordering such persons or groups of persons to take or refrain or desist from taking such various actions as the judge finds it appropriate to include in his order. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section envisions an action in the nature of a civil action for a permanent injunction, in which the parties to be enjoined are named or described with at least a modicum of particularity. State ex. rel. Moore v. John Doe, 19 N.C. App. 131, 198 S.E.2d 236, appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 663 (1973).

§ 14-288.19. Governor's power to order evacuation of public building.

(a) When it is determined by the Governor that a great public crisis, disaster, riot, catastrophe, or any other similar public emergency exists, or the occurrence of any such condition is imminent, and, in the Governor's opinion it is necessary to evacate any building owned or controlled by any department, agency, institution, school, college, board, division, commission or subdivision of the State in order to maintain public order and safety or to afford adequate protection for lives or property, the Governor is hereby authorized to issue an order of evacuation directing all persons within the building to leave the building and its premises forthwith. The order shall be delivered to any law-enforcement officer or officer of the national guard, and such officer shall, by a suitable public address system, read the order to the occupants of the building and demand that the occupants forthwith evacuate said building within the time specified in the Governor's order.

(b) Any person who willfully refuses to leave the building as directed in the Governor's order shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment for not more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1969, c. 1129.)

§ 14-288.20. Certain weapons at civil disorders.

(a) The definitions in G.S. 14-288.1 do not apply to this section. As used in this section:

(1) The term "civil disorder" means any public disturbance involving acts or violence by assemblages of three or more persons, which causes an immediate danger of damage or injury to the property or person of any other individual or results in damage or injury to the property or person of any other individual.

(2) The term "firearm" means any weapon which is designed to or may readily be converted to expel any projectile by the action of an explosive; or the frame or receiver of such a weapon.

(3) The term "explosive or incendiary device" means (i) dynamite and all other forms of high explosives, (ii) any explosive bomb, grenade, missile, or similar device, and (iii) any incendiary bomb or grenade, fire bomb, or similar device, including any device which (i) consists of or includes a breakable container including a flammable liquid or compound, and a wick composed or any material which, when ignited, is capable of igniting that flammable liquid or compound, and (ii) can be carried or thrown by one individual acting alone.

(4) The term "law-enforcement officer" means any officer of the United States, any state, any political subdivision of a state, or the District of Columbia charged with the execution of the laws thereof; civil officers of the United States; officers and soldiers of the organized militia and state guard of any state or territory of the United States, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the District of Columbia; and members of the armed forces of the United States.

(b) A person is guilty of a Class I felony, if he:

(1) Teaches or demonstrates to any other person the use, application, or making of any firearm, explosive or incendiary device, or technique capable of causing injury or death to persons, knowing or having reason to know or intending that the same will be unlawfully employed for use in, or in furtherance of, a civil disorder or

(2) Assembles with one or more persons for the purpose of training with, practicing with, or being instructed in the use of any firearm, explosive or incendiary device, or technique capable of causing injury or death to persons, intending to employ unlawfully the training, practicing, instruction, or technique for use in, or in furtherance of, a civil disorder.

(c) Nothing contained in this section shall make unlawful any act of any law-enforcement officer which is performed in the lawful performance of his official duties. (1981, c. 880, ss. 1, 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 880, s. 3, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Lotteries and Gaming.

§ 14-289. Advertising lotteries.

Except in connection with a lawful raffle as provided in G.S. 14-292.1, if anyone by writing or printing or by circular or letter or in any other way, advertise or publish an account of a lottery, whether within or without this State, stating how, when or where the same is to be or has been drawn, or what are the prizes therein or any of them, or the price of a ticket or any share or interest therein, or where or how it may be obtained, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1887, c. 211; Rev., s. 3725; C. S., s. 4427; 1979, c. 893, s. 3.)

Local Modification. — (As to Article 37) Carteret: 1971, c. 221; Cleveland: 1971, c. 627; Jones: 1971, c. 627; 1977, c. 157; Lincoln: 1971, c. 627; 1977, c. 66; Onslow: 1973, c. 1080; 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1169, repealing; Pamlico: 1971, c. 627; 1977, c. 157; Polk: 1971, c. 627; Rutherford: 1971, c. 627; Union: 1971, c. 627; 1977, c. 157.

Legal Periodicals. — See the discussion in 5 N.C.L. Rev. 31.

§ 14-290. Dealing in lotteries.

Except in connection with a lawful raffle as provided in G.S. 14-292.1, if any person shall open, set on foot, carry on, promote, make or draw, publicly or privately, a lottery, by whatever name, style or title the same may be denominated or known; or if any person shall, by such way and means, expose or set to sale any house, real estate, goods, chattels, cash, written evidence of debt, certificates of claims or any other thing of value whatsoever, every person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not exceeding two thousand dollars ($2,000) or imprisoned not exceeding six months, or both, in the discretion of the court. Any person who engages in disposing of any species of property whatsoever, including money and evidences of debt, or in any manner distributes gifts or prizes upon tickets, bottle crowns, bottle caps, seals on containers, other devices or certificates sold for that purpose, shall be held liable to prosecution under this section. Any person who shall have in his possession any tickets, certificates or orders used in the operation of any lottery shall be held liable under this section, and the mere possession of such tickets shall be prima facie evidence of the violation of this section. (1834, c. 19, s. 1; R. C., c. 34, s. 69; 1874-5, c. 96; Code, s. 1047; Rev., s. 3726; C. S., s. 4428; 1933, c. 434; 1937, c. 157; 1979, c. 893, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

In General. — A lottery may be defined as any scheme for the distribution of prizes, by lot or chance, by which one, on paying money or giving any other thing of value to another, obtains a token which entitles him to receive a larger or smaller value, or nothing, as some formula of chance may determine. State v. Lipkin, 169 N.C. 265, 84 S.E. 340 (1915). Statutes, such as this section, regulating such schemes violate neither the State nor federal Constitution. They are remedial and should be liberally construed. And the fact that the device is an advertising scheme of an otherwise legitimately run business concern does not prevent the section from applying. Brevard Mfg. Co. v. Benjamin & Sons, 172 N.C. 53, 89 S.E. 797 (1916). See State v. Lumsden, 89 N.C. 572 (1883).

This section refers to persons who promote, make or draw, publicly or privately, a lottery, by whatever name, while § 14-291.1, deals only with those persons who shall "sell, barter or cause to be sold or bartered, any ticket, token, certificate or order," etc. Thus it is apparent that the two statutes not only act upon different persons and serve purposes which are not the same but also they deal with different conditions. One inveighs against trafficking in lottery tickets and the other is designed to affect those persons engaged in promoting a particular kind of lottery. State v. Robinson, 224 N.C. 412, 30 S.E.2d 320 (1944).

Section Not Applicable To Purchaser. — This section does not embrace persons who buy lottery tickets. State v. Bryant, 74 N.C. 207 (1876).

Lottery Privilege Not a Contract. — A right, conferred in the charter of a corporation, to dispose of property by means of lottery tickets, is not a contract between the corporation and the State, but a mere privilege or license, and is revocable at will by the legislative power. State v. Morris, 77 N.C. 512 (1877).

Note for Lottery Contract Unenforceable. — Notes given in pursuance of a contract prohibited by this section are for an illegal consideration, and collection thereof is not enforcible in the courts of the State. Brevard Mfg. Co. v. Benjamin & Sons, 172 N.C. 53, 89 S.E. 797 (1916).

Surety to Lottery Contract. — A bond guaranteeing the performance of a "trade expansion contract" which is contrary to this section, is as unenforceable against the surety thereon as the contract upon which it is founded. Basnight v. American Mfg. Co., 174 N.C. 206, 93 S.E. 734 (1917).

Amendment of 1933 Creating Presumption From Possession of Tickets Is Valid. — The 1933 amendment to this section which makes the possession of tickets, etc., used in the operating of a lottery prima facie evidence of violation of the section, is constitutional and valid, the presumption being a rational one. State v. Fowler, 205 N.C. 608, 172 S.E. 191 (1934).

Actual Physical Possession of Tickets Unnecessary. — The possession of lottery tickets sufficient to raise prima facie evidence of the violation of this section, need not be actual physical possession, and they need not be found on defendant's person, it being sufficient if they are found in his place of business under his control. State v. Jones, 213 N.C. 640, 197 S.E. 152 (1938).

Admissibility of Evidence. — In establishing the promotion of the lottery by circumstantial evidence it was permissible for the State to show the association of the defendants together with their financial relation and transactions. The declaration of one defendant as to the other's participation in the enterprise and as to their protection if they were caught was also competent. State v. Ingram, 204 N.C. 557, 168 S.E. 837 (1933).

In a prosecution for possession of lottery tickets, testimony that on another occasion a short time previously like tickets had been found in defendant's home, was held competent as tending to show intent, guilty knowledge, system, purposeful possession of the tickets charged, and as supporting the State's view that defendant was engaged in operating a lottery. State v. Bryant, 231 N.C. 106, 55 S.E.2d 922 (1949).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — Evidence that numerous lottery tickets and lottery ticket books were found in the store operated by defendant is sufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution under this section, and defendant's contention that there was no evidence that he was in charge of the store is untenable when the record discloses that several witnesses referred to the locus in quo as defendant's place of business. State v. Jones, 213 N.C. 640, 197 S.E. 152 (1938).

Evidence that officers apprehended defendant with lottery tickets in his possession and that upon seeing the officers he tried to dispose of same, is sufficient to be submitted to the jury in prosecution for operating a lottery and for illegal possession of lottery tickets, the evidence being sufficient to make out a prima facie case under the provisions of this section. State v. Powell, 219 N.C. 220, 13 S.E.2d 232 (1941).

Evidence held insufficient to show violation of this section. State v. Heglar, 225 N.C. 220, 34 S.E.2d 76 (1945).

Circumstantial evidence of defendant's guilt of conspiracy or participation in lottery held insufficient. State v. Smith, 236 N.C. 748, 73 S.E.2d 901 (1953).

Applied in State v. Blanton, 207 N.C. 872, 180 S.E. 81 (1935); State v. King, 224 N.C. 329, 30 S.E.2d 230 (1944).

Cited in State v. Gibson, 233 N.C. 691, 65 S.E.2d 508 (1951); State v. Bryant, 251 N.C. 423, 111 S.E.2d 591 (1959).

§ 14-291. Selling lottery tickets and acting as agent for lotteries.

Except in connection with a lawful raffle as provided in G.S. 14-292.1, if any person shall sell, barter or otherwise dispose of any lottery ticket or order for any number of shares in any lottery, or shall in anywise be concerned in such lottery, by acting as agent in the State for or on behalf of any such lottery, to be drawn or paid either out of or within the State, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished as provided for in G.S. 14-290. (1834, c. 19, s. 2; R. C., c. 34, s. 70; Code, s. 1048; Rev., s. 3727; C. S., s. 4429; 1979, c. 893, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

Evidence held insufficient to show violation of this section. State v. Heglar, 225 N.C. 220, 34 S.E.2d 76 (1945).

§ 14-291.1. Selling "numbers" tickets; possession prima facie evidence of violation.

Except in connection with a lawful raffle as provided in G.S. 14-292.1, if any person shall sell, barter or cause to be sold or bartered, any ticket, token, certificate or order for any number or shares in any lottery, commonly known as the numbers or butter and egg lottery, or lotteries of similar character, to be drawn or paid within or without the State, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court. Any person who shall have in his possession any tickets, tokens, certificates or orders used in the operation of any such lottery shall be guilty under this section, and the possession of such tickets shall be prima facie evidence of the violation of this section. (1943, c. 550; 1979, c. 893, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

In General. — See note under § 14-290.

Lottery Defined. — A lottery is any scheme for the distribution or prizes, by lot or chance, by which one, on paying money or giving any other thing of value to another, obtains a token which entitles him to receive a larger or smaller value, or nothing, as some formula of chance may determine. State v. Walker, 25 N.C. App. 157, 212 S.E.2d 528, modified on other grounds, 27 N.C. App. 295, 219 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 264, 214 S.E.2d 436, 423 U.S. 894, 96 S. Ct. 193, 46 L. Ed. 2d 126 (1975).

"Barter" and "sell" are not used as synonyms in this section. Barter is a contract by which parties exchange one commodity for another. It differs from a sale, in that the latter is a transfer of goods for a specified price, payable in money. This being so, an accused may violate this section in four distinct ways. He may sell the illegal articles, or he may barter them, or he may cause another to sell them, or he may cause another to barter them. State v. Albarty, 238 N.C. 130, 76 S.E.2d 381 (1953).

Warrant Sufficient. — Warrant charging the defendant with the sale of tickets and tokens to be used in a numbers "lottery" omits none of the essential elements of the offense. State v. Walker, 25 N.C. App. 157, 212 S.E.2d 528, modified on other grounds 27 N.C. App. 295, 219 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 264, 214 S.E.2d 436, 423 U.S. 894, 96 S. Ct. 193, 46 L. Ed. 2d 126 (1975).

Admissibility of Evidence. — In a prosecution for possession of lottery tickets, testimony that on another occasion a short time previously, like tickets had been found in defendant's home, was held competent as tending to show intent, guilty knowledge, system, purposeful possession of the tickets charged, and as supporting the State's view that defendant was engaged in operating a lottery. State v. Bryant, 231 N.C. 106, 55 S.E.2d 922 (1949).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — Evidence held insufficient to show violation of this section. State v. Heglar, 225 N.C. 220, 34 S.E.2d 76 (1945); State v. Roberson, 29 N.C. App. 152, 223 S.E.2d 551 (1976).

Circumstantial evidence of defendant's guilt of conspiracy or participation in lottery held insufficient. State v. Smith, 236 N.C. 748, 73 S.E.2d 901 (1953).

Instructions. — In a prosecution for possession of lottery tickets, the trial court properly instructed the jury that the State had the burden of proving that the defendant knew that the pieces of paper with the numbers on them were lottery tickets, but the court erred in instructing that, "under our law unless the defendant introduces evidence of lack of knowledge, this element may be presumed." State v. Mayo, 27 N.C. App. 336, 219 S.E.2d 255 (1975).

In a prosecution for possession of certificates, tickets and orders used in the operation of a numbers lottery, where the court instructed the jury that before it could find defendant guilty of violating the statute it must find from the evidence and beyond a reasonable doubt that (1) the defendant possessed the tickets and orders and (2) that such tickets, orders and paraphernalia were used in a numbers lottery, the charge, when considered contextually as a whole, complied with the requirements of the statute requiring the judge to declare and explain the law arising on the evidence given in the case. State v. Roberson, 29 N.C. App. 152, 223 S.E.2d 551 (1976).

Punishment. — A sentence and fine imposed upon conviction of violating this section are in personam; an order of confiscation entered under § 14-299 is in rem and is no part of the personal judgment against the accused. State v. Richardson, 228 N.C. 426, 45 S.E.2d 536 (1947). See note to § 14-299.

Applied in State v. Upchurch, 267 N.C. 417, 148 S.E.2d 259 (1966).

Cited in State v. Gibson, 233 N.C. 691, 65 S.E.2d 508 (1951); State v. Scoggin, 236 N.C. 19, 72 S.E.2d 54 (1952); State v. Helms, 247 N.C. 740, 102 S.E.2d 241 (1958); State v. Bryant, 251 N.C. 423, 111 S.E.2d 591 (1959).

§ 14-291.2. Pyramid and chain schemes prohibited.

(a) Any person who shall establish, promote, operate or participate in any pyramid distribution plan, program, device or scheme whereby a participant pays a valuable consideration for the opportunity or chance to receive a fee or compensation upon the introduction of other participants into the program, whether or not such opportunity or chance is received in conjunction with the purchase of merchandise, shall be deemed to have participated in a lottery and shall be punished as provided for in G.S. 14-290.

(b) "Pyramid distribution plan" means any program utilizing a pyramid or chain process by which a participant gives a valuable consideration for the opportunity to receive compensation or things of value in return for inducing other persons to become participants in the program;

"Compensation" does not mean payment based on sales of goods or services to persons who are not participants in the scheme, and who are not purchasing in order to participate in the scheme; and

"Promotes" shall mean inducing one or more other persons to become a participant.

(c) Any judge of the superior court shall have jurisdiction, upon petition by the Attorney General of North Carolina or district attorney of the superior court, to enjoin, as an unfair or deceptive trade practice, the continuation of the scheme described in subsection (a); in such proceeding the court may assess a civil penalty against any defendant found to have engaged in the willful promotion of such a scheme with knowledge that such conduct violated this section, in an amount not to exceed two thousand dollars ($2,000) which shall be for the benefit of the general fund of the State of North Carolina as reimbursement for expenses incurred in the institution and prosecution of the action; and the court may appoint a receiver to secure and distribute assets obtained by any defendant through participation in any such scheme.

(d) Any contract hereafter created for which a part of the consideration consisted of the opportunity or chance to participate in a program described in subsection (a) is hereby declared to be contrary to public policy and therefore void and unenforceable. (1971, c. 875, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Injunctive Relief at Instance of State. — Even though individual remedies may exist, the statutes provide for injunctive relief at the instance of the State. To hold otherwise would cripple the legislative intent to provide an effective means of curbing illegitimate business schemes and protecting the consumers of our State. State ex rel. Morgan v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 275, 189 S.E.2d 802 (1972).

§ 14-292. Gambling.

Except as provided in G.S. 14-292.1, any person or organization that operates any game of chance or any person who plays at or bets on any game of chance at which any money, property or other thing of value is bet, whether the same be in stake or not, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1891, c. 29; Rev., s. 3715; C. S., s. 4430; 1979, c. 893, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to gaming contracts, see § 16-1 et seq.

Legal Periodicals. For reference to acts legalizing pari-mutuel racetrack betting, see 11 N.C.L. Rev. 248.

CASE NOTES

In General. — Betting is essential to the offense; playing without betting is not indictable. State v. Brannen, 53 N.C. 208 (1860). The section does not apply to prizes given for skill — here is no betting. State v. DeBoy, 117 N.C. 702, 23 S.E. 167 (1895). Tenpins is not a game of chance. State v. King, 113 N.C. 631, 18 S.E. 169 (1893).

All who engage in gambling are principals. State v. DeBoy, 117 N.C. 702, 23 S.E. 167 (1895). A defendant may be indicted for keeping a gaming house and playing for money, without misjoinder. State v. Morgan, 133 N.C. 743, 45 S.E. 1033 (1903).

Games of Chance and Games of Skill. — A game of chance is one in which the element of chance predominates over the element of skill, and a game of skill is one in which the element of skill predominates over the element of chance. State v. Stroupe, 238 N.C. 34, 76 S.E.2d 313 (1953). State v. Eisen, 16 N.C. App. 532, 192 S.E.2d 613 (1972).

"The universal acceptation of 'a game of chance' is such a game as is determined entirely or in part by lot or mere luck, and in which judgment, practice, skill or adroitness have honestly no office at all, or are thwarted by chance." State v. Gupton, 30 N.C. 271 (1848), quoted in State v. Stroupe, 238 N.C. 34, 76 S.E.2d 313 (1953).

For illustrations of games of chance and games of skill, see State v. Stroupe, 238 N.C. 34, 76 S.E.2d 313 (1953).

Whether blackjack was a game of chance or one of skill was a question for the jury to decide from the evidence. State v. Eisen, 16 N.C. App. 532, 192 S.E.2d 613 (1972).

Horse racing is included in the category of "gaming" or "gambling." The word "game" is very comprehensive and embraces every contrivance or institution which has for its object to furnish sport, recreation, or amusement. Let a stake be laid on the chance of a game, and it is gaming. State v. Brown, 221 N.C. 301, 20 S.E.2d 286 (1942).

Betting on horse racing, or on any other sort of race, in an offense against the criminal law. The fact that the race itself is one of skill and endurance on the part of the jockey and his mount does not confer immunity upon those who wager on its result. State v. Brown, 221 N.C. 301, 20 S.E.2d 286 (1942).

Betting on dog races under a pari-mutuel system having no other purpose than that of providing the facilities by means of tickets, machines, etc., for placing bets, calculating odds, determining winnings, if any, constitutes gambling within the meaning of this section. State ex rel. Taylor v. California Racing Ass'n, 241 N.C. 80, 84 S.E.2d 390 (1954).

Calling Transaction a Raffle Does Not Change its Character. — Where several parties each put up a piece of money and then decide, by throwing dice, who shall have the aggregate sum or "pool," the game is one of chance and the fact that the aggregate sum so put up is exchanged for a turkey and the transaction is denominated a "raffle" does not change the character of the game. State v. DeBoy, 117 N.C. 702, 23 S.E. 167 (1895).

Ordinances as to Gambling Void. — Gambling being an offense under the general law, a city ordinance covering the same subject is void. State v. McCoy, 116 N.C. 1059, 21 S.E. 690 (1895).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment charging defendant with keeping and maintaining a gaming house is sufficient, though it is not alleged that the games played there were games of chance, or that they were played at a place or tables where games of chance were played. State v. Morgan, 133 N.C. 743, 45 S.E. 1033 (1903).

Evidence Sufficient. — Evidence as to rules and method of playing "Negro Pool" was held sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the question of whether the game is a game of chance within the purview of this section. State v. Stroupe, 238 N.C. 34, 76 S.E.2d 313 (1953).

Evidence that all defendants wagered money on the results of a game of chance played by some of them was held sufficient to overrule their motions to nonsuit in a prosecution under this section. State v. Stroupe, 238 N.C. 34, 76 S.E.2d 313 (1953).

Court's Ruling on Blackjack Held Not Error. — The court did not err in referring to rule as a matter of law that the game of blackjack is a game of skill. State v. Eisen, 16 N.C. App. 532, 192 S.E.2d 613 (1972).

Instruction. — An instruction that "the object of the gambling statute is to prevent people from getting something for nothing" without defining the term "game of chance" constituting an essential element of the offense charged, was held reversible error. State v. Stroupe, 238 N.C. 34, 76 S.E.2d 313 (1953).

Applied in Greensboro Elks Lodge v. North Carolina Bd. of Alcoholic Control, 27 N.C. App. 594, 220 S.E.2d 106 (1975).

§ 14-292.1. Bingo and raffles.

(a) It is lawful for an exempt organization to conduct raffles and bingo games in accordance with the provisions of this section. Any person who conducts a raffle or bingo game in violation of any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor under G.S. 14-292 and shall be punished in accordance with G.S. 14-3. Upon conviction such person shall not conduct a raffle or bingo game for a period of one year. It is lawful to participate in a raffle or bingo game conducted pursuant to this section. It shall not constitute a violation of State law to advertise a raffle or bingo game conducted in accordance with this section.

(b) For purposes of this section, the term:

(1) "Exempt organization" means an organization that has been in continuous existence in the county of operation of the raffle or bingo game for at least one year and that is exempt from taxation under sections 501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(8), 501(c)(10), 501(c)(19), or 501(d) of the Internal Revenue Code or is exempt under similar provisions of North Carolina General Statutes as a bona fide nonprofit charitable, civic, religious, fraternal, patriotic or veterans' organization or as a nonprofit volunteer fire department, or as a nonprofit volunteer rescue squad or a bona fide homeowners' or property owners' association. (If the organization has local branches or chapters, the term "exempt organization" means the local branch or chapter operating the raffle or bingo game);

(2) "Bingo game" means a specific game of chance played with individual cards having randomly numbered squares ranging from one to seventy-five, in which prizes are awarded on the basis of designated numbers on such cards conforming to a predetermined pattern of numbers selected at random (but shall not include "instant bingo," which is a game of chance played by the selection of one or more prepacked cards, with winners determined by the appearance of a preselected designation on the card);

(3) "Raffle" means a lottery in which the prize is won by random drawing of the name or number of one or more persons purchasing chances.

(4) "Local law-enforcement agency" means: (i) The county police force; or (ii) The county sheriff's office in a county with no county police force for any raffle or bingo game conducted outside the coporate limits of a municipality or inside the corporate limits of a municipality having no municipal police force. "Local law-enforcement agency" means the municipal police for any raffle or bingo game conducted within the corporate limits of a municipality having a police force.

(c) The exempt organization must prominently display in the specific place or room where the raffle or bingo game is being conducted a determination letter (or a reproduction copy thereof) from the Internal Revenue Service or the North Carolina Department of Revenue that indicates that the organization is an exempt organization.

(d) The exempt organization may expend proceeds derived from a raffle or bingo game only for auditing expenses, prizes, utilities and the purchase of supplies and equipment used in conducting the raffle and in playing bingo, taxes related to raffles and bingo, and the payment of compensation and rent as authorized by subsection (e) of this section. In no event shall the price for purchase of supplies and equipment exceed the fair market value thereof. All proceeds remaining after the above authorized expenditures shall inure to the exempt organization to be used for religious, charitable, civic, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes, or for purchasing, constructing, maintaining, operating or using equipment or land or a building or improvements thereto owned by and for the exempt organization and used for civic purposes or made available by the exempt organization for use by the general public from time to time, or to foster amateur sports competition or for the prevention of curelty to children or animals, provided that no proceeds shall be used or expended for social functions for the members of the exempt organization.

(e) No person may be compensated for conducting a raffle or bingo game. An exempt organization shall not contract with any person for the purpose of conducting a raffle or bingo game except that an exempt organization may rent space under a written lease agreement for such purpose at a fixed sum not to exceed fair market value. Such leases shall be at a fixed rate not subject to change during the term of the lease and not based on a percentage of receipts or proceeds. The provisions of this subsection notwithstanding, an exempt organization may compensate a person for conducting raffles or bingo games conducted at a fair or other exhibition conducted pursuant to Article 45 of Chapter 106 of the General Statutes.

(f) The number of sessions of bingo conducted or sponsored by an exempt organization shall be limited to two sessions per week and such sessions must not exceed a period of five hours each per county. No more than two sessions of bingo shall be operated or conducted in any one building, hall or structure during any one calendar week; provided, however, that two exempt organizations may operate up to two sessions of bingo each per week in the same building, hall or structure, if the organizations do not use the same equipment and personnel. Four consecutive nights of bingo may not be held on the same premises during any one calendar week. Raffles shall be limited to one per month per county. This subsection shall not apply to raffles or bingo games conducted at a fair or other exhibition conducted pursuant to Article 45 of Chapter 106 of the General Statutes.

(g) The maximum prize in case or merchandise that may be offered or paid for any one game of bingo is five hundred dollars ($500.00). The maximum aggregate amount of prizes, in cash and/or merchandise, that may be offered or paid at any one session of bingo is one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500). Provided, however, that if an exempt organization holds only one session of bingo during a calendar week, the maximum aggregate amount of prizes, in cash and/or merchandise, that may be offered or paid at any one session is two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500). The maximum cash prize that may be offered or paid for any one raffle is five hundred dollars ($500.00).

(h) The operation of raffles or bingo games shall be the direct responsibility of, and controlled by, a special committee selected by the governing body of the exempt organization in the manner provided by the rules of the exempt organization. Upon their selection, the members of the committee shall register with the local law-enforcement agency in whose jurisdiction the raffle or bingo game is to be conducted. The registration shall disclose the identity and address of the members of the committee and the exempt organization.

(i) All funds received in connection with a raffle or bingo game (except funds given as prizes in connection with a particular raffle or bingo game) shall be placed in a separate bank account. No funds may be disbursed from this account except for the purposes authorized by subsection (d) of this section. A separate account shall be kept of all funds received in connection with raffles or bingo games (including the amount of any prize) and the amount and purpose of any disbursement. An audit of the account shall be prepared annually for the period July 1 to June 30 by a public accountant and shall be filed with the local law-enforcement agency in whose jurisdiction the raffle or bingo game is conducted. The audit shall be prepared on a form approved by the Department of Justice and shall include the following information:

(1) The number of raffles or bingo games conducted or sponsored by the exempt organization;

(2) The location and date at which each raffle or bingo game was conducted and the prize awarded;

(3) The gross receipts of each raffle or bingo game;
(4) The cost or amount of any prize given at each raffle or bingo game;
(5) The amount paid in prizes at each session;
(6) The net return to the exempt organization; and
(7) The disbursements from the separate account and the purpose of those disbursements, including the date of each transaction and the name and address of each payee.

Quarterly statements prepared by the special committee which contain an itemized listing of all expenditures and receipts shall also be filed with the local law-enforcement agency together with copies of any leases for rental of space.

Any person who shall willfully furnish, supply, or otherwise give false information in any audit or quarterly statement filed pursuant to this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

All books, papers, records and documents relevant to determining whether an organization has acted or is acting in compliance with this section shall be open to inspection by the sheriff or his designee or the district attorney or his designee at reasonable times and during reasonable hours.

(j) A raffle or bingo game conducted otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this section is "gambling" within the meaning of G.S. 19-1 et seq., and proceedings against such raffle or bingo game may be instituted as provided for in Chapter 19 of the General Statutes.

(k) Any exempt organization operating a bingo game or raffle which is open to persons other than members of the exempt organization, their spouses, and their children shall make such bingo game or raffle open to the general public.

(l) Nothing in this Article except subsection (k) of this section shall apply to bingo games when the only prize given is ten dollars ($10.00) or less or merchandise that is not redeemable for cash and that has a value of ten dollars ($10.00) or less. G.S. 18A-30(9) and 18A-35(h) shall apply to such games. (1979, c. 893, s. 2; 1981, c. 962, ss. 1-5.)

Editor's Notes.— Session Laws 1979, c. 893, s. 7, provides: "All general or local laws that permit the opeation of raffles or bingo games in counties or towns are repealed."

Session Laws 1979, c. 893, s. 8, contains a severability clause.

Session Laws 1979, c. 893, s. 9, provides: "Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to render lawful any act committed prior to the effective date of this act [September 1, 1979] and unlawful at the time the act occurred; and nothing contained in this act shall be construed to affect any prosecution pending on the effective date of this act."

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added subdivision (4) to subsection (b), inserted "auditing expenses," in the first sentence and added the second sentence of subsection (d), substituted "rent space under a written lease agreement for such purpose at a fixed sum not to exceed fair market value" for "lease space for such purpose at a fixed sum and not at a percentage of receipts or proceeds" in the second sentence and added "and not based on a percentage of receipts or proceeds" at the end of the third sentence in subsection (e), substituted "local law-enforcement agency in whose jurisdiction" for "sheriff of the county in which" in the second sentence of subsection (h), and rewrote all of subsection (i) following the third sentence in the first paragraph of the subsection.

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Raffle Offering Merchandise as Prize. — An exempt organization may legally sponsor a raffle which offers merchandise as a prize; the prize need not be in the form of cash. Only a cash prize is limited in the amount of five hundred dollars ($500). See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. R. Michael Jones, Counsel for the Wilson County School System, Sept. 17, 1979.

Bingo Games With Prizes of $10.00 or Less. — An informal organization such as a Parent Teachers Organization (not an affiiliate of a national or statewide PTA) or a Band Booster Club, may conduct bingo games pursuant to subsection (l) of this section, where the total value of all prizes in cash or merchandise exceeds $10.00 and in which the prize per individual bingo game does not exceed a value of $10.00. See opinion of Attorney General to William L. Hill, III, Att'y for New Hanover County School Board, 49 N.C.A.G. 131 (1980).

Non-Exempt Organizations. — An organization which is exempt from federal income taxation pursuant to 26 U.S.C. 501(c)(7) and exempt from state taxation pursuant to § 105-130.11(6) does not qualify as an exempt organization for the purposes of conducting bingo games and raffles pursuant to subsections (a) through (k) of this section. See opinion of Attorney General to Captain D.G. Jenkins, Greensboro Police Department, Vice/Narcotics Division, 49 N.C.A.G. 137 (1980).

§ 14-293. Allowing gambling in houses of public entertainment; penalty.

If any keeper of an ordinary or other house of entertainment, or of a house wherein alcoholic beverages are retailed, shall knowingly suffer any game, at which money or property, or anything of value, is bet, whether the same be in stake or not, to be played in any such house, or in any part of the premises occupied therewith; or shall furnish persons so playing or betting either on said premises or elsewhere with drink or other thing for their comfort or subsistence during the time of play, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars ($500.00) and be imprisoned not less than six months. Any person who shall be convicted under this section shall, upon such conviction, forfeit his license to do any of the businesses mentioned in this section, and shall be forever debarred from doing any of such businesses in this State. The court shall embody in its judgment that such person has forfeited his license, and no board of county commissioners, board of town commissioners or board of aldermen shall thereafter have power or authority to grant to such convicted person or his agent a license to do any of the businesses mentioned herein. (1799, c. 526, P. R.; 1801, c. 581, P. R.; 1831, c. 26; R. C., c. 34, s. 76; Code, s. 1043; 1901, c. 753; Rev., s. 3716; C. S., s. 4431; 1967, c. 101, s. 1; 1981, c. 412, s. 4; c. 747, s. 66.)

CASE NOTES

Gambling in Leased Room of Tavern. — Where it appeared that the room, in which the game took place, was a part of the house in which the tavern was kept, but had been leased and was not under the control of the landlord, it was held that the defendant landlord could not be convicted under this section. State v. Keisler, 51 N.C. 73 (1858).

Houses Where Liquor Was Retailed. — For case under this provision, see State v. Terry, 20 N.C. 325 (1839).

Sufficiency of Warrant. — A warrant charging that defendant did operate a house in which various types of gambling "is continuously carried on" and did permit named persons to engage in a game of cards in which money was bet, held sufficient to charge defendant with operating a gambling house. State v. Anderson, 259 N.C. 499, 130 S.E.2d 957 (1963).

Excessive Punishment. — For violation of this section a fine of $2,000 and imprisonment of 30 days, and thereafter until the fine and costs were paid, was held not excessive punishment. State v. Miller, 94 N.C. 904 (1886).

Cited in State v. McHone, 243 N.C. 235, 90 S.E.2d 539 (1955).

§ 14-294. Gambling with faro banks and tables.

If any person shall open, establish, use or keep a faro bank, or a faro table, with the intent that games of chance may be played thereat, or shall play or bet thereat any money, property or other thing of value, whether the same be in stake or not, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined at least two hundred dollars ($200.00) and imprisoned not less than three months. (1848, c. 34; R. C., c. 71; 1856-7, c. 25; Code, s. 1044; Rev., s. 3717; C. S., s. 4432.)

§ 14-295. Keeping gaming tables, illegal punchboards or slot machines, or betting thereat.

If any person shall establish, use or keep any gaming table (other than a faro bank), by whatever name such table may be called, an illegal punchboard or an illegal slot machine, at which games of chance shall be played, he shall on conviction thereof be fined not less than two hundred dollars ($200.00) and shall be imprisoned not less than 30 days; and every person who shall play thereat or thereat bet any money, property or other thing of value, whether the same be in stake or not, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than ten dollars ($10.00). (1791, c. 336, P. R.; 1798, c. 502, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 72; Code, s. 1045; Rev., s. 3718; C. S., s. 4433; 1931, c. 14, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Indictment Sufficient. — An indictment under this section is good, without any averment that the act was done "willfully and unlawfully" or that the games of chance were played at such table for money or other property. State v. Howe, 100 N.C. 449, 5 S.E. 671 (1888).

Indictment Quashed. — A bill of indictment which does not charge that the game played was one of chance, and that it was played at a place or table where games of chance are played, will be quashed. State v. Norwood, 94 N.C. 935 (1886).

Evidence Admissible. — Where defendants admit keeping gaming tables, evidence may be admitted tending to show they were continuously present at the place and tending to show their large share in the receipts of these tables. State v. Galloway, 188 N.C. 416, 124 S.E. 745 (1924).

§ 14-296. Illegal slot machines and punchboards defined.

An illegal slot machine or punchboard within the contemplation of G.S. 14-295 through 14-298 is defined as one that shall not produce for or give to the person who places coin or money or the representative of either, the same return in market value each and every time such machine is operated by placing money or coin or the representative of either therein. (1931, c. 14, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The act from which this section was taken amended §§ 14-295 through 14-298 to make them applicable to illegal slot machines and punchboards. The act expressively provide that it should not have the effect of modifying in any way §§ 14-301 through 14-303 and should be construed as supplemental thereto.

§ 14-297. Allowing gaming tables, illegal punchboards or slot machines on premises.

If any person shall knowingly suffer to be opened, kept or used in his house or on any part of the premises occupied therewith, any of the gaming tables prohibited by G.S. 14-289 through 14-300 or any illegal punchboard or illegal slot machine, he shall forfeit and pay to any one who will sue therefor two hundred dollars ($200.00), and shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined and imprisoned. (1798, c. 502, s. 3, P. R.; 1800, c. 5, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 73; Code, s. 1046; Rev., s. 3719; C. S., s. 4434; 1931, c. 14, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Evidence Insufficient. — Where the agreed statement of facts in an action to recover the penalty under this section states that defendant kept a slot machine in his store, without a finding that the machine was illegal, the findings are insufficient to support a judgment against defendant. § 14-298. Gaming tables, illegal punchboards and slot machines to be destroyed by police officers.

All sheriffs and officers of police are hereby authorized and directed, on information made to them on oath that any gaming table prohibited to be used by G.S. 14-289 through 14-300, or any illegal punchboard or illegal slot machine is in the possession or use of any person within the limits of their jurisdiction, to destroy the same by every means in their power; and they shall call to their aid all the good citizens of the county, if necessary, to effect its destruction. (1791, c. 336, P. R.; 1798, c. 502, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 74; Code, s. 1049; Rev., s. 3720; C. S., s. 4435; 1931, c. 14, s. 4; 1973, c. 108, s. 11.)

Enjoining Officers. — The court should have found whether the slot machines involved were illegal in determining the plaintiff's right to enjoin officers from interfering with his business. McCormick v. Proctor, 217 N.C. 23, 6 S.E.2d 870 (1940).

§ 14-299. Property exhibited by gamblers to be seized; disposition of same.

All moneys or other property or thing of value exhibited for the purpose of alluring persons to bet on any game, or used in the conduct of any such game, including any motor vehicle used in the conduct of a lottery within the purview of G.S. 14-291.1, shall be liable to be seized by any court of competent jurisdiction or by any person acting under its warrant. Moneys so seized shall be turned over to and paid to the treasurer of the county wherein they are seized, and placed in the general fund of the county. Any property seized which is used for and is suitable only for gambling shall be destroyed, and all other property so seized shall be sold in the manner provided for the sale of personal property by execution, and the proceeds derived from said sale shall (after deducting the expenses of keeping the property and the costs of the sale and after paying, according to their priorities all known prior, bona fide liens which were created without the lienor having knowledge or notice that the motor vehicle or other property was being used or to be used in connection with the conduct of such game or lottery) be turned over and paid to the treasurer of the county wherein the property was seized, to be placed by said treasurer in the general fund of the county. CASE NOTES

A confiscation order entered under this section is no part of the personal judgment imposed under § 14-291.1. Hence, a defendant may comply with the personal judgment entered against him upon conviction of violating § 14-291.1, and at the same time prosecute an appeal from .an order of confiscation entered under this section, whether embraced in the same judgment or not; but the failure to appeal the personal judgment, while not estopping him for further contesting the order of confiscation, forever precludes him from contesting the fact of guilt. State v. Richardson, 228 N.C. 426, 45 S.E.2d 536 (1947).

§ 14-300. Opposing destruction of gaming tables and seizure of property.

If any person shall oppose the destruction of any prohibited gaming table, or the seizure of any moneys, property or other thing staked on forbidden games, or shall take and carry away the same or any part thereof after seizure, he shall forfeit and pay to the person so opposed one thousand dollars ($1,000), for the use of the State and the person so opposed, and shall, moreover, be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1798, c. 502, s. 4, P. R.; R. C., c. 34, s. 78; Code, s. 1052; Rev., s. 3723; C. S., s. 4437.)

§ 14-301. Operation or possession of slot machine; separate offenses.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to operate, keep in his possession or in the possession of any other person, firm or corporation, for the purpose of being operated, any slot machine that shall not produce for or give to the person who places coin or money, or the representative of either, the same return in market value each and every time such machine is operated by placing money or coin or the representative of either therein. Each time said machine is operated as aforesaid shall constitute a separate offense. (1923, c. 138, ss. 1, 2; C. S., s. 4437(a).)

CASE NOTES

Construed with § 14-304. — This section and §§ 14-302, 14-303, proscribing the operation and possession of slot machines of the type therein defined, are not repealed by §§ 14-304 through 14-309, proscribing ownership, sale, lease and transportation of such slot machines, since the two statutes are not repugnant, but are complementary. State v. Calcutt, 219 N.C. 545, 15 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

Same — Separate and Distinct Offenses. — Where an indictment charged defendant in one count with ownership, sale, lease and transportation of certain slot machines and devices prohibited by law, §§ 14-304 through 14-309, and charged defendant in the second count with the operation and possession of certain illegal slot machines, under this section and §§ 14-302, 14-303, it was held that the different counts in the bill may stand as separate and distinct offenses, and separate judgments may be entered thereon, and defendant's contention of duplicity is untenable. State v. Calcutt, 219 N.C. 545, 15 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

Value Is Required to Be Given. — Under this section, a slot machine so operated that one putting into it a coin receives, in any event, the value of such coin in chewing gum, and stands to win by chance additional chewing gum or discs of commercial value without further payment, is condemned by the statute as being unlawful. But if the slot machine were so operated that one who puts in a coin receives the same return in market value each and every time such machine is operated, it would not then fall within the condemnation of the statute. State v. May, 188 N.C. 470, 125 S.E. 9 (1924).

And Only Lawful Machines Will Be Licensed. — The State license issued for the operation of a slot machine is for one that is lawful and does not permit the operation of one so devised as to give to the one who happens to strike certain mechanical combinations more of the merchandise than received at other times. State v. May, 188 N.C. 470, 125 S.E. 9 (1924).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment charging that the defendant "unlawfully and willfully did operate a lottery, to wit, a slot machine (chapter 138, Public Laws 1923) against the form of the statute," etc., was insufficient because it failed to inform the accused of the specific offense or the necessary ingredients thereof, notwithstanding the statute was cited. State v. Ballangee, 191 N.C. 700, 132 S.E. 795 (1926).

Cited in Calcutt v. McGeachy, 213 N.C. 1, 195 S.E. 49 (1938).

§ 14-302. Punchboards, vending machines, and other gambling devices; separate offenses.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to operate or keep in his possession, or the possession of any other person, firm or corporation, for the purpose of being operated, any punchboard, machine for vending merchandise, or other gambling device, by whatsoever name known or called, that shall not produce for or give to the person operating, playing or patronizing same, whether personally or through another, by paying money or other thing of value for the privilege of operating, playing or patronizing same, whether through himself or another, the same return in market value, each and every time such punchboard, machine for vending merchandise or other gambling device, by whatsoever name known or called, is operated, played or patronized by paying of money or other thing of value for the privilege thereof. Each time said punchboard, machine for vending merchandise, or other gambling device, by whatsoever name known or called, is operated, played, or patronized by the paying of money or other thing of value therefor, shall constitute a separate violation of this section as to operation thereunder. (1923, c. 138, ss. 3, 4; C. S., s. 4437(b).)

CASE NOTES

Operation of Device Essential. — An essential element of the offense created by this section is the operation of the gambling device or the keeping in possession of such device for the purpose of being operated; the mere having in possession of gambling devices, and nothing more, is not made a criminal offense. State v. Sheppard, 4 N.C. App. 670, 167 S.E.2d 535 (1969).

Same — Indictment Defective. — An indictment charging possession of gambling devices, but failing to charge that defendant operated the devices or had them in his possession for the purpose of being operated, is fatally defective. State v. Jones, 218 N.C. 734, 12 S.E.2d 292 (1940); State v. Sheppard, 4 N.C. App. 670, 167 S.E.2d 535 (1969).

The omission in a warrant of a charge that the defendant operated the gambling devices or that he kept such devices in his own or the possession of other persons for the purpose of being operated is a fatal defect in the warrant, since an essential element of the offense as provided by this section is the operation of the gambling device or the keeping of the device in his possession for the purpose of being operated. Mere possession of a gambling device is not a criminal offense. State v. Jones, 36 N.C. App. 263, 243 S.E.2d 827 (1978).

Applied in State v. Marsh, 225 N.C. 648, 36 S.E.2d 244 (1945).

§ 14-303. Violation of two preceding sections a misdemeanor.

A violation of any of the provisions of G.S. 14-301, 14-302 shall be a misdemeanor punishable by a fine or imprisonment, or, in the discretion of the court, by both. (1923, c. 138, s. 5; C. S., s. 4437(c).)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Marsh, 225 N.C. 648, 36 S.E.2d 244 (1945).

§ 14-304. Manufacture, sale, etc., of slot machines and devices.

It shall be unlawful to manufacture, own, store, keep, possess, sell, rent, lease, let on shares, lend or give away, transport, or expose for sale or lease, or to offer to sell, rent, lease, let on shares, lend or give away, or to permit the operation of, or for any person to permit to be placed, maintained, used or kept in any room, space or building owned, leased or occupied by him or under his management or control, any slot machine or device. (1937, c. 196, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This and following sections, prohibiting coin slot machines in the operation of which a player may make varying scores or tallies upon which wages may be made, and differentiating between such machines and those returning a definite and unvarying service or things of value each time they are played, are in accord with the policy of the State to suppress gambling and have a reasonable relation to this objective, and this statute is constitutional as a reasonable regulation relating to the public morals and welfare, well within the police power of the State. Calcutt v. McGeachy, 213 N.C. 1, 195 S.E. 49 (1938); State v. Abbott, 218 N.C. 470, 11 S.E.2d 539 (1940).

Construed with § 14-301. — See note to § 14-301.

Not Repealed by § 105-65.1. — The provisions of the Flanagan Act, ch. 196, Public Laws of 1937, proscribing the possession and distribution of a coin slot machine in the operation of which the user may secure additional chances or rights to use the machine were not repealed by § 105.65.1. State v. Abbott, 218 N.C. 470, 11 S.E.2d 539 (1940).

Testimony as to Description and Operation of Machines. — In a prosecution under this section it is competent for witnesses who have examined and studied the machines in question to testify as to their physical description and operation. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 552, 50 S.E.2d 668 (1948).

§ 14-305. Agreements with reference to slot machines or devices made unlawful.

It shall be unlawful to make or permit to be made with any person any agreement with reference to any slot machines or device, pursuant to which the user thereof may become entitled to receive any money, credit, allowance, or anything of value or additional chance or right to use such machines or devices, or to receive any check, slug, token or memorandum entitling the holder to receive any money, credit, allowance or thing of value. (1937, c. 196, s. 2.)

§ 14-306. Slot machine or device defined.

Any machine, apparatus or device is a slot machine or device within the provisions of G.S. 14-304 through 14-309, if it is one that is adapted, or may be readily converted into one that is adapted, for use in such a way that, as a result of the insertion of any piece of money or coin or other object, such machine or device is caused to operate or may be operated in such manner that the user may receive or become entitled to receive any piece of money, credit, allowance or thing of value, or any check, slug, token or memorandum, whether of value or otherwise, or which may be exchanged for any money, credit, allowance or any thing of value, or which may be given in trade, or the user may secure additional chances or rights to use such machine, apparatus or device; or any other machine or device designed and manufactured primarily for use in connection with gambling and which machine or device is classified by the United States as requiring a federal gaming device tax stamp under applicable provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. This definition is intended to embrace all slot machines and similar devices except slot machines in which is kept any article to be purchased by depositing any coin or thing of value, and for which may be had any article of merchandise which makes the same return or returns of equal value each and every time it is operated, or any machine wherein may be seen any pictures or heard any music by depositing therein any coin or thing of value, or any slot weighing machine or any machine for making stencils by the use of contrivances operated by depositing in the machine any coin or thing of value, or any lock operated by slot wherein money or thing of value is to be deposited, where such slot machines make the same return or returns of equal value each and every time the same is operated and does not at any time it is operated offer the user or operator any additional money, credit, allowance, or thing of value, or check, slug, token or memorandum, whether of value or otherwise, which may be exchanged for money, credit, allowance or thing of value or which may be given in trade or by which the user may secure additional chances or rights to use such machine, apparatus, or device, or in the playing of which the operator does not have a chance to make varying scores or tallies.

The definition contained in the first paragraph of this section does not include, and shall not be construed as including, coin-operated machines or devices designed and manufactured for amusement and the operation of which depends in part upon the skill of the player. Included within this exception, are pinball machines and other arcade amusement devices which award a limited number of replays which are not convertible to money or other things of tangible value, and which do not require a federal gaming device tax stamp. (1937, c. 196, s. 3; 1967, c. 1219; 1977, c. 837.)

CASE NOTES

Indictment Sufficient. — An indictment charging the ownership and distribution of slot machines adapted for use in such a way that as a result of the insertion of a coin the machine may be operated in such a manner that the user may secure additional chances or rights to use such machine and upon which the user has a chance to make various scores upon the outcome of which wagers may be made, follows the language of this section and is sufficient to charge the offense therein defined. State v. Abbott, 218 N.C. 470, 11 S.E.2d 539 (1940).

Evidence. — Where it was admitted that the machines in question were owned by one defendant and rented by him to the other defendants, testimony of an officer, who had examined and studied the machines, that from his observation they could be converted, or reconverted, to coin slot operated machines by simple mechanical changes was evidence sufficient to overrule defendants' demurrer, and the fact that the witness failed to complete a demonstration of the conversion of such a machine because of lack of soldering tools, did not amount to a failure of the State's evidence upon the critical issue. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 552, 50 S.E.2d 668 (1948).

§ 14-307. Issuance of license prohibited.

There shall be no State, county, or municipal tax levied for the privilege of operating the machines or devices the operation of which is prohibited by G.S. 14-304 through 14-309. (1937, c. 196, s. 4.)

§ 14-308. Declared a public nuisance.

An article or apparatus maintained or kept in violation of G.S. 14-304 through 14-309 is a public nuisance. (1937, c. 196, s. 5.)

§ 14-309. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person who violates any provision of G.S. 14-304 through 14-309 is guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court. (1937, c. 196, s. 6.)

§ 14-309.1. Defense to possession; antique slot machines.

(a) In any prosecution for possession of a slot machine or device as defined in G.S. 14-306, it is a defense that the slot machine was not intended to be used in the operation or promotion of unlawful gambling activity or enterprise and that the slot machine is an antique. For purposes of this section a slot machine manufactured 25 years ago or earlier is conclusively presumed to be an antique.

(b) When a defendant raises the defense provided in subsection (a), any slot machine seized from the defendant shall not be destroyed or otherwise altered until a final court determination is rendered. If the court determines that the defense has been proved the slot machine shall be returned immediately to the defendant. (1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1090.)

Article 38.

Marathon Dances and Similar Endurance Contests.

§ 14-310. Dance marathons and walkathons prohibited.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, association or corporation to promote, advertise or conduct any marathon dance contests, walkathon contests and/or similar endurance contests, by whatever name called, of walking or dancing, and it shall be unlawful for any person to participate in any marathon dance contest, walkathon contest, and/or similar physical endurance contests by walking and dancing continuing or intended to continue for a period of more than eight consecutive hours, whether or not an admission is charged and/or a prize awarded, and it shall be unlawful for any person to participate in more than one such contest or performance within any period of 48 hours. (1935, c. 13, s. 1.)

§ 14-311. Penalty for violation.

Any persons violating the provisions of this Article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by imprisonment in the county or municipal jail for not less than 30 days nor more than 90 days, or by a fine of not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than five hundred dollars ($500.00), or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. (1935, c. 13, s. 2.)

§ 14-312. Each day made separate offense.

Each and every day that any person, firm or corporation shall continue such a contest or engage in any such activities and/or each day's participation in such contest or advertisement of the same or do any act in violation of the provisions of this Article shall be and constitute a distinct and separate offense. (1935, c. 13, s. 3.)

Article 39.

Protection of Minors.

§ 14-313. Selling cigarettes to minors.

If any person shall sell, give away or otherwise dispose of, directly or indirectly, cigarettes, or tobacco in the form of cigarettes, or cut tobacco in any form or shape which may be used or intended to be used as a substitute for cigarettes, to any minor under the age of 17 years, or if any person shall aid, assist or abet any other person in selling such articles to such minor, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1891, c. 276; Rev., s. 3804; C. S., s. 4438; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Applicable to State Training Schools. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James M. Paige, Office of Youth Development, 42 N.C.A.G. 203 (1973).

§ 14-314: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 31.

§ 14-315. Selling or giving weapons to minors.

If any person shall knowingly sell, offer for sale, give or in any way dispose of to a minor any pistol or pistol cartridge, brass knucks, bowie knife, dirk, loaded cane or slingshot, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1893, c. 514; Rev., s. 3832; C. S., s. 4440.)

§ 14-316. Permitting young children to use dangerous firearms.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis, to knowingly permit his child under the age of 12 years to have the possession, custody or use in any manner whatever, any gun, pistol or other dangerous firearm, whether such weapon be loaded or unloaded, except when such child is under the supervision of the parent, guardian or person standing in loco parentis. It shall be unlawful for any other person to knowingly furnish such child any weapon enumerated herein. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days.

(b) Air rifles, air pistols, and BB guns shall not be deemed "dangerous firearms" within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section except in the following counties: Anson, Caldwell, Caswell, Chowan, Cleveland, Cumberland, Durham, Forsyth, Gaston, Harnett, Haywood, Mecklenburg, Stanly, Stokes, Surry, Union, Vance. (1913, c. 32; C. S., s. 4441; 1965, c. 813; 1971, c. 309.)

§ 14-316.1. Contributing to delinquency and neglect by parents and others.

Any person over 16 years of age who knowingly or willfully causes, encourages, or aids any juvenile within the jurisdiction of the court to be in a place or condition, or to commit an act whereby the juvenile could be adjudicated delinquent, undisciplined, abused, or neglected as defined by G.S. 7A-517 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

It is not necessary for the district court exercising juvenile jurisdiction to make an adjudication that any juvenile is delinquent, undisciplined, abused, or neglected in order to prosecute a parent or any person, including an employee of the Department of Human Resources under this section. An adjudication that a juvenile is delinquent, undisciplined, abused, or neglected shall not preclude a subsequent prosecution of a parent or any other person including an employee of the Division of Youth Services who contributes to the delinquent, undisciplined, abused, or neglected condition of any juvenile. (1919, c. 97, s. 19; C. S., s. 5057; 1959, c. 1284; 1969, c. 911, s. 4; 1971, c. 1180, s. 5; 1979, c. 692.)

Editor's Note. — This section formerly appeared as § 110-39. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 911, s. 4.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 criminal law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1350 (1980).

CASE NOTES

This section is not unconstitutional for vagueness. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970).

The words used in this section are ordinary words in common usage, and adequate warning is provided those inclined to violate them. Simply stated, any person who knowingly does any act to produce, promote or contribute to any condition of delinquency of a child is in violation of the section. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970).

Defendant was not denied his right against double jeopardy by his conviction in superior court of child neglect in violation of this section after a judgment of nonsuit was entered in a prosecution of defendant in the district court for child abuse in violation of § 14-318.2. State v. Hunter, 48 N.C. App. 656, 270 S.E.2d 120 (1980).

Proof of Delinquency Not Required. — Statutes such as this section are preventive as well as punitive in nature and it is not necessary to allege or prove that the child in fact is, or has become a delinquent. State v. Worley, 13 N.C. App. 198, 185 S.E.2d 270 (1971).

This section does not require that the creation of a state of delinquency be accomplished; the legislative intent was to protect children from wrongful influence by adults, and in protection of minors the State should not await the result of the wrong perpetrated before punishing the offender. State v. Worley, 13 N.C. App. 198, 185 S.E.2d 270 (1971).

Conviction of Minor Not Required. — It is not necessary that a minor be convicted of the charges contained in a juvenile petition before a person may be prosecuted under this section for contributing to the delinquency of the minor. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970).

Neglect Resulting in Death of Child As Involuntary Manslaughter. — Where evidence was sufficient to show that the child's death resulted from the culpably negligent omission of defendants to perform their legal duty with respect to the child, the trial court did not err in overruling defendants' motions for nonsuit as to involuntary manslaughter. State v. Mason, 18 N.C. App. 433, 197 S.E.2d 79, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 669, 197 S.E.2d 898 (1973).

Applied in State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

§ 14-317. Permitting minors to enter barrooms or billiard rooms.

If the manager or owner of any barroom, wherein beer, wine, or any alcoholic beverages are sold or consumed, or billiard room shall knowingly allow any minor under 18 years of age to enter or remain in such barroom or billiard room, where before such minor under 18 years of age enters or remains in such barroom or billiard room, the manager or owner thereof has been notified in writing by the parents or guardian of such minor under 18 years of age not to allow him to enter or remain in such barroom or billiard room, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. (1897, c. 278; Rev., s. 3729; C. S., s. 4442; 1967, c. 1089.)

§ 14-318. Exposing children to fire.

If any person shall leave any child of the age of seven years or less locked or otherwise confined in any dwelling, building or enclosure, and go away from such dwelling, building or enclosure without leaving some person of the age of discretion in charge of the same, so as to expose the child to danger by fire, the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished at the discretion of the court. (1893, c. 12; Rev., s. 3795; C. S., s. 4443.)

§ 14-318.1. Discarding or abandoning iceboxes, etc.; precautions required.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to discard, abandon, leave or allow to remain in any place any icebox, refrigerator or other container, device or equipment of any kind with an interior storage area of more than one and one-half cubic feet of clear space which is airtight, without first removing the door or doors or hinges from such icebox, refrigerator, container, device or equipment. This section shall not apply to any icebox, referigerator, container, device or equipment which is being used for the purpose for which it was originally designed, or is being used for display purposes by any retail or wholesale merchant, or is crated, strapped or locked to such an extent that it is impossible for a child to obtain access to any airtight compartment thereof. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished at the discretion of the court. (1955, c. 305.)

§ 14-318.2. Child abuse a general misdemeanor.

(a) Any parent of a child less than 16 years of age, or any other person providing care to or supervision of such child, who inflicts physical injury, or who allows physical injury to be inflicted, or who creates or allows to be created a substantial risk of physical injury, upon or to such child by other than accidental means is guilty of the misdemeanor of child abuse.

(b) The misdemeanor of child abuse is an offense additional to other civil and criminal provisions and is not intended to repeal or preclude any other sanctions or remedies, and is punishable as provided in G.S. 14-3(a). (1965, c. 472, s. 1; 1971, c. 710, s. 6.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article reviewing the development of protective services for children in this State, see 54 N.C.L. Rev. 743 (1976).

CASE NOTES

By the enactment of this section the General Assembly intended to provide for three separate and independent offenses, none dependent on the other; therefore, the first provision of this section making infliction of injury upon the child by the parent himself a punishable offense is divisible and separable from the remainder of the statute. State v. Fredell, 283 N.C. 242, 195 S.E.2d 300 (1973).

This section provides for three separate offenses: If the parent by other than accidental means (1) inflicts physical injury upon the child, (2) allows physical injury to be inflicted upon the child, or (3) creates or allows to be created a substantial risk of physical injury. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

Complaint of Constitutional Vagueness in Provision of Section Not Allowed. — Where defendant's case was submitted to the jury only on the issue of whether defendant actually inflicted her child's injuries, defendant could not complain of alleged unconstitutional vagueness in the provision of this section, making it a criminal offense to create or allow to be created a substantial risk of physical injury upon a child since provisions of this section are severable. State v. Fredell, 17 N.C. App. 205, 193 S.E.2d 587 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 242, 195 S.E.2d 300 (1973).

Defendant was not denied his right against double jeopardy by his conviction in superior court of child neglect in violation of § 14-316.1 after a judgment of nonsuit was entered in a prosecution of defendant in the district court for child abuse in violation of this section. State v. Hunter, 48 N.C. App. 656, 270 S.E.2d 120 (1980).

Child Abuse Not Lesser Included Offense. — The General Assembly did not intend child abuse to be a lesser included offense. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

And Does Not Merge with Any Other Offense. — The General Assembly did not intend child abuse to merge with any other offense. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

Charges of child abuse and child neglect were not merged into a charge of second-degree murder. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

State's Burden of Proof. — To convict a parent of child abuse under this section it is necessary that the State prove only one of three separate and distinct acts or courses of conduct; that the parent, other than by accidental means, (1) inflicted physical injury upon the child, (2) allowed physical injury to be inflicted upon the child, or (3) created or allowed to be created a substantial risk of physical injury upon the child. State v. Fredell, 17 N.C. App. 205, 193 S.E.2d 587 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 242, 195 S.E.2d 300 (1973).

Cited in State v. Heiser, 36 N.C. App. 358, 244 S.E.2d 170 (1978).

§ 14-318.3: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 710, s. 7.

§ 14-318.4. Child abuse a felony.

(a) Any parent of a child less than 16 years of age, or any other person providing care to or supervision of the child who intentionally inflicts any serious physical injury which results in:

(1) Permanent disfigurement, or
(2) Bone fracture, or
(3) Substantial impairment of physical health, or
(4) Substantial impairment of the function of any organ, limb, or appendage of such child, is guilty of a Class I felony.

(b) The felony of child abuse is an offense additional to other civil and criminal provisions and is not intended to repeal or preclude any other sanctions or remedies. (1979, c. 897, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 18.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 897, s. 2, provides: "This act applies to acts occurring on or after the date of ratification [June 8, 1979]. This act shall become effective on January 1, 1980."

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Class I felony" for "felony punishable by imprisonment for a period not to exceed five years" at the end of subsection (a). The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-319: Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 402.

§ 14-320. Separating child under six months old from a custodial parent.

It shall be unlawful for any person to separate or aid in separating any child under six months old from a parent legally entitled to custody of the child for the purpose of placing such child in a foster home or institution, or with the intent to remove it from the State for such purpose, without the written consent of either the county director of social services of the county in which the parent legally entitled to custody of the child resides, or of the county in which the child was born or of a private child-placing agency duly licensed by the Social Services Commission; but the written consent of any of the officials named in this section shall not be necessary for a child when the parent legally entitled to custody of the child places the child with relatives or in a boarding home or institution inspected by the Department of Human Resources and licensed by the Social Services Commission. The consent when required shall be filed in the records of the official or agency giving consent. Any person or agency violating the provisions of this section shall, upon conviction, be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1917, c. 59; 1919, c. 240; C. S., s. 4445; 1939, c. 56; 1945, c. 669; 1949, c. 491; 1965, c. 356; 1969, c. 982; 1973, c. 476, s. 138; 1979, c. 779.)

Cross References. — As to adoption generally, see Chapter 48.

§ 14-320.1. Transporting child outside the State with intent to violate custody order.

When any court of competent jurisdiction in this State shall have awarded custody of a child under the age of 16 years, it shall be a felony for any person with the intent to violate the court order to take or transport, or cause to be taken or transported, any such child from any point within this State to any point outside the limits of this State or to keep any such child outside the limits of this State. Such crime shall be punishable as a Class J felony. Provided that keeping a child outside the limits of the State in violation of a court order for a period in excess of 72 hours shall be prima facie evidence that the person charged intended to violate the order at the time of taking. (1969, c. 81; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote the second sentence, which formerly provided for punishment by a fine in the discretion of the court or by imprisonment for not more than three years, in the discretion of the court or by both such fine and imprisonment. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-321. Failing to pay minors for doing certain work.

Whenever any person, having a contract with any corporation, company or person for the manufacture or change of any raw material by the piece or pound, shall employ any minor to assist in the work upon the faith of and by color of such contract, with intent to cheat and defraud such minor, and, having secured the contract price, shall willfully fail to pay the minor when he shall have performed his part of the contract work, whether done by the day or by the job, the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not more than 30 days. ARTICLE 40.

Protection of the Family.

§ 14-322. Abandonment and failure to support spouse and children.

(a) For purposes of this Article:

(1) "Supporting spouse" means a spouse, whether husband or wife, upon whom the other spouse is actually substantially dependent or from whom such other spouse is substantially in need of maintenance and support.

(2) "Dependent spouse" means a spouse, whether husband or wife, who is actually substantially dependent upon the other spouse for his or her maintenance and support or is substantially in need of maintenance and support from the other spouse.

(b) Any supporting spouse who shall willfully abandon a dependent spouse without providing that spouse with adequate support shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished according to subsection (f).

(c) Any supporting spouse who, while living with a dependent spouse, shall willfully neglect to provide adequate support for that dependent spouse shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished according to subsection (f).

(d) Any parent who shall willfully neglect or refuse to provide adequate support for that parent's child, whether natural or adopted, and whether or not the parent abandons the child, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished according to subsection (f). Willful neglect or refusal to provide adequate support of a child shall constitute a continuing offense and shall not be barred by any statute of limitations until the youngest living child of the parent shall reach the age of 18 years.

(e) Upon conviction for an offense under this section, the court may make such order as will best provide for the support, as far as may be necessary, of the abandoned spouse or child, or both, from the property or labor of the defendant.

(f) A first offense under this section shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00), or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. A second or subsequent offense shall be a misdemeanor punishable by fine, or by imprisonment for not more than two years, or both. (1868-9, c. 209, s. 1; 1873-4, c. 176, s. 10; 1879, c. 92; Code, s. 970; Rev., s. 3355; C. S., s. 4447; 1925, c. 290; 1949, c. 810; 1957, c. 369; 1969, c. 1045, s. 1; 1981, c. 683, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Nonsupport of Spouse.
III. Nonsupport of Children.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The duty to provide support is not a debt in the legal sense of the word, but an obligation imposed by law, and penal sanctions are provided by this section for its willful neglect or abandonment. Ritchie v. White, 225 N.C. 450, 35 S.E.2d 414 (1945).

This section must be strictly construed. State v. Gardner, 219 N.C. 331, 13 S.E.2d 529 (1941); State v. Carson, 228 N.C. 151, 44 S.E.2d 721 (1947).

The district court has exclusive original jurisdiction of misdemeanors, including action to determine liability of persons for the support of dependents in any criminal proceeding. Cline v. Cline, 6 N.C. App. 523, 170 S.E.2d 645 (1969).

The constructive domicile of the wife is that of her husband, and where he has resided in another state and has left her there, and where for business or other reasonable purposes he has come to this State and made his domicile here, and she has followed him and he has then abandoned her and ceased to contribute to her support and that of his child born to them in lawful wedlock, the abandonment occurs in this State and is within the jurisdiction of the courts of this State and subject to the provisions of the State statute making it a misdemeanor. State v. Sneed, 197 N.C. 668, 150 S.E. 197 (1929).

Plea in Abatement after Plea of Not Guilty. — Where the defendant had been convicted of abandoning his wife and child and failing to provide an adequate support for them under the provisions of this section, his plea in abatement came too late after his plea of not guilty. State v. Hooker, 186 N.C. 761, 120 S.E. 449 (1923).

Order of the Judge Providing for Support. — It is within the discretion of the trial judge to provide for the support of the wife and the minor children of the marriage from the property or labor of the husband upon his conviction of willfully abandoning them, and an order that he pay a certain sum of money into the clerk's office monthly for this purpose, and secure compliance therewith by executing a bond in the sum of $1,000 comes within the provisions of the statute. State v. Vickers, 196 N.C. 239, 145 S.E. 175 (1928).

Where a husband has been convicted of abandoning his wife and minor children, the order of the judge providing for their support should be definite in providing for the contingencies that may arise, such as the coming of age of the children, etc., and should state what part thereof is for the support of the wife and what part is for the support of the children; and an order requiring the defendant to pay a certain sum monthly into the office of the clerk of the superior court, under a bond of the defendant to secure compliance, without further provisions, will be remanded so that a more definite order be given in the judgment of the lower court. State v. Vickers, 196 N.C. 239, 145 S.E. 175 (1928).

II. NONSUPPORT OF SPOUSE.

Indictment. — An indictment against a husband for abandoning his wife must aver his failure to support her. State v. May, 132 N.C. 1020, 43 S.E. 819 (1903).

Abandonment and Failure to Support Must Be Willful. — By express language the abandonment and failure to support must be willful to create criminal offenses State v. Westmoreland, 255 N.C. 725, 122 S.E.2d 702 (1961).

Willful Abandonment May Signify Whether Failure to Support Was Willful. — Under certain circumstances the willful abandonment of a wife by a husband may be a significant factor in determining whether his failure to provide adequate support was willful, as when he leaves and goes to a new community where there is no prospect of equally satisfactory employment. State v. Lucas, 242 N.C. 84, 86 S.E.2d 770 (1955).

An offer of a home when not made in good faith, and when refused, is equivalent to abandonment by the husband. State v. Smith, 164 N.C. 475, 79 S.E. 979 (1913).

Separation by Consent. — Where the wife has consented to a separation from her husband, his leaving her is not an abandonment within the meaning of this section. State v. Smith, 164 N.C. 475, 79 S.E. 979 (1913).

Institution of bastardy proceedings prior to birth of child is insufficient to establish such abandonment as is contemplated by this section. In re Jane Doe, 231 N.C. 1, 56 S.E.2d 8 (1949).

Wife Guilty of Adultery. — Where a wife is guilty of adultery, her husband is not liable to prosecution for abandonment. State v. Hopkins, 130 N.C. 647, 40 S.E. 973 (1902).

Upon the trial of the husband for abandonment, under this section, the wife's unchastity is a defense, which he may put in issue by cross-examination or otherwise, with the burden remaining on the State to show his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Falkner, 182 N.C. 793, 108 S.E. 756 (1921).

Statute of Limitations. — Where the abandonment consisted in the failure to remit her a certain sum of money periodically to a certain county in which his conduct had forced her to reside, the failure to support occurred at the time he failed to perform his agreement, and the statute will begin to run from that date. State v. Hooker, 186 N.C. 761, 120 S.E. 449 (1923).

Same — Renewal of Cohabitation. — Where a man willfully abandons his wife, sends remittances for her support, returns and lives with her as man and wife for a while, and again abandons her, his willfully leaving her the second time without providing an adequate support for her is a fresh abandonment and failure to support, and an indictment found within two years therefrom is not barred by the statute of limitations. State v. Beam, 181 N.C. 597, 107 S.E. 429 (1921).

Venue. — When the husband has agreed to a separation from his wife upon consideration of his remitting periodically a certain sum of money to a certain county in which she was to reside, and he fails to perform, the venue of an action under the provisions of this section is in that county. State v. Hooker, 186 N.C. 761, 120 S.E. 449 (1923).

Same — Where Husband Nonresident. — Where a man willfully abandons his wife in this State and fails to send her funds for an adequate support, when he was residing in another state, he cannot direct her choice of residence and is indictable under this section in the county of her residence. State v. Beam, 181 N.C. 597, 107 S.E. 429 (1921).

Instruction Properly Refused. — Plaintiff's contention that the court should have charged that the failure to provide support under this section must have been willful in order to constitute an abandonment was untenable. Hyder v. Hyder, 215 N.C. 239, 1 S.E.2d 540 (1939).

Crucial Questions for Jury — Defective Instruction. — Where, in a prosecution for abandonment and willful failure to support, the evidence tended to show that the husband was employed and had earnings, and had in some measure made provision for the support of the wife, the adequacy of such support and the willfulness of the defendant's failure to do more, were the crucial questions to be submitted to the jury, and an instruction to the effect that defendant's earning capacity made no difference was erroneous, and an instruction that the failure to provide support would be excusable only if the husband had no income or earning capacity whatsoever, was inexact. State v. Lucas, 242 N.C. 84, 86 S.E.2d 770 (1955).

Good Faith of Abandonment Question for Jury. — In a prosecution of a husband for abandonment the question whether such abandonment was in good faith, for the causes assigned, is for the jury. State v. Hopkins, 130 N.C. 647, 40 S.E. 973 (1902).

Proof of Adultery as Justification. — While ordinarily the husband may not withdraw his support from his wife and children, and compel her to leave him without violating this section, it is one of the exceptions to the rule under which the husband may prove justification, when she has committed adultery with another man, and an instruction which deprives the husband of this defense is reversible error. State v. Johnson, 194 N.C. 378, 139 S.E. 697 (1927).

Husband Cannot Be Twice Convicted. — A husband once convicted of an abandonment of his wife cannot be again tried for the same offense, he not having lived with her since the original abandonment. State v. Dunston, 78 N.C. 418 (1878).

Condonation by Wife Does Not Bar Prosecution. — Abandonment of the wife by the husband is a statutory offense, and it is not condoned, so far as the State's right to prosecute is concerned, by a subsequent resumption of the marital relation. State v. Manon, 204 N.C. 52, 167 S.E. 493 (1933).

Divorce after First Conviction No Defense on New Trial. — Where the husband has been indicted, tried, and convicted under this section for the criminal abandonment of his wife, and upon appeal he has been granted a new trial, the fact that since his former conviction his wife has obtained an absolute divorce from him will not avail him as a defense. State v. Faulkner, 185 N.C. 635, 116 S.E. 168 (1923).

Abandonment under § 50-7(1) is not synonymous with the criminal offense defined in this section. Richardson v. Richardson, 268 N.C. 538, 151 S.E.2d 12 (1966).

There is a distinction between criminal abandonment and the matrimonial offense of desertion. Peoples v. Peoples, 10 N.C. App. 402, 179 S.E.2d 138 (1971).

III. NONSUPPORT OF CHILDREN.

Sufficient Warrant. — A warrant charging defendant with willful refusal and neglect to provide adequate support for his minor children, naming them, was sufficient, abandonment not being an element of the offense since the 1957 amendment rewrote this section. State v. Goodmen, 266 N.C. 659, 147 S.E.2d 44 (1966).

The word "willfully" as used in § 49-2 is used with the same import as in this section. State v. Cook, 207 N.C. 261, 176 S.E. 757 (1934).

In a prosecution under this section, the failure by a defendant to provide adequate support for his child must be willful, that is, he intentionally and without just cause or excuse does not provide adequate support for his child according to his means and station in life, and this essential element of the offense must be alleged and proved. State v. Hall, 251 N.C. 211, 110 S.E.2d 868 (1959); State v. McMillan, 10 N.C. App. 734, 180 S.E.2d 35 (1971).

Defective Instruction on Presumption of Willfulness. — Where the defendant was indicted under this section for failure to provide adequate support for his minor children, and in the prosecution of the action the evidence tended to show that the defendant and his wife were living apart and that he had not provided any support for his minor children for some time, and that a judgment had been entered in a civil action by the wife awarding all his personalty except his personal belongings, and that he had transferred his realty to his daughter for the support of the wife and minor children, there was no presumption of willfulness from the failure to provide adequate support under § 14-323 (now repealed), and an instruction that left out this essential element of the crime was held to be reversible error. State v. Roberts, 197 N.C. 662, 150 S.E. 199 (1929).

Sufficient Evidence to Show Willful Abandonment and Failure to Support Minor Child. — Evidence that defendant refused to support his minor child although repeated demands were made on him after the parties had returned to this State, was held to show that the offense of willful abandonment and failure to support said minor child was committed by the defendant in this State, since this section provides that the abandonment of a minor child shall constitute a continuing offense. State v. Hinson, 209 N.C. 187, 183 S.E. 397 (1936).

Evidence Insufficient to Infer Willfulness. — Where there was no evidence in the record that the defendant was employed, or that he owned any property, or had any income or any ability whatsoever to contribute to the support of his children; nor any evidence that the defendant had failed to apply himself to some honest calling for the support of himself and family, or that he was a frequenter of drinking houses, or a known common drunkard, so as to bring the case within the presumption raised by § 14-323 (now repealed), the record was devoid of evidence from which the jury might infer that the defendant willfully or intentionally failed to discharge his obligation to support his children, and the defendant's motion for judgment as of nonsuit should have been allowed. State v. McMillan, 10 N.C. App. 734, 180 S.E.2d 35 (1971).

This section has no application to illegitimate children, and therefore an indictment drawn under this section charging defendant with the abandonment of his illegitimate child fails to charge a crime. State v. Gardner, 219 N.C. 331, 13 S.E.2d 529 (1941).

This section relates only to legitimate children. An illegitimate child is not protected thereby. Allen v. Hunnicutt, 230 N.C. 49, 52 S.E.2d 18 (1949).

Denial of Paternity. — Where the husband in an action for nonsupport for a child admits the nonsupport, but denies that he is the father, and introduces evidence in support thereof, an instruction that withdraws the question of the paternity of the child from the jury is reversible error. State v. Ray, 195 N.C. 628, 143 S.E. 216 (1928).

Biological Paternity Not Irrelevant. — The common-law presumption of the husband's paternity is not a rule of substantive law making biological paternity irrelevant in a prosecution under this section. State v. White, 300 N.C. 494, 268 S.E.2d 481 (1980).

Instruction as to Presumption of Legitimacy Held Not Unconstitutional. — In a prosecution for willfully refusing to provide adequate support for his child in violation of this section, where the child was conceived while defendant and her mother were living together as husband and wife; she was born after they had separated but during wedlock; and there was some evidence that her mother had sexual relations with another man after conception and during the period of gestation, a jury instruction on the common-law presumption of the child's legitimacy did not violate defendant's right to a trial by due process of law. State v. White, 300 N.C. 494, 268 S.E.2d 481 (1980).

Rebutting Presumption of Paternity. — To require a defendant-husband to offer evidence of the physical impossibility of his fatherhood in order to rebut the presumption of paternity places upon him a burden of production so stringent that, in effect, it unconstitutionally shifts the burden of persuasion to him on this issue. Due process precludes requiring that the defendant, in order to rebut the mandatory presumption, do more than offer some evidence which is sufficient to raise a factual issue as to the paternity of the child. State v. White, 300 N.C. 494, 268 S.E.2d 481 (1980).

This section in express terms constitutes the abandonment of children a continuing offense. The prosecution of an offense of this nature is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offense charged to have been committed at any time before the institution of the first prosecution, but it is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for continuing the offense thereafter, as this is a new violation of the law. State v. Hinson, 209 N.C. 187, 183 S.E. 397 (1936).

Due to continuing nature of the crime under this section, a person, arrested in Georgia and sought to be extradited to North Carolina, who temporarily came into the State after the commission of the crime, although for an innocent purpose, was a fugitive from justice when he again departed from the State. Daugherty v. Hornsby, 151 F.2d 799 (5th Cir. 1945).

Abandonment of children is a continuing offense, and therefore, termination of a prosecution in defendant's favor will not preclude a subsequent prosecution. State v. Smith, 241 N.C. 301, 84 S.E.2d 913 (1954).

A parent's willful failure or refusal to provide adequate support for his children is a continuing offense, and is not barred by any statute of limitations until the youngest child shall have reached the age of 18 years. State v. McMillan, 10 N.C. App. 734, 180 S.E.2d 35 (1971).

Autrefois Acquit and Convict. — In a prosecution for the violation of this section a plea by the defendant of former conviction of the same offense is good as to the period prior to the conviction, but it is not a bar to the prosecution for his failure to provide adequate support for his children subsequent thereto. State v. Jones, 201 N.C. 424, 160 S.E. 468 (1931).

If the mother is guilty of nonsupport, this section provides a remedy and this remedy is exclusive. Hensen v. Thomas, 231 N.C. 173, 56 S.E.2d 432, 12 A.L.R.2d 1171 (1949).

A father cannot, by contract, relieve himself of his obligation to support his child. Goodyear v. Goodyear, 257 N.C. 374, 126 S.E.2d 113 (1962).

Abandonment of Children after Divorce. — The father's duty to the children is not lessened by the fact that a decree of absolute divorcement has been obtained, the obligation to support his own children continuing after the marriage relation between him and his wife has been severed by the law. State v. Bell, 184 N.C. 701, 115 S.E. 190 (1922).

Statute of Limitations Repelled by Promise and Gifts. — The promise of a father to support his children and his making gifts to them was sufficient to repel the bar of the two-year statute of limitations, whether he was living in the home with them or otherwise, in proceedings under this section for his willfully abandoning them. State v. Bell, 184 N.C. 701, 115 S.E. 190 (1922).

§ 14-322.1. Abandonment of child or children for six months.

Any man or woman who, without just cause or provocation, willfully abandons his or her child or children for six months and who willfully fails or refuses to provide adequate means of support for his or her child or children during the six months' period, and who attempts to conceal his or her whereabouts from his or her child or children with the intent of escaping his lawful obligation for the support of said child or children, shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1963, c. 1227; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "shall be punished as a Class H felon" for "shall, upon conviction thereof, be guilty of a felony and punished in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-325.1. When offense of failure to support child deemed committed in State.

The offense of willful neglect or refusal of a parent to support and maintain a child, and the offense of willful neglect or refusal to support and maintain one's illegitimate child, shall be deemed to have been committed in the State of North Carolina whenever the child is living in North Carolina at the time of such willful neglect or refusal to support and maintain such child. (1953, c. 677; 1981, c. 683, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "parent" for "father" and "a child" for "his child or children" near the beginning of the section.

§ 14-326.1. Parents; failure to support.

If any person being of full age, and having sufficient income after reasonably providing for his or her own immediate family shall, without reasonable cause, neglect to maintain and support his or her parent or parents, if such parent or parents be sick or not able to work and have not sufficient means or ability to maintain or support themselves, such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00) or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both, in the discretion of the court; upon conviction of a second or subsequent offense he or she shall be punished by fine or by imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both, in the discretion of the court.

If there be more than one person bound under the provisions of the next preceding paragraph to support the same parent or parents, they shall share equitably in the discharge of such duty. (1955, c. 1099; 1969, c. 1045, s. 3.)

§ 14-329. Manufacturing, trafficking in, transporting, or possessing poisonous alcoholic beverages.

(a) Any person who, either individually or as an agent for any person, firm or corporation, shall manufacture for use as a beverage, any spirituous liquor which is found to contain any foreign properties or ingredients poisonous to the human system, shall be punished as a Class H felon.

(b) Any person who, either individually or as agent for any person, firm or corporation, shall, knowing or having reasonable grounds to know of the poisonous qualities thereof, transport for other than personal use, sell or possess for purpose of sale, for use as a beverage, any spirituous liquor which is found to contain any foreign properties or ingredients poisonous to the human system, shall be punished as a Class H felon.

(c) Any person who, either individually or as agent for any person, firm or corporation, shall transport for other than personal use, sell or possess for purpose of sale, any spirituous liquor to be used as a beverage which is found to contain any foreign properties or ingredients poisonous to the human system, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than six months, and may be fined in the discretion of the court. In prosecutions under this subsection and under subsection (b) above, proof of transportation of more than one gallon of spirituous liquor will be prima facie evidence of transportation for other than personal use, and proof of possession of more than one gallon of spirituous liquor will be prima facie evidence of possession for purpose of sale.

(d) Any person who, either individually or as agent for any person, firm or corporation, shall transport or possess, for use as a beverage, any illicit spirituous liquor which is found to contain any foreign properties or ingredients poisonous to the human system, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred dollars ($200.00), and may be imprisoned in the discretion of the court: Provided, anyone charged under this subsection may show as a complete defense that the spirituous liquor in question was legally obtained and possessed and that he had no knowledge of the poisonous nature of the beverage. Vagrants and Tramps.

§ 14-336. Persons classed as vagrants.

If any person shall come within any of the following classes, he shall be deemed a vagrant, and shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days: provided, however, that this limitation of punishment shall not be binding except in cases of a first offense, and in all other cases such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. The classes are:

(1) Persons wandering or strolling about in idleness, who are able to work and have no property to support them.

(2) Persons leading an idle, immoral or profligate life, who have no property to support them and who are able to work and do not work.

(3) All persons able to work having no property to support them and who have not some visible and known means of a fair, honest and reputable livelihood.

(4) Persons having a fixed abode who have no visible property to support them and who live by stealing or by trading in, bartering for or buying stolen property.

(5) Professional gamblers living in idleness.

(6) All able-bodied men having no other visible means of support who shall live in idleness upon the wages or earnings of their mother, wife or minor children, except of male children over eighteen years old.

(7) Keepers and inmates of bawdy houses, assignation houses, lewd and disorderly houses, and other places where illegal sexual intercourse is habitually carried on: provided, that nothing here is intended or shall be construed as abolishing the crime of keeping a bawdy house, or lessening the punishment by law for such crime. (1905, c. 391; Rev., s. 3740; 1907, c. 1012, s. 1; 1913, c. 75; 1915, c. 1; C. S., s. 4459; 1969, c. 1224, s. 21.)

CASE NOTES

This section is unconstitutional and its enforcement is permanently enjoined. Wheeler v. Goodman, 306 F. Supp. 58 (W.D.N.C. 1969).

This section is void for vagueness and overbreadth. The section's terms do not give fair notice of what acts are criminally prohibited and are so broad as to embrace, on its face, obviously innocent activities. Wheeler v. Goodman, 306 F. Supp. 58 (W.D.N.C. 1969).

This section is unconstitutional because it is vague and overbroad; because it punishes mere status; and because it invidiously discriminates against those without property, all in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. Wheeler v. Goodman, 306 F. Supp. 58 (W.D.N.C. 1969).

This vagrancy statute is properly attacked on its face as being vague and overbroad; it suppresses free expression and free association; no single criminal state court prosecution could conceivably explore and clarify and limit its myriad possible constructions. Wheeler v. Goodman, 298 F. Supp. 935 (W.D.N.C. 1969).

§ 14-337: Repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 108, s. 13.

§ 14-338. Tramp defined and punishment provided; certain persons excepted.

If any person shall go about from place to place begging or subsisting on charity, he shall be denominated a tramp, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00), or by imprisonment not exceeding 30 days: provided, that any person who shall furnish satisfactory evidence of good character shall be discharged without cost. Any act of begging or vagrancy by any person, unless a well-known object of charity, shall be evidence that the person committing the same is a tramp. This section shall not apply to any woman, to any minor under the age of 14 years, or to any blind person. (1879, c. 198, ss. 1, 4, 6; Code, ss. 3828, 3829, 3831, 3833; 1897, c. 268; Rev., s. 3735; C. S., s. 4461.)

§ 14-339. Trespassing and the carrying of dangerous weapons by tramps.

If any tramp shall enter any dwelling house or kindle any fire on the land of another without the consent of the owner or occupant thereof, or shall kindle a fire on any highway, or shall be found carrying any firearm or other dangerous weapon, or shall threaten to do any injury to the person, or to the real or personal estate, of another, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1879, c. 198, s. 2; Code, s. 3829; Rev., s. 3736; C. S., s. 4462; 1969, c. 1224, s. 18.)

§ 14-341: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 699.

ARTICLE 44.

Regulation of Sales.

§ 14-342. Selling or offering to sell meat of diseased animals.

If any person shall knowingly and willfully slaughter any diseased animal and sell or offer for sale any of the meat of such diseased animal for human consumption, or if any person knows that the meat offered for sale or sold for human consumption by him is that of a diseased animal, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined or imprisoned, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1905, c. 303; Rev., s. 3442; C. S., s. 4465.)

§ 14-343. Unauthorized dealing in railroad tickets.

If any person shall sell or deal in tickets issued by any railroad company, unless he is a duly authorized agent of the railroad company, or shall refuse upon demand to exhibit his authority to sell or deal in such tickets, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1895, c. 83, s. 1; Rev., s. 3764; C. S., s. 4466; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

§ 14-344. Sale of admission tickets in excess of printed price.

Any person, firm, or corporation shall be allowed to add a reasonable service fee to the face value of the tickets sold, and the person, firm, or corporation which sells or resells such tickets shall not be permitted to recoup funds greater than the combined face value of the ticket and the authorized service fee. This fee shall not exceed one dollar ($1.00) for each ticket. This service fee may be a pre-established amount per ticket or a percentage of each ticket. The existence of the service fee shall be made known to the public by printing or writing the amount of the fee on the tickets which are printed for the event. Any person, firm or corporation which sells or offers to sell a ticket for a price greater than the price permitted by this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1941, c. 180; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8; 1977, c. 9; 1979, c. 909; 1981, c. 36.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "one dollar ($1.00) for each ticket" for "ten percent (10%) of the sales price" at the end of the second sentence.

§ 14-345. Sale of cotton at night under certain conditions.

If any person shall buy, sell, deliver or receive, for a price, or for any reward whatever, any cotton in the seed, or any unpacked lint cotton, brought or carried in a basket, hamper or sheet, or in any mode where the quantity is less than what is usually baled, or where the cotton is not baled, between the hours of sunset and sunrise, such person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1873-4, c. 62; 1874-5, c. 70; Code, s. 1006; 1905, c. 417; Rev., s. 3813; C. S., s. 4467; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

§ 14-346. Sale of convict-made goods prohibited.

(a) It shall be unlawful to sell or to offer for sale anywhere within the State of North Carolina any articles or commodities manufactured or produced, wholly or in part, in this State or elsewhere by convicts or prisoners, except

(1) Articles or commodities manufactured or produced by convicts on probation or parole or prisoners released part time for regular employment in the free community, and

(2) Products of agricultural or forestry enterprises or quarrying or mining operations in which inmates of any penal or correctional institution of this State are employed, and

(3) Articles and commodities manufactured or produced in any penal or correctional institution of this State for sale to departments, institutions, and agencies supported in whole or in part by the State, or to any political subdivision of this State, for the use of these departments, institutions, agencies, and political subdivisions of the State and not for resale, and

(4) Articles of handicraft made by the inmates of any penal or correctional institution of this State during their leisure hours and with their own materials.

(b) Any person, firm or corporation selling, undertaking to sell, or offering for sale any prison-made or convict-made goods, wares or merchandise, anywhere within the State, in violation of the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. Each sale or offer to sell, in violation of the provisions of this section, shall constitute a separate offense. (1933, c. 146, ss. 1-4; 1959, c. 170, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 4.)

§ 14-346.1. Sale of bay rum.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell or offer for sale any bay rum in the State of North Carolina, or to cause any delivery of bay rum to be made in the State of North Carolina pursuant to any sale thereof, except:

(1) When such sale is made to a pharmacy or drugstore, supervised by a person licensed as a pharmacist or assistant pharmacist as described in G.S. 90-71;

(2) When such sale is made pursuant to a prescription of some duly licensed physician, or
(3) When such sale is made to a duly licensed barber for use in the course of treatments given or services performed in a barbershop, and not for resale.

Any person who violates any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to the following counties: Anson, Beaufort, Bertie, Brunswick, Burke, Camden, Caswell, Columbus, Craven, Currituck, Dare, Duplin, Edgecombe, Forsyth, Franklin, Gates, Greene, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Hoke, Hyde, Johnston, Lenoir, Lincoln, Martin, Moore, Nash, New Hanover, Northampton, Onslow, Pasquotank, Pender, Perquimans, Pitt, Randolph, Robeson, Stanly, Tyrrell and Wilson. (1951, c. 1096; 1953, cc. 179, 181, 411; 1955, c. 947; 1959, c. 1300; 1963, c. 260; 1967, c. 746; 1969, c. 1224, s. 19.)

§ 14-346.2. Sale of certain articles on Sunday prohibited; counties excepted.

Any person, firm or corporation who engages on Sunday in the business of selling, or sells or offers for sale on such day, clothing and wearing apparel, clothing accessories, furniture, home, business or office furnishings, household, business or office appliances, hardware, tools, paints, building and lumber supply materials, jewelry, silverware, watches, clocks, luggage, musical instruments or recordings, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both.

Each separate sale or offer to sell shall constitute a separate offense: provided this section shall not be applicable to Avery, Brunswick, Camden, Carteret, Cherokee, Clay, Currituck, Dare, Graham, Haywood, Henderson, Hyde, Jackson, Macon, Madison, Mitchell, New Hanover, Pamlico, Pender, Polk, Swain, Transylvania, Watauga, Wilkes and Yancey counties. (1961, c. 1156; 1963, c. 488; 1969, c. 1224, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — The 1963 amendatory act provides that it shall not apply to Chimney Rock township of Rutherford County, Colly township of Bladen County or Edneyville township of Henderson County, or to facilities within the right-of-way of the Blue Ridge Parkway in Ashe, Alleghany and Watauga counties, or to Blowing Rock township of Watauga County. The act further provides that:

"The areas that are exempted from this act by the foregoing provisions are so exempted upon the classification of such areas as resort or tourist areas, the General Assembly recognizing that different considerations apply to such areas. By exempting from this act the General Assembly hereby classifies such areas as resort or tourist areas."

For an article on local legislation in the General Assembly discussing this section, see 45 N.C.L. Rev. 340 (1967).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The 1963 amendment is not general because it does not apply to and operate uniformly on all members of any class of persons, places or things requiring legislation peculiar to itself in matters covered by the law. On the contrary, it applies to and operates only on merchants in designated counties or portions thereof and not on similarly situated merchants in other counties or portions thereof and no reasonable basis exists for the attempted classification of the exempted counties or portions thereof as resort areas or tourist areas; hence, the 1963 amendment must be considered a local and special act in violation of N.C. Const., Art II, § 29, and therefore void. Treasure City of Fayetteville, Inc. v. Clark, 261 N.C. 130, 134 S.E.2d 97 (1964).

§ 14-352: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 354.

§ 14-353. Influencing agents and servants in violating duties owed employers.

Any person who gives, offers or promises to an agent, employee or servant any gift or gratuity whatever with intent to influence his action in relation to his principal's, employer's or master's business; any agent, employee or servant who requests or accepts a gift or gratuity or a promise to make a gift or to do an act beneficial to himself, under an agreement or with an understanding that he shall act in any particular manner in relation to his principal's, employer's or master's business; any agent, employee or servant who, being authorized to procure materials, supplies or other articles either by purchase or contract for his principal, employer or master, or to employ service or labor for his principal, employer or master, receives, directly or indirectly, for himself or for another, a commission, discount or bonus from the person who makes such sale or contract, or furnishes such materials, supplies or other articles, or from a person who renders such service or labor; and any person who gives or offers such an agent, employee or servant such commission, discount or bonus, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1913, c. 190, s. 1; C. S., s. 4475; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6.)

Legal Periodicals. — For list of articles respecting acts prohibited by this section and similar statutes, and "commercial bribery" and influencing of employees, see State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The first two parts of this section are not repugnant to the "due process of law" clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, and to "the law of the land" clause of Const., Art. I, § 17, and are a reasonable and proper exercise of the police power of the State. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

The acts prohibited in the first clause of this section are stated in words sufficiently explicit, clear and definite to inform any man of ordinary intelligence what conduct on his part will render him liable to its penalties. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Although the second clause of this section employs general terms, the words used are sufficiently explicit and definite to convey to any man of ordinary intelligence and understanding an adequate description of the prohibited act or acts, and to inform him of what conduct on his part will render him liable to its penalties. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

The first two parts of this section are divisible and separable from the remainder of the statute. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

A violation of this section is not a malicious misdemeanor. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

A violation of the first clause of this section is related to unfair trade practices, and is an unfair method of competition. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

And Is Commonly Called "Commercial Bribery." — If a person does the prohibited act or acts specified in the first clause of this section with the intent explicitly stated therein, he is guilty of what is commonly called "commercial bribery." State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Such Practices Are Generally Prohibited. — There is general agreement that where an agent or employee receives money or other considerations from a person in return for the agent's or employee's efforts to further that person's interest in business dealings between him and the principal or employer, such an act or acts on the part of the agent or employee and on the part of the person who gives the money or other consideration is an essential element of the offense prohibited. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

The intent specified in the first clause of this section is an essential element of the offense. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

As Is Agreement or Understanding in Second Clause. — The agreement or understanding in the second clause of this section is an essential element of the offense. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

First Clause Does Not Prohibit Customary Tipping. — A contention that the language of the first clause of this section is so broad as to prohibit the customary habit of tipping is untenable. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Since Tipping Lacks Intent to Influence. — Customary tipping is in obedience to custom or in appreciation of service, and is done with no intent to influence the action of the person receiving the tip in relation to his or her employer's business, and as to tipping done in such a manner the statute is not applicable. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

But If Such Intent Is Present, Tipping May Be Violation. — It is possible that a person by tipping an agent, servant or employee with the intent specified in the first clause of this section could bring himself within its penalties, e.g., by giving substantial amounts or considerations and calling them tips. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Second Clause Is Intended to Prohibit Disloyalty by Employees. — The plain intent and purpose of the second clause of this section is to prohibit any agent, employee or servant from being disloyal and unfaithful to his principal, employer or master. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

The third and fourth parts of this section refer to a commission, discount or bonus received by any agent, employee or servant under the circumstances therein specified, and to any person who gives or offers such an agent, employee, or servant such commission, discount or bonus. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Parties to Prohibited Acts Generally Only Witnesses. — The activities necessary to accomplish the offenses prohibited by this section and similar statutes, require no violence, embody no traces in lasting form, and frequently, if not almost entirely, have no witnesses other than persons implicated or potentially implicated. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Failure to Prove Conspiracy Does Not Bar Conviction of Substantive Offense. — Although the State failed to prove that one of the defendants was one of the conspirators and was guilty of the conspiracy alleged against him in one count in the indictment, he could still be convicted of the substantive offenses committed by him in violation of this section, as charged against him in other counts. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

§ 14-354. Witness required to give self-incriminating evidence; no suit or prosecution to be founded thereon.

No person shall be excused from attending, testifying or producing books, papers, contracts, agreements and other documents before any court, or in obedience to the subpoena of any court, having jurisdiction of the crime denounced in G.S. 14-353, on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to incriminate him or to subject him to a penalty or to a forfeiture; but no person shall be liable to any suit or prosecution, civil or criminal, for or on account of any transaction, matter or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before such court or in obedience to its subpoena or in any such case or proceeding: Provided, that no person so testifying or producing any such books, papers, contracts, agreements or other documents shall be exempted from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying. (1913, c. 190, s. 2; C. S., s. 4476.)

CASE NOTES

Stated in State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262 (1963).

§ 14-355. Blacklisting employees.

If any person, agent, company or corporation, after having discharged any employee from his or its service, shall prevent or attempt to prevent, by word or writing of any kind, such discharged employee from obtaining employment with any other person, company or corporation, such person, agent or corporation shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00); and such person, agent, company or corporation shall be liable in penal damages to such discharged person, to be recovered by civil action. This section shall not be construed as prohibiting any person or agent of any company or corporation from furnishing in writing, upon request, any other person, company or corporation to whom such discharged person or employee has applied for employment, a truthful statement of the reason for such discharge. (1909, c. 858, s. 1; C. S., s. 4477.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on worker's compensation and retaliatory discharge, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 629 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Intent of Section. — This section was intended to correct the abuse under the common law of statements made concerning a discharged employee out of malice, where damages for the loss of employment were difficult of admeasurement; and under the provisions of the act a statement made as to the standing of the discharged employee is not privileged, if made maliciously. Seward v. Receivers of Seaboard Air Line Ry., 159 N.C. 241, 75 S.E. 34 (1912).

Remedial Provisions. — The provisions of this section and § 14-356 are remedial and do not put the burden upon the plaintiff of showing either malice or actual damages. Goins v. Sargent, 196 N.C. 478, 146 S.E. 131 (1929).

What Constitutes a Violation. — Where an employer has discharged his employee for being a member of a lawful association of like employees, and has advised others, without a request from them, who would have engaged the services of such employee that he would not sell his product to them should they employ him, and thus has prevent the discharged employee from getting employment within the State, and forced him to obtain employment in another state, depriving him of his living at home here with his family, etc., the employee is entitled to recover damages in his civil action against his former employer, and a demurrer ore tenus to a complaint setting forth this cause of action is bad. Goins v. Sargent, 196 N.C. 478, 146 S.E. 131 (1929).

§ 14-356. Conspiring to blacklist employees.

It shall be unlawful for two or more persons to agree together to blacklist any discharged employee or to attempt, by words or writing or any other means whatever, to prevent such discharged employee, or any employee who may have voluntarily left the service of his employer, from obtaining employment with any other person or company. Persons violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined or imprisoned, or both, at the discretion of the court. (1909, c. 858, s. 2; C. S., s. 4478.)

§ 14-357. Issuing nontransferable script to laborers.

If any person who employs laborers by the day, week or month shall issue in payment for the services of such laborers any ticket, certificate or other script bearing upon its face the word "nontransferable," or shall issue such ticket, certificate or other script in any form that would render it void by transfer from the person to whom issued, or shall refuse to pay to the person holding the same its face value, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars ($10.00) nor more than fifty dollars ($50.00) for each offense, or imprisoned not more than 30 days. (1889, c. 280; 1891, cc. 46, 78, 167, 370, 456; 1895, c. 127; Rev., s. 3730; C. S., s. 4479.)

CASE NOTES

"Face Value" Defined. — The "face value" is the value expressed on the face of the writing in the commodity in which it is payable. W.C. Marriner & Bros. v. John L. Roper Co., 112 N.C. 164, 16 S.E. 906 (1893).

Rights of Assignee. — This section does not authorize the assignee of a ticket or script payable in merchandise to demand and receive payment in money instead of in merchandise. W.C. Marriner & Bros. v. John L. Roper Co., 112 N.C. 164, 16 S.E. 906 (1893).

§ 14-357.1. Requiring payment for medical examination, etc., as condition of employment.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any employer, as defined in subsection (b) of this section, to require any applicant for employment, as defined in subsection (c), to pay the cost of a medical examination or the cost of furnishing any records required by the employer as a condition of the initial act of hiring.

(b) The term "employer" as used in this section shall mean and include an individual, a partnership, an association, a corporation, a legal representative, trustee, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, and any common carrier by rail, motor, water, air, or express company, doing business in or operating within the State.

Provided that this section shall not apply to any employer as defined in this subsection who employs less than 25 employees.

(c) The term "applicant for employment" shall mean and include any person who seeks to be permitted, required or directed by any employer, as defined in subsection (b) hereof, in consideration of direct or indirect gain or profit, to engage in employment.

(d) Any employer who violates the provisions of this section shall be liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00) for each and every violation. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Labor to enforce this section. (1951, c. 1094.)

ARTICLE 46.

Regulation of Landlord and Tenant.

§ 14-358. Local: Violation of certain contracts between landlord and tenant.

If any tenant or cropper shall procure advances from his landlord to enable him to make a crop on the land rented by him, and then willfully abandon the same without good cause and before paying for such advances with intent to defraud the landlord; or if any landlord shall contract with a tenant or cropper to furnish him advances to enable him to make a crop, and shall willfully fail or refuse, without good cause, to furnish such advances according to his agreement with intent to defraud the tenant, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. Any person employing a tenant or cropper who has violated the provisions of this section, with knowledge of such violation, shall be liable to the landlord furnishing such advances for the amount thereof, and shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. This section shall apply to the following counties only: Alamance, Alexander, Beaufort, Bertie, Bladen, Cabarrus, Camden, Caswell, Chatham, Chowan, Cleveland, Columbus, Craven, Cumberland, Currituck, Duplin, Edgecombe, Gaston, Gates, Greene, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Johnston, Jones, Lee, Lenoir, Lincoln, Martin, Mecklenburg, Montgomery, Nash, Northampton, Onslow, Pamlico, Pender, Perquimans, Person, Pitt, Randolph, Robeson, Rockingham, Rowan, Rutherford, Sampson, Stokes, Surry, Tyrrell, Vance, Wake, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Wilson and Yadkin. (1905, cc. 297, 383, 445, 820; Rev., s. 3366; 1907, c. 8; c. 84, s. 1; c. 595, s. 1; cc. 639, 719, 869; Pub. Loc. 1915, c. 18; C. S., s. 4480; Ex. Sess. 1920, c. 26; 1925, c. 285, s. 2; Pub. CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The provisions of this section contravene N.C. Const., Art. I, § 16, prohibiting imprisonment for debt, except in cases of fraud; and an indictment thereunder, without averment of fraud, will be quashed. State v. Williams, 150 N.C. 802, 63 SE. 949 (1909); Minton v. Early, 183 N.C. 199, 111 S.E. 347 (1922).

Indictment Insufficient. — An indictment under the provisions of this section which does not charge that the abandonment of the crop by tenant or cropper was "without cause" and "before paying for such advances," should be quashed as insufficient. State v. Williams, 150 N.C. 802, 63 S.E. 949 (1909).

§ 14-359. Local: Tenant neglecting crop; landlord failing to make advances; harboring or employing delinquent tenant.

If any tenant or cropper shall procure advances from his landlord to enable him to make a crop on the land rented by him, and then willfully refuse to cultivate such crops or negligently or willfully abandon the same without good cause and before paying for such advances with intent to defraud the landlord; or if any landlord who induces another to become tenant or cropper by agreeing to furnish him advances to enable him to make a crop, shall willfully fail or refuse without good cause to furnish such advances according to his agreement with intent to defraud the tenant, or if any person shall entice, persuade or procure any tenant, lessee or cropper, who has made a contract agreeing to cultivate the land of another, to abandon or to refuse or fail to cultivate such land with intent to defraud the landlord, or after notice shall harbor or detain on his own premises, or on the premises of another, any such tenant, lessee or cropper, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not more than 30 days. Any person who employs a tenant or cropper who has violated the provisions of this section, with knowledge of such violation, shall be liable to the landlord furnishing such advances, for the amount thereof. This section shall apply only to the following counties: Alamance, Anson, Cabarrus, Caswell, Davidson, Franklin, Granville, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Hoke, Hyde, Lee, Lincoln, Moore, Person, Randolph, Richmond, Rockingham, Rowan, Rutherford, Sampson, Stanly, Stokes, Union, Vance, Wake and Washington. ARTICLE 47.

Cruelty to Animals.

§ 14-360. Cruelty to animals; construction of section.

If any person shall willfully overdrive, overload, wound, injure, torture, torment, deprive of necessary sustenance, cruelly beat, needlessly mutilate or kill or cause or procure to be overdriven, overloaded, wounded, injured, tortured, tormented, deprived of necessary sustenance, cruelly beaten, needlessly mutilated or killed as aforesaid, any useful beast, fowl or animal, every such offender shall for every such offense be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. In this section, and in every law which may be enacted relating to animals, the words "animal" and "dumb animal" shall be held to include every living creature; the words "torture," "torment" or "cruelty" shall be held to include every act, omission or neglect whereby unjustifiable physical pain, suffering or death is caused or permitted. Such terms shall not be construed to prohibit the lawful taking of animals under the jurisdiction and regulation of the Wildlife Resources Commission. (1881, c. 34, s. 1; c. 368, ss. 1, 15; Code, ss. 2482, 2490; 1891, c. 65; Rev., s. 3299; 1907, c. 42; C. S., s. 4483; 1969, c. 1224, s. 2; 1979, c. 641.)

CASE NOTES

This section is for the protection of animals. Belk v. Boyce, 263 N.C. 24, 138 S.E.2d 789 (1964).

It is not for the protection of trespassers or mere licensees. Belk v. Boyce, 263 N.C. 24, 138 S.E.2d 789 (1964).

Hence, Unlawful Shooting at Dog Is Not Negligence Per Se. — Where plaintiff, who was struck by a bullet fired by defendant, was at best a mere licensee, the fact that defendant was unlawfully shooting at a dog did not render the act negligence per se, nor impose on defendant absolute liability. Since this section is not for the protection of the class to which plaintiff belonged, its violation did not impose liability in the absence of a showing that defendant knew, or in the exercise of reasonable care should have known, of plaintiff 's presence in the vicinity. Belk v. Boyce, 263 N.C. 24, 138 S.E.2d 789 (1964).

The word "willful" as used in criminal statutues signifies more than the mere intention to do a thing, and means the commission of the act "without just cause, excuse, or justification." State v. Dickens, 215 N.C. 303, 1 S.E.2d 837 (1939); State v. Fowler, 22 N.C. App. 144, 205 S.E.2d 749 (1974).

Unnecessary suffering knowingly and willfully permitted constitutes the offense. State v. Porter, 112 N.C. 887, 16 S.E. 915 (1893).

Finding Required for Conviction. — In order to convict there must be a finding that the act was "willfully and unlawfully" done. State v. Tweedy, 115 N.C. 704, 20 S.E. 183 (1894).

A dog is a useful animal within the meaning of this section. State v. Dickens, 215 N.C. 303, 1 S.E.2d 837 (1939).

Unnecessary to Show Dog Has Pecuniary Value. — It is unnecessary to show that a dog is of a pecuniary value to the owner to maintain an indictment for cruelty forbidden by the section. State v. Smith, 156 N.C. 628, 72 S.E. 321 (1911).

Punishment in Effort to Train. — Punishment administered to an animal in an honest and good faith effort to train it is not without justification and not willful. State v. Fowler, 22 N.C. App. 144, 205 S.E.2d 749 (1974).

Anger No Excuse. — Anger does not excuse the killing when it was willful and needless. And under such circumstances the intent is immaterial. State v. Neal, 120 N.C. 613, 27 S.E. 81 (1897).

Evidence of Dog's Presence on Property Properly Excluded. — In a prosecution for needlessly killing a useful dog, evidence that a dog, not identified as the dog killed, had frequented the place where defendant was employed, resulting in unpleasant odors around the place, and that the dog had barked at night, is properly excluded from the evidence upon the State's objection, since the evidence does not tend to establish justification, the presence of the dog on the premises giving the defendant only the right to drive him away but not to injure him unnecessarily, and previous offenses committed by the dog not being justification for killing him, the right to kill being founded on the immediate necessity of protecting property, a person, or another animal. State v. Dickens, 215 N.C. 303, 1 S.E.2d 837 (1939).

Injury to Prevent Depredations No Defense. — The fact that cows (State v. Butts, 92 N.C. 784 (1885)) or chickens (State v. Neal, 120 N.C. 613, 27 S.E. 81 (1897)) were trespassing on defendant's property is not a defense to an action under this section, where the killing or wounding was unnecessary. See also State v. Smith, 156 N.C. 628, 72 S.E. 321 (1911).

Indictment. — The facts constituting torturing, tormenting or cruel conduct must be set out when such conduct is charged. State v. Watkins, 101 N.C. 702, 8 S.E. 346 (1888).

A charge that defendant "did unlawfully and willfully beat" was held sufficient in State v. Allison, 90 N.C. 733 (1884).

Illustrations. — Shooting pigeons for sport (State v. Porter, 112 N.C. 887, 16 S.E. 915 (1893)) and poisoning chickens (State v. Bossee, 145 N.C. 579, 59 S.E. 879 (1907)) have been held violations of the section.

Hitting a runaway horse with a rock, however, has been held insufficient to sustain a direct verdict — the question of the willful purpose to injure being for the jury. State v. Isley, 119 N.C. 862, 26 S.E. 35 (1896).

Applied in State v. Holt, 90 N.C. 749 (1884); State v. Candler, 25 N.C. App. 318, 212 S.E.2d 901 (1975); State v. Simmons, 36 N.C. App. 354, 244 S.E.2d 168 (1978).

§ 14-361. Instigating or promoting cruelty to animals.

If any person shall willfully set on foot, or instigate, or move to, carry on, or promote, or engage in, or do any act towards the furtherance of any act of cruelty to any animal, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1881, c. 368, s. 6; Code, s. 2487; 1891, c. 65; Rev., s. 3300; C. S., s. 4484; 1953, c. 857, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

§ 14-361.1. Abandonment of animals.

Any person being the owner or possessor, or having charge or custody of an animal, who willfully and without justifiable excuse abandons the animal is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to two hundred dollars ($200.00). (1979, c. 687.)

§ 14-362. Bearbaiting, cockfighting and similar amusements.

If any person shall keep, or use, or in any way be connected with, or interested in the management of, or shall receive money for the admission of any person to, any place kept or used for the purpose of fighting, or baiting any bull, bear, dog, cock, or other animal; or if any person shall encourage, aid or assist therein, or shall permit or suffer any place to be so kept or used, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1881, c. 368, s. 2; Code, s. 2483; 1891, c. 65; Rev., s. 3301; C. S., s. 4485; 1953, c. 857, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

§ 14-363. Conveying animals in a cruel manner.

If any person shall carry or cause to be carried in or upon any vehicle or other conveyance, any animal in a cruel or inhuman manner, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. Whenever an offender shall be taken into custody therefor by any officer, the officer may take charge of such vehicle or other conveyance and its contents, and deposit the same in some safe place of custody. The necessary expenses which may be incurred for taking charge of and keeping and sustaining the vehicle or other conveyance shall be a lien thereon, to be paid before the same can be lawfully reclaimed; or the said expenses, or any part thereof remaining unpaid, may be recovered by the person incurring the same of the owner of such animal in an action therefor. (1881, c. 368, s. 5; Code, s. 2486; 1891, c. 65; Rev., s. 3302; C. S., s. 4486; 1953, c. 857, s. 3; 1969, c. 1224, s. 4.)

§ 14-363.1. Living baby chicks or other fowl, or rabbits under eight weeks of age; disposing of as pets or novelties forbidden.

If any person, firm or corporation shall sell, or offer for sale, barter or give away as premiums living baby chicks, ducklings, or other fowl or rabbits under eight weeks of age as pets or novelties, such person, firm or corporation shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars ($100.00) or imprisonment for not more than 30 days, or both. Provided, that nothing contained in this section shall be construed to prohibit the sale of nondomesticated species of chicks, ducklings, or other fowl, or of other fowl from proper brooder facilities by hatcheries or stores engaged in the business of selling them for purposes other than for pets or novelties. (1973, c. 466, s. 1.)

§ 14-363.2. Confiscation of cruelly treated animals.

Conviction of any offense contained in this Article may result in confiscation of cruelly treated animals belonging to the accused and it shall be proper for the court in its discretion to order a final determination of the custody of the confiscated animals. (1979, c. 640.)

Protection of Livestock Running at Large.

§ 14-365: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 110.

§ 14-366. Molesting or injuring livestock.

If any person shall unlawfully and on purpose drive any livestock, lawfully running at large in the range, from said range, or shall kill, maim or injure any livestock, lawfully running at large in the range or in the field or pasture of the owner, whether done with actual intent to injure the owner, or to drive the stock from the range, or with any other unlawful intent, every such person, his counselors, aiders, and abettors, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor: provided, that nothing herein contained shall prohibit any person from driving out of the range any stock unlawfully brought from other states or places. In any indictment under this section it shall not be necessary to name in the bill or prove on the trial the owner of the stock molested, maimed, killed or injured. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1850, c. 94, ss. 1, 2; R. C., c. 34, s. 104; Code, s. 1002; 1885, c. 383; 1887, c. 368; 1895, c. 190; Rev., s. 3314; C. S., s. 4494; 1969, c. 1224, s. 9.)

§ 14-368. Placing poisonous shrubs and vegetables in public places.

If any person shall throw into or leave exposed in any public square, street, lane, alley or open lot in any city, town or village, or in any public road, any mock orange or other poisonous shrub, plant, tree or vegetable, he shall be liable in damages to any person injured thereby and shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1887, c. 338; Rev., s. 3318; C. S., s. 4496; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to putting out poisonous foodstuffs, see § 14-401.

§ 14-369. Wounding, capturing or killing of homing pigeons prohibited.

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons at any time or in any manner to hurt, pursue, take, capture, wound, maim, disfigure or kill any homing pigeon then and there owned by another person, or to trap the same by use of any pit, pitfall, scaffold, cage, snare, trap, net, baited hook or similar trapping device, or make use of any drug, poison, explosive or chemical for the purpose of injuring, capturing or killing any such homing pigeon. Any person or persons violating any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1941, c. 10; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8.)

ARTICLE 50.

Protection of Letters, Telegrams, and Telephone Messages.

§ 14-370. Wrongfully obtaining or divulging knowledge of telephonic messages.

If any person wrongfully obtains, or attempts to obtain, any knowledge of a telephonic message by connivance with a clerk, operator, messenger or other employee of a telephone company, or, being such clerk, operator, messenger or employee, willfully divulges to any but the person for whom it was intended, the contents of a telephonic message or dispatch intrusted to him for transmission or delivery, or the nature thereof, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined or imprisoned, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1903, c. 599; Rev., s. 3848; C. S., s. 4497.)

§ 14-371. Violating privacy of telegraphic messages; failure to transmit and deliver same promptly.

If any person wrongfully obtains, or attempts to obtain, any knowledge of a telegraphic message by connivance with a clerk, operator, messenger, or other employee of a telegraph company, or, being such clerk, operator, messenger, or other employee, willfully divulges to any but the person for whom it was intended, the contents of a telegraphic message or dispatch intrusted to him for transmission or delivery, or the nature thereof, or willfully refuse or neglect duly to transmit or deliver the same, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1889, c. 41, s. 1; Rev., s. 3846; C. S., s. 4498.)

§ 14-372. Unauthorized opening, reading or publishing of sealed letters and telegrams.

If any person shall willfully, and without authority, open or read, or cause to be opened or read, a sealed letter or telegram, or shall publish the whole or any portion of such letter or telegram, knowing it to have been opened or read without authority, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1889, c. 41, s. 2; Rev., s. 3728; C. S., s. 4499.)

Cross References. — See note to § 14-155.

CASE NOTES

Indictment. — It is necessary to charge, in an indictment for a violation of this section and to prove upon the trial, that the letter or telegram was "sealed," or that it was published with knowledge that it had been opened and read without authority. State v. Bagwell, 107 N.C. 859, 12 S.E. 254 (1890).

Article 51.

Protection of Athletic Contests.

§ 14-373. Bribery of players, managers, coaches, referees, umpires or officials.

If any person shall bribe or offer to bribe or shall aid, advise, or abet in any way another in such bribe or offer to bribe, any player or participant in any athletic contest with intent to influence his play, action, or conduct and for the purpose of inducing the player or participant to lose or try to lose or cause to be lost any athletic contest or to limit or try to limit the margin of victory or defeat in such contest; or if any person shall bribe or offer to bribe or shall aid, advise, or abet in any way another in such bribe or offer to bribe, any referee, umpire, manager, coach, or any other official or an athletic club or team, league, association, institution or conference, by whatever name called connected with said athletic contest with intent to influence his decision or bias his opinion or judgment for the purpose of losing or trying to lose or causing to be lost said athletic contest or of limiting or trying to limit the margin of victory or defeat in such contest, such person shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1921, c. 23, s. 1; C. S., s. 4499(a); 1951, c. 364, s. 1; 1961, c. 1054, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1961, c. 1504, s. 7, provides that notwithstanding any other provisions of the act, it shall not be construed as repealing any provision of article 51 of chapter 14 of the General Statutes as said article reads or provided immediately preceding June 19, 1961, with respect to any act done or offense committed in violation of said article prior to the said date, and the provisions of said article 51 in effect immediately preceding said date shall continue in full force and effect with respect to all acts done or offenses committed prior to said date.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction shall be imprisoned in State's prison not less than one nor more than ten years, and shall be fined not less than three thousand dollars, nor more than ten thousand dollars" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

Essential Element. — An essential element of the offense is bribery or offer to bribe with intent to influence the play, action or conduct of a player in any athletic contest. State v. Goldberg, 261 N.C. 181, 134 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 377 U.S. 978, 84 S. Ct. 1884, 12 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1964).

It is necessary for the State to prove specific intent to influence the play, action or conduct of a player in any athletic contest. State v. Goldberg, 261 N.C. 181, 134 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 377 U.S. 978, 84 S. Ct. 1884, 12 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1964).

Competency of Evidence. — Testimony admitted over objections and exceptions as to the bribery of a number of basketball players in other states and rigging of basketball games in other states, was held competent as proof of intent to influence the play, action or conduct of a player in an athletic contest in State v. Goldberg, 261 N.C. 181, 134 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 377 U.S. 978, 84 S. Ct. 1884, 12 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1964).

§ 14-374. Acceptance of bribes by players, managers, coaches, referees, umpires or officials.

If any player or participant in any athletic contest shall accept, or agree to accept, a bribe given for the purpose of inducing the player or participant to lose or try to lose or cause to be lost or limit or try to limit the margin of victory or defeat in such contest; or if any referee, umpire, manager, coach, or any other official of an athletic club, team, league, association, institution, or conference connected with an athletic contest shall accept or agree to accept a bribe given with the intent to influence his decision or bias his opinion or judgment and for the purpose of losing or trying to lose or causing to be lost said athletic contest or of limiting or trying to limit the margin of victory or defeat in such contest, such person shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1921, c. 23, s. 2; C. S., s. 4499(b); 1951, c. 364, s. 2; 1961, c. 1054, s. 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be imprisoned in the State's prison not less than one nor more than ten years, or fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-375. Completion of offenses set out in §§ 14-373 and 14-374.

To complete the offenses mentioned in G.S. 14-373 and 14-374, it shall not be necessary that the player, manager, coach, referee, umpire, or official shall, at the time, have been actually employed, selected, or appointed to perform his respective duties; it shall be sufficient if the bribe be offered, accepted, or agreed to with the view of probable employment, selection, or appointment of the person to whom the bribe is offered or by whom it is accepted. It shall not be necessary that such player, referee, umpire, manager, coach, or other official actually play or participate in any athletic contest, concerning which said bribe is offered or accepted; it shall be sufficient if the bribe be given, offered, or accepted in view of his or their possibly participating therein. (1921, c. 23, s. 3; C. S., s. 4499(c); 1951, c. 364, s. 3; 1961, c. 1054, s. 3.)

§ 14-376. Bribe defined.

By a "bribe," as used in this article, is meant any gift, emolument, money or thing of value, testimonial, privilege, appointment or personal advantage, or in the promise of either, bestowed or promised for the purpose of influencing, directly or indirectly, any player, referee, manager, coach, umpire, club or league official, to see which game an admission fee may be charged, or in which athletic contest any player, manager, coach, umpire, referee, or other official is paid any compensation for his services. Said bribe as defined in this article need not be direct; it may be such as is hidden under the semblance of a sale, bet, wager, payment of a debt, or in any other manner defined to cover the true intention of the parties. (1921, c. 23, s. 4; C. S., s. 4499(d); 1951, c. 364, s. 4; 1961, c. 1054, s. 4.)

§ 14-377. Intentional losing of athletic contest or limiting margin of victory or defeat.

If any player or participant shall commit any willful act of omission or commission, in playing of an athletic contest, with intent to lose or try to lose or to cause to be lost or to limit or try to limit the margin of victory or defeat in such contest for the purpose of material gain to himself, or if any referees, umpire, manager, coach, or other official of an athletic club, team, league, association, institution or conference connected with an athletic contest shall commit any willful act of omission or commission connected with his official duties with intent to try to lose or to cause to be lost or to limit or try to limit the margin of victory or defeat in such contest for the purpose of material gain to himself, such person shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1921, c. 23, s. 5; C. S., s. 4499(e); 1951, c. 364, s. 5; 1961, c. 1054, s. 5; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be imprisoned in the State's prison, not less than one nor more than ten years, or fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-378. Venue.

In all prosecutions under this Article, the venue may be laid in any county where the bribe herein referred to was given, offered, or accepted, or in which the athletic contest was carried on in relation to which the bribe was offered, given, or accepted, or the acts referred to in G.S. 14-377 were committed. (1921, c. 23, s. 6; C. S., s. 4606(c); 1951, c. 364, s. 6.)

§ 14-379. Bonus or extra compensation not forbidden.

Nothing in this Article shall be construed to prohibit the giving or offering of any bonus or extra compensation to any manager, coach, or professional player, or to any league, association, or conference for the purpose of encouraging such manager, coach, or player to a higher degree of skill, ability, or diligence in the performance of his duties. (1921, c. 23, s. 7; C. S., s. 4499(f); 1951, c. 364, s. 7; 1961, c. 1054, s. 6.)

Article 51A.

Protection of Horse Shows.

§ 14-380.1. Bribery of horse show judges or officials.

Any person who bribes, or offers to bribe, any judge or other official in any horse show, with intent to influence his decision or judgment concerning said horse show, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1963, c. 1100, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

§ 14-380.2. Bribery attempts to be reported.

Any judge or other official of any horse show shall report to the resident superior court district attorney any attempt to bribe him with respect to his decisions in any horse show, and a failure to so report shall constitute a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1963, c. 1100, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

§ 14-380.3. Bribe defined.

The word "bribe," as used in this Article, shall have the same meaning as set forth in G.S. 14-376, in relation to athletic contests. (1963, c. 1100, s. 3.)

§ 14-380.4. Printing Article in horse show schedules.

The provisions of this Article shall be printed on all schedules for any horse show held prior to January 1, 1965. (1963, c. 1100, s. 4.)

ARTICLE 52.

Miscellaneous Police Regulations.

§ 14-381. Desecration of State and United States flag.

It shall be unlawful for any person willfully and knowingly to cast contempt upon any flag of the United States or upon any flag of North Carolina by public acts of physical contact including, but not limited to, mutilation, defiling, defacing or trampling. Any person violating this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment for not more than six months or both, in the discretion of the court.

The flag of the United States, as used in this section, shall be the same as defined in 4 U.S.C.A. 1 and 4 U.S.C.A. 2. The flag of North Carolina, as used in this section, shall be the same as defined in G.S. 144-1. (1917, c. 271; C. S., s. 4500; 1971, c. 295.)

CASE NOTES

Former Provisions Held Unconstitutional. — See Parker v. Morgan, 322 F. Supp. 585 (W.D.N.C. 1971).

§ 14-382. Pollution of water on lands used for dairy purposes.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation owning lands adjoining the lands of any person, firm, or corporation which are or may be used for dairy purposes or for grazing milk cows, to dispose of or permit disposal of any animal, mineral, chemical, or vegetable refuse, sewage or other deleterious matter in such way as to pollute the water on the lands so used or which may be used for dairy purposes or for grazing milk cows, or to render unfit or unsafe for use the milk produced from cows feeding upon the grasses and herbage growing on such lands. This section shall not apply to incorporated towns maintaining a sewer system. Anyone violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned for not more than 30 days, or both, and each day that such pollution is committed or exists shall constitute a separate offense. (1919, c. 222; C. S., s. 4501.)

§ 14-383. Cutting timber on town watershed without disposing of boughs and debris; misdemeanor.

Any person, firm or corporation owning lands or the standing timber on lands within 400 feet of any watershed held or owned by any city or town, for the purpose of furnishing a city or town water supply, upon cutting or removing the timber or permitting the same cut or removed from lands so within 400 feet of said watershed, or any part thereof, shall, within three months after cutting, or earlier upon written notice by said city or town, remove or cause to be burned under proper supervision all treetops, boughs, laps and other portions of timber not desired to be taken for commercial or other purposes, within 400 feet of the boundary line of such part of such watershed as is held or owned by such town or city, so as to leave such space of 400 feet immediately adjoining the boundary line of such watershed, so held or owned, free and clear of all such treetops, laps, boughs and other inflammable material caused by or left from cutting such standing timber, so as to prevent the spread of fire from such cutover area and the consequent damage to such watershed. Any such person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1913, c. 56; C. S., s. 4502; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section constitutes a valid exercise of the police power and is constitutional. State v. Perley, 173 N.C. 783, 92 S.E. 504 (1917).

The motive is immaterial and where the intent to violate the section is shown the defendant is punishable. State v. Perley, 173 N.C. 783, 92 S.E. 504 (1917).

§ 14-384. Injuring notices and advertisements.

If any person shall wantonly or maliciously mutilate, deface, pull or tear down, destroy or otherwise damage any notice, sign or advertisement, unless immoral or obscene, whether put up by an officer of the law in performance of the duties of his office or by some other person for a lawful purpose, before the object for which such notice, sign or advertisement was posted shall have been accomplished, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding twenty-five dollars ($25.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days at the discretion of the court. Nothing herein contained shall apply to any person mutilating, defacing, pulling or tearing down, destroying or otherwise damaging notices, signs or advertisements put upon his own land or lands of which he may have charge or control, unless consent of such person to put up such notice, sign or advertisement shall have first been obtained, except those put up by an officer of the law in the performance of the duties of his office. (1885, c. 302; Rev., s. 3709; C. S., s. 4503.)

§ 14-385. Defacing or destroying public notices and advertisements.

If any person shall willfully and unlawfully deface, tear down, remove or destroy any legal notice or advertisement authorized by law to be posted by any officer or other person, the same being actually posted at the time of such defacement, tearing down, removal or destruction, during the time for which such legal notice or advertisement shall be authorized by law to be posted, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not exceeding 30 days. (1876-7, c. 215; Code, s. 981; Rev., s. 3710; C. S., s. 4504.)

§ 14-386. Erecting signals and notices in imitation of those of railroads.

No person, firm or corporation other than a railroad or street railway company shall, for advertisement or other purposes, erect and maintain on or near any highway any cross-arm post or other post or standard containing the words "Stop! Look! Listen!" or other such words or combinations of words in imitation of railroad signals or notices. Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1917, c. 230; C. S., s. 4505; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8.)

§ 14-391. Usurious loans on household and kitchen furniture or assignment of wages.

Any person, firm or corporation who shall lend money in any manner whatsoever by note, chattel mortgage, conditional sale, or purported conditional sale or otherwise, upon any article of household or kitchen furniture, or any assignment of wages, earned or to be earned, and shall willfully:

(1) Take, receive, reserve or charge a greater rate of interest than permitted by law, either before or after the interest may accrue; or

(2) Refuse to give receipts for payments on interest or principal of such loan; or

(3) Fail or refuse to surrender the note and security when the same is paid off or a new note and mortgage is given in renewal, unless such new mortgage shall state the amount still due by the old note or mortgage and that the new one is given as additional security;

shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and in addition thereto shall be subject to the provisions of G.S. 24-2. (1907, c. 110; C. S., s. 4509; 1927, c. 72; 1959, c. 195; 1977, c. 807.)

Interest Need Not Be Received. — The charge of the usurious interest constitutes the offense without the necessity of having received it. State v. Davis, 157 N.C. 648, 73 S.E. 130 (1911).

§ 14-392. Digging ginseng on another's land during certain months.

All persons shall be allowed to dig ginseng at any time of the year for the purpose of replanting the same. If any person dig ginseng, except on his own premises, or for the purpose of replanting the same, between the first day of April and the first day of September, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of ten dollars ($10.00) for each day's or part of a day's digging, and shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor. (1866-7, c. 60; Code, s. 1053; 1905, c. 211; Rev., ss. 3502, 3714; C. S., s. 4510.)

Cross References. — As to the larceny of ginseng, see § 14-79.

§ 14-393. Purchase of ginseng; register to be kept; details.

Every person, firm or corporation buying ginseng in any quantity shall keep a register, and shall keep therein a true and accurate record of each purchase, showing the amount of the ginseng, the name and residence of the person from whom purchased, the source from which obtained, and amount paid for the same and the date of the purchase. A failure to comply with the above requirements, or the making of a false entry in regard to the purchasing of such ginseng, shall be a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1923, c. 199; C. S., s. 4510(a); 1969, c. 1224, s. 5.)

§ 14-394. Anonymous or threatening letters, mailing or transmitting.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation, or any association of persons in this State, under whatever name styled, to write and transmit any letter, note, or writing, whether written, printed, or drawn, without signing his, her, their, or its true name thereto, threatening any person or persons, firm or corporation, or officers thereof with any personal injury or violence or destruction of property of such individuals, firms, or corporations, or using therein any language or threats of any kind or nature calculated to intimidate or place in fear any such persons, firms or corporations, or officers thereof, as to their personal safety or the safety of their property, or using vulgar or obscene language, or using such language which if published would bring such persons into public contempt and disgrace, and any person, firm, or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be fined or imprisoned, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1921, c. 112; C. S., s. 4511(a).)

CASE NOTES

Transmission an Essential Element. — For a conviction under this section, there must be a transmission of the anonymous letter which contains at least one of the categories of prohibited language. Unless and until there is a transmission, no crime has been committed. State v. Robbins, 253 N.C. 47, 116 S.E.2d 192 (1960).

What Constitutes Transmission. — There can be no transmission within the meaning of this section without an intended recipient and a delivery of the prohibited writing or a communication of its contents to the intended recipient. State v. Robbins, 253 N.C. 47, 116 S.E.2d 192 (1960).

Circumstantial evidence of defendant's guilt of transmitting a threatening letter held sufficient to sustain conviction and overrule defendant's motion for judment as of nonsuit. State v. Strickland, 229 N.C. 201, 49 S.E.2d 469 (1948).

§ 14-395. Commercialization of American Legion emblem; wearing by nonmembers.

It shall be unlawful for anyone not a member of the American Legion, an organization consisting of ex-members of the army, navy and marine corps, who served as members of such organizations in the recent world war, to wear upon his or her person the recognized emblem of the American Legion, or to use the said emblem for advertising purposes, or to commercialize the same in any way whatsoever; or to use the said emblem in display upon his or her property or place of business, or at any place whatsoever. Anyone violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisoned not more than 30 days. (1923, c. 89; C. S., s. 4511(b).)

§ 14-396. Dogs on "Capitol Square" worrying squirrels.

It shall be unlawful for any owner or keeper of a dog to permit the same to run at large on the Capitol grounds known as "Capitol Square" or to be thereon unless on leash or otherwise in the immediate physical control of said owner or keeper, or to pursue, worry or harass any squirrel or other wild animal kept on said grounds. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by fine not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment not exceeding 30 days. (1925, c. 289.)

§ 14-397. Use of name of denominational college in connection with dance hall.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, club or society, by whatsoever name called, to use in connection with any dance, or dance hall, by advertisement, announcement, or otherwise, the name of any college, or any class or organization of any college operated and conducted by a religious denomination, unless the written permission of the dean of such college is given, permitting and allowing the use of the name of such denominational college, or a class or organization of the same in connection with such dance, or dance hall. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1927, c. 6; 1969, c. 1224, s. 5.)

§ 14-398. Theft or destruction of property of public libraries, museums, etc.

Any person who shall steal or unlawfully take or detain, or willfully or maliciously or wantonly write upon, cut, tear, deface, disfigure, soil, obliterate, break or destroy, or who shall sell or buy or receive, knowing the same to have been stolen, any book, document, newspaper, periodical, map, chart, picture, portrait, engraving, statue, coin, medal, apparauts, specimen, or other work of literature or object of art or curiosity deposited in a public library, gallery, museum, collection, fair or exhibition, or in any department or office of State or local government, or in a library, gallery, museum, collection, or exhibition, belonging to any incorporated college or university, or any incorporated institution devoted to educational, scientific, literary, artistic, historical or charitable purposes, shall, if the value of the property stolen, detained, sold, bought or received knowing same to have been stolen, or if the damage done by writing upon, cutting, tearing, defacing, disfiguring, soiling, obliterating, breaking or destroying any such property, shall not exceed fifty dollars ($50.00), be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court. If the value of the property stolen, detained, sold or received knowing same to have been stolen, or the amount of damage done in any of the ways or manners hereinabove set out, shall exceed the sum of fifty dollars ($50.00), the person committing same shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1935, c. 300; 1943, c. 543; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony, and shall upon conviction be punished in accordance with the laws applicable thereto" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-399. Littering.

(a) No person, firm, organization, private corporation, or governing body, agents or employees of any municipal corporation shall intentionally or recklessly throw, scatter, spill or place or intentionally or recklessly cause to be blown, scattered, spilled, thrown or placed or otherwise dispose of any litter upon any public property or private property not owned by him within this State or in the waters of this State including, but not limited to, any public highway, public park, beach, campground, forest land, recreational area, trailer park, highway, road, street or alley except:

(1) When such property is designated by the State or political subdivision thereof for the disposal of garbage and refuse, and such person is authorized to use such property for such purpose; or

(2) Into a litter receptacle in such a manner that the litter will be prevented from being carried away or deposited by the elements upon any part of such private or public property or waters.

(b) When litter is so blown, scattered, spilled, thrown or placed from a vehicle or watercraft, the operator thereof shall be presumed to have committed such offense.

(c) As used in this section, the word "litter" shall be defined as any rubbish, waste material, cans, refuse, garbage, trash, debris, dead animals or discarded materials of every kind and description; the word "vehicle" shall be defined as in G.S. 20-4.01(49); and the word "watercraft" shall be defined as any boat or vessel used for transport upon or across the water.

(d) A violation of this section is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of fifty dollars ($50.00) for the first offense. Any second or subsequent offense is punishable by a fine of not more than two hundred dollars ($200.00). (1935, c. 457; 1937, c. 446; 1943, c. 543; 1951, c. 975, s. 1; 1953, cc. 387, 1011; 1955, c. 437; 1957, cc. 73, 175; 1959, c. 1173; 1971, c. 165; 1973, c. 877; 1977, c. 887, s. 1; 1979, c. 1065, s. 1.)

Local Modification. — Mecklenburg: 1981, c. 373.

CASE NOTES

Former Section Unconstitutional. — Before its amendment in 1959, this section made it unlawful to place, temporarily or permanently, any trash, refuse, garbage, or scrapped motor vehicles within 150 yards of a hard-surfaced highway unless such materials were concealed from the view of persons on the highway. The section further provided that it should not apply to junk yards which were properly screened from the view of persons on the highway. The section was held unconstitutional on the ground that its requirements had no substantial relationship to the public health, safety, morals or general welfare, since the mere screening of the proscribed materials from the public view could relate only to aesthetic considerations, which alone are an insufficient predicate for the exercise of the police power. State v. Brown, 250 N.C. 54, 108 S.E.2d 74 (1969).

§ 14-400. Tattooing prohibited.

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to tattoo the arm, limb, or any part of the body of any other person under 18 years of age. Anyone violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1937, c. 112, ss. 1, 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8; 1971, c. 1231, s. 1.)

§ 14-401. Putting poisonous foodstuffs, etc., in certain public places, prohibited.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to put or place any strychnine, other poisonous compounds or ground glass on any beef or other foodstuffs of any kind in any public square, street, lane, alley or on any lot in any village, town or city or on any public road, open field, woods or yard in the country. Any person, firm or corporation who violates the provisions of this section shall be liable in damages to the person injured thereby and also shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned, at the discretion of the court. This section shall not apply to the poisoning of insects or worms for the purpose of protecting crops or gardens by spraying plants, crops or trees nor to poisons used in rat extermination. (1941, c. 181; 1953, c. 1239.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on this section, see 19 N.C.L. Rev. 479.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is not unconstitutionally vague since the General Assembly intended to prohibit putting poison outside virtually everywhere where an innocent child or animal could find it. State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Burden with Respect to Pest Control Exception. — The insect control and rat extermination exception in this section is neither an element of the crime nor an affirmative defense thereto but is instead a "hybrid" factor in determining criminal liability: the State has no initial burden of producing evidence to show that defendant's actions do not fall within the exception; however, once the defendant, in a nonfrivolous manner, puts forth evidence to show that his conduct is within this exception, the burden of persuading the trier of fact that the exception does not apply falls upon the State. In sum, the exception is not a sufficiently independent, distinct substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense, beyond the essentials of the legal definition of the offense itself to put all the "onus" of proof on the defendant. State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Requirements of Indictment or Warrant. — An indictment or warrant for an arrest under this section need not set forth a charge that defendant's conduct is not within the insect control and rat extermination exception to the statute. State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Concrete patio held within definition of section. See State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Rat Poisons Used for Other Purposes. — While parathion is a poison used in rat extermination, if it is put out for purposes other than rat extermination it comes within the scope of the statutory prohibition. State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

§ 14-401.1. Misdemeanor to tamper with examination questions.

Any person who purloins, steals, buys, receives, or sells, gives or offers to buy, give, or sell any examination questions or copies thereof of any examination provided and prepared by law before the date of the examination for which they shall have been prepared, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1917, c. 146, s. 10; C. S., s. 5658; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Section Limited to Examinations "Provided and Prepared by Law". — The portion of this section reading "any examination provided and prepared by law" expressly limits the application of the statute to examinations "provided and prepared by law," i.e., examinations given by the State Board of Medical Examiners, the State Board of Law Examiners, and other examining boards of this class. The statute has no application to college examination papers. State v. Andrews, 246 N.C. 561, 99 S.E.2d 745 (1957).

§ 14-401.2. Misdemeanor for detective to collect claims, accounts, etc.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation, who or which is engaged in business as a detective, detective agency, or what is ordinarily known as "secret service work," or conducts such business, to engage in the business of collecting claims, accounts, bills, notes, or other money obligations for others, or to engage in the business known as a collection agency. Violation of the provisions hereof shall be a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1943, c. 383; 1969, c. 1224, s. 5.)

§ 14-401.3. Inscription on gravestone or monument charging commission of crime.

It shall be illegal for any person to erect or cause to be erected any gravestone or monument bearing any inscription charging any person with the commission of a crime, and it shall be illegal for any person owning, controlling or operating any cemetery to permit such gravestone to be erected and maintained therein. If such gravestone has been erected in any graveyard, cemetery or burial plot, it shall be the duty of the person having charge thereof to remove and obliterate such inscription. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1949, c. 1075; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8.)

§ 14-401.4. Identifying marks on machines and apparatus; application to Division of Motor Vehicles for numbers.

(a) No person, firm or corporation shall willfully remove, deface, destroy, alter or cover over the manufacturer's serial or engine number or any other manufacturer's number or other distinguishing number or identification mark upon any machine or other apparatus, including but not limited to farm equipment, machinery and apparatus, but excluding electric storage batteries, nor shall any person, firm or corporation place or stamp any serial, engine, or other number or mark upon such machinery, apparatus or equipment except as provided for in this section, nor shall any person, firm or corporation purchase or take into possession or sell, trade, transfer, devise, give away or in any manner dispose of such machinery, apparatus, or equipment except by intestate succession or as junk or scrap after the manufacturer's serial or engine number or mark has been willfully removed, defaced, destroyed, altered or covered up unless a new number or mark has been added as provided in this section: Provided, however, that this section shall not prohibit or prevent the owner or holder of a mortgage, conditional sales contract, title retaining contract, or a trustee under a deed of trust from taking possession for the purpose of foreclosure under a power of sale or by court order, of such machinery, apparatus, or equipment, or from selling the same by foreclosure sale under a power contained in a mortgage, conditional sales contract, title retaining contract, deed of trust, or court order; or from taking possession thereof in satisfaction of the indebtedness secured by the mortgage, deed of trust, conditional sales contract, or title retaining contract pursuant to an agreement with the owner.

(b) Each seller of farm machinery, farm equipment or farm apparatus covered by this section shall give the purchaser a bill of sale for such machinery, equipment or apparatus and shall include in the bill of sale the manufacturer's serial number or distinguishing number or identification mark, which the seller warrants to be true and correct according to his invoice or bill of sale as received from his manufacturer, supplier, or distributor or dealer.

(c) Each user of farm machinery, farm equipment or farm apparatus whose manufacturer's serial number, distinguishing number or identification mark has been obliterated or is now unrecognizable, may obtain a valid identification number for any such machinery, equipment or apparatus upon application for such number to the Division of Motor Vehicles accompanied by satisfactory proof of ownership and a subsequent certification to the Division by a member of the North Carolina Highway Patrol that said applicant has placed the number on the proper machinery, equipment or apparatus. The Division of Motor Vehicles is hereby authorized and empowered to issue appropriate identification marks or distinguishing numbers for machinery, equipment or apparatus upon application as provided in this section and the Division is further authorized and empowered to designate the place or places on the machinery, equipment or apparatus at which the identification marks or distinguishing numbers shall be placed. The Division is also authorized to designate the method to be used in placing the identification marks or distinguishing numbers on the machinery, equipment or apparatus: Provided, however, that the owner or holder of the mortgage conditional sales contract, title retaining contract, or trustee under a deed of trust in possession of such encumbered machinery, equipment, or apparatus from which the manufacturer's serial or engine number or other manufacturer's number or distinguishing mark has been obliterated or has become unrecognizable or the purchaser at the foreclosure sale thereof, may at any time obtain a valid identification number for any such machinery, equipment or apparatus upon application therefor to the Division of Motor Vehicles.

(d) Any person, firm or corporation who shall violate any part of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon plea of guilty or conviction shall be punished in the discretion of the court. (1949, c. 928; 1951, c. 1110 s. 1; 1953, c. 257; 1975, c. 716, s. 5.)

§ 14-401.5. Practice of phrenology, palmistry, fortune-telling or clairvoyance prohibited.

It shall be unlawful for any person to practice the arts of phrenology, palmistry, clairvoyance, fortune-telling and other crafts of a similar kind in the counties named herein. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment for not more than six months or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

This section shall not prohibit the amateur practice of phrenology, palmistry, fortune-telling or clairvoyance in connection with school or church socials, provided such socials are held in school or church buildings.

Provided that the provisions of this section shall apply only to the Counties of Alexander, Ashe, Avery, Bertie, Bladen, Brunswick, Buncombe, Burke, Caldwell, Camden, Carteret, Caswell, Chatham, Chowan, Clay, Columbus, Craven, Cumberland, Currituck, Dare, Davidson, Davie, Duplin, Durham, Franklin, Gates, Graham, Granville, Greene, Guilford, Halifax, Harnett, Haywood, Henderson, Hertford, Hoke, Iredell, Johnston, Lee, Lenoir, Madison, Martin, McDowell, Mecklenburg, Moore, Nash, New Hanover, Northampton, Onslow, Pasquotank, Pender, Perquimans, Person, Polk, Richmond, Robeson, Rockingham, Rutherford, Sampson, Scotland, Surry, Transylvania, Union, Vance, Wake and Warren. (1951, c. 314; 1953, cc. 138, 227, 328; 1955, cc. 55, 454; 1957, cc. 151, 166, 309, 355, 915; 1959, cc. 428, 1018; 1961, c. 271; 1969, c. 1224, s. 20; 1973, cc. 12, 195; 1975, cc. 331, 351; 1977, c. 335.)

Local Modification. — Chatham: 1961, c. 544; Durham: 1951, c. 1189; Harnett: 1955, c. 1326; Lee: 1955, c. 766; Orange: 1961, c. 544.

§ 14-401.6. Unlawful to possess, etc., tear gas except for certain purposes.

(a) It is unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association to possess, use, store, sell, or transport within the State of North Carolina, any form of that type of gas generally known as "tear gas," or any container or device for holding or releasing that gas; except this section does not apply to the possession, use, storage, sale or transportation of that gas or any container or device for holding or releasing that gas:

(1) By officers and enlisted personnel of the armed forces of the United States or this State while in the discharge of their official duties and acting under orders requiring them to carry arms or weapons;
(2) By or for any governmental agency for official use of the agency;
(3) By or for county, municipal or State law-enforcement officers in the discharge of their official duties;
(4) By or for security guards sanctioned under Chapters 74A and 74B of the General Statutes, provided those security guards are on duty and have received training according to standards prescribed by the State Bureau of Investigation;
(5) For bona fide scientific, educational, or industrial purposes;
(6) In safes, vaults, and depositories, as a means of protection against robbery;
(7) For use in the home for protection and elsewhere by individuals, who have not been convicted of a felony, for self-defense purposes only, as long as the capacity of any tear gas cartridge, shell, device or container does not exceed 50 cubic centimeters, and any tear gas device or container does not have the capability of discharging any cartridge, shell, or container larger than 50 cubic centimeters.

(b) Violation of this section is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both.

(c) Tear gas for the purpose of this section shall mean any solid, liquid or gaseous substance or combinations thereof which will, upon dispersion in the atmosphere, cause tears in the eyes, burning of the skin, coughing, difficulty in breathing or any one or more of these reactions and which will not cause permanent damage to the human body, and the substance and container or device is designed, manufactured, and intended to be used as tear gas. (1951, c. 592; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8; 1977, c. 126; 1979, c. 661.)

Editor's Note. — Chapter 74B, referred to in this section, has been repealed. See now Chapter 74C.

§ 14-401.7. Persons, firms, banks and corporations dealing in securities on commission taxed as a private banker.

No person, bank, or corporation, without a license authorized by law, shall act as a stockbroker or private banker. Any person, bank, or corporation that deals in foreign or domestic exchange certificates of debt, shares in any corporation or charter companies, bank or other notes, for the purpose of selling the same or any other thing for commission or other compensation, or who negotiates loans upon real estate securities, shall be deemed a security broker. Any person, bank, or corporation engaged in the business of negotiating loans on any class of security or in discounting, buying or selling negotiable or other papers or credits, whether in an office for the purpose or elsewhere shall be deemed to be a private banker. Any person, firm, or corporation violating this section shall pay a fine of not less than one hundred ($100.00) nor more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) for each offense. (1939, c. 310, s. 1004; 1953, c. 970, s. 9.)

§ 14-401.8. Refusing to relinquish party telephone line in emergency; false statement of emergency.

Any person who shall willfully refuse to immediately relinquish a party telephone line when informed that such line is needed for an emergency call to a fire department or police department, or for medical aid or ambulance service, or any person who shall secure the use of a party telephone line by falsely stating that such line is needed for an emergency call, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court.

The term "party line" as used in this section is defined as a subscriber's line telephone circuit, consisting of two or more main telephone stations connected therewith, each station with a distinctive ring or telephone number. The term "emergency" as used in this section is defined as a situation in which property or human life are in jeopardy and the prompt summoning of aid is essential. (1955, c. 958.)

§ 14-401.9. Parking vehicle in private parking space without permission.

It shall be unlawful for any person other than the owner or lessee of a privately owned or leased parking space to park a motor or other vehicle in such private parking space without the express permission of the owner or lessee of such space; provided, that such private parking lot be clearly designated as such by a sign no smaller than 24 inches by 24 inches prominently displayed at the entrance thereto, and provided further, that the parking spaces within the lot be clearly marked by signs setting forth the name of each individual lessee or owner.

Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not more than ten dollars ($10.00) in the discretion of the court. (1955, c. 1019; 1977, c. 398, s. 2.)

§ 14-401.10. Soliciting advertisements for official publications of law-enforcement officers' associations.

Every person, firm or corporation who solicits any advertisement to be published in any law-enforcement officers' association's official magazine, yearbook, or other official publication, shall disclose to the person so solicited, whether so requested or not, the name of the law-enforcement association for which such advertisement is solicited, together with written authority from the president or secretary of such association to solicit such advertising on its behalf.

Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1961, c. 518; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8.)

§ 14-401.11. Distribution of certain food at Halloween and all other times prohibited.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly distribute, sell, give away or otherwise cause to be placed in a position of human accessibility, any food or eatable substance which that person knows to contain:

(1) Any noxious or deleterious substance, material or article which might be injurious to a person's health or might cause a person any physical discomfort, or

(2) Any controlled substance included in any schedule of the Controlled Substances Act, or

(3) Any poisonous chemical or compound or any foreign substance such as, but not limited to, razor blades, pins, and ground glass, which might cause death, serious physical injury or serious physical pain and discomfort.

(b) Penalties.

(1) Any person violating the provisions of G.S. 14-401.11(a)(1):

a. Where the actual or possible effect on a person eating the food or substance was or would be limited to mild physical discomfort without any lasting effect, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable in the discretion of the court.

b. Where the actual or possible effect on a person eating the food or substance was or would be greater than mild physical discomfort without any lasting effect, shall be punished as a Class H felon.

(2) Any person violating the provisions of G.S. 14-401.11(a)(2) shall be punished as a Class H felon.

(3) Any person violating the provisions of G.S. 14-401.11(a)(3) shall be punished as a Class D felon. (1971, c. 564, 1973, c. 540, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable in the discretion of the court" in subdivision (b)(1)b, substituted "punished as a Class H felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment in the Department of Correction for not less than two nor more than 10 years" in subdivision (b)(2) and substituted "punished as a Class D felon" for "guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment in the Department of Correction for not less than five nor more than 40 years" in subdivision (b)(3). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-401.12. Soliciting charitable contributions by telephone.

(a) Any professional solicitor who solicits by telephone contributions for charitable purposes or in any way compensates another person to solicit by telephone contributions for charitable purposes shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person compensated by a professional solicitor to solicit by telephone contributions for charitable purposes shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(b) Definitions. — Unless a different meaning is required by the context, the following terms as used in this section have the meanings hereinafter respectively ascribed to them:

(1) "Charitable purpose" shall mean any charitable, benevolent, religious, philanthropic, environmental, public or social advocacy or eleemosynary purpose for religion, health, education, social welfare, art and humanities, civic and public interest.

(2) "Contribution" shall mean any promise, gift, bequest, devise or other grant for consideration or otherwise, of any money or property of any kind or value, including the promise to pay, which contribution is wholly or partly induced by a solicitation. The term "contribution" shall not include payments by members of an organization for membership fees, dues, fines or assessments, or for services rendered to individual members, if membership in such organization confers a bona fide right, privilege, professional standing, honor or other direct benefit, other than the right to vote, elect officers, or hold offices; nor any money, credit, financial assistance or property received from any governmental authority; nor any donation of blood or any gift made pursuant to the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. Reference to dollar amounts of "contributions" or "solicitations" in this section means, in the case of payments or promises to pay for merchandise or rights of any description, the value of the total amount paid or promised to be paid for such merchandise or rights, and not merely that portion of the purchase price to be applied to a charitable purpose.

(3) "Professional fund-raising counsel" shall mean any person who for a flat fixed fee under a written agreement plans, conducts, manages, carries on, or acts as a consultant, whether directly or indirectly, in connection with soliciting contributions for, or on behalf of any charitable organization but who actually solicits no contributions as a part of such services.

(4) "Professional solicitor" shall mean any person who, for a financial or other consideration, solicits contributions for or on behalf of a charitable organization, whether such solicitation is performed personally or through its agents, servants or employees specially employed by or for a charitable organization, who are engaged in the solicitation of contributions under the direction of such person; or a person who plans, conducts, manages, carries on, advises or acts as a consultant, whether directly or indirectly, to a charitable organization in connection with the solicitation of contributions but does not qualify as "professional fund-raising counsel" as defined in this section. A bona fide salaried officer or employee of a charitable organization maintaining a permanent establishment within the State or the bona fide salaried officer or employee of a parent organization certified as tax exempt shall not be deemed to be a professional solicitor.

(5) The words "solicit" and "solicitation" shall mean the request or appeal, directly or indirectly, for any contribution on the plea or representation that such contribution will be used for a charitable purpose. Solicitation as defined herein shall be deemed to occur when the request is made, at the place the request is received, whether or not the person making the same actually receives any contribution.

(c) A solicitation by telephone is presumed to be for a charitable purpose if the person making the solicitation states or implies that some other named person or organization, other than the professional solicitor or his employees, is a sponsor or endorser of the solicitation who will share in the proceeds that result from the telephone solicitation. (1981, c. 805, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 805, s. 2, provides: "This act shall become effective October 1, 1981, and shall apply to acts committed on or after that date."

ARTICLE 52A.

Sale of Weapons in Certain Counties.

§ 14-402. Sale of certain weapons without permit forbidden.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, of corporation in this State to sell, give away, or transfer, or to purchase or receive, at any place within this State from any other place within or without the State any pistol unless a license or permit therefor has first been obtained by the purchaser or receiver from the sheriff of the county in which that purchaser or receiver resides.

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to receives from any postmaster, postal clerk, employee in the parcel post department, rural mail carrier, express agent or employee, railroad agent or employee within the State of North Carolina any pistol without having in his or their possession and without exhibiting at the time of the delivery of the same and to the person delivering the same the permit from the sheriff as provided in G.S. 14-403. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than two hundred dollars ($200.00), or imprisoned not less than 30 days nor more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

"Antique firearm" as defined by G.S. 14-409.11, and "historic edged weapon" as defined by G.S. 14-409.12, are hereby excepted from the provisions of this section. (1919, c. 197, s. 1; C. S., s. 5106; 1923, c. 106; 1947, c. 781; 1959, c. 1073, s. 2; 1971, c. 133, s. 2; 1979, c. 895, ss. 1, 2.)

Certain Counties Excepted from Application of Article. — Session Laws 1959, c. 1073, s. 2, amended this and other sections of this Article by striking out the word "clerk" and the words "clerk of the superior court" wherever they appeared and substituting therefor the word "sheriff," it being the intent and purpose of the amendatory act to transfer to the sheriffs the duties theretofore performed by the clerks of the superior court in issuing permits for the purchase of weapons and keeping the records of issuance of such permits and all other duties incident to the purchase, sale and ownership of weapons. Session Laws 1959, c. 1073, s. 4, as amended from time to time, except the following counties from the application of the 1959 amendments to this article: Ashe, Bertie, Duplin, Lincoln, Madison, Mitchell, Pender, Perquimans, Polk, Tyrrell, Warren, Watauga and Yancey.

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Issuance of Pistol Permits to 18, 19 and 20 Year Olds. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Isaac T. Avery, Jr., 41 N.C.A.G. 465 (1971).

More Than One Permit Allowed. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Leroy Reavis, 41 N.C.A.G. 415 (1971).

Board of County Commissioners without Authority to Increase Fee for Issuance of Permit. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. John T. Page, Jr., Attorney for Richmond County Board of Commissioners, 46 N.C.A.G. 134 (1976).

§ 14-405. Record of permits kept by sheriff.

The sheriff shall keep a book, to be provided by the board of commissioners of each county, in which he shall keep a record of all licenses or permits issued under this article, including the name, date, place of residence, age, former place of residence, etc., of each such person, firm, or corporation to whom or which a license or permit is issued. (1919, c. 197, s. 4; C. S., s. 5109; 1959, c. 1073, s. 2.)

§ 14-406. Dealer to keep record of sales.

Every dealer in pistols, pistol cartridges and other weapons mentioned in this Article shall keep an accurate record of all sales thereof, including the name, place of residence, date of sale, etc., of each person, firm, or corporation to whom or which such sales are made, which record shall be open to the inspection of any duly constituted State, county or police officer, within this State. (1919, c. 197, s. 5; C.S., s. 5110.)

§ 14-407. Weapons to be listed for taxes.

During the period of listing taxes in each year the owner or person in possession or having the custody or care of any weapon mentioned in this article is required to list the same specifically, as is now required for listing personal property for taxes. Any person listing any such weapon for taxes shall be required to designate his place of residence, including local street address. (1919, c. 197, s. 6; C. S., s. 5111.)

§ 14-407.1. Sale of blank cartridge pistols.

The provisions of G.S. 14-402 and 14-405 to 14-407 shall apply to the sale of pistols suitable for firing blank cartridges. The clerks of the superior courts of all the counties of this State are authorized and may in their discretion issue to any person, firm or corporation, in any such county, a license or permit to purchase or receive any pistol suitable for firing blank cartridges from any person, firm or corporation offering to sell or dispose of the same, which said permit shall be in substantially the following form:

North Carolina

. . . . . County

I, ..., Clerk of the Superior Court of said county, do hereby certify that . . . . . ., whose place of residence is . . . . . Street in . . . . . (or) in . . . . . Township in . . . . . County, North Carolina, having this day satisfied me that the possession of a pistol suitable for firing blank cartridges will be used only for lawful purposes, a permit is therefore given said . . . . . to purchase said pistol from any person, firm or corporation authorized to dispose of the same, this . . . . . day of . . . . . ., 19 . . . . . .

. . . . . .

Clerk of Superior Court

The clerk shall charge for his services, upon issuing such permit, a fee of fifty cents (50¢). (1959, c. 1068.)

§ 14-408. Violation of § 14-406 or 14-407 a misdemeanor.

Any person, firm, or corporation violating any of the provisions of G.S. 14-406 or 14-407 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1919, c. 197, s. 7; C. S., s. 5112; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6.)

§ 14-409. Machine guns and other like weapons.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to manufacture, sell, give away, dispose of, use or possess machine guns, submachine guns, or other like weapons: Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to the following:

Banks, merchants, and recognized business establishments for use in their respective places of business, who shall first apply to and receive from the sheriff of the county in which said business is located, a permit to possess the said weapons for the purpose of defending the said business; officers and soldiers of the United States Army, when in discharge of their official duties, officers and soldiers of the militia and the State guard when called into actual service, officers of the State, or of any county, city or town, charged with the execution of the laws of the State, when acting in the discharge of their official duties; the manufacture, use or possession of such weapons for scientific or experimental purposes when such manufacture, use or possession is lawful under federal laws and the weapon is registered with a federal agency, and when a permit to manufacture, use or possess the weapon is issued by the sheriff of the county in which the weapon is located. Provided, further, that automatic shotguns and pistols or other automatic weapons that shoot less than 31 shots shall not be construed to be or mean a machine gun or submachine gun under this section; and that any bona fide resident of this State who now owns a machine gun used in former wars, as a relic or souvenir, may retain and keep same as his or her property without violating the provisions of this section upon his reporting said owenrship to the sheriff of the county in which said person lives.

Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars ($500.00), or imprisoned for not less than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court. (1933, c. 261, s. 1; 1959, c. 1073, s. 2; 1965, c. 1200.)

CASE NOTES

Definitions. — The usual and customary definitions of the words used in this section are as follows: A machine gun is defined as an automatic gun using small-arms ammunition for rapid continuous firing; a submachine gun as a lightweight automatic or semiautomatic portable firearm fired from the shoulder or hip; a carbine as a light automatic or semiautomatic military rifle; and an automatic rifle as a rifle capable commonly of either semiautomatic or full automatic fire and designed to be fired without a mount. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

"Automatic". — The word "automatic" as used in connection with a firearm is one using either gas pressure or force of recoil and mechanical spring action for repeatedly ejecting the empty cartridge shell, introducing a new cartridge and firing it. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

In ordinary usage the word "automatic" is used to describe both automatic and semiautomatic weapons. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

A machine gun is automatic. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

A submachine gun can be automatic or semiautomatic. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

Section Excludes Weapons Which Shoot Less Than 31 Times. — The General Assembly intended to include within the prohibition of this section all weapons either automatic or semiautomatic which shoot 31 times or more and to exclude such weapons which shoot less than 31 times. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

This section has a proviso which excludes automatic shotguns and pistols or other automatic weapons that shoot less than 31 shots. Giving the usual and customary meaning to the word "automatic," the proviso would exclude automatic weapons or semiautomatic weapons which shoot less than 31 shots. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

ARTICLE 53.

Sale of Weapons in Certain Other Counties.

§ 14-409.1. Sale of certain weapons without permit forbidden.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation in this State to sell, give away, or transfer, or to purchase or receive, at any place within this State from any other place within or without the State any pitsol unless a license or permit therefor has first been obtained by the purchaser or receiver from the clerk of the superior court of the county in which that purchaser or receiver resides.

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to receive from any postmaster, postal clerk, employee in the parcel post department, rural mail carrier, express agent or employee, railroad agent or employee within the State of North Carolina any pistol without having in his or their possession and without exhibiting at the time of the delivery of the same and to the person delivering the same, the permit from the clerk of superior court as provided in G.S. 14-409.2. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than two hundred dollars ($200.00), or imprisoned not less than 30 days nor more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

"Antique firearm" as defined by G.S. 14-409.11, and "historic edged weapon" as defined by G.S. 14-409.12, are hereby excepted from the provisions of this section. (1919, c. 197, s. 1; C. S., s. 5106; 1923, c. 106; 1947, c. 781; 1971, c. 133, s. 2; 1979, c. 895, ss. 3, 4.)

Other Firearms.

§ 14-409.10. Purchase of rifles and shotguns out of State.

It shall be lawful for citizens of this State to purchase rifles and shotguns and ammunition therefor in states contiguous to this State. (1969, c. 101, s. 1.)

§ 14-409.11. "Antique firearm" defined.

The term "antique firearm" means any firearm manufactured in or before 1898 (including any matchlock, flintlock, percussion cap, or similar early type of ignition system) or replica thereof, whether actually manufactured before or after the year 1898; and also any firearm using fixed ammunition manufactured in or before 1898, for which ammunition is no longer manufactured in the United States and is not readily available in the ordinary channels of commercial trade. (1969, c. 101, s. 2.)

§ 14-409.12. "Historic edged weapons" defined.

The term "historic edged weapon" means any bayonet, trench knife, sword or dagger manufactured during or prior to World War II but in no event later than January 1, 1946. (1971, c. 133, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 54.

Sale, etc., of Pyrotechnics.

§ 14-410. Manufacture, sale and use of pyrotechnics prohibited; public exhibitions permitted; common carriers not affected.

It shall be unlawful for any individual, firm, partnership or corporation to manufacture, purchase, sell, deal in, transport, possess, receive, advertise, use or cause to be discharged any pyrotechnics of any description whatsoever within the State of North Carolina: provided, however, that it shall be permissible for pyrotechnics to be exhibited, used or discharged at public exhibitions, such as fairs, carnivals, shows of all descriptions and public celebrations: provided, further, that the use of said pyrotechnics in connection with public exhibitions, such as fairs, carnivals, shows of all descriptions and public celebrations, shall be under supervision of experts who have previously secured written authority from the board of county commissioners of the county in which said pyrotechnics are to be exhibited, used or discharged: provided, further, that it shall not be unlawful for a common carrier to receive, transport, and deliver pyrotechnics in the regular course of its business. (1947, c. 210, s. 1.)

Local Modification. — Durham: 1963, c. 745; Mecklenburg: 1981, c. 117, s. 2; Pender: 1957, c. 113.

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Salem, 17 N.C. App. 269, 193 S.E.2d 755 (1973).

§ 14-411. Sale deemed made at site of delivery.

In case of sale or purchase of pyrotechnics, where the delivery thereof was made by a common or other carrier, the sale shall be deemed to be made in the county wherein the delivery was made by such carrier to the consignee. (1947, c. 210, s. 2.)

§ 14-412. Possession prima facie evidence of violation.

Possession of pyrotechnics by any person, for any purpose other than those permitted under this article, shall be prima facie evidence that such pyrotechnics are kept for the purpose of being manufactured, sold, bartered, exchanged, given away, received, furnished, otherwise disposed of, or used in violation of the provisions of this article. (1947, c. 210, s. 3.)

§ 14-413. Permits for use at public exhibitions.

For the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this article, the board of county commissioners of any county are hereby empowered and authorized to issue permits for use in connection with the conduct of public exhibitions, such as fairs, carnivals, shows of all descriptions and public exhibitions, but only after satisfactory evidence is produced to the effect that said pyrotechnics will be used for the aforementioned purposes and none other. (1947, c. 210, s. 4.)

Local Modification. — Mecklenburg: 1981, c. 117, s. 2. City of Charlotte: 1981, c. 88.

§ 14-414. Pyrotechnics defined; exceptions.

For the proper construction of the provisions of this Article, "pyrotechnics," as is herein used, shall be deemed to be and include any and all kinds of fireworks and explosives, which are used for exhibitions or amusement purposes: provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the manufacture, purchase, sale, transportation, and use of explosives or signaling flares used in the course of ordinary business or industry, or shells or cartridges used as ammunition in firearms. This Article shall not apply to the sale, use, or possession of explosive caps designed to be fired in toy cap pistols, provided that the explosive mixture of such explosive caps shall not exceed twenty-five hundredths (.25) of a gram for each cap. (1947, c. 210, s. 5; 1955, c. 674, s. 1.)

What Prohibited within Definition of Pyrotechnics. — See Opinion of Attorney General to Mr. W.I. Adams, Sheriff, Wayne County, 40 N.C.A.G. 174 (1970).

§ 14-415. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person violating any of the provisions of this Article, except as otherwise specified in said Article, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1947, c. 210, s. 6; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 54A.

The Felony Firearms Act.

§ 14-415.1. Possession of firearms, etc., by felon prohibited.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person who has been convicted of any crime set out in subsection (b) of this section to purchase, own, possess, or have in his custody, care, or control any handgun or other firearm with a barrel length of less than 18 inches or an overall length of less than 26 inches, or any weapon of mass death and destruction as defined in G.S. 14-288.8(c), within five years from the date of such conviction, or the unconditional discharge from a correctional institution, or termination of a suspended sentence, probation, or parole upon such conviction, whichever is later.

Every person violating the provisions of this section shall be punished as a Class I felon.

Nothing in this subsection would prohibit the right of any person to have possession of a firearm within his own home or on his lawful place of business.

(b) Prior convictions which cause disentitlement under this section shall only include:

(1) Felonious violations of Articles 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 10, 13, 14, 15, 17, 30, 33, 36, 36A, 52A, or 53 of Chapter 14 of the General Statutes, or of Article 5 of Chapter 90 of the General Statutes;

(2) Common law robbery and common law maim; and

(3) Violations of criminal laws of other states or of the United States substantially similar to the crimes covered in subdivisions (1) and (2) which are punishable where committed by imprisonment for a term exceeding two years.

When a person is charged under this section, records of prior convictions of any offense, whether in the courts of this State, or in the courts of any other state or of the United States, shall be admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving a violation of this section. The term "conviction" is defined as a final judgment in any case in which felony punishment, or imprisonment for a term exceeding two years, as the case may be, is permissible, without regard to the plea entered or to the sentence imposed. A judgment of a conviction or a plea of guilty to such an offense certified to a superior court of this State from the custodian of records of any state or federal court under the same name as that by which the defendant is charged shall be prima facie evidence that the identity of such person is the same as the defendant so charged and shall be prima facie evidence of the facts so certified.

(c) The indictment charging the defendant under the terms of this section shall be separate from any indictment charging him with other offenses related to or giving rise to a charge under this section. An indictment which charges the person with violation of this section must set forth the date that the prior offense was committed, the type of offense and the penalty therefor, and the date that the defendant was convicted or plead guilty to such offense, the identity of the court in which the conviction or plea of guilty took place and the verdict and judgment rendered therein. (1971, c. 954, s. 1; 1973, c. 1196; 1975, c. 870, ss. 1, 2; 1977, c. 1105, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — Article 7 of this Chapter, referred to in this section, has been repealed. See now Article 7A (§ 14-27.1 et seq.) of this Chapter.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "punished as a Class I felon" for "guilty of a felony and shall be imprisoned for not more than five years in the State's prison and shall be fined an amount not exceeding five thousand dollars, or both" at the end of the second paragraph of subsection (a). The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is not constitutionally invalid because the restriction applies during the five years after conviction, discharge from a correctional institution, or termination of a suspended sentence, probation or parole, whichever is later. This merely establishes a class, those convicted of the enumerated crimes who are within five years of the end of their punishment, and the law applies uniformly to all members of the class affected. State v. Tanner, 39 N.C. App. 668, 251 S.E.2d 705, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 303, 254 S.E.2d 924 (1979).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. It clearly delineates those to whom it applies and the classes of conduct proscribed, so that a person of ordinary intelligence may be apprised of the conduct forbidden. State v. Tanner, 39 N.C. App. 668, 251 S.E.2d 705, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 303, 254 S.E.2d 924 (1979).

Where the defendant's earlier conviction was for second-degree murder, a crime of violence, there was no constitutional difficulty with the classification scheme under this section as applied to defendant, since there was clearly a reasonable relation between the classification, those convicted of a crime of violence, and the purpose of the statute, protection of the people from violence. State v. Tanner, 39 N.C. App. 668, 251 S.E.2d 705, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 303, 254 S.E.2d 924 (1979).

In a prosecution under this section, defendant was not subjected to double jeopardy, though he had been tried and acquitted in district court on the charge of carrying a concealed weapon, a charge stemming from the same transaction from which the charge under this section arose, since the warrant in the former action and the indictment in the present action were drawn pursuant to different statutes and elements of the two offenses were separate and distinct. State v. Cobb, 18 N.C. App. 221, 196 S.E.2d 521 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 573, 201 S.E.2d 898 (1974).

Section Held Not Ex Post Facto Respecting Alleged Violation on July 31, 1972. — See State v. Cobb, 18 N.C. App. 221, 196 S.E.2d 521 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 573, 201 S.E.2d 898 (1974).

Operability of Gun. — Where the State produced evidence tending to prove the defendant's constructive possession of a shotgun within five years from the date of a conviction for felonious assault, but there was no evidence as to whether the shotgun was operable, the evidence was sufficient to require the submission of the case to the jury and to support the verdict. State v. Baldwin, 34 N.C. App. 307, 237 S.E.2d 881 (1977).

Evidence of Prior Conviction. — In a prosecution for possession of a firearm by a felon, the trial court did not err in allowing the State to introduce defendant's stipulation as to his previous conviction of breaking and entering a motor vehicle, since the State merely introduced defendant's stipulation into evidence so there would be no doubt as to that particular element of the offense being satisfied; the State offered no other evidence in regard to defendant's prior conviction; and the court properly instructed the jury in its charge to consider the conviction only for the purpose of establishing an essential element of the offense and not as evidence of guilt or predisposition. State v. Jeffers, 48 N.C. App. 663, 269 S.E.2d 731 (1980).

Applied in State v. Currie, 19 N.C. App. 241, 198 S.E.2d 491 (1973); State v. Cobb, 284 N.C. 573, 201 S.E.2d 878 (1974).

§ 14-415.2: Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 870, s. 3.

ARTICLE 55.

Handling of Poisonous Reptiles.

§ 14-416. Handling of poisonous reptiles declared public nuisance and criminal offense.

The intentional exposure of human beings to contact with reptiles of a venomous nature being essentially dangerous and injurious and detrimental to public health, safety and welfare, the indulgence in and inducement to such exposure is hereby declared to be a public nuisance and a criminal offense, to be abated and punished as provided in this Article. (1949, c. 1084, s. 1.)

§ 14-417. Regulation of ownership or use of poisonous reptiles.

It shall be unlawful for any person to own, possess, use, or traffic in any reptile of a poisonous nature whose venom is not removed, unless such reptile is at all times kept securely in a box, cage, or other safe container in which there are no openings of sufficient size to permit the escape of such reptile, or through which such reptile can bite or inject its venom into any human being. (1949, c. 1084, s. 2.)

§ 14-418. Prohibited handling of reptiles or suggesting or inducing others to handle.

It shall be unlawful for any person to intentionally handle any reptile of a poisonous nature whose venom is not removed, by taking or holding such reptile in bare hands or by placing or holding such reptile against any exposed part of the human anatomy, or by placing their own or another's hand or any other part of the human anatomy in or near any box, cage, or other container wherein such reptile is known or suspected to be. It shall also be unlawful for any person to intentionally suggest, entice, invite, challenge, intimidate, exhort or otherwise induce or aid any person to handle or expose himself to any such poisonous reptile in any manner defined in this Article. (1949, c. 1084, s. 3.)

§ 14-419. Investigation of suspected violations; seizure and examination of reptiles; disposition of reptiles.

In any case in which any law-enforcement officer or animal control officer has reasonable grounds to believe that any of the provisions of this Article have been or are about to be violated, it shall be the duty of such officer and he is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to immediately investigate such violation or impending violation and to forthwith seize the reptile or reptiles involved, and all such officers are hereby authorized and directed to deliver such reptiles to the Museum of Natural History or to its designated representative for examination and test for the purpose of ascertaining whether said reptiles contain venom and are poisonous. If the Museum of Natural History or its designated representative finds that said reptiles are dangerously poisonous, the Museum of Natural History or its designated representative shall be empowered to dispose of said reptiles in a manner consistent with the safety of the public; but if said Museum or its designated representative find that the reptiles are not dangerously poisonous, and are not and cannot be harmful to human life, safety, health or welfare, then it shall be the duty of such officers to return the said reptiles to the person from whom they were seized within five days. (1949, c. 1084, s. 4; 1981, c. 203, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, inserted "or animal control officer" near the beginning of the first sentence and substituted "Museum of Natural History or to its designated representative for examination and test" for "respective county health authorities for examination and tests of such reptiles by such authorities or other qualified authorities to which the county health authorities may refer the same," near the end of the first sentence. In the second sentence, the amendment substituted "the Museum of Natural History or its designated representative finds" for "such health authorities, or other qualified authorities designated by them to make such examinations and tests, find" near the beginning of the sentence and "the Museum of Natural History or its designated representative shall be empowered to dispose of said reptiles in a manner consistent with the safety of the public; but if said Museum or its designated representative" for "it shall be the duty of the officers making the seizure, and they are hereby authorized and directed to forthwith destroy such reptiles; but if said health authorities, or other qualified authorities by them designated to make such examination and tests," near the middle of the sentence and added "within five days" at the end of the sentence.

§ 14-420. Arrest of persons violating provisions of Article.

If the examination and tests made by the Museum of Natural History or its designated representative as provided herein show that such reptiles are dangerously poisonous, it shall be the duty of the officers making the seizure, in addition to destroying such reptiles, also to arrest all persons violating any of the provisions of this Article. (1949, c. 1084, s. 5; 1981, c. 203, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "Museum of Natural History or its designated representative" for "county health or other qualified authorities."

§ 14-421. Exemptions from provisions of Article.

This Article shall not apply to the possession, exhibition, or handling of reptiles by employees or agents of duly constituted museums, laboratories, educational or scientific institutions in the course of their educational or scientific work. (1949, c. 1084, s. 6.)

§ 14-422. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person violating any of the provisions of this Article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1949, c. 1084, s. 7; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 56.

Debt Adjusting.

§ 14-423. Definitions.

As used in this Article certain terms or words are hereby defined as follows:

(1) The term "debt adjuster" means a person who engages in, attempts to engage in, or offers to engage in the practice or business of debt adjusting as said term is defined in this Article.

(2) The term "debt adjusting" shall mean the entering into or making of a contract, express or implied, with a particular debtor whereby the debtor agrees to pay a certain amount of money periodically to the person engaged in the debt adjusting business and who shall for a consideration, agree to distribute, or distribute the same among certain specified creditors in accordance with a plan agreed upon. The term "debt adjusting" is further defined and shall also mean the business or practice of any person who holds himself out as acting or offering or attempting to act for a consideration as an intermediary between a debtor and his creditors for the purpose of settling, compounding, or in anywise altering the terms of payment of any debt of a debtor, and to that end receives money or other property from the debtor, or on behalf of the debtor, for the payment to, or distribution among, the creditors of the debtor.

(3) The term or word "debtor" means an individual, and includes two or more individuals who are jointly and severally or jointly or severally indebted to a creditor or creditors.

(4) The word "person" means an individual, firm, partnership, limited partnership, corporation or association. (1963, c. 394, s. 1.)

§ 14-424. Engaging, etc., in business of debt adjusting a misdemeanor.

If any person shall engage in, or offer to or attempt to, engage in the business or practice of debt adjusting, or if any person shall hereafter act, offer to act, or attempt to act as a debt adjuster, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (1963, c. 394, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6.)

§ 14-425. Enjoining practice of debt adjusting; appointment of receiver for money and property employed.

The superior court shall have jurisdiction, in an action brought in the name of the State by the district attorney of the judicial district, to enjoin any person from acting, offering to act, or attempting to act, as a debt adjuster, or engaging in the business of debt adjusting; and, in such action, may appoint a receiver for the property and money employed in the transaction of business by such person as a debt adjuster, to insure, so far as may be possible, the return to debtors of so much of their money and property as has been received by the debt adjuster, and has not been paid to the creditors of the debtors. (1963, c. 394, s. 3; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

§ 14-426. Certain persons and transactions not deemed debt adjusters or debt adjustment.

The following individuals or transactions shall not be deemed debt adjusters or as being engaged in the business or practice of debt adjusting:

(1) Any person or individual who is a regular full-time employee of a debtor, and who acts as an adjuster of his employer's debts;

(2) Any person or individual acting pursuant to any order or judgment of a court, or pursuant to authority conferred by any law of this State or of the United States;

(3) Any person who is a creditor of the debtor, or an agent of one or more creditors of the debtor, and whose services in adjusting the debtor's debts are rendered without cost to the debtor;

(4) Any person who at the request of a debtor, arranges for or makes a loan to the debtor, and who, at the authorization of the debtor, acts as an adjuster of the debtor's debts in the disbursement of the proceeds of the loan, without compensation for the services rendered in adjusting such debts;

(5) An intermittent or casual adjustment of a debtor's debts, for compensation, by an individual or person who is not a debt adjuster or who is not engaged in the business or practice of debt adjusting, and who does not hold himself out as being regularly engaged in debt adjusting. (1963, c. 394, s. 4.)

Use, Sale, etc., of Glues Releasing Toxic Vapors.

§§ 14-427 to 14-431: Repealed by Session Laws 1969, c. 970, s. 11.

Cross References. — For present provisions as to use, sale, etc., of glues releasing toxic vapors, see §§ 90-113.9 through 90-113.11.

Article 58.

Records, Tapes and Other Recorded Devices.

§ 14-432. "Owner" defined.

As used in this Article "owner" means the person who owns any master phonograph record, master disc, master tape, master film or other device used for reproducing recorded sounds on phonograph records, discs, tapes, films or other articles on which sound is recorded and from which the transferred sounds are directly or indirectly derived. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1.)

§ 14-433. Recording of live concerts or recorded sounds and distribution, etc., of such recordings unlawful in certain circumstances.

It shall be unlawful for any person to:

(1) Knowingly transfer or cause to be transferred, directly or indirectly by any means, any sounds at a live concert or any sounds recorded on a phonograph record, disc, wire, tape, film or other article on which sounds are recorded, with the intent to sell or cause to be sold, or to be used for profit through public performance, such article on which sounds are so transferred, without consent of the owner, or

(2) Manufacture, distribute or wholesale any article with the knowledge that the sounds are so transferred, without consent of the owner.

This section shall not apply to any person engaged in radio or television broadcasting who transfers, or causes to be transferred, any such sounds other than from the sound track of a motion picture intended for, or in connection with broadcast or telecast transmission or related uses, or for archival purposes. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1.)

§ 14-434. Retailing, etc., of certain recorded devices unlawful.

It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly retail or possess for the purpose of retailing any recorded device that has been produced, manufactured, distributed, or acquired at wholesale in violation of any provision of this Chapter. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1.)

§ 14-435. Recorded devices to show true name of manufacturer.

Ninety days after January 1, 1975, every recorded device sold or transferred or possessed for the purpose of sale by any manufacturer, distributor, or wholesale or retail merchant shall contain on its packaging the true name of the manufacturer. The term "manufacturer" shall not include the manufacturer of the cartridge or casing itself. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1.)

§ 14-436. Recorded devices; civil action for damages.

Any owner of a recorded device as defined in this Chapter whose work is allegedly the subject of a violation of G.S. 14-433 or 14-434, shall have a cause of action in the courts of this State for all damages resulting therefrom, including actual, compensatory and incidental damages. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1.)

§ 14-437. Violation of Article a misdemeanor.

Every individual manufacture, distribution, sale or transfer of such recorded devices in contravention of the provisions of this Article shall constitute a misdemeanor punishable by six months in jail, a fine of up to five hundred dollars ($500.00), or both. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1.)

§§ 14-438 to 14-442: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 59.

Public Intoxication.

§ 14-443. Definitions.

As used in this Article:

(1) "Alcoholism" is the state of a person who habitually lacks self-control as to the use of alcoholic beverages, or uses alcoholic beverages to the extent that his health is substantially impaired or endangered or his social or economic function is substantially disrupted; and

(2) "Intoxicated" is the condition of a person whose mental or physical functioning is presently substantially impaired as a result of the use of alcohol; and

(3) A "public place" is a place which is open to the public, whether it is publicly or privately owned. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1; 1981, c. 412, s. 4; c. 747, s. 66.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendments, effective January 1, 1982, substituted "alcoholic beverages" for "intoxicating liquor" in two places in subdivision (1).

§ 14-444. Intoxicated and disruptive in public.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person in a public place to be intoxicated and disruptive in any of the following ways:

(1) Blocking or otherwise interfering with traffic on a highway or public vehicular area, or

(2) Blocking or lying across or otherwise preventing or interfering with access to or passage across a sidewalk or entrance to a building, or

(3) Grabbing, shoving, pushing or fighting others or challenging others to fight, or

(4) Cursing or shouting at or otherwise rudely insulting others, or

(5) Begging for money or other property.

(b) Any person who violates this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than fifty dollars ($50.00) or imprisonment for not more than 30 days. Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 7A-273(1), a magistrate is not empowered to accept a guilty plea and enter judgment for this offense. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Mere public intoxication standing alone is no longer unlawful, and in order for there to be a chargeable offense, the intoxicated person must be disruptive in one or more of the ways described in subdivisions (1)-(5) of subsection (a). State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

Section Not Violated. — This statute, making it unlawful for any person in a public place to be intoxicated and disruptive by cursing or shouting at or otherwise rudely insulting others, was not violated by defendant's conduct in standing in a motel parking lot in an intoxicated condition, looking up toward the sky, and shouting God is alive and God is in heaven and other words which sounded like a foreign language. State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

§ 14-445. Defense of alcoholism.

(a) It is a defense to a charge of being intoxicated and disruptive in a public place that the defendant suffers from alcoholism.

(b) The presiding judge at the trial of a defendant charged with being intoxicated and disruptive in public shall consider the defense of alcoholism even though the defendant does not raise the defense, and may request additional information on whether the defendant is suffering from alcoholism.

(c) Whenever any person charged with committing a misdemeanor under G.S. 14-444 enters a plea to the charge, the court may, without entering a judgment, defer further proceedings for up to 15 days to determine whether the person is suffering from alcoholism.

(d) If he believes it will be of value in making his determination, the district court judge may direct an alcoholism court counselor, if available, to conduct a prehearing review of the alleged alcoholic's drinking history in order to gather additional information as to whether the defendant is suffering from alcoholism. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1; 1981, c. 519, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, added subsections (c) and (d).

CASE NOTES

Quoted in State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

§ 14-446. Disposition of defendant acquitted because of alcoholism.

If a defendant is found not guilty of being intoxicated and disruptive in a public place because he suffers from alcoholism, the court in which he was tried may retain jurisdiction over him for up to 15 days to determine whether he is an alcoholic in need of care as defined by G.S. 122-58.22 or 122-58.23. The trial judge may make that determination at the time the defendant is found not guilty or he may require the defendant to return to court for the determination at some later time within the 15-day period. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1978 constitutional law, see 57 N.C.L. Rev. 958 (1979).

CASE NOTES

Quoted in State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

§ 14-447. No prosecution for public intoxication.

(a) No person may be prosecuted solely for being intoxicated in a public place. A person who is intoxicated in a public place and is not disruptive may be assisted as provided in G.S. 122-65.11.

(b) If, after arresting a person for being intoxicated and disruptive in a public place, the law-enforcement officer making the arrest determines that the person would benefit from the care of a shelter or health-care facility as provided by G.S. 122-65.11, and that he would not likely be disruptive in such a facility, the officer may transport and release the person to the appropriate facility and issue him a citation for the offense of being intoxicated and disruptive in a public place. This authority to arrest and then issue a citation is granted as an exception to the requirements of G.S. 15A-501(2). (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1; 1981, c. 519, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment effective July 1, 1981, added the second sentence in subsection (b).

CASE NOTES

Mere public intoxication standing alone is no longer unlawful, and in order for there to be a chargeable offense, the intoxicated person must be disruptive in one or more of the ways described in § 14-444(a)(1)-(5). State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

Those who are intoxicated but not disruptive may be assisted but not arrested. State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

§§ 14-448 to 14-452: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 60.

Computer-Related Crime.

§ 14-453. Definitions.

As used in this section, unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the following terms have the meanings specified:

(1) "Access" means to approach, instruct, communicate with, cause input, cause output, or otherwise make use of any resources of a computer, computer system or computer network.

(2) "Computer" means an internally programmed, automatic device that performs data processing.

(3) "Computer network" means the interconnection of communication systems with a computer through remote terminals, or a complex consisting of two or more interconnected computers.

(4) "Computer program" means an ordered set of data that are coded instructions or statements that when executed by a computer cause the computer to process data.

(5) "Computer software" means a set of computer programs, procedures and associated documentation concerned with the operation of a computer system.

(6) "Computer system" means a set of related, connected or unconnected computer equipment and devices.

(7) "Financial statement" includes but is not limited to any check, draft, money order, certificate of deposit, letter of credit, bill of exchange, credit card of [or] marketable security, or any electronic data processing representation thereof.

(8) "Property" includes but is not limited to, financial instruments, information, including electronically processed or produced data, and computer software and programs in either machine or human readable form, and any other tangible or intangible item of value.
